§ 3926. Jurisdiction and Venue of Suits.—The Act of March 13, 1905, of Texas prescribes the parties to, and venue of, suits against railroad corporations operating within the state, or having an agent or representative therein, and provides that whenever freight has been transported by two or more such corporations, or partly by one or more of them, suit for damages or loss, or any clause of action arising out of such carriage, may be brought against any one or all of the carriers in any court of competent jurisdiction in any county in which either operates or does business, or has an agent or representative. Such act was the proper exercise of the state's police power, and was not invalid as to an interstate carrier, as imposing burdens on interstate commerce greater than those imposed on commerce within the state, and as amounting to an infringement on the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.[81] The Act of 1905 of Texas regulating the venue of suits against common carriers was a proper exercise of the state's police power, and was not invalid as to interstate carriers, in that it imposed such burden on interstate commerce as distinguished from commerce within the state as amounts to an infringement upon the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.[82]

§ 3927. Parties to Suits.—The Act of March 13, 1905, of Texas prescribes the parties to, and venue of, suits against railroad corporations operating within the state, or having an agent or representative therein, and provides that whenever freight has been transported by two or more such corporations, or partly by one or more of them, suit for damages or loss, or any cause of action arising out of such carriage, may be brought against any one or all of the carriers in any court of competent jurisdiction in any county in which either operates or does business, or has an agent or representative. Such act was not unconstitutional as a discriminatory burden on interstate commerce.[83]

§ 3928. Summons and Process.—A state law which provides that all corporations carrying on business in a state shall have one or more known places of business in the state, and an authorized agent thereat upon whom process can be served, and making it unlawful for such corporation to carry on any business in the state without complying with the requirements of the section, and filing a statement with the secretary of state, etc., is void, in so far as it affects steamship companies engaged in interstate traffic, because in conflict with the constitution of the United States providing that congress shall have the exclusive power to regulate commerce among the several states.[84]

§ 3929. Evidence.—A state law giving a right of action for damages to persons injured by the communication of Texas fever to their cattle, and prescribing a rule of evidence in certain cases, is not a regulation of interstate commerce, so as to be void under the federal constitution.[85]

§ 3930. Proceeding by Attachment and Garnishment.—A railroad car, loaded with freight from another state in West Virginia and to be returned loaded 81. Jurisdiction and venue of suits.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wester (Tex. Civ. App.), 96 S. W. 769.

82. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Boshear (Tex. Civ. App.), 108 S. W. 1032, judgment affirmed in 113 S. W. 6.

83. Parties to suits.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Moon, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 209, 103 S. W. 1176.

The Act of March 13, 1905, of Texas, providing that when freight has been transported by two or more railroad corporations operating within the state or having an agent therein, or partly by one or more of them, suit for damages may be brought against any one or all of the carriers in any court of competent jurisdiction in any county in which either does business or has an agent, is not invalid as to an interstate carrier as imposing burdens on interstate commerce. Texarkana, etc., R. Co. v. Shivel (Tex. Civ. App.), 114 S. W. 196.

84. Summons and process.—Ryman Steamboat Line Co. v. Commonwealth, 101 S. W. 403, 30 Ky. L. Rep. 1276, 10 L. R. A., N. S., 1187.

85. Evidence.—Judgment, 44 Pac. 632, 56 Kan. 694, affirmed in Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Haber, 18 S. Ct. 488, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. Ed. 878.

to the former state, can not be levied on under an attachment in West Virginia; nor will such railroad company, having such cars in its possession, be liable to garnishment, by reason of such possession, because of the interstate commerce clause of the constitution.[86] Where a railroad company of a state received from a connecting railroad company of another state a railroad car loaded with freight, consigned from a point in another state to a point in the first-named state, under a prevailing custom among railroads, and under a contract between the two roads at interest that, instead of unloading and reloading at the point of intersection outside of the first-named state, the domestic company, upon payment for the use, should have the right to bring the foreign car loaded into the state and to the point of destination, there to be unloaded and afterwards reloaded with freight, and then returned, in the direction from which it came, to a point beyond the limits of the state, such car, while in the state, is not exempt from attachment sought to be executed by service of summons of garnishment for the collection of a debt alleged to be due by the owner, upon the ground that the impounding of the car is such an interference with interstate commerce as to be violative of the constitution of the United States.[87]

Interstate Commerce Incidentally Affected.—The fact that a creditor of a foreign railroad, in the prosecution of his rights to collect a debt by attachment, may, by levy and sale of an empty and idle freight car of the debtor, incidentally affect future interstate commerce, will not render such proceeding illegal.[88]

86. Proceeding by attachment and garnishment.—Wall v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 44 S. E. 294, 52 W. Va. 485, 64 L. R. A. 501, 94 Am. St. Rep. 948.

Cars owned by a steam railroad company and delivered by it to other companies, loaded with freight, to be used in the transportation of such freight over their lines to points of destination in other states, and then returned within a reasonable time, either loaded or empty, to the owner in the state where received, pursuant to agreements between the companies for the continuous carriage of interstate shipments of freight, as authorized by Rev. St., § 5258 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3564], and in conformity to the policy of the statutes regulating interstate commerce, are, until their return to the owner, instruments of interstate commerce, and are not subject to attachment under the laws of a state into which they may be carried by such other companies. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 403.

Pub. St. 1901, c. 220, §§ 1, 2, making all property liable to be taken in execution, subject to attachment, and defining exempt property is valid, and an attachment of a freight car of a railroad not in actual use does not directly affect interstate commerce. De Rochemont v. New York, etc., Railroad, 75 N. H. 158, 71 Atl. 868, 29 L. R. A., N. S., 529.

Rev. St. U. S., § 5258 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2564), authorizing railroads to carry freight and property on their way from any state to another state, and to connect with roads of other states so as to form a continuous line for the transportation of the same to the place of destination, gives railroads the right to engage in interstate business, and to become jointly interested with roads in other states in interstate business originating on their lines; and a foreign railroad contracting with a domestic railroad for the through shipment of cars, stands on the same footing as the domestic railroad, and the statute does not forbid the attachment of a car of the foreign railroad when in the state and not in actual use. De Rochemont v. New York, etc., Railroad, 75 N. H. 158, 71 Atl. 868, 29 L. R. A., N. S., 529.

The object of Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]), forbidding railroads from giving preferences to persons or places, etc., is to compel railroads to carry for all on equal terms and for a fair price, without unnecessary delay, and the act is not in conflict with a state statute permitting the attachment of freight cars when not in actual use. De Rochemont v. New York, etc., Railroad, 75 N. H. 158, 71 Atl. 868, 29 L. R. A., N. S., 529.

Sequestration of a fund due by a resident carrier, summoned as trustee in garnisheed proceedings, to a foreign corporation representing its share of proportionate freights for interstate carriage, only constituted an incidental interference with interstate commerce, and was not objectionable on that ground. Cavanaugh v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 N. H. 243, 72 Atl. 694.

87. Southern Flour, etc., Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 127 Ga. 626, 56 S. E. 742, 9 L. R. A., N. S., 853, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 437.

88. Interstate commerce incidentally affected.—Southern R. Co. v. Brown, 131 Ga. 245, 62 S. E. 177.

Freight money in the hands of a final carrier belonging to a nonresident initial carrier is a mere debt, with no special character on account of being earned in interstate commerce, is subject to suit at law by the creditor road, if not paid, and is liable to garnishment as a simple contract or book indebtedness.[89]

Where a car of a foreign carrier is on a side track empty after having come into the state loaded with an interstate shipment, and is there temporarily in the possession of another carrier, under contract with the foreign carrier to promptly return it within a reasonable time and to pay per diem demurrage for delay, and for the purpose of taking back freight, if it is ready for shipment within a reasonable time, it may not be attached, as this would be an interference with interstate commerce.[90]

Indebtedness Arising from Interstate Commerce.—The fact that an indebtedness due to a nonresident railroad company arose out of the conducting of interstate commerce does not exempt it from garnishment under a foreign attachment.[91]

Under Interstate Commerce Act.—The acts of Congress relating to interstate commerce were not intended to abrogate the attachment laws of the state, but within their proper sphere the federal acts are paramount.[92] A sleeping car company, by furnishing sleeping cars under contract with a railroad company, to be used by the traveling public, does not acquire the status of a common carrier of goods or passengers unless so declared by constitutional or statutory provision. A sleeping car en route from a point in one state to a point in another state, while waiting at a junction with its passengers, both interstate and intrastate, aboard to be picked up by a through train and carried to destination, was attached under a state writ and detained by the sheriff by force, compelling the passengers to disembark and accept other accommodations. Under the Interstate Commerce Act extending the term "common carrier" to include sleeping car companies, the car, at the time of its attachment, was an instrumentality of interstate commerce and was not subject to attachment under a state writ which would directly interfere with its operation in such commerce.[93]

89. Johnson v. Union Pac. R. Co., 29 R. I. 80, 69 Atl. 298.

90. Seibels v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 80 S. C. 133, 61 S. E. 435, 16 L. R. A., N. S., 1026.

Where a car owned by a foreign railroad, and loaded with interstate freight, to be unloaded at its destination within the state, and again loaded with interstate freight and returned in course of interstate commerce, arrives in the state, it can not be attached at its destination before being unloaded, in a suit by a resident against the foreign railroad company, it being engaged in interstate commerce. Shore & Bro. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 76 S. C. 472, 57 S. E. 526, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 909.

Cars owned by a foreign railway company, which have temporarily come into the state in the course of interstate transportation, through the agency of other carriers, are subject to attachment under the state laws, despite the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act and of Rev. St., § 5258 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3564), securing continuity of transportation. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. Ed. 708, 30 S. Ct. 463, 27 L. R. A., N. S., 823, 18 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 907.

91. Indebtedness arising from interstate commerce.—Johnson v. Union Pac. R. Co., 29 R. I. 80, 69 Atl. 298.

Sums due to a foreign railway carrier from other carriers as the former's share of freight on interstate shipments may be garnished under the state laws, despite the provisions of the interstate commerce act and of Rev. St., § 5258 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3564), securing continuity of transportation. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. Ed. 708, 30 S. Ct. 463, 27 L. R. A., N. S., 823, 18 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 907.

The garnishment of a debt due from a railroad company doing business in the state to a railroad company not doing business in the state, embracing traffic balances arising out of interstate commerce, is not an interference with interstate commerce. Starkey v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 114 Minn. 27, 130 N. W. 540.

92. Under Interstate Commerce Act.—Pullman Co. v. Linke, 203 Fed. 1017.

93. Pullman Co. v. Linke, 203 Fed. 1017.

§ 3931. Removal of Cause to Federal Court.—A state law providing that a foreign railroad corporation engaged in business in a state shall forfeit its right to engage in intrastate commerce within the state on removing any action against it in the state court to the federal court, is not invalid under the commerce clause of the federal constitution, on the ground that the prohibition of intrastate commerce will affect injuriously the interstate commerce of the corporation, as the whole earnings of the corporation from all sources must be taken as the basis for measuring the reasonableness of the interstate rates, and deprivation of profits from domestic business will reduce the gross earnings, since the statute does not deal with the regulation of rates, but with the right to engage in domestic business.[94]

§ 3932. Equitable Remedies.—To charge a railroad company as trustee of goods delivered to it as a carrier for interstate shipment would not be an unlawful interference with interstate commerce.[95]

§ 3933. Requiring Claim for Damages to Be Made in Prescribed Time.—The provision of a state law that a stipulation in a contract for a shorter limitation than two years in which to sue, and of that a stipulation requiring notice of claim for damages to be given within less than ninety days, as a condition to the right to sue, shall be void, are valid, as applied to a contract for the carriage of goods from the state into another state or territory.[96] State laws, declaring contracts invalid, which require actions against carrier for injuries to shipment in less than the statutory time, were superseded as to interstate shipments by Carmack Amendment of June 29, 1906, which furnishes the exclusive rule on such subject.[97]

§ 3934. Requiring Payment of Damages in Prescribed Time.—A state law providing a penalty on carriers for failure to pay damages on freight within sixty days, is not unconstitutional as in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the constitution.[98] A state law imposing a penalty on a carrier failing to adjust and pay within a specified time a claim for loss of freight while in its possession, is not unconstitutional, as an interference with interstate commerce.[99]

94. Removal of cause to federal court.—State v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 97 Miss. 35, 51 So. 918, 53 So. 454, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1150.

95. Equitable remedies.—Rosenbush v. Bernheimer, 211 Mass. 146, 97 N. E. 984, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1317.

96. Time for making claim for damages.—Judgment, Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Armstrong (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 614, reversed in 46 S. W. 33, 92 Tex. 117.

97. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 S. Ct. 397, reversing judgment (Tex. Civ. App.), 128 S. W. 932.

98. Requiring payment of damages in prescribed time.—Porter v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 41 S. E. 108, 63 S. C. 169, 90 Am. St. Rep. 670.

99. De Lorme v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 79 S. C. 370, 60 S. E. 440.

Revisal 1905, § 2634, subjecting a carrier to a penalty for failure to adjust and pay a claim for loss of or damage to property within the time prescribed, does not impose an unlawful burden of interstate commerce, in violation of the Constitution of the United States art. 1, § 8, conferring on congress the right to regulate interstate commerce. Raleigh Iron Works v. Southern R. Co., 148 N. C. 469, 62 S. E. 595.

Penalizing the failure to adjust and pay within a specified time claims for loss or damage, as is done by Act S. C. Feb. 23, 1903 (24 St. at Large, p. 81) § 2, does not unlawfully interfere with interstate commerce, even as applied to shipments from without the state, where the statute is construed by the state courts only the liability of carriers doing business in the state, for property lost or damaged while in their possession. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. Ed. 411, 30 S. Ct. 378. Affirming judgments, Charles v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 78 S. C. 36, 58 S. E. 927, 125 Am. St. Rep. 762; McTeer v. Southern Exp. Co. (S. C.), 58 S. E. 930; Mazursky v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. (S. C.), 58 S. E. 931; Von Lehe v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 78 S. C. 168, 59 S. E. 1135.

Revisal 1905, § 2644, which provides a penalty for a carrier's failure to adjust a loss in a shipment of goods from without the state within ninety days after a

§ 3935. Lien on Vessel for Services and Material.—Local statutes subjecting vessels to liens for debts contracted in equipping and fitting them for service are not regarded as amendments of the general maritime law, and, in the absence of legislation by congress establishing a uniform rule, are upheld as applied to vessels engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, and owned in other states, as being in aid of commerce, by enabling such vessels to obtain credit for necessaries when away from their home port.[1] Proceedings for the enforcement of a lien on a vessel for materials used in its construction, conferred by a statute of a state though commenced after the vessel was enrolled, licensed, and engaged in interstate commerce, were not objectionable, as in contravention of the jurisdiction of federal courts in admiralty.[2] State statutes giving liens on ships for necessary repairs or supplies furnished on the credit of the vessel, which are enforceable by process in rem, in a court of admiralty, as arising under maritime contracts, cannot be classed as laws intended to impose burdens upon interstate or foreign commerce, and for that reason held unconstitutional, though applied to foreign ships, but their purpose and effect, like liens given by the general maritime laws, are to facilitate commerce by enabling the ship to obtain the things necessary to the prosecution and completion of her voyage.[3]

Lien for Surveying Logs.—A lien given by state statute on logs cut in another state for surveying and scaling them by the surveyor general while in a log boom does not constitute a burden on interstate commerce, but is a lawful claim for such loss is filed with it, is not in violation of the constitution of the United States, art. 1, § 8, conferring on congress the right to regulate interstate commerce, since the penalty is in no sense a burden on interstate commerce, but is in aid of such traffic, and, in the absence of congressional legislation to the contrary, is a proper subject of state regulation. Morris-Scarboro-Moffitt Co. v. Southern Exp. Co., 146 N. C. 167, 59 S. E. 667, 15 L. R. A., N. S., 983.

Act 1903 (24 St. at Large, p. 81), providing a penalty of $50 to be paid the consignee by a carrier doing business in the state, for failure to adjust and pay within a certain time a claim for loss of freight while in its possession, is not unconstitutional as an interference with interstate commerce, even in case of an interstate shipment. Charles v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 78 S. C. 36, 58 S. E. 927, 125 Am. St. Rep. 762; Mazursky v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. (S. C.), 58 S. E. 931; Von Lehe v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 78 S. C. 168, 59 S. E. 1135.

Act Feb. 23, 1903 (24 Stat. at Large, p. 81), imposing a penalty of $50 to be paid the consignee by a carrier doing business within the state for failure to adjust and pay claim for loss of freight while in its possession within a specified time, is not unconstitutional as an attempt to regulate interstate commerce. Winslow Bros. & Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 79 S. C. 344, 60 S. E. 709.

Act 1903 (24 St. at Large, p. 81), providing a penalty to be paid the consignee by a carrier for failure to adjust and pay within a certain time a claim for loss of freight while in its possession, does not violate the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution, in case of a shipment from out of the state into it, part of which was delivered by the final carrier to the consignee at destination, so that, in the absence of explanation, it is presumed the loss occurred while the goods were in the possession of such carrier, from whom recovery of the penalty is sought. Colleton Mercantile, etc., Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 82 S. C. 121, 62 S. E. 6.

Laws 1908, c. 196, prescribing a penalty of $25 to be recovered by a shipper from a railroad that fails to settle, within a prescribed time, his claim for damages to freight, is not void as a regulation of, or interference with, interstate commerce. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Greenwald (Miss.), 61 So. 426.

1. Lien on vessel for services and material.—The Del Norte, 90 Fed. 506.

The exclusive control over interstate commerce, vested in congress by the federal constitution or laws, is not infringed by the enforcement against a vessel engaged in interstate commerce of a lien given by a state statute for materials furnished for her construction. Judgment, Delaney, etc., Iron Co. v. Iroquois Transp. Co., 142 Mich. 84, 105 N. W. 527, 113 Am. St. Rep. 566, affirmed in The Winnebago, 205 U. S. 354, 51 L. Ed. 836, 27 S. Ct. 509.

2. Comp. Laws 1897, § 10,789; Delaney, etc., Iron Co. v. Iroquois Transp. Co., 105 N. W. 527, 142 Mich. 84, 113 Am. St. Rep. 566, affirmed in The Winnebago, 27 S. Ct. 509, 205 U. S. 354, 51 L. Ed. 836.

3. The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218.

charge imposed by the state for furnishing additional facilities for navigation of a waterway.[4]

§ 3936. Seizure for Taxes.—Where a large quantity of coal from which shipments were being made to parties outside the state was seized by a city marshal for taxes, replevin would not lie on the ground that the seizure was an interference with interstate commerce; it appearing that some shipments were made to points within the state.[5]

§ 3937. Entry of Satisfaction of Mortgage.—A code provision imposing a penalty on a mortgagee whose mortgage has been satisfied for failure to enter satisfaction of record after being requested to do so, does not interfere with interstate commerce in its application to nonresident mortgagees.[6]

4. Lien for surveying logs.—Lindsay, etc., Co. v. Mullen, 176 U. S. 126, 44 L. Ed. 400, 20 S. Ct. 325.

5. Seizure for taxes.—Pioneer Fuel Co. v. Molloy, 131 Mich. 465, 91 N. W. 750.

6. Penalty for failure to enter satisfaction of mortgage.—Dittman, etc., Shoe Co. v. Mixon, 24 So. 847, 120 Ala. 206.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Taxation.

A. Power to Tax, § 3938.
B. Taxation Amounting to Regulation of Commerce, §§ 3939-3981.
  a. In General, § 3939.
  b. Tax on Corporations Engaged in Interstate Commerce, §§ 3940-3947.
    (1) In General, § 3940.
    (2) Tax on Gross Receipts, § 3941.
    (3) Tax on Franchise or Privilege, § 3942.
    (4) Tax on Capital Stock, § 3943.
    (5) Tax on Transfer of Corporate Stock, § 3944.
    (6) Tax on Right of Corporations to Consolidate, § 3945.
    (7) Tax on Property Outside of State, § 3946.
    (8) Tax on Property of Foreign Corporation, § 3947.
  c. Tax on Gross Receipts, § 3948.
  d. Tax on Passengers and Freight, §§ 3949-3950.
    (1) Passengers, § 3949.
    (2) Freight, § 3950.
  e. Tax on Privilege and Occupation, § 3951.
  f. Tax on Tolls, § 3952.
  g. Tax on Means and Instruments of Commerce, §§ 3953-3979.
    (1) In General, § 3953.
    (2) Tax on Railroads, §§ 3954-3959.
      (a) In General, § 3954.
      (b) Tax on Franchise, Privilege and Occupation, § 3955.
      (c) Tax on Capital Stock, § 3956.
      (d) Tax on Rolling Stock, § 3957.
      (e) Tax on Gross Earnings, § 3958.
      (f) Payment of Bonus to State, § 3959.
    (3) Tax on Street Railroads, § 3960.
    (4) Tax on Express Companies, § 3961.
    (5) Tax on Sleeping Cars, § 3962.
    (6) Tax on Refrigerator Cars, § 3963.
    (7) Tax on Ships, §§ 3964-3972.
      (a) In General, § 3964.
      (b) Tax on Gross Receipts, § 3965.
      (c) Tax on Interest of Citizen in Vessel, § 3966.
      (d) Tax on Persons Residing on Ships, § 3967.
      (e) Tax on Agents, Pilots, etc., § 3968.
      (f) Registered under Laws of United States, § 3969.
      (g) Registered in Another State, § 3970.
      (h) Tax on Particular Ships, § 3971.
      (i) Wharfage Fees, § 3972.
    (8) Tax on Ferries, § 3973.
    (9) Tax on Bridges, § 3974.
    (10) Tax on Automobiles, § 3975.
    (11) Tax on Draymen, § 3976.
    (12) Tax on Pipe Lines, § 3977.
    (13) Tax on Warehouses and Elevators, § 3978.
    (14) Tax on Packing Houses, § 3979.
  h. The Unit Rule, § 3980.
  i. Stamp Duty on Bills of Lading, § 3981.

§ 3938. Power to Tax.—The constitution contains no express restriction of the power of the states to tax, other than a prohibition to lay any duty of tonnage, or any impost, or duty on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing the state's inspection laws. It may, therefore, be regarded as the established doctrine that so long as the laws of the state, prescribing the mode and subject of taxation, do not entrench upon the legitimate authority of the Union, or violate any right recognized, or secured, by the constitution of the United States, they are valid.[1] Every tax upon personal property, or upon occupations, business, or franchises, affects more or less the subjects, and the operations of commerce, yet it is not everything that affects commerce that amounts to a regulation of it, within the meaning of the constitution.[2] But when a law of a state imposes a tax, under such circumstances and with such effect as to constitute a regulation of commerce, either foreign or interstate, it is void on that account.[3] The supreme court of the United States has held in a great number of cases that a tax levied directly upon interstate business alone, or upon such business where it is carried on in connection with local business, and also a requirement that persons or corporations shall take out a license and pay a tax before they can conduct an interstate or local busi-

1. Taxation.—Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. Ed. 558; Low v. Austin (U. S.), 13 Wall. 29, 20 L. Ed. 517; Gibbons v. Ogden (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23; Nathan v. Louisiana (U. S.), 8 How. 73, 12 L. Ed. 993; Ward v. Maryland (U. S.), 12 Wall. 418, 20 L. Ed. 449.

"Persons and corporations engaged in interstate business may be subjected to the payment of taxes properly levied by the state upon their property within its borders and also on business wholly conducted within the state, and it is likewise conceded that no state has the power to lay a direct tax or burden upon interstate commerce." Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

Although authority is conferred upon congress to lay and collect taxes, yet this grant does not supersede the power of the state to tax for the support of their own governments, nor is the exercise of that power by the states unless it extends to objects prohibited by the constitution, an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States. State Tonnage Tax Cases (U. S.), 12 Wall. 204, 20 L. Ed. 370; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344, 26 L. Ed. 565; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 347; Low v. Austin (U. S.), 13 Wall. 29, 20 L. Ed. 517; Ward v. Maryland (U. S.), 12 Wall. 418, 20 L. Ed. 449.

Const. U. S. art. 1, § 8, gives congress power to regulate commerce among the several states, etc., and § 10 forbids any state without the consent of congress to lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws, and hence interstate commerce can not be taxed by the state. Smith v. Farr, 104 Pac. 401, 46 Colo. 364.

Under Const. U. S., art. 1, § 8, giving congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states, etc., interstate commerce can not be taxed by a state. Wilcox v. People, 104 Pac. 408, 46 Colo. 382.

2. Commerce affected indirectly.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. Ed. 257, 5 S. Ct. 1091; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 700, 8 S. Ct. 689, 1062; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

3. Law constituting regulation of interstate commerce.—Brown v. Maryland (U. S.), 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. Ed. 678; Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38, citing Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744; Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Osborne v. Mobile (U. S.), 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. Ed. 470; State Tonnage Tax Cases (U. S.), 12 Wall. 204, 20 L. Ed. 370.

A statute of a state enacting that the masters and wardens of a port within it, should be entitled to demand and receive, in addition to other fees, the sum of five dollars, whether called on to perform any service or not, for every vessel arriving in that port, is a regulation of commerce within the meaning of the constitution, and also a duty on tonnage, and is unconstitutional and void. Steamship Co. v. Portwardens (U. S.), 6 Wall. 31, 18 L. Ed. 749.

A state can not tax interstate commerce. State v. Pabst Brewing Co., 128 La. 770, 55 So. 349.

ness, is a burden on commerce between the states, and a regulation which belongs exclusively to congress.[4]

State Can Not Tax in Any Form.—It is well settled that a state cannot lay a tax upon interstate or foreign commerce in any form, whether by way of duties laid on the transportation of the subjects of that commerce, or on the receipts derived from that transportation, or on the occupation or business of carrying it on. The reason is that such taxation is a burden on that commerce, and amounts to a regulation of it, which belongs solely to congress.[5]

Tax on Right to Engage in Commerce.—The state may not tax the right to carry on interstate commerce or to conduct the business of the government.[6]

Subject National in Character.—Whenever the subjects in regard to which a power to regulate commerce is asserted are in their nature national, or admit of one uniform system or plan of regulation, they are exclusively within the regulating control of congress.[7]

Where Property Located within State.—Neither the constitution nor laws of the United States prohibit a state from taxing the property of persons and corporations engaged in foreign and interstate commerce where the property is located in such state.[8]

Tax as Police Regulation.—If a corporation, although engaged in the business of interstate commerce, so carries on its business as to justify at the hands of any municipality a police supervision of the property and instrumentalities used therein, the municipality is not bound to furnish such supervision for nothing, and may, in addition to ordinary property taxation, subject the corporation to a charge for the expense of the supervision.[9]

Tax Affecting Both Intrastate and Interstate Business. A general license tax, imposed by a state statute on a carrier, affecting its entire business, interstate as well as domestic or internal, without discrimination, is unconstitutional.[10] Interstate commerce can not be taxed at all, even though the same

4. Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664, citing Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. Ed. 649, 11 S. Ct. 851; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. Ed. 394, 10 S. Ct. 958; Coleman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 75 Kan. 609, 90 Pac. 299.

5. State can not tax in any form.—Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380.

No state can levy a tax on interstate commerce, whether by duties laid on the transportation of that commerce, or on the receipts derived from that transportation, or on the occupation or business of carrying it on. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Mobile, 179 Fed. 955.

6. Tax on right to engage in commerce.—State v. Western Union Tel. Co., 43 Mont. 445, 117 Pac. 93.

7. Subject national in character.—Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

Transportation of passengers or merchandise through a state, or from one state to another, is of this nature. Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

Hence, a statute of a state imposing a tax upon freight, taken up within the state and carried out of it, or taken up without the state and brought within it, is repugnant to that provision of the constitution of the United States, which ordains that "congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes." Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

8. Where property located within state.—Hammer v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 208 Mo. 622, 106 S. W. 1005.

9. As police regulation.—Borough of Norwood v. Western Union Tel. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 406.

10. Tax on occupation or business.—Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 320, 39 L. Ed. 430, 15 S. Ct. 367; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. Ed. 392, 10 S. Ct. 881; St. Louis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. Ed. 380, 13 S. Ct. 485; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. Ed. 368, 9 S. Ct. 1.

A state statute was enacted imposing an annual tax on cars of the Pullman Company running into and beyond the state as well as between points within the state. Held, void as imposing a burden upon interstate commerce. Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. Ed. 134, 24 S. Ct. 39.

amount of tax should be laid on domestic commerce, or that which is carried on solely within the state.[11] It is equally well settled that persons or companies carrying on a domestic business in connection with interstate business may be subjected to the payment of a state tax imposed on purely domestic business.[12]

Tax Affecting Intrastate Business Only.—A statute is valid where a proper construction of it confines the tax which it creates to the intrastate business, and in no way relates to the interstate business of the company. The statute of Missouri enacted for the purpose of imposing a tax upon express companies doing business within the state, and brought before the court in this case, does not impose a tax upon the receipts arising from interstate business, and is not therefore repugnant to commercial clause of the constitution of the United States.[13]

Interstate Shipment to Intrastate Points.—The receipts from continuous transportation between points in the same state may be taxed in that state, though the route lies partly in another state. Such transportation is not interstate commerce.[14]

§§ 3939-3981. Taxation Amounting to Regulation of Commerce—§ 3939. In General.—In the decisions in which state laws have been held inoperative because in conflict with, or amounting to the exercise of, or the assertion of control over, a power vested exclusively in the United States, the interference with the commercial power was found to be direct, and not the mere incidental effect of the requirement of the usual proportional contribution to public maintenance.[15] A tax which so seriously affects the interchange of commodities between the states as to essentially impede or seriously interfere with it, is a regulation of commerce.[16]

Taxation Distinguished from Regulation of Commerce.—The difficulty has been, and is, to distinguish between legitimate attempts to exert the taxing power of the state and those laws which, though in the guise of taxation, impose real burdens upon interstate commerce as such.[17] The state must be allowed to tax the property, and to tax it at its actual value as a going concern. On the other hand, the state can not tax the interstate business. The two necessities hardly admit of an absolute logical reconciliation. Yet the distinction is not with-

11. Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. Ed. 336, 23 S. Ct. 229.

12. Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

13. Tax on intrastate business only.—Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035, 12 S. Ct. 250.

14. Interstate shipment to intrastate points.—Commonwealth v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Pa.), 1 Monag. 45, 17 Atl. 179.

15. Taxation amounting to regulation of commerce.—Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263, citing Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Massachusetts v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. Ed. 819; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 508, 8 S. Ct. 564; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. Ed. 392, 10 S. Ct. 881.

16. Hinson v. Lott (U. S.), 8 Wall. 148, 19 L. Ed. 387.

17. Taxation distinguished from regulation of commerce.—This difficulty was recognized in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638, wherein the possible differences between the decisions in Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118, and Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, were commented upon and explained. Mr. Justice Holmes, speaking for the court, said: "By whatever name the exaction may be called, if it amounts to no more than the ordinary tax upon property, or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the constitution." United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, 32 S. Ct. 211.

out sense. When a legislature is trying simply to value property, it is less likely to attempt to or effect injurious regulation that when it is aiming directly at the receipts from interstate commerce. A practical line can be drawn by taking the whole scheme of taxation into account. That must be done by the federal supreme court as best it can.[18] Doubtless no state could add to the taxation of property according to the rule of ordinary property taxation, the burden of a license or other tax on the privilege of using, constructing, or operating an instrumentality of interstate or international commerce, or for the carrying on of such commerce; but the value of property results from the use to which it is put, and varies with the profitableness of that use; and by whatever name the exaction may be called, if it amounts to no more than the ordinary tax upon property, or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the constitution.[19]

§§ 3940-3947. Tax on Corporations Engaged in Interstate Commerce—§ 3940. In General.—The rule seems to be that property in a state belonging to a corporation, whether foreign or domestic, engaged in foreign or interstate commerce, may be taxed, or a tax may be imposed on the corporation on account of its property within a state,[20] provided the rights and power of the national government are not interfered with.[21] Corporations and companies engaged in interstate commerce should bear their proper proportion of the burdens of the governments under whose protection they conduct their operations, and taxation on property, collectible by the ordinary means, does not affect interstate commerce otherwise than incidentally, as all business is affected by the necessity of contributing to the support of the government.[22]

Taxable to Same Extent as Natural Persons.—The states have authority to tax the estate, real and personal, of all their corporations, including carrying companies, precisely as they may tax similar property when belonging to natural persons, and to the same extent.[23]

18. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, 32 S. Ct. 211.

19. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263.

20. Corporations.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Ward v. Maryland (U. S.), 12 Wall. 418, 20 L. Ed. 449; California v. Central Pac. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. Ed. 150, 8 S. Ct. 1073; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. Ed. 871, 14 S. Ct. 1094; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 320, 39 L. Ed. 430, 15 S. Ct. 367; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. Ed. 785, 22 S. Ct. 576; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Louisville, etc., Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. Ed. 513, 23 S. Ct. 463; Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. Ed. 995, 24 S. Ct. 817; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Massachusetts v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114.

21. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. Ed. 962, 14 S. Ct. 1087.

22. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305.

23. Taxable to same extent as natural persons.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

Valuation or Excise Tax.—Such taxation may be laid upon a valuation, or may be an excise, and in exacting an excise tax from their corporations, the states are not obliged to impose a fixed sum upon the franchises or upon the value of them but they may demand a graduated contribution proportioned either to the value of the privileges granted, or to the extent of their exercises or to the results of their exercise.[24]

Corporations Created by State.—The property, the business, and the income of corporations created by a state may undoubtedly be taxed by the state; but in imposing such taxes care should be taken not to interfere with or hamper, directly or by indirection, interstate or foreign commerce, or any other matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the federal government.[25] The state may tax a corporation on its special franchises, granted to it by the state, or by authority from the state wholly within its limits, though the corporation is engaged in interstate commerce, because the tax is not on the business of the corporation.[26]

Corporations Created by United States.—The property of corporations holding their franchises from the government of the United States is not exempt from taxation by the states of its situs.[27]

Under Charter Provision.—The Illinois Central Railroad Charter requiring the company to pay to the state an amount equal to seven per cent of its gross receipts in lieu of taxes, was a mere charter method of fixing an equivalent for a tax that would otherwise ordinarily be levied on the property of the corporation; and hence, notwithstanding it required the payment of such percentage on the receipts of the railroad company's charter lines from interstate commerce, was not invalid as an attempt to regulate or impose a tax on interstate commerce itself.[28]

§ 3941. Tax on Gross Receipts.—A tax levied by a state upon the gross receipts derived from the transportation of passengers and goods between one state and other states or foreign nations is a regulation of commerce and beyond the power of the state.[29]

§ 3942. Tax on Franchise or Privilege.—The franchise of a corporation, although that franchise is the business of interstate commerce, is, as a part of its property, subject to state taxation, providing at least the franchise is not derived from the United States.[30] The proposition that the states can, by way of a tax

24. Valuation or excise tax.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

25. Corporations created by state.—Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118.

26. Hudson, etc., R. Co. v. State Board, 127 N. Y. S. 918, 143 App. Div. 26.

27. Corporations created by United States.—Railroad Co. v. Peniston (U. S.), 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. Ed. 787; Thomson v. Pacific Railway (U. S.), 9 Wall. 579, 19 L. Ed. 792; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810.

28. Under charter provision.—State v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 92 N. E. 814, 246 Ill. 188.

29. Tax on gross receipts.—Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

30. Tax upon franchises.—Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Central Pac. R. Co. v. People, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. Ed. 903, 16 S. Ct. 766; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gottlieb, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. Ed. 1116, 23 S. Ct. 730; Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. Ed. 995, 24 S. Ct. 817; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118.

Rev. Codes, § 165, imposing certain graduated charges, based upon the amount of capital stock of the corporation, to be collected by the secretary of state, for the filing of each certified copy or article of incorporation of any foreign corporation, held unconstitutional as imposing a burden on interstate commerce, when ap-upon business transacted within their limits, or upon the franchise of corporations which they have chartered, regulate such business or the affairs of such corporations, has often been set up as a defense to the allegation that the taxation was such an interference with commerce as violated the constitutional provision now under consideration. But where the business so taxed is commerce itself, and is commerce among the states or with foreign nations, the constitutional provision can not thereby be evaded; nor can the states, by granting franchises to corporations engaged in the business of the transportation of persons or merchandise among them, which is itself interstate commerce, acquire the right to regulate that commerce, either by taxation or in any other way.[31] But where a railroad company received important franchises by grant of the United States, such franchises are not legitimate subjects of taxation by the state. They were granted to the company for national purposes and to subserve national ends. The state can neither take them away, nor destroy nor abridge them, nor cripple them by onerous burdens. It can not tax franchises which are the grant of the United States.[32] A franchise tax imposed locally on a railroad doing an interstate business is invalid as a burden on interstate commerce.[33] A license or privilege tax for the conduct of intrastate business of a corporation doing both interstate and intrastate business, based on the corporation's total capital or capital stock, is unconstitutional as violating the commerce clause of the federal constitution.[34]

Fee for Filing Articles of Incorporation.—The refusal of the Secretary of State to accept for filing articles of incorporation of a domestic corporation, organized to guarantee mortgages on real estate in various states, without payment of the filing fee and license tax contemplated by a statute is not violative of the federal constitution as interfering with interstate commerce.[35]

Based on Amount of Capital Stock.—A state franchise tax upon private corporations, based on the amount of capital employed by the corporation in the state, is not affected by the character of the property in which the capital is invested, and is therefore not rendered illegal by the fact that such capital is emplied to foreign interstate corporations. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Swindlehurst (Mont.), 130 Pac. 966.

Act March 7, 1907, p. 418, § 1 (Code 1907, § 2391), requiring a foreign corporation to pay an annual franchise tax for use of the state, based on the amount of capital employed therein, is not invalid as interfering with interstate commerce. Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 160 Ala. 396, 49 So. 404; Central, etc., R. Co. v. Gaston, 160 Ala. 671, 49 So. 412.

Acts 1911, p. 67, imposing an annual franchise tax on all the corporations doing business in the state upon the proportion of their outstanding capital stock represented by property owned and used in business transacted in the state, held as to a railroad engaged in interstate transportation, not invalid as a taxation of interstate commerce. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Norwood, 106 Ark. 321, 152 S. W. 110.

31. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

32. The state board of equalization of California having included in their assessment all the franchises of a railroad company, amongst which were franchises conferred by the United States, of constructing a railroad from the Pacific Ocean across the state as well as across the territories of the United States, and of taking toll thereon; held, that the assessment of these franchises was repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States and the power given to congress to regulate commerce among the several states. Franchises conferred by congress cannot, without its permission, be taxed by the states. California v. Central Pac. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. Ed. 150, 8 S. Ct. 1073.

33. King County v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 196 Fed. 323.

34. Mulford Co. v. Curry, 163 Cal. 276, 125 Pac. 236.

Civ. Code, § 409, and Pol. Code, § 416, subd. 4, in so far as they provide for and impose on corporations doing an interstate business an annual license tax for the right to do business in California, held invalid as imposing a burden on interstate commerce. Mulford Co. v. Curry, 125 Pac. 236, 163 Cal. 276.

35. Fee for filing articles of incorporation.—City Properties Co. v. Jordan, 126 Pac. 351, 163 Cal. 587.

So much of Civ. Code, § 408, as requires foreign corporations before doing business in the state to file a copy of their articles with the secretary of state, held not in restraint of interstate commerce. Mulford Co. v. Curry, 163 Cal. 276, 125 Pac. 236.

ployed in interstate or foreign commerce.[36] Interstate commerce is not unconstitutionally interfered with by the franchise tax imposed upon a domestic railway corporation by a state law, because no deduction is allowed from the capital stock, taken as the basis of the tax, on account of the considerable proportion of its rolling stock which, by the familiar course of railway business, is always absent from the state.[37]

Right of Way under River.—A railroad company received a patent from the state of a right of way under the Hudson River for the construction of tunnels for operation of a railroad underneath the river. The franchise, being largely used for local traffic within the state, could be taxed by the state, though used partly in interstate commerce.[38]

Tax on Right to Engage in Commerce.—The cases in which the taxing statutes have been held void, were cases in which the tax was not upon the property employed in the business, but upon the right to carry on the business at all, and was therefore held to impose a direct burden upon the commerce itself.[39] For the same reason, a tax upon the gross receipts derived from the transportation of passengers and goods between one state and other states or foreign nations has been held to be invalid.[40]

§ 3943. Tax on Capital Stock.—The tax imposed under Colorado Laws 1907, ch. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company, the greater part of whose property and business is outside the state, and whose business done within the state is principally interstate commerce, is invalid under the commerce, and due process of law clauses of the federal constitution, even if the temporary forfeiture of the right to do business, declared by the statute in case of failure to pay the tax, can be confined by construction in business wholly within the state.[41]

§ 3944. Tax on Transfer of Corporate Stock.—An unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce is not made by the tax on transfers of corporate stock imposed by a law of New York, as applied to a sale in New York, be-

36. Based on amount of capital stock.—New York v. Roberts, 19 S. Ct. 58, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. Ed. 323, reversing judgment United States v. Hopkins, 82 Fed. 529.

37. Judgments 69 N. E. 1129, 177 N. Y. 584 and 76 N. E. 1104, affirmed in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 26 S. Ct. 714, 202 U. S. 584, 50 L. Ed. 1155.

38. Right of way under river.—People v. State Board, 125 N. Y. S. 895, 69 Misc. Rep. 1.

39. Tax on right to engage in commerce.—Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 43, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635; Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. Ed. 694, 7 S. Ct. 592; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380.

40. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857; Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876.

41. Tax on capital stock.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 32 S. Ct. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

Payment of the unconstitutional tax imposed under Colo. Laws 1907, ch. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company whose business is principally interstate commerce, can not be deemed voluntary, so as to defeat an action to recover it back, where the company, failing to pay the tax, would incur the risk of having its contracts disputed and its business injured by reason of the forfeiture clause in such statute, and of finding the tax greatly increased in case it finally had to pay. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 32 S. Ct. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

The secretary of state, who collects and retains the unconstitutional tax imposed by Colo. Sess. Laws 1907, ch. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company engaged principally in interstate commerce, is liable to a suit to recover back the tax, as paid under duress and protest—especially in view of the provisions of § 6, that, if it shall be judicially determined that any corporation has erroneously paid the tax, the auditor may draw a warrant for its refunding upon the filing of a certified copy of the judgment. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 32 S. Ct. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

tween two nonresidents, of the stock of foreign railway corporations.[42]

§ 3945. Tax on Right of Corporations to Consolidate.—A statute of Ohio imposes a fee on a consolidated corporation for filing in the state articles of consolidation, where several railroads of different states had been consolidated, forming a new corporation, as a condition to receiving privileges, immunities, and powers which it could by no means possess, save by the grace and favor of the constitution of the state of Ohio and the statutory provisions passed in accordance therewith. The exaction constituted no tax upon interstate commerce, or the right to carry on the same, or the instruments thereof, and its enforcement involved no attempt on the part of the state to extend its taxing power beyond its territorial limits.[43]

§ 3946. Tax on Property Outside of State.—A state can not tax property outside of its jurisdiction belonging to persons domiciled elsewhere. On the other hand, it can tax property permanently within its jurisdiction although belonging to persons domiciled elsewhere and used in commerce among the states.[44]

§ 3947. Tax on Property of Foreign Corporation.—It is settled that where a corporation of one state brings into another to use and employ, a portion of its movable personal property, it is legitimate for the latter to impose upon such property thus used and employed its fair share of the burdens of taxation imposed upon similar property used in like way by its own citizens.[45] The fact that the rolling stock of a carrier is employed in interstate commerce does not exempt it from taxation by the state.[46] If such stock never passed beyond the limits of the state, it could not be doubted that the state could tax them, like other property, within its borders, notwithstanding they were employed in interstate commerce. The fact that the stock, instead of stopping at the state boundary, crosses the boundary in going out and coming back, can not affect the power of the state to levy a tax upon them. The state, having the right, for the purposes of taxation, to tax any personal property found within its jurisdiction, without regard to the place of the owner's domicile, could tax the specific stock which at a given moment were within its borders.[47] The route over which the cars travel extending beyond the limits of the state, particular cars may not remain within the state; but the company has at all times substantially the same number of cars within the state, and continuously and constantly uses there a portion of its property; and it is distinctly found, as matter if fact, that the company continuously, throughout the periods for which these taxes were levied, carried on business in Pennsylvania, and had about one hundred cars within the state.[48] It is quite true, as the situs of 42. Tax on transfer of corporate stock.—Order, 184 N. Y. 431, 77 N. E. 970, 8 L. R. A., N. S., 314, 6 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 515, affirmed in Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 51 L. Ed. 415, 27 S. Ct. 188, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 736.

43. Tax on right of corporations to consolidate.—Ashley v. Ryan, 153 U. S. 436, 38 L. Ed. 773, 14 S. Ct. 865.

44. Property outside of state.—Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498.

45. Property of foreign corporation.—American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708, 20 S. Ct. 631; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. Ed. 960, 17 S. Ct. 527.

46. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Hayward, 141 U. S. 36, 35 L. Ed. 621, 11 S. Ct. 883; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037.

47. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Green v. Van Buskirk (U. S.), 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. Ed. 599; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708, 20 S. Ct. 631.

48. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R.

a railroad is in another state, that also, upon general principles, is the situs of all its personal property; but for purposes of taxation, as well as for other purposes, that situs may be fixed in whatever locality the propery may be brought and used by its owner by the law of the place where it is found.[49] This principle of the power to a state to tax the movable and constantly changing property of foreign corporations has been applied to corporations engaged in furnishing to shippers refrigerator cars for the transportation of perishable freight.[50] Where rolling stock is used in two or more states, the tax might be fixed by an appraisement and valuation of the average amount of the property habitually used in a state.[51] The taxation of a foreign corporation which owns freight cars run by state railroad companies from points within to points without the state is not unconstitutional, as an interference with interstate commerce.[52]

Engaged in Interstate Commerce.—The provision of a state law which requires a foreign corporation, carrying on solely interstate commerce in Missouri, to make out, deliver, and file with the secretary of state a statement as to its property and business within the state and to pay a license tax thereon, is unconstitutional.[53]

Tax on Corporate Stock.—Taxation of shares in foreign corporations owned by citizens under Burns' Ann. St. Ind. 1908, §§ 10,143, 10,233, 10,234, while shares in domestic corporations are only taxable when property of the corporation is not exempt, does not violate commerce clause of the constitution.[54]

Fees for Filing Charter.—The fee imposed on corporations for filing articles, which they must file before they can be deemed legally incorporated or consolidated, is not a tax on interstate commerce, though they be engaged in such business, but on the right to exist as a corporation.[55] A foreign corporation, though engaged in interstate trade, may, before being permitted to do business in the state, be required to comply with such reasonable conditions as are contained in a state statute, requiring the filing of its charter, the payment of charter fees, the making of reports and furnishing any information concerning its business, the appointment of agents to receive service of process, etc.[56]

Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037.

In the case of Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037, the question was whether a railroad company incorporated by the state of Maryland, and no part of whose own railroad was within the state of Virginia, was taxable under general laws of Virginia upon rolling stock owned by the company, and employed upon connecting railroads leased by it in that state, yet not assigned permanently to those roads, but used interchangeably upon them and upon roads in other states, as the company's necessities required. It was held not to be so taxable, solely because the tax laws of Virginia appeared upon their face to be limited to railroad corporations of that state. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876.

49. Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876.

50. American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708, 20 S. Ct. 631.

51. American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708, 20 S. Ct. 631; Marye v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876.

52. Fargo v. Auditor General, 57 Mich. 598, 24 N. W. 538.

53. Engaged in interstate commerce.—International Text-Book Co. v. Gillespie, 229 Mo. 397, 129 S. W. 922.

54. Tax on corporate stock.—Darnell v. Indiana, 33 S. Ct. 120, 226 U. S. 390, 57 L. Ed. 267, affirming judgment Darnell v. State, 90 N. E. 769, 174 Ind. 143.

55. Fees for filing charter.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, 51 N. E. 924, 153 Ind. 134.

56. State v. American Book Co., 69 Pac. 563, 65 Kan. 847, dismissed American Book Co. v. Kansas, 24 S. Ct. 394, 193 U. S. 49, 48 L. Ed. 613.

St. 1903, pp. 447, 450, c. 437, §§ 66, 67, 75, requiring every foreign corporation of the classes described in § 58 (page 443) annually to file in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth a certificate of certain facts, and to pay an excise tax assessed on its capital stock by the tax

§ 3948. Tax on Gross Receipts.—The constitutionality of the taxation by a state of the gross earnings of railroad companies derived from interstate commerce, has been upheld.[57] In a case where the corporation was created by that state and had the situs of its business within that state, and where the receipts had become intermingled with the general property of the carrier.[58] However, a subsequent case questions the correctness of the above statement and holds that commissioner, pursuant to Const. c. 1, § 1, art. 4, and § 58, including every foreign corporation which has a usual place of business in Massachusetts, or which is engaged, permanently or temporarily, and with or without a usual place of business therein, in the construction, erection, alteration, or repair of a building, bridge, railroad, railway, or construction of any kind, are constitutional, and enforceable as applicable to a corporation engaged in interstate commerce, which has, at the same time, a place of business in the state for domestic purposes, since, though broad enough to include corporations engaged exclusively in interstate commerce, the legislative intention will not be presumed to include corporations whose usual places of business are established and maintained solely for use in interstate commerce. Attorney General v. Electric Storage Battery Co., 74 N. E. 467, 188 Mass. 239.

57. Gross receipts.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888. See Rutland R. Co. v. Central Vermont R. Co., 159 U. S. 630, 40 L. Ed. 284, 16 S. Ct. 113.

A statute of a state imposing a tax upon the gross receipts of railroad companies is not repugnant to Const., art. 1, § 8, subd. 3, providing for the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, though the gross receipts are made up in part from freights received for the transportation of merchandise from the state to another, or into the state from another. State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

Act June 7, 1879, § 7 (P. L. 116), imposing a tax upon the receipts of railway and transportation companies, is in violation of the constitution of the United States, art. 1, § 8, providing that congress shall have power to regulate commerce between the states, so far as it levies a tax upon receipts derived from commerce between points within and points without the state, and between points without the state but passing through it; and it is immaterial that goods destined for points without the state were temporarily detained in the state after transportation had actually begun. Delaware, etc., Canal Co. v. Commonwealth (Pa.), 1 Monag. 36, 17 Atl. 175, 1 L. R. A. 232.

Ohio Act May 31, 1911 (102 Ohio Laws, pp. 224-260), imposing an excise tax based on gross intrastate earnings of railroads and other public utilities, being by express limitation levied on intrastate earnings only, is not unconstitutional, as imposing a burden on interstate commerce. Ohio River, etc., R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 537.

Fuel used in operating railroad.—Act Okl. May 26, 1908, §§ 2, 3, and 6 as amended by Act March 27, 1909, being Comp. Laws Okl. 1909, §§ 7702, 7703, 7706, imposing a gross revenue tax on mineral production in the state, is not invalid as imposing a burden on interstate commerce as applied to coal mined by a railroad company and used in the operation of interstate trains. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Meyer, 204 Fed. 140.

58. Corporation created by state. — State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

In the case of State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164, an act of the legislature of Pennsylvania which declared that: "In addition to the taxes now provided by law, every railroad, canal, and transportation company incorporated under the laws of this commonwealth, and not liable to the tax upon income under existing laws, shall pay to the commonwealth a tax of three-fourths of one per centum upon the gross receipts of said company; the said tax shall be paid semiannually upon the first days of July and January, commencing on the first day of July, 1886," was held to be valid. The grounds upon which it was based were that the corporation, being a creation of the legislature of Pennsylvania and holding and enjoying all its franchises under the authority of that state, the tax was upon the franchises which it derived from the state, and was for that reason within the power of the state, and that, in determining the mode in which the state could tax the franchises which it had conferred, it was not limited to a fixed sum upon the value of them, but it could be graduated by and proportioned to either the value of the privileges granted, or the extent or results of their exercise. "Very manifestly," said the court, "it is a tax upon the railroad company, measured in amount by the extent of its business, or the degree to which its franchise is exercised." Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

a state can not constitutionally impose upon a steamship company incorporated under its law a tax upon the gross receipts of such company, which are derived from the transportation of persons and property by sea, between different states, and to and from foreign countries, as such tax amounted to a regulation of interstate and foreign commerce.[59] And it has been held that a statute levying a tax upon the gross receipts of a carrier for the carriage of freights and passengers into, out of, or through the state, affects a matter national in its character, requiring uniformity of regulation, and therefore to be invalid, though not in conflict with any regulation prescribed by congress, but here none of the qualities of the preceding cases appeared; the corporation had never been organized or acknowledged as a corporation of the state, and the receipts for carriage had probably never been within the state.[60]

Gross Receipts of Intrastate Business.—A statute authorizing a city to levy on every railroad company doing business or having an office in the city a license tax not to exceed one per cent of the gross receipts of its business, being invalid as against a railroad whose business extends to points out of the state, as a regulation of interstate commerce, a tax levied thereunder is invalid, though it is limited to business of the railroad done within the state.[61]

Where Railroad Partly within State.—A state statute which required every corporation, person, or association operating a railroad within the state to pay an annual tax, to be determined by the amount of its gross transportation receipts, and which further provides that, when applied to a railroad lying partly within and partly without the state, or to one operated as a part of a line or system extending beyond the state, the tax shall be equal to the proportion of the gross receipts in the state, to be ascertained in the manner provided by the statute, does not conflict with the constitution of the United States, but it is a regulation within the power of the state. The reference by the statute to the transportation receipts and to a certain percentage of the same, in determining the amount of the excise tax, was simply to ascertain the value of the business done by the corporation, and thus obtain a guide to a reasonable conclusion as to the amount of the excise tax which should be levied.[62]

59. Cases denying right of state.—Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118. See, also, Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121; Rutland R. Co. v. Central Vermont R. Co., 159 U. S. 630, 40 L. Ed. 284, 16 S. Ct. 113.

"In Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118, it was decided that a tax upon the gross receipts of a steamship corporation of the state, when such receipts were derived from commerce between the states and with foreign countries, was unconstitutional. We regard this decision as unshaken and as stating established law. It cites the earlier cases to the same effect. Later ones are Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 39, 32 L. Ed. 345, 9 S. Ct. 6; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Alabama State Board, 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. Ed. 409, 10 S. Ct. 161. See, also, Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 42 L. Ed. 614, 18 S. Ct. 242; Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. Ed. 995, 24 S. Ct. 817. In Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, the authority of the Philadelphia Steamship Company Case was accepted without question, and the decision was justified by the majority as not in any way qualifying or impairing it. The validity of the distinction was what divided the court." Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638.

A state statute which levies a tax upon the gross receipts of railroads for the carriage of freight and passengers into, out of, or through the state, is a tax upon commerce between the states. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

60. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857. See New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

61. Gross receipts of intrastate business.—Southern R. Co. v. Asheville, 69 Fed. 359.

62. Where railroad partly within state.—Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, cited

Interstate Transportation between Intrastate Points.—The state may impose a tax on the gross receipts on the transportation of goods and passengers by continuous carriage from one point in the state to another point in the same state, although part of the route is over the soil of another state.[63]

Where Carrier Is Domestic Corporation.—Gross receipts of a railroad company from transportation between terminal points, one or both of which are without the state, by route lying partly within or wholly without the state, are not subject to taxation by such state, though the company's franchises were derived from it.[64]

Tax Equal to One Percent of Gross Receipts.—A state can not impose a tax upon railroad companies whose lines lie wholly within the state, equal to one per centum of the gross receipts, where a part of such gross receipts is derived from the carriage of freight and passengers in interstate commerce.[65] It in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810.

In this respect the tax was unlike that levied in Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118, where the specific gross receipts for transportation were taxed as such, taxed "not only because they are money, or its value, but because they were received for transportation." Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810.

63. Interstate transportation between intrastate points.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 205, 36 L. Ed. 672, 12 S. Ct. 806, affirming 1 Monag. 45, 17 Atl. 179; S. C., 129 Pa. 308, 18 Atl. 125.

64. Where carrier is domestic corporation.—Commonwealth v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Pa.), 1 Monag. 45, 17 Atl. 179.

65. Tax "equal to" stated per cent of gross receipts.—The state can not impose the tax levied by Act Tex. April 17, 1905, p. 336, c. 141, upon railway companies whose lines lie wholly within the state, "equal to 1 per centum of their gross receipts," where a part, and, in some cases, much the larger part, of these gross receipts, is derived from the carriage of passengers and freight coming from, or destined to, points without the state. Judgment, State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 100 Tex. 153, 97 S. W. 71, reversed in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638.

This is an action against certain railroads to recover taxes and penalties. The supreme court of the state held the penalties to be void under the state constitution, but upheld the tax. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 100 Tex. 153, 97 S. W. 71. The railroads brought the case here mainly on the ground that the law upon which the action is based is an attempt to regulate commerce among the states. In the course of the opinion the court said: "By whatever name the exaction may be called, if it amounts to no more than the ordinary tax upon property or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the constitution. The question is whether this is such a tax. It appears sufficiently, perhaps from what has been said, that we are to look for a practical rather than a logical or philosophical distinction. The state must be allowed to tax the property, and to tax it at its actual value as a going concern. On the other hand, the state can not tax the interstate business. The two necessities hardly admit of an absolute logical reconciliation. Yet the distinction is not without sense. When a legislature is trying simply to value property, it is less likely to attempt or to effect injurious regulation than when it is aiming directly at the receipts from interstate commerce. A practical line can be drawn by taking the whole scheme of taxation into account. That must be done by this court as best it can. Neither the state courts nor the legislature, by giving the tax a particular name or by the use of some form of words, can take away our duty to consider its nature and effect. If it bears upon commerce among the states so directly as to amount to a regulation in a relatively immediate way, it will not be saved by name or form." Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. Ed. 785, 22 S. Ct. 576; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. Ed. 778, 28 S. Ct. 485, 14 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1101.

"The distinction between a tax 'equal to' 1 per cent of gross receipts, and a tax of 1 per cent of the same, seems to us nothing except where the former phrase is the index of an actual attempt to reach the property and to let the interstate traffic and the receipts from it alone. We find no such attempt or anything to qualify the plain inference from the statute, taken by itself. On the contrary, we rather infer from the judgment of the state court and from the argument on behalf of the state that another tax on the property of the railroad is upon a valuation of that property, does not matter that the corporations are domestic corporations, or that the tax embraces indiscriminately gross receipts from commerce within as well as outside of the state.[66]

Gross Earnings of Preceding Year.—A statute requires every corporation, operating a railroad in the state, to pay an annual excise tax for the privilege of exercising its franchises; the amount of the tax to be determined according to a sliding scale proportioned to the average gross earnings per mile within the state for the year preceding the levy of the tax. The method of determining the amount of the tax is merely a way of ascertaining the value of the privilege, and does not render the tax a tax upon the receipts themselves, and hence, in its application to railroads which enter the state from another state or from Canada, the act does not operate as a regulation or foreign commerce.[67]

Gross Receipts Arising from Freights.—A statute of a state imposing a tax upon the gross receipts of railroad companies is not repugnant to the constitution of the United States, though the gross receipts are made up in part from freights received for transportation of merchandise from the state to another state, or into the state from another. Such a tax is not a regulation of interstate commerce. Nor is it a tax on imports or exports. Nor is it a tax upon interstate transportation. A distinction is made between a tax upon freights carried between states, because of their carriage, and a tax upon the fruits of such transportation after they have become intermingled with the other property of the carrier.[68]

Tax on Basis of Amount of Gross Receipts.—A tax upon gross receipts of a transportation company is not necessarily a tax upon commerce. Every tax upon personal property, or upon occupations, business, or franchises, affects more or less the subjects and the operations of commerce. Yet it is not everything that affects commerce that amounts to a regulation of it, within the meaning of the constitution. The states have authority to tax the estate, real and personal, of all their corporations, including carrying companies, precisely as they may tax similar property when belonging to natural persons, and to the same extent. Such taxation may be laid upon a valuation or may be an excise; and, in exacting an excise tax from their corporations, the states are not obliged to impose a fixed sum upon the franchises, or upon the value of them, but they may demand a graduated contribution, proportioned either to the value of the privileges granted, or to the extent of their exercise, or to the results of such exercises. No mode of effecting this and no forms of expression which have not a meaning beyond this, can be regarded as violating the constitution. In virtue of the right to tax the property of corporations, the state may lay a tax upon the gross receipts of a carrying company, estimating it after those receipts have been collected and have become the property of the company. And, in virtue of the right to tax the franchises of corporations, the state may resort to the gross receipts as a measure of probable value.[69]

Where Imposed in Nature of General Tax.—A tax on the gross receipts of a railroad is not repugnant to the constitution, because imposed on the railroad companies in the nature of a general income tax, and incapable of being transferred as a burden upon the property carried from one state to another.[70] taken as a going concern. This is merely an effort to reach the gross receipts, not even disguised by the name of an occupation tax, and in no way helped by the words 'equal to.'" Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638.

66. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638.

67. Gross earnings of preceding year.—Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, 163.

68. Gross receipts arising from freights.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

69. Tax on basis of amount of gross receipts.—Reading Railroad v. Pennsylvania (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

70. Where imposed in nature of general tax.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164; Osborne v. Mobile (U. S.), 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. Ed. 470.

Gross Revenue Tax in Addition to Property Tax.—As applied to express companies whose receipts are derived largely from commerce among the states and which also receives large sums as income from investments in bonds and land all outside the state, a statute which imposes upon public service corporations operating within the state a "gross revenue tax," "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon an ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporations," is unconstitutional, not only as an attempt to tax interstate commerce, but as an attempt to levy a tax upon property situated without and beyond the jurisdiction of the state.[71]

Gross Revenue Tax in Lieu of All Property Tax.—Including the gross receipts of a nonresident express company, upon the basis of which a tax is imposed by Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, ch. 11, "in lieu of all taxes on its property," the earnings from interstate shipments, where the transportation while in the company's hands was performed wholly within the state, does not unconstitutionally burden interstate commerce, but is an exercise of the state's power to measure a legitimate property tax by receipts which in part come from interstate commerce, which could not in itself be taxed.[72] The earnings of a nonresident express company carrying goods between two points within the state over a route incidentally traversing a portion of another state, so far as they are derived from the carriage within the state, may be included in the gross receipts, upon which the tax imposed by Minn. Rev. Laws, 1905, ch. 11, is based, without unconstitutionally burdening interstate commerce, or denying due process of law.[73] The Illinois Central Railroad Charter requiring the company to pay to the state an amount equal to seven per cent of its gross receipts in lieu of taxes, was a mere charter method of fixing an equivalent for a tax that would otherwise ordinarily be levied on the property of the corporation; and hence, notwithstanding it required the payment of such percentage on the receipts of the railroad company's charter lines from interstate commerce, was not invalid as

71. Gross revenue tax in addition to property tax. — A nonresident express company whose receipts are largely derived from interstate commerce and from investments in bonds and land outside the state can not validly be subjected to the "gross revenue tax" exacted by Okla. Laws 1910, ch. 44, from public service corporations, "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation," equal to such proportion of a specified percentage of its gross receipts from every source whatsoever as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business. Meyer v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 223 U. S. 298, 56 L. Ed. 445, 32 S. Ct. 218, following Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. Ed. 1031, 28 S. Ct. 638.

The "gross revenue tax" exacted from a nonresident express company by Okla. Laws 1910, ch. 44, "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation" and equal to such proportion of a specified percentage of its gross receipts from every source whatsoever as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business, can not be construed, for the purpose of saving its constitutionality, as referring only to the receipts from commerce wholly within the state. Meyer v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 223 U. S. 298, 56 L. Ed. 445, 32 S. Ct. 218.

72. Gross revenue tax in lieu of all property tax.—The tax in the present case is not like those held invalid in the Galveston Case and the Oklahoma Case, being an addition to other state taxation reaching the property of all kinds of the express company. The tax to be collected in part from the earnings of interstate commerce was part of a scheme of taxation seeking to reach the value of the property of such companies in the state, measured by the receipts from business done within the state. The statute was not aimed exclusively at the avails of interstate commerce. Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118, but, as in the Maine Case, was an attempt to measure the amount of tax within the admitted power of the state by income derived, in part, from the conduct of interstate commerce. United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, 32 S. Ct. 211.

73. United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, 32 S. Ct. 211.

an attempt to regulate or impose a tax on interstate commerce itself.[74]

Receipts of Railroad from Interstate Express.—The Tax Law of New York of 1896 provides for a franchise tax to be assessed on the gross earnings of a transportation corporation within the state, which shall include its gross earnings from its transportation or transmission business originating and terminating within the state, but shall not include earnings derived from business of an interstate character. Where it appeared that a domestic railway company's assessment under such section included receipts from express business beginning in the state and transferred within the state for delivery in another state, or shipped outside the state for delivery within the state, such business being interstate commerce, and not taxable, the corporation was entitled to a revision of its assessment.[75]

§§ 3949-3950. Tax on Passengers and Freight—§ 3949. Passengers.—It has been held, that a state statute imposing a tax upon a passenger for the privilege of leaving the state, or passing through it by the ordinary mode of passengers travel, is not in conflict with the provision of the United States constitution conferring on congress the power to regulate commerce, in the absence of any legislation by congress affecting the matter.[76] While on the other hand

74. State v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 246 Ill. 188, 92 N. E. 814.

75. Receipts of railroad from interstate express.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 88 N. Y. S. 373, 94 App. Div. 587.

Where the entire business of a domestic corporation consists in the transportation of grain and other products from ports outside of the state to ports and places in the state, and of personal property from ports in the state to ports in other states, and its entire gross receipts from its business are derived from such transportation, and not otherwise, its earnings are "earnings derived from business which is of an interstate character" within Laws 1894, p. 1303, c. 562, § 11; Laws 1896, p. 857, c. 908, § 184, which forbid the imposition of any tax on the business of interstate commerce, and are not subject to the franchise tax imposed by Laws 1880, p. 766, c. 542, § 6; Laws 1881, p. 484, c. 361, § 6; Laws 1896, p. 857, c. 908, § 184. Order, 82 N. Y. S. 582, 84 App. Div. 174, affirmed in Connecting Terminal R. Co. v. Miller, 70 N. E. 472, 178 N. Y. 194.

76. Tax on passengers.—Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744, cited in Case of State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Railroad Co. v. Maryland (U. S.), 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. Ed. 678. See, also, Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 48, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635.

A state can not impose a tax on the movement of persons or property from one state to another. Railroad Co. v. Maryland (U. S.), 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. Ed. 678. The cases of Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744, and Case of State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, cited and affirmed.

The charter of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for constructing and working a branch railroad between Baltimore and Washington contained a stipulation that the company at the end of every six months should pay to the state one-fifth of the whole amount received for the transportation of passengers. This charter was accepted and complied with for many years. Held, that this stipulation was not repugnant to the commerce clause of the constitution of the United States. Railroad Co. v. Maryland (U. S.), 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. Ed. 678.

In 1865 the state of Nevada levied "a capitation tax of one dollar upon every person leaving the state by any railroad, stage coach, or other vehicle engaged or employed in the business of transporting passengers for hire," to be paid by the proprietors or corporations so engaged. Held, that such tax was unconstitutional, on the ground that it would interfere with the right of the general government, under the federal constitution, to the free passage of its officers, agents, and troops over every part of the national territory. Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744.

The tax under Act March 27, 1843, No. 81, providing a fund for the Charity Hospital of New Orleans, being imposed exclusively on the passengers, and not on the officers and crew of the vessel, is not a regulation of commerce; nor a usurpation of the power to "regulate with foreign nations and among the several states," exclusively vested in congress (U. S. Const., art. 1, § 8); it is not inconsistent with any law of congress regulating commerce; nor prohibited by Act Cong. April 8, 1812, § 1, that act having no further application since the admission of Louisiana into the Union. State v. Fullerton (La.), 7 Rob. 210.

it is held that interstate transportation of passengers is beyond the reach of a state legislature, and state taxation of persons passing from one state to another, or a state tax upon interstate transportation of passengers, is prohibited by the constitution of the United States because a burden upon it.[77] A state statute imposing taxes upon passengers on ships arriving in the ports of the state from foreign ports is a regulation of foreign commerce, which is exclusively vested in congress, and is therefore void.[78] And such tax is not relieved from this unconstitutional objection by saying in the title of the statute that it is in aid of a law called an inspection law, which authorizes an inspection of passengers with reference to their being persons liable to become a public charge, criminals, paupers, etc.[79] A tax upon passengers carriers of a specific amount for each passenger carried is held to be a tax on the passengers.[80]

77. Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. Ed. 527; Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 550; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566, 24 L. Ed. 1015; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 48, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635. See Case of State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826.

In Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543, the statute of New York was defended as a police regulation to protect the state against the influx of foreign paupers; but it was held to be unconstitutional, because its practical result was to impose a burden upon all passengers from foreign countries. So in the case of Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 550, where the pretense was the exclusion of lewd women.

Act 1864, imposing on any carrier of passengers across any portion of the state a tax of ten cents for each passenger, except soldiers and sailors of the United States, in so far as it operates upon persons entering into, departing from, or passing through the state, is, in effect, an act regulating commerce between this and other states, and is therefore void, as conflicting with the provisions of the federal constitution conferring upon congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states. Clarke v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. (Del.), 4 Houst. 158.

78. Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702; Head-Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. Ed. 798, 5 S. Ct. 247; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635; Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543, reviewing and criticising Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702.

A state can not require a sum to be paid for each passenger landed. Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702; Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. Ed. 754.

A statute which imposes a heavily burdensome condition upon a shipmaster as a prerequisite to landing his passengers, and allows him the alternative of paying a small sum for each one landed, is a regulation of commerce, and therefore void. What may be done by a state to protect itself from the influx of paupers and convicted criminals, in the absence of legislation on the subject by congress, is left undecided. Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543; Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. Ed. 754. See People v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. Ed. 383, 2 S. Ct. 87.

In Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543, where the owners of vessels from a foreign port were required to give a bond, as security, that every passenger whom they landed should not become a burden on the state, or pay for every such passenger a fixed sum, it was held to be in effect a tax of that sum on the passenger, however disguised by the alternative of a bond which would never be given.

In the case of Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543, a similar statute of Louisiana was held void for the same reason. And in the case of Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 550, a statute of California on the same subject was also held void, because it "invades the right of congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations." Head-Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. Ed. 798, 5 S. Ct. 247.

79. Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 550; People v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. Ed. 383, 2 S. Ct. 87.

80. Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702; Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744, and Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. Ed. 543; Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Case of State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 48, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635.

Tax on Passengers but Not on Vehicles.—The act of the general assembly of Ohio of March, 1834, assessing tolls upon passengers carried by mail coaches in Ohio, is constitutional, since not a tax upon the coach itself.[81]

Condition in Charter of Railroad.—The effect of a condition in the charter of a railway company that the company shall pay over to the state a certain percentage of all moneys received for the transportation of passengers, is not to impose a capitation tax, or a tax upon the passengers' right of transit through the state. It operates only as a tax imposed upon the company, with its consent, and therefore does not violate any provision of the constitution of the United States.[82] A clause in the charter of a railroad company, providing that all tonnage of whatsoever kind or description, except the ordinary baggage of passengers, carried or conveyed on said railroad, in each and every year, shall be subject to a toll or duty, for the use of the commonwealth, of three mills per ton per mile, is simply a mode of taxing the company according to the magnitude of its business, and is not intended as a tax on commerce. Such a tax is not in violation of the provisions of the constitution of the United States that "congress shall have exclusive power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the states," and prohibiting the states, without the consent of congress, from laying duties on imports and exports.[83]

Transported by Foreign Corporations.—The Act of New Jersey of March 28, 1862, relating to taxes, provided that foreign carriers regularly doing business in this state should pay a certain transit duty on every passenger and ton of goods transported over the territory of the state, and not exclusively within its limits. This provision was in conflict with the clause of the constitution declaring that congress shall have power to regulate commerce among the several states.[84]

Tax on Alien Passengers.—State statutes imposing taxes upon alien passengers are invalid.[85] Act April 26, 1862, being an act to discourage immigration of the Chinese into California, is not within the power of the state to exclude paupers and other obnoxious persons, it not appearing that the Chinese are 81. Tax on passengers but not on vehicles.—State v. Neil, 7 O. 132, 28 Am. Dec. 623, reversed in 3 How. 720, 11 L. Ed. 800.

82. Condition in charter provision.—State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 Md. 344.

83. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commonwealth (Pa.), 3 Grant Cas. 128.

84. Transported by foreign corporations.—Erie R. Co. v. State, 31 N. J. L. 531, 86 Am. Dec. 226.

Section 10 of the Tax Act of March 28, 1862, taxing foreign corporations doing business in New Jersey by making them pay a duty upon every passenger and ton of freight brought into or carried out of the state, is not in violation of the provisions of the constitution of the United States giving congress the power to regulate commerce and forbidding states to tax imports or exports. State v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 30 N. J. L. 473.

85. Tax on alien passengers.—Smith v. Turner (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702.

A state tax on immigrants is void. People v. Downer, 7 Cal. 169; Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363.

Statutes imposing taxation upon alien passengers arriving in ports of the United States are void. Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702.

The statute of New York of May 31, 1881, imposing a tax on every passenger from a foreign country landing in the port of New York who is not a citizen of the United States, and holding the vessel which brings him liable for the tax, is a regulation of commerce. The tax is not relieved from this constitutional objection by calling in an inspection law. People v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. Ed. 383, 2 S. Ct. 87, affirming 10 Fed. 357.

Act 1881, providing for inspection of persons and effects of immigrants arriving by vessel at the port of New York from any foreign country, is not, within the constitution of the United States, art. 1, § 10, clause 2, an inspection law, for which the state may lay duties on imports or exports; and therefore Laws 1881, c. 432, § 590, entitled "An act to raise money for the execution of the inspection laws of the state of New York," which levies a duty on every alien coming from a foreign port to the port of New York, is a regulation of interstate commerce, and void. People v. Edye (N. Y.), 11 Daly 132.

such.[86] But the imposition of a tax upon immigrant agents, is not a regulation of interstate commerce.[87]

Power of Congress to Tax Alien Passengers.—The Act Cong. Aug. 3, 1882, entitled "An act to regulate immigration," imposes on the owners of vessels who shall bring passengers from a foreign port into a port of the United States a duty of fifty cents for every such passenger not a citizen of the United States, and is not a tax subject to the limitations imposed by the constitution on the general taxing power of congress.[88] The act of congress authorizing the levy of a tax on passengers is not in violation of the treaties in existence before the act was passed between the United States and the various foreign countries, of which the owners of the vessels bringing the passengers were citizens or subjects, which provided for freedom of commerce or navigation, since it applies to citizens of the United States and their vessels as well.[89]

Passengers on Ships.—A state law, which requires the master of a vessel, engaged in foreign commerce, to pay a certain sum to a state officer on account of each passenger brought from a foreign country into the state, is also void.[90]

§ 3950. Freight.—A statute of a state imposing a tax upon freight taken up within a state and carried out of it, or taken up without the state and brought into it, is repugnant to the constitution, providing that congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states.[91] Where a tax demanded by a state statute is imposed, not upon the company, but upon the freight carried and because carried, so far as it affects commodities transported through the state, or from points without the state to points within it, or from points within the state to points without it, the act is a regulation of interstate commerce.[92] If the subjects of taxation can be separated so that that

86. The act of California.—Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 534.

Section 2955 of the political code of California, so far as it requires the payment of seventy cents for each passenger inspected to ascertain if he is afflicted with leprosy, coming into the United States by sea, and imposing a fine for nonpayment upon the owners and consignees of the vessel bringing the passengers, is unconstitutional and void. Bunker v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 16 Fed. 344.

87. Tax on immigrant agent.—Williams v. Fears, 110 Ga. 584, 35 S. E. 699, 50 L. R. A. 685, affirmed in 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. Ed. 186, 21 S. Ct. 128.

A burden on interstate commerce is not imposed by Laws Ga. 1898, p. 21, par. 10, § 4, imposing a license tax on emigrant agents engaged in the business of hiring persons to labor outside the state. Judgment, 110 Ga. 584, 35 S. E. 699, 50 L. R. A. 685, affirmed in Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. Ed. 186, 21 S. Ct. 128.

88. Power of congress.—Eyde v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. Ed. 798, 5 S. Ct. 247.

Act Cong. Aug. 3, 1882 "to regulate immigration," which imposes on the owners of steam or sailing vessels who shall bring passengers from a foreign port into a port of the United States a duty of fifty cents for every such passenger not a citizen of this country, to constitute a fund "to defray the expense of regulating immigration under this act, and for the care of immigrants arriving in the United States, for the relief of such as are in distress," etc., is a valid exercise of the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations. Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. Ed. 798, 5 S. Ct. 247.

89. Edye v. Robertson, 18 Fed. 135, 21 Blatchf. 460.

90. Tax on each passenger carried.—Gilman v. Philadelphia (U. S.), 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. Ed. 96; Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702.

91. Freight.—Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, reversing Commonwealth v. Erie R. Co., 62 Pa. 286, 1 Am. Rep. 399.

A cargo in interstate commerce is not subject to taxation by a state. Ex parte Eaglesfield, 180 Fed. 558.

92. Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; cited in Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. Ed. 244, 7 S. Ct. 4; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 700, 8 S. Ct. 689, 1062; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Osborne v. Mobile (U. S.), 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. Ed. 470; Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702.

A statute of Pennsylvania taxing the which arises from interstate commerce can be distinguished from that which arises from commerce wholly within the state, the court will act upon this distinction, and will restrain the tax on interstate commerce while permitting the state to collect that arising from commerce solely within its own territory.[93] But it has been held that a state law requiring transportation companies having lines within the state to pay a tax upon freights is not void for infringing the power to regulate commerce between the states conferred by the United States constitution upon congress.[94]

Tax on Freight and Tax on Receipts Distinguished.—A tax by a state upon freights carried between states differs from a tax upon the receipts from such transportation, since the former is a tax because of the carriage, and the latter is upon the property of the company.[95]

Tax on Goods before Entering Commerce.—Act April 8, 1861 (P. L. 258), punishing the buying without a license of certain articles of produce in Berks and Franklin counties, "with intent to send the same for sale or barter to any other market out of said counties," is not in violation of the interstate commerce clauses of the constitution; the license fee, at most, being only a tax on the articles before they begin to move as an article of trade from one state to another. Even if the act were obnoxious to the interstate commerce clauses, in the case of a purchase of goods to be sold in another state it would still be valid as to business wholly within the state.[96]

After Property Has Ceased to Be Interstate Commerce.—After property has left the channels of commerce and obtained a situs in the state, it is subject to the taxing power of the state; and the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution can be invoked only to protect such property from unjust discrimination.[97]

Property Delayed in Transit for Purpose of Separation.—The tax on property belonging to the citizens of another state in its transit to markets in other states, which is delayed within this state merely for the purpose of separation and assortment, is a tax on commerce.[98] Complainant shipped coal from Pennsylvania to its own order to a dock in New Jersey, where it was transferred transportation companies on freight hauled through the state was held to effect a matter national in its character, requiring uniformity of regulation, and to be therefore invalid, though not in conflict with any regulation prescribed by congress. Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

In the Case of State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, the judgment was rested upon the ground that the tax was always added to the cost of transportation, and thus was a tax in effect upon the privilege of carrying the goods through the state. Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. Ed. 244, 7 S. Ct. 4.

93. Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127.

94. Commonwealth v. Erie R. Co., 62 Pa. 286, 1 Am. Rep. 399, reversed in Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

The Tonnage Tax Law, Act April 25, 1864, laying a charge on certain classes of common carriers for freight carried over their lines, levied on all and rated equitably according to the character of the freight and expense of moving it, is an exercise of the rights of taxation and eminent domain, as an incident to which a state may require companies operating public works and exercising franchises under her grant to contribute to her revenues, and is not invalid, as an attempt to regulate commerce. Commonwealth v. Erie R. Co., 62 Pa. 286, 1 Am. Rep. 399, reversed in Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146.

95. Tax on freight and tax on receipts distinguished.—State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

96. Tax on goods before entering commerce.—Rothermel v. Meyerle, 136 Pa. 250, 20 Atl. 583, 9 L. R. A. 366.

97. After property has ceased to be interstate commerce.—Darnell v. State, 174 Ind. 143, 90 N. E. 769.

Where goods have been brought within the state, and have entered into the body of the merchandise therein situate, they lose their character as articles of interstate commerce, and become subject to taxation within the state. Phillips v. Raynes, 120 N. Y. S. 1053, 136 App. Div. 417.

98. Property delayed in transit for purpose of separation.—Detmold v. Engle, 34 N. J. L. 425.

from the cars either into bottoms for continued transportation to consignees then determined upon, or, when no bottoms were available, the coal was dumped onto a dock, from which it was later transferred to bottoms as occasion required. The coal so temporarily stored at the dock ceased to be "interstate commerce," notwithstanding the intention to transship, and was therefore subject to state taxation, under the rule that, to claim exemption from taxation under the commerce clause of the federal Constitution, there must be a continuous movement of the merchandise in interstate commerce, pursuant to an existing contract of sale or consignment.[99]

Tax on Weight of Goods.—A state statute requiring transportation companies doing business in the state, to pay a fixed sum as a tax on each ton of freight carried, without regard to the distance moved or charge made, so far as it applies to freight taken up within the state and carried out of it, or taken up outside the state and delivered within it, or in other words all freight other than that taken up and delivered within the state, is unconstitutional and void as a regulation of interstate and foreign commerce,[1] though valid as to all freight, the carriage of which begins and ends within the limits of the state.[2]

§ 3951. Tax on Privilege and Occupation.—Tax on Privilege of Engaging in Interstate Commerce.—A city situated on a branch line, and not the main line, of a foreign railway corporation engaged in business involving interstate commerce, can not impose on the company a license tax on the privilege of engaging in the business of a common carrier within its limits.[3] A state law imposing a privilege tax on railroad companies and railroad agents, other than officers of railroads terminating in the taxing district, is not an attempt to regu-

99. Susquehanna Coal Co. v. South Amboy, 184 Fed. 941.

Oil shipped from Pennsylvania and Ohio, and destined ultimately for points in Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi, is not property in interstate commerce, so as to be exempt from state tax or inspection laws while it is held at a distributing point maintained by the shipper in Tennessee, at which point such oil is unloaded from tank cars into various tanks, barrels, and other receptacles, and from which it is forwarded to its final destination. Judgment 117 Tenn. 82, 95 S. W. 824, affirmed in General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. Ed. 754, 28 S. Ct. 475.

1. Tax on weight of goods.—Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146. See, also, Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. Ed. 244, 7 S. Ct. 4; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 700, 8 S. Ct. 689, 1062; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566, 24 L. Ed. 1015; Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. Ed. 754; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (U. S.), 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. Ed. 164.

In the Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, the court but applied the rule, announced in Brown v. Maryland (U. S.), 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. Ed. 678, that where the burden of a tax falls on a thing which is the subject of taxation, the tax is to be considered as laid on the thing rather than on him who is charged with the duty of paying it unto the treasury. In that case, it was said, a tax on the sale of an article, imported only for sale, was a tax on the article itself. To the same general effect are Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. Ed. 347; Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566, 24 L. Ed. 1015, and Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344, 26 L. Ed. 565; Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067.

In the Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, the tax was not imposed for the purpose of regulating interstate commerce, but in order to raise a revenue and would have been a legitimate exercise of an admitted power of the state if it had not been exerted so as to operate as a regulation of interstate commerce. Bowman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 700, 8 S. Ct. 689, 1062.

2. Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146, cited on this point in Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. Ed. 244, 7 S. Ct. 4; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. Ed. 229, 8 S. Ct. 1127.

3. Tax on privilege of engaging in interstate commerce.—San Bernardino v. Southern Pac. Co., 107 Cal. 524, 40 Pac. 796, 29 L. R. A. 327.

late commerce in a manner in contravention to the federal constitution.[4]

Tax on Privilege of Navigation.—An ordinance establishing a rate or license, as the price of the privilege of navigation certain navigable waters in the coastwise trade, is invalid as the sole occupation sought to be subjected to the tax is that of using and enjoying the license of the United States to employ the particular vessels in the coasting trade; and the state thus seeks to burden with an exaction, fixed at its own pleasure, the very right to which the party is entitled under, and which he derives from, the constitution and laws of the United States.[5] The ordinance of the city of New Orleans establishing a rate of licenses for professions and other businesses, and assessing and collecting certain sums from persons owning and running tow boats to and from the Gulf of Mexico, and from persons owning and running job boats within the corporate limits, is a regulation of commerce among the states, and therefore contrary to art. 1, § 8, clause 3, of the constitution of the United States, and void.[6] The Chicago River being a navigable stream, and its waters connecting with the harbor of Chicago, and the vessels navigating the river and harbor having access by them to Lake Michigan and the states bordering on the lake and connecting lakes and rivers, an ordinance of the city of Chicago imposing a license tax upon tug boats enrolled and licensed in the coasting trade under the laws of the United States, for the privilege of navigating the Chicago River and its branches, and which were at the time a tax was exacted, engaged in the coasting and foreign trade, and in towing vessels engaged in interstate commerce, from Lake Michigan to the Chicago River and its branches, and in towing vessels similarly engaged from the river into the lake, is invalid and cannot be sustained because of expenditures by the city in deepening and improving the channel of the river.[7]

Tax on Privilege of Maintaining Office.—It has been ruled that a tax imposed by a state on a corporation engaged in the business of interstate commerce, for the privilege of keeping an office in the state, was a tax on commerce among the states.[8]

Tax for Privilege of Using Streets of City.—A law of a state requiring owners of vehicles using the streets of a city to pay an annual license fee, and providing that the fees be placed to the credit of the street-repairing fund of the public treasury of said city, is not in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution, when enforced against owners who are nonresidents of the state, and not engaged in business in the state, for vehicles used by them upon such streets in interstate transportation, and in prosecution of interstate commerce. The license fees must be regarded as compensation for the advantages and improved facilities afforded by the city for such transportation.[9]

Tax on Soliciting Agent.—An agency of a line of an interstate railroad, established in a state, for the purpose of inducing passengers to take that line at 4. Lightburne v. Taxing Dist., 72 Tenn. (4 Lea) 219.

5. Tax on privilege of navigation.—Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 30 L. Ed. 487, 7 S. Ct. 313; Harman v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 396, 37 L. Ed. 216, 13 S. Ct. 306. See State Tonnage Tax Cases (U. S.), 12 Wall. 204, 20 L. Ed. 370; Gibbons v. Ogden (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23.

6. The case falls directly within the rule laid down in Sinnot v. Davenport (U. S.), 22 How. 227, 16 L. Ed. 243, and Foster v. Davenport (U. S.), 22 How. 244, 16 L. Ed. 248, which cases are followed and approved. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38.

7. Harman v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 396, 37 L. Ed. 216, 13 S. Ct. 306.

In Gibbons v. Ogden (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23, the federal supreme court held that vessels enrolled and liensed pursuant to the laws of the United States, had conferred upon them as full and complete authority to carry on this trade as it was in the power of congress to confer. See, also, Harman v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 396, 37 L. Ed. 216, 13 S. Ct. 306.

8. Tax on privilege of maintaining office.—Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. Ed. 394, 10 S. Ct. 958, cited in Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. Ed. 186, 21 S. Ct. 128.

9. Vehicles using streets of city.—Bogart v. State, 10 O. Dec. 365, 20 Wkly. L. Bull. 458.

a certain point, but not engaged in selling tickets for the route, or receiving or paying out money on account of it, is an agency engaged in interstate commerce; and a license tax imposed upon the agent for the privilege of doing business is a tax upon interstate commerce, and is unconstitutional. The business of the agency was carried on with the purpose to assist in increasing the amount of passenger traffic over the road, and was therefore a part of the commerce of the road and hence of interstate commerce.[10]

Tax on Locomotive Engineer.—An act of the state legislature imposing a license upon any locomotive engineer operating or running any engine or train of cars on any railroad in that state was resisted, by an engineer of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, who ran an engine drawing passenger coaches on that road from Mobile in that state to Corinth in Mississippi, on the ground that the statute of the state was an attempt to regulate interstate commerce, and was, therefore, repugnant to the commercial clause of the constitution of the United States. It was held, that the statute was not in its nature a regulation of commerce, as far as the statute affected commercial transactions among the state, its effect was so indirect, incidental and remote as not to burden or impede such commerce, and that it was not, therefore, in conflict with the constitution of the United States or any law of congress.[11]

Tax on Agent of Express Company.—The statute of a state requiring from the agent of every express company not incorporated by the laws of such state, a license from the auditor of public accounts, and also requiring a statement to be made and filed in the auditor's office showing that the company is possessed of an equal capital of a certain sum, either in cash or safe investments, exclusive of stock notes, before he can carry on any business for said company in the state embraces interstate business as well as business confined wholly within the state, and it is a prohibition against the carrying on of such business without compliance with the state law. Such statute, in so far as it requires such license to be taken out by a foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce, is a regulation of such commerce, and therefore repugnant to the commercial clause of the United States constitution and such statute can not be sustained as a regulation made in the fair exercise of the police power of the state.[12]

10. Tax upon agent of carrier.—Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. Ed. 392, 10 S. Ct. 881. See, also, Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. Ed. 186, 21 S. Ct. 128.

"To the same effect are Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. Ed. 649, 11 S. Ct. 851; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. Ed. 719, 14 S. Ct. 829, and Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. Ed. 785, 22 S. Ct. 576." Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. Ed. 254, 24 S. Ct. 151.

Order No. 1589 of the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco, which imposes a license tax of $25 per quarter on every railroad agency, is a regulation of interstate commerce, in so far as it applies to an agent who solicits passenger traffic in San Francisco over a railroad operated between Chicago and New York, but who sells no tickets and neither receives nor pays out any money or other valuable consideration on account thereof. The agent's business, being carried on to assist, or with the purpose to assist, the traffic of his road, is within the protection of the commerce clause of the federal constitution (Const., art. 1, § 8, cl. 3), though it may not be essential to such traffic. McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. Ed. 392, 10 S. Ct. 881, distinguishing Pembina, etc., Milling Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. Ed. 650, 8 S. Ct. 737.

11. Tax on locomotive engineer.—Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. Ed. 508, 8 S. Ct. 564.

12. Tax on agent of express company.—Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. Ed. 649, 11 S. Ct. 851, cited in Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. Ed. 719, 14 S. Ct. 829.

A license tax upon express companies has been sustained, in view of a decision of the supreme court of the state, that the license affected only business of the company within the state. Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. Ed. 586, 17 S. Ct. 214; Leffingwell v. Warren (U. S.), 2 Black 599, 17 L. Ed. 261; People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 541, 25 L. Ed. 705; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. Ed. 472, 17 S. Ct. 110; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. Ed. 134, 24 S. Ct. 39.

The court in Osborne v. Florida, 164

§ 3952. Tax on Tolls.—A state can validly impose taxes on tolls received by one company from another for the use of the former's railroad and track within the state, where the company paying the tolls is engaged in the transportation of merchandise from points within the state to points beyond and such tax is not in conflict with the commerce clause of the constitution of the United States.[13]

§§ 3953-3979. Tax on Means and Instruments of Commerce—§ 3953. In General.—The state has an unquestioned right to place a property tax on the instrumentalities engaged in commerce.[14] The exemption of

U. S. 650, 41 L. Ed. 586, 17 S. Ct. 214, said: "The case of Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. Ed. 649, 11 S. Ct. 851, is not in the slightest degree opposed to this view. The act which was held to be in violation of the federal constitution in that case prohibited the agent of a foreign express company from carrying on business at all in that state without first obtaining a license from the state. The company was thus prevented from doing any business, even of an interstate character, without obtaining the license in question."

The case of Osborne v. Mobile (U. S.), 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. Ed. 470, brought up for consideration an ordinance of the city, requiring every express company, or railroad company doing business in that city, and having a business extending beyond the limits of the state, to pay an annual license of $500; if the business was confined within the limits of the state, the license fee was only $100; if confined within the city, it was $50; subject in each case to a penalty for neglect or refusal to pay the charge. The federal supreme court held that the ordinance was not unconstitutional. This was December term, 1872. In view of the course of decisions which have been made since that time, it is very certain that such an ordinance would now be regarded as repugnant to the power conferred upon congress to regulate commerce among the several states. Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380.

When the business of the company which is wholly within the state, is but a mere incident to its interstate business, such fact would not furnish any obstacle to the valid taxation by the state of the business of the company which is entirely local. So long as the regulation as to the license or taxation does not refer to and is not imposed upon the business of the company which is interstate, there is no interference with that commerce by the state statute. "It was stated by Mr. Justice Bradley, in the course of his opinion in Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. Ed. 649, 11 S. Ct. 851, that: 'Taxes or license fees in good faith imposed exclusively on express business carried on wholly within the state would be open to no such objection,' viz, an objection that the tax or license was a regulation of or that it improperly affected interstate commerce." Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. Ed. 586, 17 S. Ct. 214.

13. Tax on tolls.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

Definition of "tolls."—See New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

In the case of New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896, "the state of Pennsylvania had imposed a tax upon a railroad, situated within the borders of that state, but leased to another railroad company engaged in carrying on interstate commerce, and this tax was measured by a reference to the amount of the tolls received by the lessor company from the lessee company. It was claimed that the imposition of a tax on tolls might lead to increasing them in an effort to throw their burthen on the carrying company, and thus, in effect, become a tax or charge upon interstate commerce. But this court held that such a tax upon tolls was too indirect and remote to be regarded as a tax or burthen on interstate commerce." Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. Ed. 740, 18 S. Ct. 340.

14. Taxation of property engaged in commerce.—Maryc v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Gibbons v. Ogden (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23; Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702; Morgan v. Parham (U. S.), 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. Ed. 303; Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. Ed. 962, 14 S. Ct. 1087; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. Ed. 862, 21 S. Ct. 648.

The state has the right to tax property, although used in interstate commerce. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Norwood, 106 Ark. 321, 152 S. W. 110.

The state may tax property within its interstate and foreign commerce from state regulation does not prevent a state from taxing the property of those engaged in such commerce located within its limits,[15] although belonging to persons domiciled elsewhere.[16] It is well settled that a state has power to tax all property having a situs within its limits, whether employed in interstate commerce or not. It is not taxed because it is so employed, but because it is within the territory and jurisdiction of the state.[17]

§§ 3954-3959. Tax on Railroads—§ 3954. In General.—A state law for the levy and collection of taxes upon railroad property is unconstitutional, in so far as it attempts to levy a tax upon the earnings of railroad companies derived from interstate transportation, being to that extent an interference with interstate commerce.[18]

Railroad in Part in State.—A state law which provides that when only part of a railroad lies in the state it shall pay taxes on such proportion of the valuation of its capital stock, funded and floating debt, and bonds as the length of its road lying in the state bears to the entire length of the road, is not unconstitutional as laying a tax on interstate commerce.[19]

Railroad Wholly within State.—Where a railroad for whose use toll is paid by another road lies wholly within the state, the tax on such tolls does not constitute a tax on interstate commerce, by reason merely of the fact that the borders, though such property may be employed by its owners in interstate commerce. State v. United States Exp. Co., 114 Minn. 346, 131 N. W. 489, 37 L. R. A., N. S., 1127.

15. Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380; Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. Ed. 1067; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. Ed. 871, 14 S. Ct. 1094; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. Ed. 430, 15 S. Ct. 367; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Maryе v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. Ed. 94, 8 S. Ct. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. Ed. 862, 21 S. Ct. 648; Massachusetts v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gottlieb, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. Ed. 1116, 23 S. Ct. 730. See, also, Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810; Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. Ed. 995, 24 S. Ct. 817.

16. Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498.

17. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist., 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 601, 21 S. Ct. 810.

In Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. Ed. 1059, 25 S. Ct. 686, it is said: "That the service in which these vessels were engaged formed one link in the line of continuous interstate commerce may affect the state's power of regulation but not its power of taxation. True, they were not engaged in an independent service, as the cabs in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. Ed. 325, 24 S. Ct. 202, but, being wholly within the state, that was their actual situs. And, as appears from the authorities referred to, the fact that they were engaged in interstate commerce does not impair the state's authority to impose taxes upon them as property."

18. Tax on railroads.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Raymond, 5 Dak. 356, 40 N. W. 538, 1 L. R. A. 732.

19. Proportionate to length of road.—State v. New York, etc., R. Co., 60 Conn. 326, 22 Atl. 765.

Act 1883 (Sess. Laws, p. 211, c. 99) providing that in lieu of any and all other taxes upon the property of any railroad company, etc., there shall be paid a certain percentage "of all the gross earnings of the corporation owning or operating such railroad, arising from the operation of such railroad as shall be situated within this territory," refers only to the earnings arising from traffic within the state, and is not unconstitutional, as imposing a tax on the earnings derived from interstate commerce. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 310, 51 N. W. 386; S. C., 2 N. Dak. 395, 51 N. W. 786; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Brewer, 2 N. Dak. 396, 51 N. W. 787; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Strong, 2 N. Dak. 395, 51 N. W. 787; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Tressler, 2 N. Dak. 397, 51 N. W. 787.

lessee road is engaged in interstate transportation, and it is for this use that tolls are paid.[20]

Railroad Entirely Outside of State.—The fact that a road represented by an agent is wholly outside the state of California does not justify imposing a tax on its traffic. The limitation on the power of a state to tax interstate commerce extends to all such commerce, though it may not actually pass through its territory.[21] A railroad company, whose only business within the state is discharging freight and passengers brought over its line from without the state, and receiving freight and passengers to be sent out of the state over its line, and incidentally maintaining terminal facilities, employing clerks, and keeping a bank account, can not be taxed by the state on its business, this being interstate commerce.[22]

Railroad Owned or Leased by Foreign Corporation.—Where a foreign corporation owns a railroad lying partly within and partly without a state, the state may tax such portion of the tolls received for the use of the road as was received for the use of the portion within the state.[23] A law of New Jersey for taxing railroads provides that, in case of a railroad of this state being under lease to a foreign corporation, any tangible personal property of such foreign company, if used or kept but a part of the time in this state, shall be assessed such proportionate part of its value as the time it is used or kept in this state during the year preceding the 1st day of January designated in the act bears to the whole year; and it appearing that certain engines and cars that were used on its leased lines in this state by the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company in the course of interstate commerce, such company having in use a full local equipment of such leased lines, which was duly taxed in this state, held, that the tax upon such property employed in interstate commerce was illegal, being in contravention of that clause of the constitution of the United States that gives to congress the exclusive regulation of commerce between the several states.[24]

Where Different Tax Imposed on Individuals.—A state statute does not violate the federal constitution, although it prescribes a different rule of taxation for railroad companies from that for individuals.[25]

§ 3955. Tax on Franchise, Privilege and Occupation.—A state law providing that every transportation company shall pay a tax on its corporate franchise or business, at a certain rate on its gross earnings, for business transacted in this state, does not, in the case of a railroad company extending into another state, impose a tax on interstate commerce, but the tax is on the franchise of the corporation, the amount thereof being measured by the receipts of its business.[26]

20. Railroad wholly within state.—Commonwealth v. New York, etc., R. Co., 145 Pa. 38, 22 Atl. 212.

21. Railroad entirely outside of state.—McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. Ed. 392, 10 S. Ct. 881.

22. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Wemple, 65 Hun 252, 20 N. Y. S. 287.

A railroad company, whose only business within the state is discharging freight and passengers brought over its line from without the state, receiving freight and passengers to be sent out over its line, and maintaining terminal facilities, such as wharves and piers, and buildings in connection therewith, and the employment of agents, clerks, and laborers, is not subject to a tax on its "corporate franchise and business," under Laws 1880, c. 542, and acts amendatory thereof, such business being interstate commerce. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 1, 33 N. E. 720, 19 L. R. A. 694, affirming 65 Hun 252, 20 N. Y. S. 287.

23. Railroad owned by foreign corporation.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

24. Property leased to foreign corporation.—Central R. Co. v. State Board, 49 N. J. L. 1, 7 Atl. 306.

25. Where different tax imposed on individuals.—State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663.

26. Tax on corporate franchise.—Dunkirk, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, 74 Hun 210, 26 N. Y. S. 832.

Tax on Franchise Conferred by United States.—The state board of equalization of California included in their assessment all the franchises of a railroad company, among which were franchises conferred by the United States, of constructing a railroad from the Pacific Ocean across the state as well as across the territories of the United States, and of taking toll thereon. Such assessment is repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States, and the power given to congress to regulate interstate commerce.[27]

Tax Required as Prerequisite to Maintaining Office.—A tax assessed against a railroad company which is a link in a through line of road, and carries freight and passengers in and out of the state, by the state through which the through line passes, as a condition precedent to its keeping an office in such state for the use of its officers, agents, and employees, is a tax on the means by which the company is enabled to carry on its business of interstate commerce, and is therefore in violation of the constitution of the United States, giving the power to regulate interstate commerce to congress.[28]

Tax for Operating within Limits of City.—A municipal ordinance imposing a tax of a specified amount on every railroad company operating within the corporate limits, when imposed under legislative authority, is valid. Such tax does not interfere with interstate commerce as to a railroad extending into another state.[29] The imposition by a city, of a license tax, on railroad companies whose lines extend through it, and which have places of business therein, is not an interference with interstate commerce.[30] A city ordinance imposing a privilege tax on a railroad company running cars through the city, for the business of transporting freight or passengers between the city and other points in the state, does not interfere with interstate commerce.[31]

Occupation Tax.—An ordinance imposing an occupation tax on railroads having a depot within the city, and excepting from the levy all interstate traffic commerce of such corporations, is not invalid, as imposing a burden on interstate commerce.[32]

§ 3956. Tax on Capital Stock.—A state law which provides that when only part of a railroad lies in the state it shall pay taxes on such proportion of the valuation of its capital stock, funded and floating debt, and bonds as the length of its road lying in the state bears to the entire length of the road, is not unconstitutional as laying a tax on interstate commerce.[33]

§ 3957. Tax on Rolling Stock.—A tax upon the ordinary and lawful means of transportation is really a tax upon the thing carried, and a state law imposing a tax upon locomotives, passenger and freight cars, etc., being not merely a police regulation, but an expedient for raising revenue, involves a tax upon the passengers and freight transported, and is unconstitutional, as interfering with commerce between the states.[34] But it has been held that the power conferred upon congress to regulate commerce among the several states, does not inhibit the taxation by a state of railway cars found within its borders, though in the transaction of business they pass into adjoining states and territories.[35] It is no

27. Tax on franchise conferred by United States.—California v. Central Pac. R. Co., 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. Ed. 150, 8 S. Ct. 1073.

28. Tax required as prerequisite to maintaining office.—Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. Ed. 394, 10 S. Ct. 958, reversing Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 114 Pa. 256, 6 Atl. 45.

29. Tax for operating within limits of city.—Piedmont R. Co. v. Reidsville, 101 N. C. 404, 8 S. E. 124, 2 L. R. A. 284.

30. Anniston v. Southern R. Co., 20 So. 915, 112 Ala. 557; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Bessemer, 21 So. 64, 113 Ala. 668.

31. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Alabama City, 32 So. 731, 134 Ala. 414.

32. Occupation tax.—York v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 76 N. W. 1065, 56 Neb. 572.

33. Tax on capital stock.—State v. New York, etc., R. Co., 60 Conn. 326, 22 Atl. 765.

34. Tax on cars, etc.—Minot v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 9,645, 2 Abb. U. S. 323, 7 Phila. 555, affirmed in 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888.

35. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Church, 17 Colo. 1, 28 Pac. 468, 31 Am. St. Rep. 252.

objection to the imposition of a state tax upon railroad rolling stock used partly within the state that the same is engaged as a vehicle of interstate commerce, or that its legal situs is in another state or territory, where taxes on it have been paid.[36]

Tax on Rolling Stock in Different Counties.—The provision of Act Ind. March 6, 1891, in regard to taxation of railroad property, that rolling stock shall be listed and taxed in the several counties in the proportion that the main track used or operated in such county bears to the length of the main track used or operated by the company, in connection with the requirement of a statement of the amount of capital stock and indebtedness, is not invalid as requiring assessment and valuation of property outside the state, as the intent of the act reach simply property of the railroad company within the state is obvious from its other provisions and its general scope, and it does not require the valuation of such property to be determined absolutely on a mileage basis.[37]

Leased Cars.—A state statute directing the officers of each railroad company operating in the state to report to the state board of equalization the number of cars of all kinds in use upon its road, and authorizing the board to assess all property used by one corporation, and belonging to another, to either the corporation using it or the one owning it, is not, when applied to the case of a transportation company loaning cars to a railroad company for special purposes, an attempt to regulate interstate commerce.[38] A tax on railway cars, owned by a Kentucky corporation having no place of business in the state of Utah but leased to shippers, and passing through and doing business in Utah, is not a regulation of interstate commerce.[39]

Cars Owned by Corporation Which Is Not Railroad Company.—Cars of a foreign corporation, not a railroad corporation, having its principal office in another state, which are merely in transit in Illinois for the purposes of bringing merchandise from another state into or through Illinois, are instruments of interstate commerce, and not subject to taxation there.[40]

§ 3958. Tax on Gross Earnings.—The corporation tax law of Vermont, imposing a tax upon the entire gross earnings of all railways operated in the state, and providing that, if a railway be situated partly within and partly without the state, the tax shall be proportionate to the mileage of trains run within the state, is unconstitutional, as an interference with interstate commerce.[41]

§ 3959. Payment of Bonus to State.—A condition, in a charter granted by a state to a railroad company, that the company shall pay a bonus to the state from time to time, is not invalid as amounting to a tax upon the transportation of passengers, or as infringing the exclusive power of congress to regulate commerce among the states.[42]

§ 3960. Tax on Street Railroads.—The annual franchise tax which a state statute requires the state board of assessors to levy upon such proportion of the annual gross receipts of street railroad corporation as the length of its line in this state upon any street, highway, road, lane, or other public place, bears to

36. Reinhart v. McDonald, 76 Fed. 403.

37. Tax on rolling stock in different counties.—Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 438, 38 L. Ed. 1040, 14 S. Ct. 1114, affirming Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 133 Ind. 625, 33 N. E. 432.

38. Leased cars.—Hall v. American Refrigerator Trans. Co., 24 Colo. 291, 51 Pac. 421, 65 Am. St. Rep. 223.

39. Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 55 Pac. 639, 18 Utah 378, 48 L. R. A. 790, affirmed in 20 S. Ct. 631, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708.

40. Cars owned by corporation which is not railroad company.—In re Union Tank Line Co., 204 Ill. 347, 68 N. E. 504, 98 Am. St. Rep. 221.

41. Tax on gross earnings.—Vermont, etc., R. Co. v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 63 Vt. 1, 21 Atl. 262, 721, 10 L. R. A. 562, following Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

42. Payment of bonus to state.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Maryland (U. S.), 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. Ed. 678.

the length of its whole line, is not levied on the gross receipts of the corporation, nor on the business of the corporation, but is merely an excise tax on the franchises of the corporation, viz, the franchise to exist and the franchise to occupy the streets, which is measured in part by the gross receipts, and therefore such franchise tax is not a regulation of interstate commerce, and the act under which it is levied is not in conflict with the clause of the constitution of the United States giving to congress power to regulate commerce among the several states.[43] Since no one may use the streets of a city for railroad purposes, except by virtue of a franchise from the state, a franchise so granted is property, and can not be revoked, except for cause, unless the right of revocation is reserved in the grant, and is subject to taxation as other property, notwithstanding the owner is engaged in interstate commerce.[44]

§ 3961. Tax on Express Companies.—An express company engaged in transportation from one state to another is engaged in interstate commerce, and no territory or state can impose upon it any conditions, by way of license, or otherwise, to engage in this commerce by passing through its limits; but such company will have no right to do a mere local business within a state or territory without complying with the territorial or state law.[45]

A tax upon the property within the state of an express company engaged in interstate commerce, based upon its gross earnings within the state on interstate shipments,[46] or the taxable value of which is determined with reference to the whole capital of the company,[47] is not an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce.

As Prerequisite to Engaging in Business.—A person engaged in conducting an interstate express can not be required by the state or municipal authorities to take out a local license as a prerequisite to conducting his interstate business within the state or municipality.[48] An ordinance of a city, requiring an express company doing a local and interstate business to pay a license fee, and declaring it unlawful for such company to transact any business in such city until such fee is paid, is unconstitutional, as an unlawful exaction on interstate commerce.[49]

An ordinance imposing a license tax on every express company having an office in a certain city and state, and there receiving goods and forwarding them to points in that state, or receiving goods in that state, or receiving goods in that state and delivering them in that city, is repugnant to the interstate commerce law, and void.[50] But the ordinance of the city of Mobile requiring payment for a license by an express company, to transact in that city a business extending beyond the limits of the state, is not repugnant to the provision of the United States constitution vesting in congress the power to regulate commerce among 43. Tax on street railroads.—Phillipsburg Horse Car R. Co. v. State Board, 82 N. J. L. 49, 81 Atl. 1121.

44. Hudson, etc., R. Co. v. State Board, 96 N. E. 435, 203 N. Y. 119, reversing orders 126 N. Y. S. 1063 and 127 N. Y. S. 918, 143 App. Div. 26.

45. Express companies.—Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 23 Fed. 469, 10 Sawy. 441.

Act Tenn. March 29, 1887, imposing a license tax upon express companies, is unconstitutional, as invading the exclusive power of congress to regulate interstate commerce, as against an express company engaged in interstate transportation. United States Exp. Co. v. Allen, 39 Fed. 712.

Act Tenn. April 8, 1889, providing that a license tax shall be paid by express companies for transporting one or more packages between points within the state, the amount of such tax being regulated by the length of the company's lines, is, in effect, a tax on interstate business, and is unconstitutional. United States Exp. Co. v. Allen, 39 Fed. 712.

46. State v. United States Exp. Co., 114 Minn. 346, 131 N. W. 489, 37 L. R. A., N. S., 1127.

47. Sanford v. Poe, 17 S. Ct. 305, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, affirming decree 69 Fed. 546, 16 C. C. A. 305, 60 L. R. A. 641.

48. As prerequisite to engaging in business.—Barrett v. New York, 189 Fed. 268.

49. Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756.

50. City license.—Webster v. Bell, 15 C. C. A. 360, 68 Fed. 183.

the several states.[51] Neither is it a tax "to regulate commerce," which is prohibited to the states. To regulate commerce is to prescribe a rule in which it is to be governed. The express company can conduct its business as it pleases, and charge what rate of fees for transportation it pleases. Express companies are common carriers, and this ordinance does not interfere with their duties as such in the slightest. It is simply a tax for a license to do business in Mobile.[52]

Tax on Business and Occupation.—An occupation tax imposed on express companies under an ordinance expressly providing that it shall only apply to domestic business and not to interstate, is not a regulation of interstate commerce.[53] It is not an objection to an occupation tax on an express company on business done in the state that much the larger part of its business is interstate.[54] An express company transacting interstate and intrastate business is not liable for an occupation tax, imposing such a tax on "any carrier" transmitting goods "from one place to another," since the statute, not making any discrimination between local and interstate business, contravenes the federal constitution, giving congress sole power to regulate interstate commerce.[55] An occupation tax may be imposed on an express company on intrastate business, though in carrying packages from one point to another within the state it passes for a short distance through another state.[56]

51. The ordinance of the city of Mobile passed March 2, 1866, providing that every express or railroad company doing business within the city, and whose business extends beyond the state, must pay a license fee, under penalty, etc., does not conflict with the constitution of the United States. Osborne v. Mobile, 44 Ala. 493.

The city ordinance of Mobile of 1866 requiring any express company whose business extends out of the state to pay an annual license of $500, "if within the limits of the state, $100," and "if within the limits of the city of Mobile, $50," is constitutional and valid. Southern Exp. Co. v. Mobile, 49 Ala. 404.

52. Osborne v. Mobile, 44 Ala. 493.

53. Occupation tax.—Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

The act of Michigan approved March 27, 1867, regulating express companies and requiring the payment of a specific state tax of one per cent on the gross amount of current business in this state, is not in conflict with the federal constitution, giving to congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states. Walcott v. People, 17 Mich. 68.

The act of the Kentucky legislature providing that express companies within the state shall pay a license tax of $500 to $1,000 per annum, according as the lines over which they operate are less or more than 100 miles in length, is void, as a regulation of interstate commerce, within the inhibition of the constitution of the United States in that it seeks to lay a burden upon the business of such companies, rather than upon their property. Commonwealth v. Smith, 92 Ky. 38, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 362, 17 S. W. 187, 36 Am. St. Rep. 578.

54. Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

"The result of the authorities is that a rate on a continuous carriage from point to point within the state is to be regarded as a unit, and when it is applied to a shipment which passes through more than one state it takes on an interstate character and is beyond the regulation of the state; but a different rule obtains in the matter of taxation. The state may properly tax the property located within its borders of a corporation doing an interstate business, and may also tax that part of the business of such corporation doing an interstate business, and may also tax that part of the business of such corporation which is done within the state. The extent of the state business is of little consequence. The domestic business may be inconsiderable, and, if a small but definite part of the business is domestic, the company transacting it can not escape paying the state tax on that part. State v. Telegraph Co., 75 Kan. 609, 90 Pac. 299; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. Ed. 663, 25 S. Ct. 403. The appellant argues that as the tangible property of the express company is subject to taxation it is unjust to impose the additional tax on its business; but all know that express companies have but little tangible property subject to taxation, and the practical methods by which such companies can be afforded an opportunity to contribute their just share of the public burdens and pay for the protection which the public gives is through excise taxes or license taxes on their business. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035, 12 S. Ct. 250." Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

55. State v. Northern Pac. Exp. Co., 71 Pac. 404, 27 Mont. 419, 94 Am. St. Rep. 824.

56. Leavenworth v. Ewing, 80 Kan. 58, 101 Pac. 664.

Tax on Gross Receipts.—A state has no power to impose a tax upon the receipts of a foreign express company for the transportation of merchandise received out of the state and delivered out of the state, and simply carried through the state, as the law imposing such a tax is an interference on the part of the state with the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.[57] Act Missouri May 16, 1889, which imposes on companies carrying goods "by express, on contract with any railroad or steamboat company," a tax on their "receipts for business done within this state," is not an interference with interstate commerce.[58] The provision of the United States constitution that congress alone shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states is not violated by a tax levied by the state upon the gross receipts of an express company whose business consists in receiving goods to be transported to points outside the state, to which its line does not extend.[59]

Tax on Intangible Property.—A state statute imposing an alleged franchise tax on corporations which, in effect, is not a franchise tax, but a tax on the intangible property of the corporation not otherwise taxed, is not unconstitutional in its application to an interstate express company as an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce.[60] A state law, taxing the intangible property of express companies in proportion to mileage in the state, as compared with total mileage, is not an interference with interstate commerce.[61]

Tax on Express Wagons.—New York city ordinances, regulating express wagons using the streets of the city, requiring that they be licensed and marked with the word "express" and with their official numbers, that they be regularly inspected and pay a license fee of five dollars for each wagon, that the drivers shall also be licensed and pay a license fee of fifty cents, were reasonable and ap-

57. Tax on gross receipts.—Indiana v. American Exp. Co., 7 Biss. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 7,021.

The earnings of nonresident express company carrying goods between two points within the state over route incidentally traversing portion of another state, derived from carriage within the state, held within the gross receipts upon which tax under Rev. Laws Minn. 1905, §§ 794-1038, is based, without burdening interstate commerce. United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 32 S. Ct. 211, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, affirming judgment State v. United States Exp. Co., 131 N. W. 489, 114 Minn. 346, 37 L. R. A., N. S., 1127.

Including in gross receipts of nonresident express company under Rev. Laws Minn. 1905, §§ 794-1038, earnings from interstate shipments, where transportation was performed wholly within the state, held not an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce. United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. Ed. 459, 32 S. Ct. 211, affirming judgment, State v. United States Exp. Co., 114 Minn. 346, 131 N. W. 489, 37 L. R. A., N. S., 1127.

A nonresident express company, whose receipts are largely derived from interstate commerce and investments in bonds and lands outside the state, held not subject to the gross revenue tax exacted by Laws Okl. 1910, c. 44. Meyer v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 32 S. Ct. 218, 223 U. S. 298, 56 L. Ed. 445.

58. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. Ed. 1035, 12 S. Ct. 250.

Act Missouri May 16, 1889, which imposes on companies carrying goods, "by express, on contract with any railroad or steamboat company," a tax on their "receipts for business done within this state," is not an interference with interstate commerce. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 44 Fed. 310.

59. American Union Exp. Co. v. St. Joseph, 66 Mo. 675, 27 Am. Rep. 382.

The act of December, 1866, imposing a tax on the gross receipts of express companies, is not in contravention of the constitution of the state or of the United States, as regulating the "commerce among the states," or imposing a duty on "imports and exports." Southern Exp. Co. v. Hood (S. C.), 15 Rich. L. 66, 94 Am. Dec. 141.

Laws 1891, c. 14, §§ 65, 66, providing for the taxation of the property of express companies, are not unconstitutional because they enable the board of assessment and equalization, in valuing their property, to take into consideration their gross earnings from contracts made with railroad companies extending to points without the state. American Exp. Co. v. State Board, 3 S. Dak. 338, 53 N. W. 192.

60. Tax on intangible property.—Coulter v. Weir, 62 C. C. A. 429, 127 Fed. 897.

61. Tax on mileage basis.—Weir v. Norman, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. Ed. 960, 17 S. Ct. 527.

plicable to delivery wagons of express companies engaged in interstate commerce.[62]

Company Engaged in Both Interstate and Intrastate Commerce.—The Mississippi act imposing a tax on express companies doing business in the state is void as to all interstate transportation, but valid as to all business to be exclusively performed within the state. A levy of a tax on a company being both a local and interstate business will be enjoined until a separation between the two kinds of business can be made.[63] An express company is not relieved from a license tax imposed with reference to intrastate business because also engaged in interstate business.[64]

Company Engaged Solely in Intrastate Commerce.—A license or privilege tax imposed by a state on the business of an express company engaged solely in interstate commerce, where there is no intention by this means to obstruct or prohibit the business, is not invalid.[65] A statute which in effect imposes a license tax on express companies doing any local business, but none on those doing interstate business only, is not void as regulating interstate commerce.[66]

Where Route Extends Short Distance Out of State.—Annual privilege tax levied by city on business of express company, excluding interstate business, is not invalid because transportation is over a route for a short distance passing out of the state.[67]

§ 3962. Tax on Sleeping Cars.—A state statute imposing what was called a privilege tax upon every sleeping car or coach, run or used upon a railroad in that state, not owned by the railroad company so running or using it, is held to affect a matter national in its character, requiring uniformity of regulation, and therefore to be invalid, though not in conflict with any regulation prescribed by congress.[68]

62. Tax on express wagons.—Barrett v. New York, 189 Fed. 268.

63. Engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce.—United States Exp. Co. v. Hemmingway, 39 Fed. 60.

Act Mississippi, imposing a tax on express companies doing business in the state, is void as to all interstate transportation, being in violation of the constitution, art. 1, § 8, par. 3, exclusively confiding regulation of interstate commerce to congress, but valid as to all business to be exclusively performed within the state. United States Exp. Co. v. Hemmingway, 39 Fed. 60.

64. Hardee v. Brown, 56 Fla. 377, 47 So. 834.

65. Engaged solely in intrastate commerce.—Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Nolan, 14 Fed. 532; S. C., 27 Alb. L. J. 217, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 840.

66. Osborne v. Florida, 17 S. Ct. 214, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. Ed. 586; United States Exp. Co. v. Hemmingway, 39 Fed. 60.

67. Where route extends short distance out of state.—Ewing v. Leavenworth, 33 S. Ct. 157, 226 U. S. 464, 57 L. Ed. 303, affirming judgment, 101 Pac. 664, 80 Kan. 58.

68. Tax on sleeping cars.—Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635, confirmed and applied in Tennessee v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 51, 29 L. Ed. 791, 6 S. Ct. 643.

Where a state statute imposes a tax of $500 per cent on sleeping car companies doing both interstate and intrastate business, and makes no distinction between the two, such statute is an infringement upon interstate commerce and is therefore unconstitutional and void. Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. Ed. 134, 24 S. Ct. 39. See, also, Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. Ed. 244, 7 S. Ct. 4.

Act Tennessee March 16, 1877, § 6 (Laws 1877, c. 16, p. 26), imposing a privilege tax upon sleeping cars owned by a foreign corporation, and leased to a Tennessee railroad corporation, which received the transit fare, while the fee for sleeping accommodation was paid to the owner, and used for the transportation of passengers into or out of or across the state, is void, as an interference with interstate commerce. Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635; Tennessee v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 51, 29 L. Ed. 791, 6 S. Ct. 643.

The legislature of Tennessee has no power to impose upon the Pullman Southern Car Company a privilege tax of $75 per annum for running or using sleeping cars in the transportation of interstate passengers, notwithstanding such cars may enter or cross the territory of that

Engaged in Both Interstate and Intrastate Commerce.—Taxes exacted from a sleeping car company engaged in both interstate and intrastate traffic, under a state statute imposing an annual tax upon sleeping car companies doing business in the state, which makes no distinction between cars used in interstate traffic or in traffic wholly within the borders of the state, are void as an attempt by the state to impose a burden upon interstate commerce.[69]

Engaged in Intrastate Commerce Only.—The privilege tax imposed on sleeping and palace car companies carrying passengers from one point to another within the state, can not be deemed an unconstitutional regulation of commerce, because of the declaration in the constitution of the state, that sleeping car companies are common carriers and subject to liability as such, where such provision is regarded by the state courts as imposing no obligation on the company to transport local passengers.[70]

Where Local Passengers Carried.—An annual tax imposed by a state statute upon sleeping car companies which carry one or more local passengers on cars operating within the state is not void as a burden on interstate commerce, where the company is free to decline all local business if it sees fit.[71]

Tax on Capital Stock.—Since a state has the right to tax personal property within its jurisdiction, even though it is employed in interstate commerce, a state tax on such proportion of the whole capital stock of a foreign sleeping car company as the number of miles over which its cars are operated within the state bears to the whole number of miles over which its cars are operated, is valid and constitutional, though such cars run into, through, and out of the state.[72]

Tax on Gross Receipts.—The Indiana statute which provides that every sleeping car company doing business in the state shall report to the auditor the gross amount of all its receipts for fares earned in business done in the state for the preceding year, and shall pay into the state treasury two dollars on every one hundred dollars of such receipts, is invalid.[73]

Tax on Value of Average Number of Cars Placed in Railroad Yard.—Under a statute of Kentucky authorizing a city to make an annual assessment of all personal property within the corporate limits subject to taxation for state purposes, and providing that all personal estate within the state shall be subject to taxation, unless exempted, a city may impose a tax on sleeping cars of a foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce to the extent of the value of the state. Pullman Southern Car Co. v. Nolan, 22 Fed. 276.

Act 1877, c. 16, § 6, declaring the running of sleeping cars not owned by the railroad upon which they are used to be a privilege, and imposing a tax thereon, is constitutional; and this, although the owner is a foreign corporation, and the cars are used for the accommodation of passengers traveling through the state. Pullman Southern Car Co. v. Gaines, 3 Tenn. Ch. 587.

69. Engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce.—Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 24 S. Ct. 39, 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. Ed. 134.

70. Engaged in intrastate commerce only.—Judgment, Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Adams, 30 So. 757, 78 Miss. 814, 84 Am. St. Rep. 647, affirmed in 23 S. Ct. 494, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. Ed. 877.

71. Where local passengers carried.—Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 24 S. Ct. 39, 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. Ed. 134.

72. Tax on capital stock.—Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Hayward, 141 U. S. 36, 35 L. Ed. 621, 11 S. Ct. 883, affirming Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Commonwealth, No. 2, 107 Pa. 156.

Act June 7, 1879, imposing a tax on the gross receipts of foreign corporations, held not an unconstitutional interference with the congressional jurisdiction over interstate commerce, though the receipts were partly derived from passengers traveling in cars of such corporations passing into, through, and out of the state. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Commonwealth, No. 1, 107 Pa. 148.

73. Tax on gross receipts.—State v. Woodruff, etc., Coach Co., 114 Ind. 155, 15 N. E. 814.

Section 87 of the act of the legislature of Indiana of March 29, 1881, entitled "An act concerning taxation," imposing a certain proportionate tax according to distance traveled in Indiana on the gross receipts of foreign sleeping car companies conveying passengers to, from, and through Indiana, is unconstitutional, as being in conflict with article 1, § 8, of the constitution of the United States. Indiana v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 11 Biss. 561, 16 Fed. 193.

average number of cars daily placed in railroad yards in the city for the purpose of preparing them for train service.[74]

Charter Fee.—A foreign sleeping car company can not be restrained from doing local business in the state because of its refusal to pay the "charter fee" of a given per cent of its entire capital stock, imposed by a state statute for the benefit of its permanent school fund, as a condition of doing such business, since such requirement amounts to a burden or tax on the company's interstate business and on its property located and used outside the state.[75]

§ 3963. Tax on Refrigerator Cars.—A state may constitutionally tax refrigerator cars used on railroads of the state, and required in their business, though owned by a corporation of another state, which furnishes them for the transporation of perishable products, as required by a shipper or railroad company for a particular shipment or trip—being paid by the railroad company on a mileage basis—and though such cars are used within the state entirely in carrying on interstate commerce; and such tax may properly be fixed upon the value of the average number of cars employed within the state.[76] The state may tax the average number of refrigerator cars used by railroads within the state, but owned by a foreign corporation which has no office or place of business within the state, and employed as vehicles of transportation in the interchange of interstate commerce.[77]

§§ 3964-3972. Tax on Ships—§ 3964. In General.—The levying of a tax upon vessels or other watercraft or the exaction of a license fee by the state within which the property subject to the exaction has its situs, is not a regulation of commerce within the meaning of the constitution of the United States.[78] A state law which includes steamboats in the property made taxable is not necessarily in violation of the provision of the United States relative to the regulation of commerce.[79] Where a city is authorized by law to assess, levy, and collect an annual tax for the use of the city on personal property, not to exceed a certain per cent of the assessed valuation thereof, an annual tax on steamboats having that city as their home port, and based on their valuation, is not in violation of the constitution of the United States, declaring that congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states.[80]

To Defray Expense of Quarantine.—The expense of quarantine regulations can not be raised by a tax on foreign-owned ships engaged in interstate or international commerce.[81]

To Defray Hospital Expenses.—State statutes requiring from the masters of vessels engaged in the foreign and coasting trade the payment of a sum of money for hospital purposes, for each of the officers and crew of such vessel, are 74. Tax on value of average number of cars placed in railroad yard.—Covington v. Pullman Co., 121 Ky. 218, 89 S. W. 116, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 199.

75. Charter fee.—Judgment, Coleman v. Pullman Co., 75 Kan. 664, 90 Pac. 319, reversed in 216 U. S. 56, 30 S. Ct. 232.

76. Tax on refrigerator cars.—Hall v. American Refrigerator Trans. Co., 51 Pac. 421, 24 Colo. 291, 65 Am. St. Rep. 223; S. C., 19 S. Ct. 599, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899.

77. Judgment, 55 Pac. 639, 18 Utah 378, 48 L. R. A. 790, affirmed in Union Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Lynch, 20 S. Ct. 631, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. Ed. 708.

78. Tax on ships.—Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. Ed. 412; Morgan v. Parham (U. S.), 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. Ed. 303; Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. Ed. 419, 2 S. Ct. 257; Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38; State Tonnage Tax Cases (U. S.), 12 Wall. 204, 20 L. Ed. 370; Nathan v. Louisiana (U. S.), 8 How. 73, 12 L. Ed. 993; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Gibbons v. Ogden (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23; Passenger Cases (U. S.), 7 How. 283, 12 L. Ed. 702; Louisville, etc., Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. Ed. 513, 23 S. Ct. 463.

79. Perry v. Torrence, 8 O. 521, 32 Am. Dec. 725.

80. Wheeling, etc., Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 9 W. Va. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 552.

81. To defray expense of quarantine.—Peete v. Morgan (U. S.), 19 Wall. 581, 22 L. Ed. 201.

unconstitutional and void, but enactments requiring payment from shipmasters on account of passengers are constitutional and valid.[82]

Company Incorporated in State.—The power of congress to regulate commerce either with foreign countries or between the states is not interfered with by the assessment of a steamship company incorporated in New York for the transportation of passengers and freight between New York and a foreign country.[83]

Wharf Leased in State.—A foreign corporation, whose vessels, while en route between the ports of two different states, stop at a port of a third state, is not liable for a license tax at that port because it there leases a wharf or landing; has plant and machinery for the taking in and discharge of freight and passengers; engages stevedores and longshoremen, who are in its sole employment; has there an agent and subordinate clerks, an office, with furniture, books, and appliances; and keeps a bank account and occasionally purchases supplies there, since all such operations are an essential and integral part of its interstate commerce business.[84]

§ 3965. Tax on Gross Receipts.—The imposition of a tax, under the acts of Pennsylvania, of March 20, 1877, and June 7, 1879, upon a steamship company incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, upon the gross receipts of such company, derived from the transportation of persons and property by sea between different states, and to and from foreign countries, is an invalid regulation of interstate and foreign commerce.[85] The city of Mobile, under its charter authority to tax real and personal property within the city, may lawfully assess a steamboat plying on the Alabama River, though it is registered and enrolled as a coasting vessel under the laws of the United States, and the owner of the boat is a citizen of another state, if resident in Mobile during the business season. That the boat may be assessed and taxes paid in the state of which the owner is a citizen is immaterial.[86]

§ 3966. Tax on Interest of Citizen in Vessel.—The state has a right to tax a citizen and resident in the state for his interest in vessels which navigate the seas, and are regularly registered and licensed as American vessels under the laws of congress.[87] A municipal tax on a vessel engaged in foreign commerce, and owned by a citizen of the municipality levying the tax, is not in conflict with the United States constitution, which gives to congress the right to regulate commerce with foreign states.[88]

§ 3967. Tax on Persons Residing on Ships.—A statute requiring payment of a license tax by a person residing on a boat, though it applies to the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, is not an interference with interstate commerce.[89]

82. To defray hospital expenses.—People v. Brooks (N. Y.), 4 Denio 469.

83. Company incorporated in state.—People v. Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments (N. Y.), 48 Barb. 157.

84. Where wharf leased.—Clyde Steamship Co. v. Charleston, 76 Fed. 46.

85. Tax on gross receipts.—Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. Ed. 1200, 7 S. Ct. 1118.

86. Battle v. Mobile, 9 Ala. 234, 44 Am. Dec. 438.

The city of Mobile, under its charter authority to tax real and personal property within the city, may lawfully assess a steamboat plying on the Alabama River, if owned by citizens of the state resident in Mobile, though it is registered and enrolled as a coasting vessel under the laws of the United States. Battle v. Mobile, 9 Ala. 234, 44 Am. Dec. 438.

A state tax on the gross receipts of a state corporation engaged in transporting freight and passengers between this and foreign countries held not within the constitutional inhibition as to the regulation of foreign commerce. Philadelphia, etc., Steamship Co. v. Commonwealth, 104 Pa. 109.

87. Tax on interest of citizen in vessel.—Howard v. State (Md.), 3 Gill 14.

It is not a regulation of commerce for the state to tax the interests of a citizen of Maryland in vessels engaged in foreign commerce, registered at the proper federal office in the state. Gunther v. Baltimore, 55 Md. 457.

88. Gunther v. Baltimore, 55 Md. 457.

89. Tax on persons residing on ships.—Robertson v. Commonwealth, 101 Ky. 285, 40 S. W. 920, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 442.

§ 3968. Tax on Agents, Pilots, etc.—Tax on Agents.—The Act of Tennessee of 1879, providing means for the local government of the "taxing district," which provides that steamboat agents other than the proper officers of railroads terminating at the taxing districts, shall pay a privilege tax is not a regulation of commerce between the states, and is not therefore in violation of the constitution of the United States.[90]

Tax on Pilots.—The act of Indiana "regulating the licensing of pilots at the falls of the Ohio river" provides that the governor shall appoint the pilots, who shall execute bonds, etc., conditioned, etc., and that any owner or navigator of a boat ascending or descending the river may navigate said falls at his own risk. The law is valid, at least so far as commercial intercourse may be carried on between the parts of the state named in said act by citizens of the state, and therefore does not conflict with the provision in the United States constitution providing that congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, etc.[91]

Tax on Steamboat Engineer.—The New York city charter, makes it a misdemeanor for one to act as an engineer for the purpose of operating a steam boiler, save for private dwellings for heating purposes or for locomotives, without a certificate of qualification. Though applicable to one acting as engineer of a boiler situated on a scow on the East river, and used for blasting purposes, the statute did not impose a burden on commerce.[92]

§ 3969. Registered under Laws of United States.—Vessels engaged in foreign or interstate commerce, and duly enrolled and licensed under the acts of congress, may be taxed by state authority as property; provided, the tax be not a tonnage duty, is levied only at the port of registry, and is valued as other property in the state, without unfavorable discrimination on account of its employment.[93] Steamboats which ply between different ports on a navigable river may, under a state statute, be taxed as personal property by the city where the company owning them has its principal office, and which is there home port, although they are duly enrolled and licensed as coasting vessels under the laws of the United States, and all fees and charges thereon demandable under those laws have been duly paid.[94] Vessels, which, though engaged in interstate commerce, are employed in such commerce wholly within the limits of a state, are subject to taxation in that state, although they may have been registered or enrolled, under an act of congress, at a port outside the limits of the state.[95] The object of the registry acts does not require and there is no suggestion in the statutes that vessels registered or enrolled are exempt from the ordinary rules respecting taxation of personal property. It is true by § 4141 there is created what may be called the home port of the vessel, an artificial situs, which may control the place of taxation in the absence of an actual situs elsewhere.[96]

Ships or vessels touching foreign ports.—But ships or vessels engaged in interstate or foreign commerce upon the high seas, or other waters which are a common highway, and having their home port, at which they are registered under the laws of the United States, at the domicile of their owners in one state, 90. Tax on agents.—Lightburne v. Taxing Dist., 72 Tenn. (4 Lea) 219.

91. Pilots.—Barnaby v. State, 21 Ind. 450.

92. Tax on steamboat engineer.—People v. Prillen, 76 N. Y. S. 821, 73 App. Div. 207, reversed in 173 N. Y. 67, 65 N. E. 947.

93. Registered under laws of United States.—Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. Ed. 412.

94. Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. Ed. 412.

95. Judgment, Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Commonwealth, 102 Va. 576, 46 S. E. 783, 102 Am. St. Rep. 855, affirmed in Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. Ed. 1059, 25 S. Ct. 686.

96. Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. Ed. 1059, 25 S. Ct. 686. See Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254.

are not subject to taxation in another state at whose ports they incidentally and temporarily touch for the purpose of delivering or receiving passengers or freight.[97]

The distinction between a vessel in her home port and when lying at a foreign one, or in the port of another state, is familiar in the admiralty law, and she is subjected, in many cases, to the application of a different set of principles.[98]

Steamboats plying between different ports on a navigable river may, under a state statute, be taxed as personal property by the city where the company owning them has its principal office, and which is their home port, although they are duly enrolled and licensed as coasting vessels under the laws of the United States, and all fees and charges thereon, demandable under those laws, have been duly paid.[99]

§ 3970. Registered in Another State.—No state but that in which a vessel has her home port has dominion over her for the purpose of taxation.[1] The state of California has no power to tax vessels owned and registered in New York, but which are temporarily within its jurisdiction for the purpose of discharging and receiving passengers and freight.[2]

§ 3971. Tax on Particular Ships.—Tax on Towboats.—The New Orleans city ordinance imposing a license tax on every agency, person, or corporation owning or running towboats to and from the Gulf of Mexico violates the constitution of the United States, giving congress power to regulate commerce between the states.[3] Steam tugs engaged in the business of towing vessels from

97. Ships or vessels touching foreign ports.—Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254; St. Louis v. Ferry Co. (U. S.), 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. Ed. 192; Morgan v. Parham (U. S.), 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. Ed. 303; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. Ed. 419, 2 S. Ct. 257; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Louisville, etc., Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. Ed. 513, 23 S. Ct. 463; Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. Ed. 1059, 25 S. Ct. 686.

A company, incorporated by New York (all the stockholders being residents of that state) owned vessels which were employed in the transportation of passengers, etc., between New York and San Francisco and different ports in the territory of Oregon. The vessels were ocean steamships duly registered in New York and remained in California no longer than was necessary to land their passengers and freight, and prepare for the next voyage. It was held that these vessels were not liable to assessment and taxation under the laws of California and under the authorities of San Francisco. Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254.

When a vessel is regularly registered in the port to which she belongs, that is to say, "in the port nearest to which her owner, husband, or acting and managing owner usually resides," the fact that she may be temporarily in a port of a state, other than that where her home port is, and engaged in lawful commerce—one of a daily line of steamers—between that port and a port of a yet third state, does not cause her to become incorporated into the personal property of the state where she is temporarily, and no state but that in which her home port is has dominion over her for the purpose of taxation. The fact that the vessel was enrolled by her master as a coaster at Mobile, Alabama, and that her license as a coaster was renewed from year to year, does not affect her registry in New York or her ownership there. It accordingly does not change the rule. Morgan v. Parham (U. S.), 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. Ed. 303.

98. Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254; Peyroux v. Howard (U. S.), 7 Pet. 324, 8 L. Ed. 700; The General Smith (U. S.), 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. Ed. 609.

99. Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. Ed. 412.

1. Ship registered in another state.—Morgan v. Parham (U. S.), 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. Ed. 303.

2. Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. (U. S.), 17 How. 596, 15 L. Ed. 254.

3. Tax on towboats.—Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. Ed. 653, 5 S. Ct. 38.

The ordinance of the city of New Orleans imposing a license tax upon the owners of towboats running on the Mississippi River to and from the Gulf of Mexico is not a regulation of commerce, and it is not, therefore, in conflict with the Chicago River into the harbor and lake, and in bringing vessels from the lake into the river, are engaged in interstate and foreign commerce; and if they possess a license to engage in the coasting and foreign trade, under an act of congress, they can not be compelled to pay any further license fee to the city of Chicago, and a city ordinance requiring the same is void.[4] The exaction of such a license fee can not be supported upon the ground that the city of Chicago had from time to time expended money in deepening the Chicago River for navigation purposes, when the ordinance does not profess to require the license fee on any such ground, and no suggestion is made that any special benefit has arisen, or can arise, to such tugs, by such deepening of the river.[5] Vessels licensed for coasting trade, as provided by the Revised Statutes of the United States and engaged in transporting freight upon the Mississippi river from Illinois to Missouri, and unloading the same into vessels moored at the improved wharf of the city of St. Louis, can not be compelled to pay a license fee exacted by an ordinance of the city of St. Louis which does not exact such fee as compensation for the use of the city's wharf, but for the privilege "of towing boats or other water crafts into or out of the harbor of the city, or from one place to another within said harbor," such ordinance being void as an interference with interstate commerce.[6]

Tax on Dredges.—Dredges, having no propelling power, and not designated for use in the carrying trade, nor entitled to enrollment and registry, though employed to do work intended to aid navigation and commerce, and although they are vessels subject to maritime liens, are not instruments of interstate or foreign commerce, and may be subjected to taxation in a state other than that of the residence of their owners, when kept and employed in such state without an intention to remove them therefrom at any definite time; and such vessels are taxable under a law of the state of Washington, providing that "all boats and small craft not required to be registered must be assessed in the county where the same are kept."[7]

Tax on Oyster Boats.—An act of the state of Maryland prohibiting any person from using a vessel for buying, carrying, or selling oysters over the navigable waters of Chesapeake Bay, unless licensed from the state, after a previous twelve months residence in the state, and the payment of a tonnage tax, is unconstitutional, so far as it interferes with the right to carry on such business in licensed and enrolled vessels of the United States, and because it requires a payment of tonnage tax without the consent of congress.[8] the constitution of the United States. New Orleans v. Eclipse Tow-Boat Co., 33 La. Ann. 647, 39 Am. Rep. 279.

Act No. 150 of 1890, § 8, par. 19, imposing a license tax on every person engaged in the business of operating towboats on the Mississippi River and its tributaries, to be graduated according to the gross annual receipts, is void because it is a regulation of interstate commerce. Frere v. Von Schoeler, 47 La. Ann. 324, 16 So. 808, 27 L. R. A. 414.

4. Harman v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 396, 37 L. Ed. 216, 13 S. Ct. 306.

5. Harman v. Chicago, 147 U. S. 396, 37 L. Ed. 216, 13 S. Ct. 306, reversing 140 Ill. 374, 29 N. E. 732.

The navigation of the Chicago River having been improved by the city of Chicago at its own expense, an ordinance prohibiting the use of tugboats engaged in interstate commerce, except under license from the city, is valid, as being the imposition of a toll for the use of the river in its improved condition. Harmon v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 374, 29 N. E. 732, reversing 26 N. E. 697.

Tugboats licensed by the United States for the coasting trade, and employed in towing vessels engaged in interstate commerce in and out of the Chicago River, are engaged in interstate commerce, though their operations are in fact confined largely to the corporate limits of the city of Chicago. But a city ordinance prohibiting the use of such tugboats, except under license from the city, is unconstitutional, as being a toll for the use of the river in its condition as improved by the city at its own expense. Harmon v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 374, 29 N. E. 732, reversing 26 N. E. 697.

6. St. Louis v. Consolidated Coal Co., 158 Mo. 342, 59 S. W. 103, 51 L. R. A. 850, 81 Am. St. Rep. 310.

7. Dredges.—McRae v. Bowers Dredging Co., 90 Fed. 360.

8. Oyster boats.—Booth v. Lloyd, 33 Fed. 593; Ex parte Insley, 33 Fed. 680.

An act to enforce, in Maurice River Cove and Delaware Bay, an act for the preserva-

Boat Used for Exhibition Purposes.—A tax imposed by a town, under authority of the state, on a public exhibition given on board a steamboat, the owner whereof has obtained a coasting license from the federal government, is a mere police regulation, necessary to the order of cities and town, and not a regulation of commerce.[9]

§ 3972. Wharfage Fees.—The imposing of wharfage fees by a city on a river which is the boundary between the states is not an interference with interstate commerce.[10] A statute fixing reasonable rates of compensation to be paid to a wharfinger for the use of his wharf by a vessel moored thereto does not create a tax upon tonnage or an impediment to commerce.[11] The exaction of wharfage is not the laying of a duty of tonnage, and, where an ordinance requires steamboats and other water craft to pay for the use of the wharfs, and no demand is made for entering, loading, or lying in the harbor or port, such charges will not be considered as a duty of tonnage but as wharfage.[12] A city has no power to compel a boat to avail itself of its wharves by landing there instead of landing at the natural bank of the river, or to require the payment of wharfage dues from any vessel not landing at the wharf, as an exaction of such dues for the mere privilege of landing at the banks of a natural stream, although within the harbor limits of the city, is a duty of tonnage within the prohibition contained in the United States Constitution, art. 1, § 10.[13]

§ 3973. Tax on Ferries.—The granting of ferry licenses on boundary rivers is within the police powers of a state, provided it be not so exercised as to interfere with general commercial transportation, as distinguished from ferriage.[14] A tax on the privilege of operating a ferry, where the ferry company is

tion of clams and oysters, requiring a license from all boats engaged in planting or taking oysters there, is not an unconstitutional interstate regulation. Johnson v. Loper, 46 N. J. L. 321.

9. Where exhibition given on steamboat.—Board v. Spalding, 8 La. Ann. 87.

10. Wharfage fees.—Keckevoet v. Dubuque (Iowa), 138 N. W. 540.

11. The John M. Welch, Fed. Cas. No. 7,359, 9 Ben. 507, reversed in Broeck v. The Barge John M. Welch, 2 Fed. 364.

Laws N. Y. 1897, p. 701, c. 592, § 63, which provides that "the master, owner or consignee of every steamboat or vessel entering the port of Albany or loading, unloading or making fast to any wharf therein, shall, within forty-eight hours after the arrival thereof, pay to the harbor master for his services the sum of one and one-half cents per ton per annum, which shall be computed upon the registered tonnage of such steamboat or vessel," is void as imposing a tonnage tax, in violation of article 1, § 10, of the constitution of the United States. Way v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 133 Fed. 188.

Wharfage charges imposed by the board of harbor commissioners on the owner of a barge and lighter, which were kept within a slip constructed, repaired, and dredged by the board, are valid, and not in violation of the Constitution of the United States, art. 1, § 10, which prohibits a state from levying duty on tonnage without the consent of congress. People v. Roberts (Cal.), 25 Pac. 496.

Wharfage, or a compensation payable by a vessel for use of a wharf, is not a tonnage duty, although directed to be computed in proportion to the tonnage of vessels. Keokuk v. Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co., 45 Iowa 196.

Act March 24, 1899 (P. L. 1899, p. 506) § 10, authorizing the state oyster commission to fix the license tax imposed on boats entitled to engage in oyster planting in certain tidal waters within the state, according to the tonnage measurement of the boats, does not violate the constitution of the United States, art. 1, § 10, par. 3, declaring that no state shall, without the consent of congress, levy any duty of tonnage; the tax being imposed on the business of oyster planting, and not on ship as in instrument of commerce. State v. Corson, 67 N. J. L. 178, 50 Atl. 780.

12. Ouachita, etc., Packet Co. v. Aiken, 16 Fed. 890.

"The constitutionality of wharfage taxes exacted by the city of New Orleans has been settled by this court in this district. Leathers v. Aiken, 9 Fed. 679, and Ouachita, etc., Packet Co. v. Aiken, 16 Fed. 890." Silver v. Tobin, 28 Fed. 545.

13. Cape Girardeau v. Campbell, 26 Mo. App. 12.

14. Tax on ferries.—Conway v. Taylor (U. S.), 1 Black 603, 17 L. Ed. 191.

The owner of a ferryboat plying between the United States and Canada, on the Detroit River, may be convicted under an ordinance of the city of Detroit forbidding the operation of ferryboats exclusively engaged in ferrying passengers across a river from one state to another, is a burden on interstate commerce, which a state may not impose.[15]

Transferring Railroad Cars.—An unconstitutional burden is imposed on interstate commerce by a law of Illinois penalizing the carrying on of a ferry without a license, when applied to the transportation of loaded or unloaded railroad cars across the Mississippi river from the Illinois to the Missouri shore, even assuming that a state may regulate a ferry upon a navigable stream forming the boundary between two states, where such statute makes the granting of the license discretionary, with citizens of Illinois preferred, and compels the licensee to conduct a general ferry business.[16] A state has no power to exact a license fee for the operation of a ferry for the transfer of railroad cars across a navigable river between a point within such state and a point in another state, where the corporation owning and operating such ferry is a citizen and resident of the latter state, and the vessels employed have their situs in such state for purposes of taxation, and the only property of the company within the state seeking to impose the license consists of its landing place and facilities. As applied to such case, the license fee is a direct burden upon interstate commerce.[17]

§ 3974. Tax on Bridges.—It is no defense to an action for taxes levied upon the property of a bridge company situated exclusively in the state, and upon the value of its franchise granted by the state, that the bridge connected two states, and was used entirely for interstate business.[18] A proportional state tax on the intangible property, within the state, of a bridge company owning a bridge over a river between adjoining states, is not a tax on interstate commerce, when the busi-without a license, though the boat was duly enrolled and licensed for the coasting and foreign trade under the laws of the United States. Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43.

An annual license tax of a fixed sum, imposed by a municipal corporation on each boat of a ferry company located within its limits, is valid exercise of the police power, and, though the other landing of the ferry is in another state, can not be considered as a regulation of interstate commerce, within the constitution, art. 1, § 8. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. Ed. 419, 2 S. Ct. 257.

An ordinance requiring keepers of ferries to pay a license fee, enacted in pursuance of a power conferred upon the city by the legislature to "license, tax and regulate ferries," is not in restraint of interstate commerce. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 102 Ill. 560.

The fact that a Kentucky ferry company, domiciled in Kentucky, is engaged in interstate commerce, does not deprive the state of Kentucky of the right to tax its franchise; and its income may be considered in fixing the value of that franchise. Louisville, etc., Ferry Co. v. Commonwealth, 57 S. W. 624, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 446, 108 Ky. 717; S. C., 57 S. W. 626, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 480, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1339. Reversed in Louisville, etc., Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 23 S. Ct. 463, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. Ed. 513.

Tax on capital stock.—A ferry company engaged in transporting freight and passengers across the Delaware River from P., in Pennsylvania, to G., N. J., was incorporated under the laws of the latter state, and had all its boats registered there. It had no property in Pennsylvania, other than the lease of a wharf, and did no other business there than the landing and receiving of freight and passengers at said wharf. Held, that a tax imposed by Pennsylvania upon the capital stock of said company was void, as an interference with interstate commerce. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. Ed. 158, 5 S. Ct. 826.

15. Helena-Glendale Steam Ferry Co. v. State, 101 Miss. 65, 57 So. 362.

16. Transferring railroad cars.—Judgment, St. Clair County v. Interstate Car-Transfer Co., 109 Fed. 741, affirmed in 24 S. Ct. 300, 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. Ed. 518.

17. St. Clair County v. Interstate Car-Transfer Co., 109 Fed. 741, affirmed in 24 S. Ct. 300, 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. Ed. 518.

18. Tax on bridges.—Henderson Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth, 99 Ky. 623, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 389, 31 S. W. 486.

The city of Henderson, Ky., whose corporate limits extend to low water on the Indiana shore of the Ohio River, by an ordinance granted to a Kentucky bridge company the right to build a railroad bridge within its boundaries, and made certain stipulations as to taxation thereof. Held, that the taxation of the bridge was not a regulation of interstate commerce, or the taxation of an agency of the federal government. Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 141 U. S. 679, 35 L. Ed. 900, 12 S. Ct. 114.

ness of transportation is not carried on by the bridge company, but by persons and corporations who pay tolls to the bridge company. The fact that the tax may tend to increase the tolls is too remote and incidental to make it a tax on the business transacted.[19] The fact that a bridge across a navigable stream between two states is an instrument of interstate commerce does not exempt so much of it as is within one of the states from taxation by such state.[20]

Toll Bridge.—That a toll bridge is part of a structure which carries trains engaged in interstate commerce does not prevent its taxation.[21]

Tax on Receipts from Interstate Commerce.—A proportional state tax, levied under a statute of Kentucky, on the intangible property within the state of a bridge company owning a bridge over a river between the state and another state, is not a tax on interstate commerce, though the bridge is used for interstate commerce by street cars and other vehicles, and though, in arriving at the value, the income is considered, and the income is derived in whole or in part from interstate commerce.[22]

Tax on Capital Stock.—Interstate commerce is not taxed by taxing the capital stock of a bridge company which owns an interstate bridge but does not transact any interstate business over it.[23]

§ 3975. Tax on Automobiles.—A state may lawfully charge an annual tax for registering an automobile, imposed as a charge for the use of its highways and to raise revenue to defray their cost and repair. Such tax is without discrimination against nonresidents, and, while applying to persons engaged in interstate commerce, is not unconstitutional as contravening the commerce clause of the constitution of the United States.[24] A state may do this because, having expended moneys, either itself or by the agencies created by it, in increasing the facility with which commerce, either interstate or intrastate, may be carried on, it is entitled to charge a fair remuneration for the outlay made by it, and for the maintenance of the public work which it has constructed.[25] The charging of an annual sum for the use of its highways by automobiles, instead of a mileage fee, is clearly a matter within the discretion of the state. No constitutional objection lies in the way of a legislative body prescribing any mode of measurement to determine the amount it will charge for the privilege it bestows. The

19. Judgment, 99 Ky. 623, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 389, 31 S. W. 486, affirmed in Henderson Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth, 17 S. Ct. 532, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. Ed. 953.

The acts of congress prescribing the height, width of span, etc., of bridges to be erected over the Ohio, and declaring that they shall be post roads, do not affect the power of the states to tax the intangible property of the bridge companies. Henderson Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth, 17 S. Ct. 532, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. Ed. 953.

20. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Board, 172 U. S. 32, 43 L. Ed. 354, 19 S. Ct. 90.

21. Toll bridge.—Southern R. Co. v. Mitchell, 139 Ala. 629, 37 So. 85.

22. Tax on receipts from interstate commerce.—Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Covington, 89 S. W. 296, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 396.

23. Tax on capital stock.—Judgment, 52 N. E. 117, 176 Ill. 267, affirmed. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co. v. Illinois, 20 S. Ct. 205, 175 U. S. 626, 44 L. Ed. 299.

24. Tax on automobiles.—The provisions of P. L. 1908, p. 615, § 4, which fix an annual fee of $3 for registering an automobile of less than 30 horse power and a fee of $5 for each automobile of 30 horse power and more, and which fixes a fee of $1 for a license for the driver of the first, and $2 for a license for the driver of the second class of automobiles, imposed as a charge for the use of highways and to raise revenue to defray their cost and repair, is without discrimination against nonresidents, and, while applying to persons engaged in interstate commerce, is not unconstitutional, as contravening the commerce provision of the federal constitution. Kane v. State, 81 N. J. L. 594, 80 Atl. 453, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 237.

P. L. 1908, p. 615, § 4, which fixes an annual fee of $3 for registering an automobile of less than 30 horse power, and a fee of $5 for each automobile of 30 horse power and more, is not unconstitutional, as a property tax imposed without regard to the value of the property on which it is made, but is a license tax, since the character of the tax is not determined by the mode adopted in fixing its amount. Kane v. State, 81 N. J. L. 594, 80 Atl. 453, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 237.

25. Kane v. State, 81 N. J. L. 594, 80 Atl. 453, Ann Cas. 1912D, 237.

only limit upon its power is that the amount charged shall not be unreasonable; and there is no suggestion that such a condition is created by the present law.[26] Where a city grants an electric railway company exclusively engaged in the transportation of interstate freight and passengers permission to use certain of its streets by running its cars over the tracks of a local street railway company under conditions specified in the contract between the two companies, it can not impose a special annual tax on the business of such railway, it being a tax on interstate commerce, and the regulation of it under the federal constitution belongs alone to congress.[27]

§ 3976. Tax on Draymen.—Gen. St. N. J., p. 2236, § 532, grants to the common council of any borough power to enact ordinances to license and regulate cartmen, carriages, and vehicles used for the transportation of goods and chattels, and to fix rates of compensation to be paid for such licenses, for purposes of revenue. The borough of Atlantic Highlands passed an ordinance imposing an arbitrary annual license tax of $10 on every two-horse truck or vehicle engaged in the transportation of merchandise, and a tax of $7.50 on every one-horse vehicle similarly engaged. Held, that such ordinance was not an exercise of police power, but a revenue measure, and was inapplicable to interstate commerce, though it operated equally on both interstate and domestic commerce, interstate commerce not being subject to taxation by the states.[28] A franchise tax, imposed under appropriate statutes of the state of New York upon the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for carrying on a cab service wholly within the state, for the purpose of conveying its passengers to and from its ferry landing in New York city, the charges for which are entirely separate from those for other transportation, is not an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce, but is a tax upon an independent local service, preliminary or subsequent to any interstate transportation.[29]

§ 3977. Tax on Pipe Lines.—Where the business of a pipe line company consists in the transportation of oil from points in New York and Pennsylvania to points in New Jersey, and a tax levied by the state of New Jersey, designated as an annual tax, for the use of the state, by way of a license for the company's corporate franchise, and consists of a certain per centum of the gross amount of the company's receipts from the transportation of oil during the year preceding the levy, the amount being such proportion of its gross receipts for the transportation of oil over its whole line as the length of its line in the state bears to the length of its whole line, the tax is not in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the constitution of the United States.[30] Oil pumped through a pipe line, on its way from one state to a point in another, is a subject of interstate commerce, and is exempt from local taxation.[31]

§ 3978. Tax on Warehouses and Elevators.—A state can not tax German warehouse receipts, valuing them at the value of the whiskey they represent, where it can not tax the whiskey itself, either because it was exported from the

26. Kane v. State, 81 N. J. L. 594, 80 Atl. 453, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 237.
The charging of an annual sum for the use of its highways by automobiles, under P. L. 1908, p. 615, § 4, instead of a mileage fee, is a matter clearly within the discretion of the state, and no constitutional objection lies in the way of a legislative body prescribing any mode of measurement to determine the amount it will charge for a privilege it bestows. Kane v. State, 81 N. J. L. 594, 80 Atl. 453, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 237.

27. City Council v. Augusta, etc., R. Co., 130 Ga. 815, 61 S. E. 992.

28. Tax on draymen.—Simpson-Crawford Co. v. Borough, 158 Fed. 372.

29. Judgment, 64 N. E. 152, 171 N. Y. 354, 98 Am. St. Rep. 610, affirmed in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 24 S. Ct. 202, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. Ed. 325.

30. Tax on pipe lines.—Tide Water Pipe Co. v. State Board, 57 N. J. L. 516, 31 Atl. 220, 27 L. R. A. 684.

31. Prairie Oil, etc., Co. v. Ehrhardt, 244 Ill. 634, 91 N. E. 680.

United States or because of its situs.[32] The fact that grain stored in an elevator is to be shipped out of the state does not make a state statute requiring a license for conducting the business of such elevator in the state amount to a regulation of interstate commerce.[33] A domestic railroad corporation owning land within the state, upon which it has a grain elevator and freight warehouse, and several lines of railroad tracks to afford access to the buildings, but which owns no rolling stock, its entire business consisting in loading, unloading, and storing grain and other freight in process of interstate transportation, which it receives from other companies, is liable to a gross earnings tax on its franchise under the laws of a state taxing railroad companies, it not being engaged in interstate commerce within the provision of the federal constitution vesting the regulation of interstate commerce in congress.[34]

§ 3979. Tax on Packing Houses.—The license tax imposed by the laws of North Carolina on packing houses carrying on business in the state, and applying to a foreign corporation engaged in the slaughtering of animals and the preparation of their carcasses for food and other purposes, is not an interference with interstate commerce.[35]

§ 3980. The Unit Rule.—When the taxable property of a corporation engaged in interstate commerce is part of a system and has its actual uses only in connection with other parts of the system, that fact may be considered by the state in taxing, even though other parts of the system are outside of the state.[36] It has been expressly held, where the road of a corporation ran through different states, that a tax upon the income or franchise of the road was properly apportioned by taking the whole income or value of the franchise, and the length of the road within each state, as the basis of taxation.[37] And the uniform hold-

32. Tax on warehouses and elevators.—Judgment, Commonwealth v. Selliger, 98 S. W. 1040, 126 Ky. 66, 39 Ky. L. Rep. 451, reversed in 213 U. S. 200, 53 L. Ed. 161, 29 S. Ct. 449.

33. Judgment, Railroad, etc., Comm. v. Cargill Co., 77 Minn. 223, 79 N. W. 962, affirmed in Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. Ed. 619, 21 S. Ct. 423.

34. Connecting Terminal R. Co. v. Miller, 82 N. Y. S. 582, 84 App. Div. 174, affirmed in 70 N. E. 472, 178 N. Y. 194.

35. Tax on packing houses.—Lacy v. Armour Packing Co., 134 N. C. 567, 47 S. E. 53, affirmed in 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. Ed. 451, 26 S. Ct. 232.

36. The unit rule.—Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gottlieb, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. Ed. 1116, 23 S. Ct. 730. See Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. Ed. 311, 8 S. Ct. 1380.

The sleepers and rails of a railroad, or the posts and wires of a telegraph company, are worth more than the prepared wood and the bars of steel or coils of wire, from their organic connection with other rails or wires and the rest of the apparatus of a working whole. Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054.

37. Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania (U. S.), 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. Ed. 595. See State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876.

An act does not interfere with interstate commerce because imposing a privilege tax on railroad companies according to mileage, as follows: "Each company operating or controlling 400 miles or more of road in this state, for taking up and transporting freight and passengers from one point to another in this state, per annum $10,000; each company operating or controlling from 100 to 400 miles of road in this state, for taking up and transporting freight and passengers from one point in this state to another point in this state, per annum $5,000;" and in like language imposing such a tax on railroads operating or controlling a less number of miles of road in the state, for the same privilege. Knoxville, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, 43 S. W. 115, 99 Tenn. 684, 53 L. R. A. 921.

The defendant railroad company was organized under a charter from the state of Maryland, and its line was operated partly in that state and partly in another. Held, that a tax by the state of Maryland on such proportion of the entire gross receipts of the road as the length of its line in Maryland bears to the whole length of its line was not invalid as an interference with interstate commerce. Cumberland, etc., R. Co. v. State, 48 Atl. 503, 92 Md. 668, 52 L. R. A. 764.

ing is that the property of interstate railroads, in the several states through which their lines or business extend, might be valued as a unit for the purposes of taxation, taking into consideration the uses to which it is put and all the elements making up aggregate value, and that a proportion of the whole fairly and properly ascertained might be taxed by the particular state, without violating any federal restriction.[38] The valuation is thus, not confined to the wires, poles and instruments of the telegraph company; or the roadbed, ties, rails and spikes of the railroad company; or the cars of the sleeping car company; but includes the proportionate part of the value resulting from the combination of the means by which the business was carried on, a value existing to an appreciable extent throughout the entire domain of operation.[39] So it may be said that a proper mode of ascertaining the assessable value of so much of the whole property as is situated in a particular state, is, in the case of railroads, to take that part of the value of the entire road which is measured by the proportion of its length therein to the length of the whole,[40] or taking as the basis of assessment such proportion of the capital stock of a sleeping car company, express company, etc., as the number of miles of railroad over which its cars are run in a particular state bears to the whole number of miles traversed by them in that and other states,[41] or such a proportion of the whole value of the capital stock of a telegraph company as the length of its lines within a state bears to the length of its lines everywhere, deducting a sum equal to the value of its real estate and machinery subject to local taxation within the state.[42] And this latter rule holds good although nothing is, in terms, directed to be deducted from the valuation, either for the value of its franchises from the United States, or for the value of its real estate and machinery situated and taxed in other states.[43] It is true, there may be exceptional 38. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 438, 38 L. Ed. 1040, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122; Massachusetts v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889; American Exp. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 255, 41 L. Ed. 707, 17 S. Ct. 991; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania (U. S.), 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. Ed. 595; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, 163; Charlotte, etc., R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. Ed. 1051, 12 S. Ct. 255; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 470, 38 L. Ed. 238, 14 S. Ct. 396; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054.

39. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, 163.

40. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122.

41. Sleeping car company—Express company.—Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. Ed. 613, 11 S. Ct. 876; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599.

42. Telegraph company.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; S. C., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889.

43. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. Ed. 790, 8 S. Ct. 961; S. C., 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. Ed. 628, 11 S. Ct. 889. See, also, Reagan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 154 U. S. 413, 38 L. Ed. 1028, 14 S. Ct. 1060; Central Pac. R. Co. v. People, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. Ed. 903, 16 S. Ct. 766; Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 263; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; Western Union cases, as for instance, where the terminal facilities in some large city are of enormous value, and so give to a mile or two in such city a value out of all proportion to any similar distance elsewhere along the line of road, or where in certain localities the company is engaged in a particular kind of business requiring for sole use in such localities an extra amount of rolling stock.[44] No unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce is made by the Act of Michigan of June 4, 1897, levying a specific tax upon the property and business of any railroad corporation operated within the state and providing that "when the railroad lies partly within and partly without this state, prima facie the gross income of said company from such road for the purpose of taxation shall be on the actual earnings of the road in Michigan, computed by adding to the income derived from the business transacted by said company entirely within this state such proportion of the income of said company arising from the interstate business as the length of the road over which said interstate business is carried in this state bears to the entire length of the road over which said interstate business is carried." [45]

Value of Road Arising from Interstate Transportation.—Where an assessing board is charged with the duty of valuing a certain number of miles of railroad within a state forming part of a line of road running into another state, and assesses those miles of road at their actual cash value determined on a mileage basis, this is not placing a burden upon interstate commerce, beyond the power of the state, simply because the value of that railroad as a while is created partly—and perhaps largely—by the iinterstate commerce which it is doing.[46]

Tax on Basis of Mileage.—The action of state authorities in taking the entire valuation of the property of a railroad company, without as well as within the state, and dividing it upon a mileage basis for the purpose of fixing the value of that within the state for purposes of taxation, is not in violation of the commerce clause of the federal constitution.[47] A state statute provided that railroad, telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car, etc., companies, whose lines extend beyond the limits of the state, should have their intangible property assessed on the basis of the mileage of their lines within and without the state. But from the valuation on the mileage basis the value of all tangible property is deducted before the taxation is applied. So far as the commerce clause of the federal constitution is concerned, this scheme of taxation is not in contravention thereof.[48] The mode which the state of Pennsylvania adopted to ascertain the

Tel. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 195 U. S. 540, 49 L. Ed. 312, 25 S. Ct. 133; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gottlieb, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. Ed. 1116, 23 S. Ct. 730.

44. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054.

If testimony to this effect was presented by the company to the state board, it must be assumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that such board, in making the assessment of track and rolling stock within the state, took into account the peculiar and large value of such facilities and such extra rolling stock. But whether in any particular case such matters are taken into consideration by the assessing board does not make against the validity of the law, because it does not require that the valuation of the property within the state shall be absolutely determined upon a mileage basis. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114.

45. Wisconsin, etc., R. Co. v. Powers, 24 S. Ct. 107, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. Ed. 229.

46. Value of road arising from interstate transportation.—Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122.

47. Tax on basis of mileage.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 132 Fed. 629.

48. Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. Ed. 960, 17 S. Ct. 527.

So, in the case of Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114, the validity of a state tax law, whereby a railroad which traversed several states was valued for the purposes of taxation by taking that part of the value of the entire road which was measured by the proportion of the length of the particular part in that state to that of the whole road, was upheld. See New York, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. Ed. 1043, 15 S. Ct. 896.

Act Del. April 8, 1869, § 1, provides for a tax upon the net earnings of railroad proportion of the company's property upon which it should be taxed in that state, was by taking as a basis of assessment such proportion of the capital stock of the company as the number of miles over which it ran its cars within the state bore to the whole number of miles, in that and other states, over which its cars were run. This was a just and equitable method of assessment; and if it were adopted by all the states through which these cars ran, the company would be assessed upon the whole of its capital stock and no more.[49]

Tax Computed upon Relation of Mileage to Gross Income.—The supreme court of the United States has expressly held in two cases, where the road of a corporation ran through different states, that a tax upon the income or franchise of the road was properly apportioned by taking the whole income or value of the franchise, and the length of the road within each state, as the basis of valuation.[50] The statute of Michigan passed June 4, 1897, levying a specific tax upon the property and business of every railroad corporation operated within the state, providing that when the railroad lies partly within and partly without the state, prima facie the gross income of said company from such road for the purposes of taxation shall be on the actual earnings of the road in the state, computed by adding to the income derived from the business transacted by the company entirely within the state, such proportion of the income of the said company arising from the interstate business as the length of the road over which said interstate business is carried on in the state bears to the entire length of the road over which said interstate business is carried, is not an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce. In form the tax is a tax on the property and business of such railroad corporation operated within the state, and computed upon certain percentage of gross income.[51]

Tax Computed upon Relation of Mileage to Capital Stock.—If the stock of a transportation company be taxed by taking as a basis of assessment such proportion of its capital stock as the number of miles or railroad over which its cars are run within the state bear to the whole number of miles over which its cars are run throughout the United States, such assessment does not impinge upon the power of congress.[52]

Tax on Value of Use of Property.—The rule of property taxation is that the value of the property is the basis of taxation. It does not mean a tax upon the earnings which the property makes, nor for the privilege of using the property, but rests solely upon the value. But the value of property results from the use to which it is put and varies with the profitableness of that use, present and and canal companies, with a proviso that, when a line of road or canal lies partly within the state and partly without, only such part of the net earnings shall be subject to the tax as is in that proportion to the whole net earnings which the length of the road or canal within the limits of the state bears to the length of the whole road or canal; and § 4 provides for a tax upon the actual cash value of every share of capital stock of such companies, with a proviso that, when a line of road or canal lies partly within and partly without the state, the company shall be required to pay the tax on only such number of shares of stock as is in that proportion to the whole number of shares which the length of the road or canal within the state bears to its whole length. Held, that such statute does not unlawfully interfere with interstate commerce, since there is no discrimination against rights held in other states. Minot v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888.

49. American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599.

50. Tax computed upon relation of mileage to gross income.—Delaware Railroad Tax (U. S.), 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. Ed. 888; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania (U. S.), 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. Ed. 595; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 663; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. Ed. 1031, 14 S. Ct. 1114.

51. The prima facie measure of the railroad's gross income is substantially that which was approved in Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. Ed. 994, 12 S. Ct. 121, 163. See, also, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054; Wisconsin, etc., R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. Ed. 229, 24 S. Ct. 107.

52. Tax computed upon relation of mileage to capital stock.—Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. Ed. 663, 25 S. Ct. 403.

prospective, actual and anticipated. There is no pecuniary value outside of that which results from such use. The amount and profitable character of such use determines the value, and if property is taxed at its actual cash value it is taxed upon something which is created by the uses to which it is put.[53]

Tax on Express Companies.—The property of an express company distributed through different states is an essential condition of the business united in a single specific use. It constitutes but a single plant, made so by the very character and necessities of the business.

"Doubtless there is a distinction between property of railroad and telegraph companies and that of express companies. The physical unity existing in the former is lacking in the latter; but there is the same unity in the use of the entire property for the specific purpose, and there are the same elements of value arising from such use." [54]

§ 3981. Stamp Duty on Bills of Lading.—A state statute imposing a stamp duty on bills of lading for gold or silver transported from a port within to a port without the state, was held to affect a matter national in its character, requiring uniformity of regulation, and therefore to be invalid, though not in conflict with any regulation prescribed by congress.[55]

53. Value of use of property.—Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. Ed. 1041, 14 S. Ct. 1122.

54. Express companies.—Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; American Refrigerator Trans. Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. Ed. 899, 19 S. Ct. 599; American Exp. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 255, 41 L. Ed. 707, 17 S. Ct. 991.

"This being clear, it is held reasonable and constitutional to get at the worth of such a line in the absence of anything more special, by a mileage proportion. The tax is a tax on property, not on the privilege of doing the business, but it is intended to reach the intangible value due to what we have called the organic relation of the property in the state to the whole system. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 49, 16 S. Ct. 1054. And this principle, established by many cases, has been extended by the cases first cited above to the lines of express companies, although those lines are not material lines upon the face of the earth. There is the same organic connection as in the other cases." Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. Ed. 761, 24 S. Ct. 498. See, also, Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. Ed. 683, 17 S. Ct. 305; American Exp. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 255, 41 L. Ed. 707, 17 S. Ct. 991.

55. Stamp duty on bills of lading.—Almy v. California (U. S.), 24 How. 169, 16 L. Ed. 644; Case of the State Freight Tax (U. S.), 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. Ed. 146; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. Ed. 862, 21 S. Ct. 648.

"In Almy v. California (U. S.), 24 How. 169, 16 L. Ed. 644, a stamp tax had been imposed by the state on bills of lading for the transportation of gold or silver from any point within the state to any point without it, and was held by this court to be invalid; and in Woodruff v. Parham (U. S.), 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. Ed. 382, it was said by this court, Mr. Justice Miller delivering its opinion, that that stamp tax 'was a regulation of commerce, a tax imposed upon the transportation of goods from one state to another, over the high seas, in conflict with the freedom of transit of goods and persons between one state and another, which is within the rule laid down in Crandall v. Nevada (U. S.), 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. Ed. 744, and with the authority of congress to regulate commerce among the states.'" Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34, 48, 29 L. Ed. 785, 6 S. Ct. 635.

"In Almy v. California (U. S.), 24 How. 169, 16 L. Ed. 644, it was held that a duty on a bill of lading was the same thing as a duty on the article which it represented." Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. Ed. 862, 21 S. Ct. 648.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Interstate Commerce Act.

I. Statutory Provisions, §§ 3982-3989.
  A. Purpose and Object, § 3982.
  B. History of Act, § 3983.
  C. Constitutionality of Act, § 3984.
  D. Construction of Act, § 3985.
  E. Operation and Effect, § 3986.
  F. Time of Taking Effect, § 3987.
  G. Repeal, § 3988.
II. Definitions, § 3989.
III. Carriers Subject to Act, §§ 3990-3991.
  A. In General, § 3990.
  B. Particular Carriers, § 3991.
IV. Duties Imposed upon Carrier, §§ 3992-4015.
  A. Transportation, § 3992.
  B. To Establish Through Routes, § 3993.
  C. Continuous Carriage, § 3994.
  D. Facilities, §§ 3995-3997.
    a. In General, § 3995.
    b. Switches, § 3996.
    c. As to Connecting Carriers, § 3997.
  E. Just and Reasonable Rates, § 3998.
  F. Printing and Publishing Schedules of Rates, § 3999.
  G. Reports to Commission, § 4000.
  H. Unloading, Feeding and Watering Stock, §§ 4001-4014.
    a. Statutory Provision, § 4001.
    b. Carriers Liable for Penalty, § 4002.
    c. Knowingly and Willfully, § 4003.
    d. Separate Offenses, § 4004.
    e. Negligence of Servant, § 4005.
    f. Preparation and Facilities, § 4006.
    g. Shipment Through Foreign Country, § 4007.
    h. Shipment under Agreement, § 4008.
    i. Where Stock Confined by Another Carrier, § 4009.
    j. Where Penalty Exacted from Another Carrier, § 4010.
    k. Excuses for Failure to Unload, etc., § 4011.
    l. Cars Provided for Food, Water and Rest, § 4012.
    m. Damages, § 4013.
    n. Proceedings, § 4014.
  I. Icing Perishable Goods, § 4015.
V. Prohibitions upon Carriers, §§ 4016-4049.
  A. Discrimination and Preferences, §§ 4016-4044.
    a. In General, § 4016.
    b. Undue and Unreasonable, § 4017.
    c. Similar Service and Circumstances, § 4018.
    d. Persons Discriminated against, § 4019.
    e. Determining Discrimination or Preference, § 4020.
    f. In Charges, § 4021.
    g. In Facilities, § 4022.
    h. In Distribution of Cars, §§ 4023-4035.

(1) In General, § 4023.
(2) Between Mining Companies, §§ 4024-4033.
(a) In General, § 4024.
(b) Ownership of Cars, § 4025.
(c) Fuel Cars, § 4026.
(d) Cars Used in Intrastate Commerce Only, § 4027.
(e) Determining Mining Company's Share of Cars, §§ 4028-4033.
aa. In General, § 4028.
bb. Facts Considered, §§ 4029-4033.
(aa) Agreement of Parties, § 4029.
(bb) Rule of Carrier, § 4030.
(cc) Capacity and Output of Mine, § 4031.
(dd) Unfulfilled Contract of Mining Company, § 4032.
(ee) Prompt Return of Cars by Mining Company, § 4033.
(3) Between Mining Companies on Main and Branch Lines, § 4034.
(4) Between Warehousemen, § 4035.
i. In Acceptance and Delivery of Freight, § 4036.
j. In Taking on and Letting Off Passengers, § 4037.
k. In Manner of Shipment, § 4038.
l. In Time of Transportation, § 4039.
m. In Reshipping Privileges, § 4040.
n. In Allowances to Shipper, § 4041.
o. Remedies, §§ 4042-4044.
(1) Burden of Proof, § 4042.
(2) Mandamus, § 4043.
(3) Summary Remedy, § 4044.
B. Combinations and Monopolies, § 4045.
C. Pooling Agreements, § 4046.
D. Transportation of Goods Manufactured by Carrier, §§ 4047-4048.
a. In General, § 4047.
b. Manufactured from Wood, § 4048.
E. Limiting Liability, § 4049.
VI. Connecting Carriers, §§ 4050-4057.
A. Discriminations, § 4050.
B. Facilities, §§ 4051-4052.
a. In General, § 4051.
b. Use of Tracks, § 4052.
C. Joint Through Routes, § 4053.
D. Rates, § 4054.
E. Liability of Initial Carrier, §§ 4055-4057.
a. In General, § 4055.
b. Limiting Liability, § 4056.
c. Recovery over against Other Carrier, § 4057.
VII. Rates and Charges, §§ 4058-4149.
A. In General, § 4058.
B. Just and Reasonable, § 4059.
C. Established by Carrier, § 4060.
D. Established by Commission, §§ 4061-4065.
a. Under Original Act, § 4061.
b. Under Amendment of 1906, § 4062.
c. Prerequisites to Establishing, § 4063.
d. Form and Requisites of Order, § 4064.
e. Review of Courts, § 4065.
E. Established by Court, § 4066.
F. Determination of Reasonableness of Rate, §§ 4067-4074.
a. In General, § 4067.

b. Judicial Act, § 4068.
c. Question of Fact, § 4069.
d. Facts Considered, § 4070.
e. Mode of Determination, § 4071.
f. Burden of Proof, § 4072.
g. Evidence, § 4073.
h. Review of Determination, § 4074.
G. Discrimination and Preference, §§ 4075-4096.
a. In General, § 4075.
b. Like and Contemporaneous Service, § 4076.
c. Persons Discriminated against, § 4077.
d. Determining Discrimination and Preference, §§ 4078-4083.
(1) Competition, § 4078.
(2) Quantity of Goods Shipped, § 4079.
(3) Long and Short Haul, § 4080.
(4) Disparity between Through and Local Rates, § 4081.
(5) Disparity in Rates between Different Localities, § 4082.
(6) Division of Freight by Connecting Carriers, § 4083.
e. Special Rates, § 4084.
f. Free Transportation, § 4085.
g. Reduced Rates, § 4086.
h. Rebates, §§ 4087-4090.
(1) In General, § 4087.
(2) What Amounts to Rebate, § 4088.
(3) Effect of Granting Rebate, § 4089.
(4) Criminal Liability, § 4090.
i. Payment of Charges, § 4091.
j. Demurrage Charges, § 4092.
k. Purchase and Sale of Goods, § 4093.
l. Justified Discrimination, § 4094.
m. Effect of Discrimination, § 4095.
n. Remedies, § 4096.
H. Long and Short Haul, §§ 4097-4110.
a. Statutory Provision, § 4097.
b. Similar Circumstances and Conditions, § 4098.
c. Competition, § 4099.
d. Shipments Over Same Line, § 4100.
e. Through and Local Rates, § 4101.
f. Group Rates, § 4102.
g. Cartage Charges, § 4103.
h. Shipment Through Foreign Country, § 4104.
i. Interest of General Public, § 4105.
j. Destination of Shipment, § 4106.
k. Consent of Commission to Charge, § 4107.
l. Determining Right to Different Charge, § 4108.
m. Establishing Zones, § 4109.
n. Remedies, § 4110.
I. Pooling Freights, § 4111.
J. Mileage Tickets, § 4112.
K. Party-Rate Tickets, § 4113.
L. Excursion Tickets, § 4114.
M. Terminal Charges, § 4115.
N. Industrial Track Service, § 4116.
O. Demurrage Charges, § 4117.
P. Charges for Reconsignment of Goods, § 4118.
Q. Through Rates, § 4119.

R. Allowance for Service of Shipper, §§ 4120-4124.
a. In General, § 4120.
b. For Elevation of Grain, § 4121.
c. For Construction of Grain Doors for Cars, § 4122.
d. For Cartage, § 4123.
e. For Lighterage, § 4124.
S. Printing and Publishing Schedules, §§ 4125-4145.
a. In General, § 4125.
b. Statutory Provision, § 4126.
c. Shipment Over Connecting Carrier, § 4127.
d. Shipment Through Foreign Country, § 4128.
e. Form, Requisites and Validity, §§ 4129-4131.
(1) In General, § 4129.
(2) Printed, § 4130.
(3) Validity, § 4131.
f. Contents, § 4132.
g. Publishing, § 4133.
h. Posting, § 4134.
i. Filing with Commission, § 4135.
j. Distributing in Offices of Agents, § 4136.
k. Construction of Schedule, § 4137.
l. Operation and Effect of Schedules, §§ 4138-4145.
(1) In General, § 4138.
(2) As Standard Charge, §§ 4139-4141.
(a) In General, § 4139.
(b) Contractual Rate, § 4140.
(c) Presumed Legal Rate, § 4141.
(3) As Constructive Notice to Shipper, § 4142.
(4) As to Joint Rates, § 4143.
(5) As to Privileges and Facilities, § 4144.
(6) As to Contract for Exemption from Liability, § 4145.
T. Change of Rates, § 4146.
U. Payment of Charges for Transportation, § 4147.
V. Enjoining Enforcement of Rates, § 4148.
W. Charges of Connecting Carriers, § 4149.
VIII. Interstate Commerce Commission, §§ 4150-4154.
A. In General, § 4150.
B. Salaries and Expenses, § 4151.
C. Rules, § 4152.
D. Powers and Duties, §§ 4153-4154.
a. In General, § 4153.
b. Particular Powers, § 4154.
IX. Civil Proceedings against Carrier, §§ 4155-4219.
A. Proceedings before Commission, §§ 4155-4190.
a. In General, § 4155.
b. Exclusive Jurisdiction, § 4156.
c. Summons and Process, § 4157.
d. Parties, § 4158.
e. Limitation and Laches, § 4159.
f. Pleadings, § 4160.
g. Burden of Proof and Presumptions, § 4161.
h. Evidence, §§ 4162-4165.
(1) In General, § 4162.
(2) Incriminating Testimony, § 4163.
(3) Power to Compel Witnesses to Attend, § 4164.
(4) Production of Books and Papers, § 4165.

i. Hearing and Determination, §§ 4166-4181.
(1) Necessity, § 4166.
(2) Extent of Hearing, § 4167.
(3) Judgment or Order, §§ 4168-4181.
(a) Contents, § 4168.
(b) Service on Carrier, § 4169.
(c) Operation and Effect, § 4170.
(d) Enforcing, Enjoining and Annulling, §§ 4171-4181.
aa. In General, § 4171.
bb. Necessity for Lawful Order, § 4172.
cc. Nature of Proceeding, § 4173.
dd. Jurisdiction and Venue, § 4174
ee. Parties, § 4175.
ff. Pleadings, § 4176.
gg. Evidence, §§ 4177-4178.
(aa) Admissibility, § 4177.
(bb) Weight and Sufficiency, § 4178.
hh. Hearing and Determination, §§ 4179-4180.
(aa) In General, § 4179.
(bb) Particular Orders of Commission, § 4180.
ii. Injunction, § 4181.
j. Rehearing, § 4182.
k. Review, §§ 4183-4189.
(1) Right of Review, § 4183.
(2) Presumptions on Appeal, § 4184.
(3) Harmless Error, § 4185.
(4) Scope of Review, § 4186.
(5) Modification of Decree of Court, § 4187.
(6) Remand to Commission, § 4188.
(7) Supersedeas Pending Appeal, § 4189.
l. Effect of Repeal of Statute on Pending Proceedings, § 4190.
B. Proceedings in Federal Courts, §§ 4191-4211.
a. In General, § 4191.
b. Statutory Provision, § 4192.
c. Jurisdiction and Venue, §§ 4193-4200.
(1) In General, § 4193.
(2) Before Hearing by Commission, § 4194.
(3) After Hearing by Commission, § 4195.
(4) Offenses Arising in Several Districts, § 4196.
(5) Mandamus, § 4197.
(6) Injunction, § 4198.
(7) In Particular Instances, § 4199.
(8) Equity Jurisdiction, § 4200.
d. Proceedings at Law or in Equity, § 4201.
e. Parties, § 4202.
f. Limitation and Laches, § 4203.
g. Pleadings, § 4204.
h. Issues, Proof and Variance, § 4205.
i. Presumptions and Burden of Proof, § 4206.
j. Evidence, § 4207.
k. Reference, § 4208.
l. Judgment and Orders, § 4209.
m. Costs, § 4210.
n. Stipulation of Parties, § 4211.
C. Proceedings in Commerce Court, §§ 4212-4217.
a. Statutory Provision, § 4212.

b. Jurisdiction in General, § 4213.
c. Power to Enforce or Enjoin Orders of Commission, § 4214.
d. Power to Enforce or Enjoin Particular Orders of Commission, § 4215.
e. Power to Review Order of Commission, § 4216.
f. Procedure, § 4217.
D. Proceedings in State Courts, § 4218.
E. Election of Remedies, § 4219.
X. Criminal Liability of Carrier, §§ 4220-4237.
A. In General, § 4220.
B. Discrimination and Undue Preference, § 4221.
C. Rebates, § 4222.
D. Failure to File and Publish Rates, § 4223.
E. Departure from Publishing Rates, § 4224.
F. False Billing of Goods, § 4225.
G. Liability for Act of Agent, § 4226.
H. Criminal Proceedings against Carrier, §§ 4227-4237.
a. Jurisdiction and Venue, § 4227.
b. Initiation of Proceedings, § 4228.
c. Parties, § 4229.
d. Indictment, §§ 4230-4234.
(1) For Failure to File Rates, § 4230.
(2) For Departure from Published Rate, § 4231.
(3) For Discrimination and Preference, § 4232.
(4) For Granting Rebate or Concession, § 4233.
(5) Indictment against Express Company, § 4234.
e. Burden of Proof, § 4235.
f. Evidence, § 4236.
g. Instructions, § 4237.
XI. Criminal Liability of Officers and Agents, § 4238.
XII. Criminal Liability of Shipper, §§ 4239-4244.
A. Inducing Carrier to Discriminate, § 4239.
B. Receiving Rebates, § 4240.
C. False Billing of Goods, § 4241.
D. Indictment, § 4242.
E. Issues, Proof and Variance, § 4243.
F. Evidence, § 4244.

§§ 3982-3989. Statutory Provisions—§ 3982. Purpose and Object.—The purpose of the Interstate Commerce Act is to promote and facilitate commerce [1] by the adoption of regulations to make charges for transportation just and reasonable, and to forbid undue and unreasonable preferences or discriminations.[2] Commerce, in its largest sense, must be deemed to be one of the most important subjects of legislation, and an intention to promote and facilitate it, and not to hamper or destroy it, is naturally to be attributed to congress.[3] The provisions of the act look to the prevention of discrimination,[4] to the furnishing of equal facilities for the interchange of traffic,[5] to the rate of compensation for

1. Purpose and object.—United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844. See, also, Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. Ed. 268, 24 S. Ct. 132; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330; Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

2. United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

3. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

4. See post, "Discrimination and Preferences," §§ 4016-4044.

5. See post, "Facilities," §§ 3995-3997.

what is termed the long and the short haul,[6] to the attainment of a continuous passage from the point of shipment to the point of destination,[7] at a known and published schedule,[8] without reference to the location of those points or the lines over which it is necessary for the traffic to pass, and to procure uniformity of rates charged by each company to its patrons, and to other objects of a similar nature.[9] The great purpose of the act, while seeking to prevent unjust and unreasonable rates, is to secure equality of rates as to all, and to destroy favoritism, the last being accomplished by requiring the publication of tariffs, and by prohibiting secret departures from such tariffs, and forbidding rebates, preferences, and all other forms of undue discrimination.[10]

To Destroy Competition.—It is not designed, however, to prevent competition between different roads, or to interfere with the customary arrangements made by railway companies for reduced fares in consideration of increased mileage, where such reduction did not operate as an unjust discrimination against other persons travelling over the road.[11] When it is sought to show that a charge is extortionate as being contrary to the statutable obligation to charge equally, it is immaterial whether the charge is reasonable or not; it is enough to show that the company carried for some person or class of persons at a lower charge during the period throughout which the party complaining was charged more under the like circumstances.[12] But the act does not authorize an agreement between competing railroads relating to traffic rates for the transportation of articles of commerce between the states, as will produce a restraint of trade or commerce, nor does it authorize any other agreements which would be inconsistent with the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.[13]

To Reinforce Tariff Laws.—It is not the purpose of the act to reinforce the tariff laws.[14]

Interference with Commerce.—It can not be readily supposed that congress intended, when regulating such commerce, to interfere with and interrupt, much

6. See post, "Long and Short Haul," §§ 4097-4110.

7. See post, "To Establish Through Routes," § 3993.

8. See post, "Printing and Publishing Schedules," §§ 4125-4145.

9. United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

The principal objects of the interstate commerce act were to secure just and reasonable charges for transportation; to prohibit unjust discrimination; in the rendition of like services under similar circumstances and conditions; to prevent undue or unreasonable preferences to persons, corporations or localities; to inhibit greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line; and to abolish combinations for the pooling of freights. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

The objects of the Interstate Commerce Act are to secure just rates, prohibit unjust discrimination, prevent undue preference, prohibit greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer distance, and abolish combinations. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

10. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272. See, also, Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

11. To destroy competition.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844. See, also, Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

The act was not directed to the securing of uniformity of rates to be charged by competing companies, nor was there any provision therein as a maximum or mimimum of rates. United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

12. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

13. United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

14. To reinforce tariff laws.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

less destroy, sources of trade and commerce already existing, nor to overlook the property rights of those who had invested money in the railroads of the country, nor to disregard the interest of the consumers, to furnish whom with merchandise is one of the principal objects of all systems of transportation.[15]

Not Intended to Cover Whole Field.—Although the commerce statute may be described as a general code for the regulation and government of railroads upon the subjects treated therein, it can not be contended that it furnishes a complete and perfect set of rules and regulations which are to govern them in all cases, and that any subsequent act in relation to them must, when passed, in effect amend or repeal some provision of that statute. The statute does not cover all cases concerning transportation by railroad and all contracts relating thereto. It does not purport to cover such an extensive field.[16]

§ 3983. History of Act.—Prior to the enactment of the act of February 4, 1887, to regulate commerce, commonly known as the Interstate Commerce Act, railway traffic in this country was regulated by the principles of the common law applicable to common carriers, which demanded little more than that they should carry for all persons who applied, in the order in which the goods were delivered at the particular station, and that their charges for transportation should be reasonable. It was even doubted whether they were bound to make the same charge to all persons for the same service; though the weight of authority in this country was in favor of an equality of charge to all persons for similar services. In several of the states acts had been passed intended to secure the public against unreasonable and unjust discrimination.[17]

§ 3984. Constitutionality of Act.—Congress has the power, and a corresponding duty, under the federal constitution, to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes.[18] The constitutionality of the provision imposing upon the initial carrier liability for loss regardless of whether the same occurred on its portion of the route or upon that of a connecting carrier, can not be attacked upon the ground that it deprives the receiving carrier of his liberty to select his own agencies for a continuous route of the transportation beyond his own line, where it appears that in the instant case the

15. Interference with commerce.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

16. Not intended to cover whole field.—United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

17. History of act.—24 Stat. 379, ch. 104; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844. See, also, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Call Pub. Co., 181 U. S. 92, 45 L. Ed. 765, 21 S. Ct. 561; Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

Congress has freely exercised the power to regulate commerce so far as relates to commerce with foreign nations and with the Indian tribes, but in regard to commerce among the several states it has, until Act of February 4, 1887, refrained from the passage of any very important regulation upon this subject, except perhaps the statutes regulating steamboats and their occupation upon the navigable waters of the country. Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857.

18. Constitutionality of act.—Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. Ed. 888, 7 S. Ct. 857; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

Act of congress known as the "Carmack Amendment to the Hepburn Bill," and as the "Initial Carriers' Act" (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 595 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1166]), is constitutional. Sturges v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 166 Mich. 231, 131 N. W. 706.

Equal protection of the laws.—Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 593 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), is not unconstitutional as denying equal protection of the laws. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wallace (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 169.

Taking private property for public purposes.—The act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1149) is a valid regulation of interstate commerce, and is not unconstitutional as taking private property for public purposes. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 103 Tex. 452, 129 S. W. 594.

defendant had selected its own agencies and the connecting carriers and made its own arrangements and rates before receiving the goods in question for shipment.[19]

Investigation and Compelling Attendance of Witnesses.—The same observation may be made in respect to those provisions empowering the commission to inquire into the management of the business of carriers subject to the provisions of the act, and to investigate the whole subject of interstate commerce as conducted by such carriers, and, in that way, to obtain full and accurate information of all matters involved in the enforcement of the act of congress. It is clearly competent for congress, to that end, to invest the commission with authority to require the attendance and testimony of witnesses, and the production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents relating to any matter legally committed to that body for investigation.[20]

Prohibition of Discrimination.—There can be no question of the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce to prevent favoritism, and to secure equal rights to all engaged in interstate trade.[21] The prohibition of unjust charges, discriminations or preferences, by carriers engaged in interstate commerce, in respect to property or persons transported from one state to another, is a proper regulation of interstate commerce, and the object that congress has in view by the act in question may be legitimately accomplished by it under the power to regulate commerce among the several states. In every substantial sense such prohibition is a rule by which interstate commerce must be governed, and is plainly adapted to the object intended to be accomplished.[22] In so doing congress may control those who are conducting interstate commerce by holding them responsible for the intent and purposes of the agents to whom they have delegated the power to act in the premises.[23]

Levying Export Taxes and Duties.—The mere incidental effect upon exports which may be produced by applying to a shipment from an interior point of the United States to a foreign port the provisions of the Elkins Act, making it an offense against the United States to obtain the transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, does not render such provisions repugnant to the United States constitution, forbidding the levying of export taxes or duties.[24]

Preference to Ports.—Preference is not given to the ports of one state over those of another by applying to articles intended for foreign export the provisions of the Elkins Act [25] making it an offense against the United States to accept transportation of goods in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates.[26]

Who May Raise Question.—A law will not be declared invalid at the instance of one not affected by it; hence persons not affected by statutory provi-

19. Imposing liability on initial carrier.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. Ed. 167, 31 S. Ct. 164, 31 L. R. A., N. S., 7; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 219 U. S. 209, 55 L. Ed. 183, 31 S. Ct. 171.

The Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 20, 24 Stat. 386 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3169]), making the initial carrier who issued a bill of lading liable for the default of each successive carrier to the point of destination, merely declares the common law and is constitutional. Reid v. Southern R. Co., 69 S. E. 618, 153 N. C. 490.

20. Investigation and compelling attendance of witnesses.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125.

21. Prohibition of discrimination.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

22. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125.

23. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

24. Levying export taxes and duties.—Const. U. S., art. 1, § 9; Act. Feb. 19, 1903; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428.

25. Preference to ports.—Act Feb. 19, 1903.

26. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428.

sions alleged to be unconstitutional have no standing to urge constitutional objections against the same.[27]

Due Process of Law.—The validity of the act as applied to the due process of law clauses of the constitution has several times been declared.[28] A corporate carrier engaged in interstate commerce has no standing to object that the last paragraph of § 1 of the Elkins Act[29] is unconstitutional in that it applies to individual carriers as well as those of a corporate character and attributes the acts of the agents of such individual carriers to them, thereby making the crime of one person that of another, thus depriving the latter of due process of law and the presumption of innocence which the law raises in his favor.[30]

Partial Invalidity.—Moreover this section of the statute is separable, and even if the presumption thus created as to individuals were unconstitutional, the act would still remain valid as to corporate carriers.[31]

§ 3985. Construction of Act.—The courts should adopt a reasonable construction of the act in order to accomplish its general purpose obtaining fair treatment for the public from carriers, and reasonable charges for transportation, and the honest performance of duty, with no improper or unjust preference or discrimination.[32] The Interstate Commerce Act is applicable and is intended to apply, only to matters involved in the regulation of commerce, and which congress may rightfully subject to investigation by a commission established for the purpose of enforcing that act.[33] A statute of the scope of the interstate commerce act, designed to regulate the vast interstate transportation business of the country, is not to be narrowly interpreted in accordance with the economical or physical conditions prevailing at the time of its enactment.[34]

The interpretation given by the commission to the act to regulate commerce that these prohibitions are not applicable to carriers which, prior to the adoption of the interstate commerce act, were authorized by their charters or legislative authority to carry on both the business of mining and selling the coal so mined, and transporting the same to market, is now binding, and, as restricted to the precise conditions which were passed on in the cases referred to, must be applied to all strictly identical cases in the future; at least, until congress has legislated on the subject. This is in consequence of the familiar rule that a construction made by the body charged with the enforcement of a statute, which construction has long obtained in practical execution, and has been impliedly sanctioned by the re-enactment of the statute without alteration in the particulars construed, when not plainly erroneous, must be treated as read into the statute.[35]

27. Who may raise question of constitutionality.—Williams v. Walsh, 222 U. S. 415, 56 L. Ed. 253, 32 S. Ct. 137; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. Ed. 167, 31 S. Ct. 164, 31 L. R. A., N. S., 7.

28. Due process of law.—Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Mitchell, 175 Ind. 196, 91 N. E. 735, 93 N. E. 996, citing Riverside Mills v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 987; Smeltzer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 158 Fed. 649; Greenwald v. Weir, 59 Misc. Rep. 431, 111 N. Y. S. 235; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 170; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107.

29. Act Feb. 19, 1903, 32 Stat. 847.

30. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304; S. C., 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

31. Partial invalidity.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

32. Construction of act.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

33. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125.

34. Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 191 Fed. 40.

Construction of amendments. — Elkins Act as amended by Act June 29, 1906, forbidding concessions or discrimination in respect to transportation, held not to be restricted by the narrower language of Interstate Commerce Act, §§ 2, 3, prohibiting "unjust" discrimination and "undue" or "unreasonable" prejudice or disadvantage. Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 735; Sunday Creek Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 747.

35. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

Construed as English Traffic Act.—The Interstate Commerce Act having adopted substantially some of the provisions of the English railway traffic acts the construction given to such provisions by the English courts must be received as incorporated into the act.[36] The construction of the phrase "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," as used in the interstate commerce act, when applied to any particular description of traffic, must be the same as when applied to any particular person, company, firm, corporation, or locality. All of said terms being contained in a single sentence, the same construction must be given to each and every part of the sentence.[37]

Clause Limiting Operation of Act.—The proviso in § 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, that the act shall not apply to transportation wholly within one state, was not intended as a limitation of its provisions, where they are within the powers of congress, and does not prevent the application of the provision of § 3 prohibiting discrimination between localities to cases where such discrimination is brought about by state action reducing intrastate rates.[38]

§ 3986. Operation and Effect.—Transactions to which this act relates being interstate in their character, the act is of paramount operation, and no state enactment can be of any avail, since the subject has been covered by an act of congress, acting within the limits of its constitutional powers.[39] Parties to an interstate shipment are presumed to contract with reference to the acts of congress on that subject, and such contracts can not be construed with reference to any other law.[40] And contracts made in contravention of the interstate commerce act are contrary to public policy and void, regardless of the intent of the parties.[41] Because opportunities of the violation of the act may occur by reason of a rule of a carrier, is no ground for holding, as a matter of law that violations must occur, and that the rule itself is therefore illegal.[42]

Common-Law Liability for Negligence.—The original Interstate Commerce Act and the amendment thereto do not in any manner supersede or amend the common-law rule as to liability of a carrier for its negligence in interstate shipments.[43]

On Rights Arising under State Statute.—The right of a shipper to invoke the provisions of the interstate commerce law against discrimination on interstate shipments against a railroad company on whose line he is located is not affected by the fact that the duty of such company to receive and handle all freight consigned over its line without discrimination arises from a state statute, rather than from a voluntary arrangement with connecting lines.[44]

On Existing Contracts.—A contract which would be illegal if made after the passage of the act is illegal and unenforcible although made before the act took effect.[45] A contract entered into prior to the passage of the interstate commerce law for the carriage of freight by a railway company at rates contrary to the provisions of that law can not be enforced after its passage, and the shipper

36. Construed as English Traffic Act.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 37.

37. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

38. Clause limiting operation of act.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 205 Fed. 380; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 205 Fed. 391.

39. Operation and effect.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. Ed. 305, 31 S. Ct. 272.

40. Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 24 So. 552, 43 L. R. A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936.

41. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

42. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

43. Common-law liability for negligence.—Miller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 85 Neb. 458, 123 N. W. 449.

44. On rights arising under state statute.—Interstate Stockyards Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 99 Fed. 472.

45. On existing contracts.—Cowley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 68 Wash. 558, 123 Pac. 998, 41 L. R. A., N. S., 559.

can not recover any rebates stipulated for in such contracts.[46] Since the common law, as such, is no part of the national jurisprudence, and since the exclusive right to regulate commerce is vested in congress, overcharges for freight on an interstate shipment, involving unjust discrimination, made prior to the interstate commerce act, can not be recovered. And the provision of § 22 that the act shall not abridge the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, does not confer on the shipper the right to recover such overcharges, on the ground that it recognizes a common-law or statutory liability on the part of the carrier therefor.[47]

On Pending Proceedings.—The special saving clause in the Act of June 29, 1906, does not mention the particular subject of the general saving clause in the Revised Statutes of the United States,[48] as to the effect on existing penalties, forfeitures, and liabilities of a repealing act, and can be accorded reasonable operation, consistently with the true intent of its language and with the undisturbed operation of the general saving clause, by treating it as saving causes then pending in the courts from what, in its absence, and in the presence of the general saving clause, will be the effect on them of the amendments in that act. It does not necessarily supersede the general saving clause.[49]

As to Intrastate Commerce.—A carrier engaged in interstate commerce becomes subject, as to such commerce, to the commands of the statute, and may not set its provisions at naught, whatever otherwise may be its power when carrying on commerce not interstate in character.[50]

§ 3987. Time of Taking Effect.—Since the Act of June 29, 1906, relating to interstate commerce, became effective on that day by virtue of an express provision in section eleven, its taking effect was not deferred by the joint resolution of congress passed June 30, 1906, providing that the act amending an act regulating commerce approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and enlarging the powers of the interstate commerce commission, should take effect sixty days after its approval by the president.[51]

§ 3988. Repeal.—Under the provision of an act of congress that the repeal of any statute shall not operate as a release from liability incurred under such statute unless the repealing act shall expressly so provide,[52] the saving clause contained in the Act of June 29, 1906, relating to interstate commerce, did not repeal the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, in so far as it affected an indictable offense thereunder, previously committed.[53] Section 10 of the rate law of June 29, 1906, 46. Bullard v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 10 Mont. 168, 25 Pac. 120, 11 L. R. A. 246.

47. Gatton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 95 Iowa 112, 63 N. W. 589, 28 L. R. A. 556.

48. On pending proceedings.—Rev. St., § 13 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 6].

49. Great Northern R. Co. v. United States, 155 Fed. 945, 84 C. C. A. 93, judgment affirmed in 208 U. S. 452, 52 L. Ed. 567, 28 S. Ct. 313.

50. As to intrastate commerce.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

51. Time of taking effect.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Meadors & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 129 S. W. 170.

52. Repeal.—U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 6, § 13.

53. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 630.

The provision of the Hepburn law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 10, 34 Stat. 584), repealing laws in conflict with the act, that "the amendments herein provided for shall not affect causes now pending * * * but such causes shall be prosecuted to a conclusion in the manner heretofore provided by law," in view of Rev. St., § 13 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 6], providing that "the repeal of any statute shall not have the effect to release or extinguish any penalty, forfeiture or liability incurred under such statute, unless the repealing act shall so expressly provide, and such statute shall be treated as still remaining in force for the purpose of sustaining any proper action or prosecution for the enforcement of such penalty, forfeiture or liability," applies to rebate offenses committed before, but prosecution for which was commenced after, the passage of such act; so that an indictment in such a case alleging that a carrier "unlawfully and willfully" gave rebates, which would be enough under the Elkins law (Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 599]), is sufficient, though under the Hepburn law it would which provides that all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, but the amendments herein provided for shall not affect causes now pending in courts of the United States, but such causes shall be prosecuted to a conclusion in the manner heretofore provided by law, was not intended to relieve offenders under the old law from subsequent indictment and prosecution for such offenses, while leaving those previously indicted subject to punishment, but merely to prescribe the rule of procedure which should control in pending causes, and in view of the above provision, must be so construed.[54]

§ 3989. Definitions.—The term "common carrier" as used in this act shall include express companies and sleeping car companies.[55]

The term "railroad" as used in this act shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad, and also all the road in use by any corporation operating a railroad, whether owned or operated under a contract, agreement, or lease, and shall also include all switches, spurs, tracks, and terminal facilities of every kind used or necessary in the transportation of the persons or property designated herein, and also all freight depots, yards, and grounds used or necessary in the transportation or delivery of any said property.[56]

Regulation.—Within the term "regulation" are embraced two ideas: One is the mere control of the operation of the roads, prescribing the rules for the management thereof—matters which affect the convenience of the public in their use. Regulation, in this sense, may be considered as purely public in its character, and in no manner trespassing upon the rights of the owners of railroads. But within the scope of the word "regulation," as commonly used, is embraced the idea of fixing the compensation which the owners of railroad property shall receive for the use thereof; and when regulation, in this sense, is attempted, it necessarily affects the property interests of the railroad owners; and it is "regulation" in this sense of the term.[57]

The term "transportation" shall include cars and other vehicles and all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration or icing, storage, and handling of property transported.[58] It is evidently the intention of congress, in the employment of the term "transportation," to include all kinds of instrumentalities of shipment and carriage.[59] Elevation as a grain is included in "transportation."[60] Cartage of sugar from be necessary to allege that they were given "knowingly." United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 Fed. 269.

54. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

55. Definitions.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Sup. 1912, p. 113.

56. Railroad. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125.

57. Regulation.—Ames v. Union Pac. R. Co., 64 Fed. 165. See Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

58. Transportation.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

Transportation within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act means not only the physical instrumentalities, but all services in connection with receipt, delivery, and handling of property transported. Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. Ed. 257, 32 S. Ct. 140.

59. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

60. Elevation of grain.—"The long mooted question as to whether elevation was such a part of transportation as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission was answered by the Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, 590, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), in which congress declared that the term 'transportation' shall include * * * all * * * facilities of shipment, * * * irrespective of ownership, * * * and all services in connection with the * * * elevation and transfer in transit * * * and handling of property transported." Carriers were required "to provide and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor." Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

refinery to cars is not transportation, nor a service connected with such transportation, within the Interstate Commerce Act, and hence an allowance therefor in the freight rate constituted an illegal rebate.[61]

Wharfage and Terminal Company.—A corporation created to carry on, conformably to a municipal ordinance and a confirmatory statute intended to secure public shipping facilities, a wharfage business at a seaport and to furnish terminal facilities for a railway and steamship system of which it forms a part and by which it is controlled through a holding company, is a common carrier, and as such is subject to the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission acting in the exercise of its authority, under the act to regulate commerce, to prohibit undue preferences.[62]

Rebate.—The word "rate," means the net amount the carrier receives from the shipper and retains, and any device by which such amount is reduced below the rate given in the published schedule is one for the giving of a rebate.[63]

"Charges."—In the provision contained in the first section of the interstate commerce law, that all charges made for any service rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property as aforesaid or in connection therewith, or for receiving, delivering, storage, or handling of such property, shall be reasonable and just, and every unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful, the word "charges" is used in the technical sense of segregated items of expense, or dues demanded in connection with the "transportation," or with the "receiving," etc., the accessorial service described by the latter terms (which include cartage) being thus distinguished from the transportation. And, although these terms are not repeated with the same particularity in §§ 2, 3, and 4, this segregation of the two kinds of service is not to be overlooked, in their construction.[64]

"Rates in Force."—See elsewhere.[65]

Terminal Charges.—As used in the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 6, providing that the published schedules shall state separately all "terminal charges," the words quoted mean a separate rate for a service at a terminal, not always rendered in transportation from place to place, for a privilege or facility not furnished to all shippers.[66]

The words "knowingly and willfully" violating such act, in the Act of June 29, 1906, providing that cattle shall not be confined for a longer period than thirty-six hours, are intended to mean either an intentional violation of the statute or an indifferent disregard of its requirements.[67] They described an essential element of the offense on account of which penalties are prescribed, without proof of which they can not be recovered; "knowingly" meaning with knowledge of the facts which, taken together, constitute a failure to comply with the statute, 61. Cartage.—So held under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 15, amended June 18, 1910, § 12. American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 652.

62. Wharfage and terminal company.—"There is a separation of the companies if we regard only their charter; there is a union of them if we regard their control and operation through the Southern Pacific Company. This control and operation are the important facts to shippers. It is of no consequence that by mere charter declaration the terminal company is a wharfage company, or the Southern Pacific a holding company. Verbal declarations can not alter the facts. The control and operation of the Southern Pacific Company of the railroads and the terminal company have united them into a system of which all are necessary parts, the terminal company as well as the railroad companies." Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279.

63. Rebate.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 148 Fed. 646.

64. "Charges."—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

65. "Rates in forces."—See post, "Statutory Provision," § 4126.

66. Terminal charges.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. General Elect. Co., 146 N. Y. S. 322, 83 Misc. Rep. 529.

67. Knowingly and willfully.—United States v. Stockyards Terminal R. Co., 178 Fed. 19, 101 C. C. A. 147, affirming 172 Fed. 452.

and "willfully" meaning purposely or obstinately, describing the attitude of a carrier, who, having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute, or is indifferent to its requirements.[68]

§§ 3990-3991. Carriers Subject to Act—§ 3990. In General.—The first section of the act makes it clear that congress had in view the whole field of commerce, except commerce wholly within a state, as well that between the states and territories as that going to or coming from foreign countries. It includes in its scope the entire commerce of the United States, foreign and interstate, and subjects to its regulations all carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property, by whatever instrumentalities of shipment or carriage.[69] The provisions of the interstate commerce act apply to any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used, under a common control, management, or arrangement, for a continuous carriage or shipment from one state or territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, to any other state or territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, or from any place in the United States through a foreign country to any other place in the United States, and also to the transportation in like manner of property shipped from any place in the United States to a foreign country and carried from such place to a port of transshipment, or shipped from any foreign country to any place in the United States and carried to such place from a port of entry either in the United States or an adjacent foreign country.[70]

Engaged in Intrastate Commerce.—The provisions of the interstate commerce act have no application to the transportation of passengers or property, or to the receiving, delivering, storing, or handling of property, wholly within one state and not shipped to a foreign country from any state or territory, or from a foreign country to any state or territory.[71] It is expressly provided that the provisions of the act shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property, or to the receiving, delivering, storage, or handling of property wholly within one state and not shipped to or from a foreign country from or to any state or territory as aforesaid, nor shall they apply to the transmission of messages by telephone, telegraph, or cable wholly within one state and not transmitted to or from a foreign country from or to any state or territory as aforesaid.[72] This provision is not an exception of the intrastate carriage of interstate commerce from the operation in the act, while leaving the intrastate carriage of foreign commerce subject to its provisions, but is merely a disclaimer of the intention to include purely intrastate business over which congress has no jurisdiction; and the exception therefrom of shipments to or from a foreign country is to avoid any possible conflict with the preceding clause, which makes such shipments subject to the act, although their carriage in this country to or from a port of transshipment or entry may be wholly a single state,[73] unless, although its entire line is intrastate, a carrier enters into the carriage of foreign freight under an arrangement for continuous carriage or shipment from one state to another.[74] But when such railroad company enters into the carriage

68. United States v. St. Joseph Stock Yards Co., 181 Fed. 625.

69. Carriers subject to act.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

70. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

71. Engaged in intrastate commerce.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223.

72. Fed. Stat. Anno. Supp. (1912), p. 112; [35 Stat. L. 544]. Act June 18, 1910.

73. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 968.

74. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L.

of foreign freight, by agreeing to receive the goods by virtue of foreign through bills of lading, and to participate in through rates and charges, it thereby becomes part of a continuous line, not made by a consolidation with the foreign companies, but made by an arrangement for the continuous carriage or shipment from one state to another, and thus becomes amenable to the federal act, in respect to such interstate commerce. The railroad company does not escape from the supervision of the commission by requesting the foreign companies not to name or fix any rates for that part of the transportation which took place in the state when the goods were shipped to local points on its road, having still left its arrangement to stand with respect to other designated points.[75] While a through bill of lading is the usual method in use by connecting companies, this must not be understood to imply that a common control, management or arrangement might not be otherwise manifested.[76]

Between Points in Same State Through Other State.—A shipment of grain over a single railroad between two points, both within the same state, is not an interstate shipment, so as to bring it within the terms of the Interstate Commerce Act, and authorize a federal court to compel such shipment, by mandamus, at the same rates charged other shippers of a like commodity, merely because the line of road between the two terminal points passes through other states.[77] A shipment from New York City to Buffalo, by way of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, is interstate commerce, and so is subject to the provisions of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, as to rebates; the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, though providing that the provisions of the act shall apply to any carrier engaged in the transportation of passengers or property from one state to any other state, having a proviso that the provisions of this act shall not apply to the transportation of property "wholly" within one state.[78] A shipment of grain over a single railroad between two points, both within the same state, is not an interstate shipment, so as to bring it within the terms of the Interstate Commerce Act, by reason of the fact that the grain was received at the initial point from a carrier by which it was transported from a point in another state, and was there stored in an elevator for further shipment, where it was not taken by the first carrier under a through bill of lading.[79]

Under Common Control for Continuous Carriage.—This act does not include or apply to all carriers engaged in interstate commerce, but only such as use a railway, or a railway and watercraft, "under common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment" of property from one state to another; nor does it apply to the carriage of property by rail wholly within the state, although shipped from or destined to a place without the state, so that such place is not in a foreign country.[80] When a carrier unites with

Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

75. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223, followed in Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

76. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223.

77. Between points in same state through other state.—United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 115 Fed. 373.

78. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 Fed. 269.

79. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 115 Fed. 373.

80. Under common control for continuous carriage.—Ex parte Koehler, 30 Fed. 867.

When a railroad company whose line is situated entirely within a state, enters into the carriage of foreign freight, by agreeing to receive goods under through bills of lading, and to participate in through rates and charges, it thereby becomes part of a continuous line, and accordingly is amenable to the Interstate Commerce Act. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223. See also Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. Co., 1 Int. Com. Rep. 571; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912.

The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company carries certain kinds of goods

one or more others in making a rate for interstate or foreign shipments, and a through bill is issued therefor, it is subject to the interstate commerce act. An express agreement for the through rate is not required, but the successive receipt and forwarding in the ordinary course of business by two or more carriers under through bills, or any arrangement for a continuous carriage constitutes assent to such common arrangement, and makes the carrier a party to the contract, within the meaning of the act.[81] The shipment of freight over a number of lines of railroad from a point in one state to a point in another, at a through rate of charges, under an agreement, express or implied, for a conventional division of the charges among the different roads, constitutes a "common arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment," within the meaning of the interstate commerce act, and a road participating in such arrangement is subject to the provisions of the act, though its line lies entirely within one state, and its part of the joint charge is its regular local rate.[82] When goods are shipped through from Cincinnati to local stations on the Georgia Railroad, the initial carrier at Cincinnati issues through bills of lading, and quotes through rates. Said rates are arrived at by adding to the rates from Cincinnati to Atlanta the full local rates of the Georgia Railroad from Atlanta to said local stations. The Georgia Railroad Company receives the goods at Atlanta, and transports them continuously to its local stations, but collects full local rates from Atlanta to said local stations. The reception, and continuous transportation, by the Georgia Railroad Company, of freight which comes to it over other lines of railroads, destined to its local stations, for which the initial carrier has issued through bills of lading and quoted through rates, does not constitute such an "arrangement" as is contemplated by the first section of the act to regulate commerce, where the through rates so quoted allow to that company its full local rates.[83] on its steamers between Portland and San Francisco at special and reduced rates. The Oregon & California Railway, under the management of the petitioner, carries the same kinds of goods between Portland and Ashland, and way stations in Oregon, at special and reduced rates. The Oregon Pacific Railway Company carries the same kinds of goods between certain points on the line of the Oregon & California road and San Francisco via its railway from Albany to Yaquina Bay, and thence by steamer, at reduced rates, and thereby competes with the Oregon & California Railway and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company for business between said points and San Francisco. The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company and the receiver of the Oregon & California Railway act independently, though concurrently, in making these reduced rates, but no through bill of lading or freight receipt is given, nor is either interested in or liable for the carriage of the goods beyond its own line of transportation. Held, that the Oregon & California road and the steamers of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, in the carriage of the goods in question, are not "used under any common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment" thereof to and from San Francisco, within the intent and meaning of the act, and that the carriage and handling of said goods, so far as the receiver is concerned, is performed wholly within the state, and therefore specially exempted by the terms of the act from its operation, provided the same are not directly shipped to or from a foreign country. Ex parte Koehler, 30 Fed. 867.

81. United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

82. United States v. Seaboard R. Co., 82 Fed. 563.

83. Interstate Commerce Act (Feb. 4, 1887, 24 Stat. 379) § 1, provides that such act "shall apply to any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water where both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement, for a continuous carriage or shipment," etc. The Georgia Railroad extends from Atlanta to Augusta. It requested its connections that in issuing bills of lading to its local stations no rates be inserted east of Atlanta. There is no agreement on the part of said company for any such joint tariff as implies a reduced rate from Cincinnati, Ohio, to its local stations. On the contrary, that company collects and retains its entire local rates on all freight shipped from Cincinnati to its local stations. Held, that there is no such "arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment" existing between said company and its connections as to bring the rates which are charged to said local stations within the first sec-

A steamship company, which joins with a railroad carrier in making, filing, and publishing joint through rates for intestate traffic, is as to such traffic used under a "common arrangement" with the railroad company, within the meaning of the act and subject to regulation and control by the interstate commerce commission; but such power to regulate and control does not extend to the other port-to-port business of the company, whether interstate or intrastate. Under § 20 of the act, the commission has power to require reports from such company, and to prescribe a system of bookkeeping and accounting with respect to such joint traffic and directly relating thereto, but it has no power to extend such requirements to include other matters or business of the company having no direct relation to such joint traffic.[84]

Engaged in Commerce in Territories.—By the Act of 1906, the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act were extended to carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property from one state or territory of the United States to any other state or territory, or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory.[85] Alaska is a territory within the meaning of this act.[86] The authority of the secretary of the interior to review and modify railway rates in Alaska conferred upon him by the Act of May 14, 1898,[87] is superseded by the amendment of June 29, 1906, to the Interstate Commerce Act, which gave to the interstate commerce commission the power to prescribe rates, and extended the provisions of the act to intraterritorial commerce.[88]

Corporation Organized under State Law.—Corporations organized under state laws, engaged in interstate commerce, are subject to control by the interstate commerce commission, relating to uniform system of accounting and annual reports.[89] An electric interurban street railway company doing an interstate business in the carriage of passengers, although incorporated under the street railroad statutes of a state, and not authorized to carry freight, nor vested with the right of eminent domain, is subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act and the interstate commerce commission has jurisdiction to prescribe just and reasonable maximum rates to be charged by such company for the interstate carriage of passengers.[90]

When Actually Engaged in Transportation.—A corporation is a common carrier, within the meaning of Interstate Commerce Act, only when it is actually engaged in the business of transportation.[91]

Engaged in Transportation Through Foreign Country.—Any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act receiving freight in the United States to be carried through a foreign country to any place in the United States shall also in like manner print and keep open to public inspection, at every depot or office where such freight is received for shipment, schedules showing the through tion of the act to regulate commerce. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

84. Goodrich Trans. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 190 Fed. 943.

85. Engaged in commerce in territories.—Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), Fed. St. Anno. Sup. 1909, p. 255; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

86. Alaska is a territory of the United States within the meaning of the Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), extending the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act to carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property from one state or territory of the United States to any other state or territory, or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

87. Authority of Secretary of Interior.—Act of May 14, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 299, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1576), § 2.

88. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

89. Corporation organized under state law.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

90. Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 191 Fed. 40.

91. When actually engaged in transportation.—Attorney General v. Union Stock Yard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

rates established and charged by such common carrier to all points in the United States beyond the foreign country to which it accepts freight for shipment; and any freight shipped from the United States through a foreign country into the United States the through rate on which shall not have been made public, as required by this act, shall, before it is admitted into the United States from said foreign country, be subject to customs duties as if said freight were of foreign production.[92]

Shipment to Foreign Port.—Shipments under a through bill of lading from an interior point in the United States to a foreign port are embraced in the provisions of the act of February 19, 1903, making it an offense against the United States to obtain the transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates.[93]

The hauling of empty cars from one state to another is interstate commerce within the meaning of the act. Such is the view that has obtained with respect to empty cars in actions based upon the Safety Appliance Act. And the like reason applies to actions founded upon the Employers' Liability Act, which, indeed, is in pari materia with the other.[94]

§ 3991. Particular Carriers.—Railroads in General.—The fact that a railroad lies wholly within one state does not exempt it from the obligations imposed by the interstate commerce act, if the transportation over it is part of a shipment from one state to another, or to or from a foreign country.[95]

Lessor Railroad.—The owner of a railroad, which is leased and operated by the lessee as a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce, may be required by the interstate commerce commission to make annual reports, under the Interstate Commerce Act, § 20.[96] A stockyard company operating a railway system for cars to and from trunk lines in their transportation from and beyond the state does not cease to be an interstate carrier within the Interstate Commerce Act, and as such is obliged to file its tariffs under § 6 of the act by leasing its railway to another corporation for a division of profits.[97] Where a railroad company owning a part of the through route over which oil was transported under an alleged discriminating rate leased its line to another company, and the lessee, by virtue of the lease or otherwise, was not a partner, agent, or representative of the lessor company during the time the former was operating such portion of the through route, the lessor was not personally liable for violation of the interstate commerce act by the lessee's participation in such discriminating rate during the continuance of the lease.[98]

Lessee Railroad.—A railway company operating as lessee for division of profits a railroad system owned by a stockyard company for the transportation of cars to and from trunk lines is an interstate carrier within the Interstate Commerce Act, and obliged to file its tariffs with the interstate commerce commission as required by § 6.[99] A railroad company chartered by a state owned a short 92. Transportation through foreign country.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 6.

93. Shipment to foreign port.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A., 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment 157 Fed. 830.

94. North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary, 232 U. S. 248, 34 S. Ct. 305.

95. Railroads in general.—Augusta, etc., R. Co. v. Wrightsville, etc., R. Co., 74 Fed. 522.

96. Lessor railroad.—Attorney General v. Union Stock Yard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

A lessor of a railroad to an independent operating company held not a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce, within the meaning of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 1, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 1. Attorney General v. Union Stock Yard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

97. United States v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83.

98. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 70 C. C. A. 23, 137 Fed. 343, affirmed in 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268.

99. Lessee railroad.—United States v. Union Stock Yard, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83, modifying judgment Attorney General v. Union Stock Yard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

road wholly in the state, but did not own any rolling stock nor operate the road. The road was used and operated as a means of conducting interstate traffic in coal, by companies owning connecting interstate roads. Such road was one of the facilities and instrumentalities of interstate commerce, and hence the carriers using it were subject to the provisions of the act to regulate commerce.[1]

Sleeping Car Companies.—The act provides that the term "common carrier" shall include sleeping car companies.[2]

Express Companies.—The act now provides that the term "common carrier" shall include express companies also. The amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act by the Act of June 29, 1906, brought express companies within the terms of the act.[3] The express companies are therefore obliged to file and publish their rates for the transportation of property under the act thus as amended.[4] Express companies, independently organized as corporations for the transaction of the express business on their own account, are not subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act.[5]

Electric Railway Companies.—It seems an electric street railway doing an interstate business in the carriage of passengers, although incorporated under the street railroad statutes of a state, and not authorized to carry freight, nor vested with the right of eminent domain, is not a railroad within the Interstate Commerce Act.[6]

Carriers by Water.—When engaged in carrying on traffic under joint rates with railroads, filed with the commission, carriers by water are bound to deal upon like terms with all shippers who seek to avail themselves of such joint rates,

1. Heck v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 1 Interst. Com. R. 495.

2. Sleeping car companies.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 113.

3. Express companies.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 113.

A joint-stock company doing a general express business, having filed its schedule of rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission, held a quasi corporation, and subject to indictment as a legal entity for discrimination and violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Hepburn Act. United States v. American Exp. Co., 199 Fed. 321.

By the provision of Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 1, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892), amendatory of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 1, 24 Stat. 379 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154), that "the term 'common carrier' as used in this act shall include express companies," such companies are made subject to all provisions of said Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments, so far as the same may be applicable, to the same extent as though they had been named in the original act, including the provisions of §§ 2 and 3 (24 Stat. 379, 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]) against unjust and unreasonable discriminations, of § 6 (24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3156]) as amended by the Hepburn Act (34 Stat. 586 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 897]), prohibiting the taking of any greater or less sum for transportation of property than that named in the tariffs filed, and § 1 of the Elkins Act (Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880]), as so amended, making it unlawful to offer or accept any rebate from the published rate, or other discrimination in respect of the transportation of any property whereby any advantage is given. United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

4. Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584, Fed. Stat. Anno. Sup. 1912, p. 225; American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315.

5. United States v. Morsman, 42 Fed. 448.

The Interstate Commerce Act does not apply to independent express companies not operating railway lines. Decree, 88 Fed. 659, affirmed in Southern Indiana Exp. Co. v. United States Exp. Co., 92 Fed. 1022, 35 C. C. A. 172.

6. Electric railway companies.—Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154), or its amendments (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1149]), being acts to regulate commerce, do not apply to street railway companies engaged in the transportation of passengers between cities in different states. Omaha, etc., St. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 179 Fed. 243.

Street railroads carrying passengers across a state line are not governed by the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, which applies to carriers engaged in transportation of passengers or property by railroad. Omaha, etc., St. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 33 S. Ct. 890, 230 U. S. 324, 57 L. Ed. 1501, 46 L. R. A., N. S., 385, reversing decree 191 Fed. 40.

and are subject to the general requirements of the act preventing and punishing the giving of rebates, the making of unjust discriminations, the showing of favoritism, and other practices denounced in the various sections of the act. They are undoubtedly subject to the provisions of the act, which permits the commission to inquire into the management of business of all common carriers subject to the act, and to keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, with the right to obtain from such common carriers the full and complete information necessary to enable the commission to carry out the objects for which it was created.[7] But it is not the purpose of the Interstate Commerce Act to subject independent carriers by water to its provisions, and it does not vest the interstate commerce commission with any control over the business of such carriers, except such interstate traffic as is carried on under a joint arrangement with rail carriers.[8]

Pipe Lines.—The provisions of the act apply to any corporation, person or persons engaged in the transportation of oil or other commodity, except water and except natural or artificial gas, by means of pipe lines or partly by pipe lines and partly by railroad, or partly by pipe lines and partly by water.[9] Oil companies controlling interstate pipe lines carrying oil offered between oil fields east of California and the Atlantic seaboard on condition that the offerer shall first sell the oil to them on their own terms, are embraced within the Act of June 29, 1906, extending the operation of the Interstate Commerce Act to pipe lines, which shall be considered to be common carriers within the act.[10] But an oil company using a pipe line solely to conduct its own oil from its own wells in one state to its own refinery in another state is not within the act.[11]

Bridges and Ferries.—The act provides that the term "railroads" shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad.[12]

7. Carriers by water.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

"The terms of the act of congress, as amended June 29, 1906, 34 Stat. 584, c. 3591, and in force at the time when these orders were made, are plain and simple, and, we think, not difficult to comprehend. They are: 'The provisions of this act [to regulate commerce] shall apply to * * * any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment), from one state or territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, to any other state or territory of the United States, etc. The proviso, at the end of the section, that its terms shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property wholly within one State was inserted for the purpose of showing the congressional purpose not to undertake to regulate a commerce wholly domestic. The first section makes the act apply alike to common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad or partly by railroad and partly by water under an arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment. It is conceded that the carriers filing the bills in these cases were common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers and property partly by railroad and partly by water under a joint arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment. Such common carriers are declared to be subject to the provisions of the act in precisely the same term as those which comprehend the other companies named in the act. Carriers partly by railroad and partly by water under a common arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment are as specifically within the terms of the act as any other carrier named therein." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

8. Goodrich Trans. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 190 Fed. 943.

9. Pipe lines.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 112.

10. United States v. Ohio Oil Co., 234 U. S. 548, 34 S. Ct. 956.

The amendment of § 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act by Act June 29, 1906, § 1, providing that the act shall apply to owners of oil pipe lines, who shall be considered common carriers, held not ambiguous, and intended to apply to all owners of interstate oil pipe lines, regardless of their previous status as common carriers, or as conducting a purely private business. Prairie Oil, etc., Co. v. United States, 204 Fed. 798.

11. United States v. Ohio Oil Co., 234 U. S. 548, 34 S. Ct. 956.

12. Bridges and ferries.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 113.

Telephone, Telegraph and Cable Companies.—The act applies to telegraph, telephone and cable companies, whether wire or wireless, engaged in sending messages from one state, territory or district of the United States, to any other state, territory or district of the United States, or to any foreign country.[13]

Terminal Companies.—A corporation maintaining a stockyard which operates a railroad system for cars to and from trunk lines in the course of their transportation from beyond the state is an interstate railway carrier within the Interstate Commerce Act and obliged to file its tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission under § 6 of the act.[14] Railroad service known as "switching" is local, and the charge made for it is not a part of the through rate fixed beforehand, and has no reference to interstate shipment, but may be regulated by a commission appointed under a state act by virtue of the police power of the state.[15] A terminal company which received cars of coal coming from another state, and delivered them within its yards to the engines of a railroad company, was engaged in moving interstate traffic, within the Safety Appliance Act.[16]

Truckmen and Draymen.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act, providing that the act applies to any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or party by railroad and partly by water, when both are used under a common control, etc., for a continuous carriage or interstate shipment, the act does not apply to a truckman in a city, so as to make him responsible for the loss of goods shipped from one state to another on the theory that he was the initial carrier, when his engagement was only to haul the goods from the store to the dock or depot as an independent employment.[17]

Holding Companies.—A holding company is not a common carrier, within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act, because of the fact that it owns all of the stock of a corporation which is such a common carrier.[18]

Where Carrier Is Also Manufacturer.—The act makes it unlawful for any railroad company to engage in the interstate or foreign transportation of any article or commodity, other than timber and the manufacture of products thereof, manufactured, mined or produced by the carrier, or under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect, except such articles or commodities as may be necessary and intended for its use in the conduct of its business as a common carrier.[19] The provision of the act applies to a railroad having termini in different states and transporting coal thereon from mines, the capital stock of which is owned by the railroad company, though all the coal mined by said railroad company is sold at the mine and title is passed before the coal is transported to another state.[20]

§§ 3992-4015. Duties Imposed upon Carrier—§ 3992. Transportation.—Section 1 of the act, makes it the plain duty of a carrier to furnish transportation upon reasonable request. This duty is imposed upon the carrier, and it is clearly the intent of the framers of the act that the carrier should, upon reasonable request for the same, furnish vehicles for transportation. This duty in no sense of the word rests upon the shipper, but relates solely to the carrier. In 13. Telephone, telegraph and cable companies.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 112.

14. Terminal companies.—United States v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83. See Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan R. Comm., 231 U. S. 457, 34 S. Ct. 152.

15. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Becker, 32 Fed. 849.

16. Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, 27 Stat. 531 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174]; United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 144 Fed. 861.

17. Truckmen and draymen.—Hirsch v. New England Nav. Co., 113 N. Y. S. 395, 129 App. Div. 178.

18. Holding companies.—Attorney General v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

19. Where carrier is also manufacturer.—Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, Fed. St. Anno. Supp. 1912, p. 114.

20. Central Trust Co. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 837, 52 Misc. Rep. 195.

this instance, as is the case in the enactment of almost every statute, there must have been strong reasons for the passage of this act.[21]

Receipts for Goods Accepted for Transportation.—The requirement of the Carmack Amendment, that a railway company receiving property for transportation in interstate commerce shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, does not require other receipts than baggage checks.[22]

§ 3993. To Establish Through Routes.—See elsewhere.[23]

§ 3994. Continuous Carriage.—See elsewhere.[24]

§§ 3995-3997. Facilities—§ 3995. In General.—The third section of the Interstate Commerce Act provides that every common carrier subject to the provisions of the act shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of passengers and property to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith, and shall not discriminate in their rates and charges between such connecting lines, but this shall not be construed as requiring any such common carrier to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business.[25] The duty of furnishing equal facilities relates to and involves purely the question of transportation, and when the court is called upon to determine as to whether in any particular instance there has been an undue and unreasonable discrimination or preference as contemplated by the statute, the sole question is as to whether the entire equipment operated over the lines of the carrier has been fairly and equally distributed among all the shippers along its lines who are similarly situated.[26]

§ 3996. Switches.—Any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act, upon application of any lateral, branch line of railroad, or of any shipper tendering interstate traffic for transportation, shall construct, maintain, and operate upon reasonable terms a switch connection with any such lateral, branch line of railroad, or private side track which may be constructed to connect with its railroad, where such connection is reasonably practicable and can be put in with safety and will furnish sufficient business to justify the construction and maintenance of the same; and shall furnish cars for the movement of such traffic to the best of its ability without discrimination in favor of or against any such shipper. If any common carrier shall fail to install and operate any such switch or connection as aforesaid, on application therefor in writing by any shipper, such shipper may make complaint to the commission, as provided in § 13 of the act, and the commission shall hear and investigate the same and shall determine as to the safety and practicability thereof and justification and reasonable compensation

21. Duties imposed upon carrier.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

22. Receipts for goods accepted for transportation. — "Such checks are receipts, and there is no special requirement in the statute as to their form. It is doubtless in the power of the interstate commerce commission to make requirements as to the checks or receipts to be given for baggage if that subject needs regulation. Act of June 18, 1910, §§ 1 and 15, c. 309, 36 Stat. 539." Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

23. To establish through routes.—See post, "Joint Through Routes," § 4053.

24. Continuous carriage.—See post, "Connecting Carriers," §§ 4050-4057.

25. Facilities.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 41 L. Ed. 1110, 17 S. Ct. 658; Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

"The statute casts upon the carrier the plain duty of furnishing a fair and equal distribution of facilities to the shipper." Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

26. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

therefor and the commission may make an order, as provided in § 15 of the act, directing the common carrier to comply with the provisions of this section in accordance with such order, and such order shall be enforced as hereinafter provided for the enforcement of all other orders by the commission, other than orders for the payment of money.[27] Under this section, it is held that the remedy given by the act on complaint by the shipper to the commission, when an interstate carrier refuses to establish a switch connection with a lateral, branch line, is exclusive, and that the general powers given by other sections of the statute can not be deemed to authorize a complaint to the commission by the lateral branch railway company.[28]

§ 3997. As to Connecting Carriers.—See elsewhere.[29]

§ 3998. Just and Reasonable Rates.—See elsewhere.[30]

§ 3999. Printing and Publishing Schedules of Rates.—See elsewhere.[31]

§ 4000. Reports to Commission.—See elsewhere.[32]

§§ 4001-4014. Unloading, Feeding and Watering Stock—§ 4001. Statutory Provision.—The Act of June 29, 1906, commonly known as the "twenty-eight hour law," prohibits interstate carriers of live stock from confining the same in cars or vessels for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading them for feed, water, and rest, and imposes a penalty for its violation.[33] The statute is criminal and the rule of strict construction is appli-

27. Switches.—Act of June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 1, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149).

28. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 216 U. S. 531, 54 L. Ed. 605, 30 S. Ct. 415, affirming 166 Fed. 498.

29. As to connecting carriers.—See post, "Facilities," §§ 4051-4052.

30. Just and reasonable rates.—See post, "Just and Reasonable," § 4059.

31. Printing and publishing schedules of rates.—See post, "Printing and Publishing Schedules," §§ 4125-4145.

32. Reports to commission.—See post, "Particular Powers," § 4154.

33. Unloading, feeding and watering stock.—Rev. St. U. S., § 4386, providing that no interstate railroad shall confine cattle in cars for a longer period than twenty-eight hours without unloading the same for rest, water, and feeding, unless prevented from so doing by storm or other accidental cause, was not intended to fix a period during which the company could, without incurring liability, hold cattle without unloading for such purposes. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Ivy, 79 Tex. 444, 15 S. W. 692.

A statute requiring a carrier to feed and water, "sufficiently," live stock in transit, is not too indefinite to carry a penalty. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.), 24 S. W. 837.

Shipment of sheep.—Under the twenty-eight-hour law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, § 1, 34 Stat. 607 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178]), prohibiting the confinement of live stock in interstate shipment for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, subject to the extension of such time to thirty-six hours on written request of the shipper, "provided that it shall not be required that sheep be unloaded in the nighttime, but where the time expires in the nighttime in case of sheep the same may continue in transit to a suitable place for unloading, subject to the aforesaid limitation of thirty-six hours," the proviso does not authorize the confinement of sheep for more than thirty-six consecutive hours in any case, but applies only where there has been no extension at request of the shipper and the twenty-eight hour period expires in the nighttime. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 185 Fed. 105.

Shipment of horses and mules.—Rev. St. U. S., § 4386, requiring railroads over which "cattle, sheep, swine, or other animals" are shipped to unload them for rest, water, and feeding once every twenty-eight hours, applies to a shipment of horses and mules. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, 92 Va. 495, 23 S. E. 935, 44 L. R. A. 449.

"Contingencies hereinbefore stated."—Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 918), forbids railroads from confining cattle longer than twenty-eight hours without unloading, unless prevented by storm or other accidental or other unavoidable unanticipated causes, provided that on the written request of the owner the time may be extended to thirty-six hours; it being the intent of the act to prohibit continuous confinement for more than twenty-eight hours except "upon the contingencies hereinbefore stated." Held, that "the contingencies hereinbefore

cable thereto.[34]

Compliance with Statute.—A railroad company which delivers the cars containing such stock to a connecting carrier or to the consignee within the prescribed time is relieved from further responsibility.[35]

The time consumed in loading and unloading stock is not to be considered as a part of their confinement in the cars permitted by the law.[36]

Carrier Not Insurer.—The carrier is not made an absolute insurer of the safety of sheep in transit, but its duty is fully performed by providing pens properly equipped, unless it has notice, or by reasonable diligence could have discovered, that the surrounding conditions were such that injury to the sheep, while in the pens, from dogs or wild animals, might be expected, in which case it would be bound to make reasonable provision for their safety.[37]

§ 4002. Carriers Liable for Penalty.—Receiver.—Railroad receivers are not liable to an action for penalties for failure to comply with the regulations as to transportation of live stock by "any company, owner, or custodian of such animals," since receivers are plainly not within the letter of the statute, and not necessarily within its purpose or spirit; and therefore, as the statute is penal, it can not be construed to extend to them.[38]

Carrier of Intrastate Shipment.—The statute does not apply to a railroad carrying live stock from a point within a state to another point therein, but only to such as convey stock from one state to another.[39]

Connecting Carriers.—The duty of a connecting carrier of live stock is not discharged until it has been imposed upon the carrier next in order.[40]

Terminal Company.—A terminal railroad company, though controlled by associated railroads for which it operated terminal yards, was nevertheless a distinct corporation and separate entity from any of such associated railroads. The terminal company operated under a contract providing that its employees should be regarded as the servants of the associated railroad companies during the time they were working for them. One of such companies, after having retained certain cattle transported in interstate commerce in the cars for a time longer than that authorized by the twenty-eight hour law turned over the cattle to the terminal stated" included both the case where the carrier was prevented from unloading by storm or other accidental or unavoidable causes and the contingency of the owner having filed a written request extending the time of confinement to thirty-six hours. United States v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 171 Fed. 586.

34. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 156 Fed. 249; United States v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 979.

But it has been held that the statute is not a criminal statute, nor subject to the strict rules of construction or of evidence applied in criminal prosecutions. Montana Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 164 Fed. 400.

The twenty-eight hour law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, § 3, 34 Stat. 608 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 919]) declares that any railroad or common carrier other than by water, which "knowingly and willfully" fails to comply with the provisions of the act, for every such failure shall be liable for and forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than $100 or more than $500. Held, that the statute is not criminal in the sense that a violation thereof constitutes a crime, and hence the words "knowingly and willfully" should not be construed to require the confinement of transported animals beyond the prescribed period with a malevolent purpose on the part of the carrier to cruelly torture them, but only to require that the animals be knowingly and intentionally confined beyond the prescribed period. United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 162 Fed. 556, judgment affirmed in 167 Fed. 126.

35. Compliance with statute.—United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 157 Fed. 459.

36. United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 186 Fed. 947.

37. Carrier not insurer.—Beckman v. Southern Pac. Co., 118 Pac. 118, 39 Utah 472.

38. Carriers liable for penalty.—United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. Ed. 780, 20 S. Ct. 609, affirming 78 Fed. 290, and 29 C. C. A. 327, 85 Fed. 533.

39. Carrier of intrastate shipment.—United States v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 13 Fed. 642.

40. Connecting carriers.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 213 Fed. 332.

company, which continued the transportation to the stockyards where the cattle were unloaded. The fact that the original company was convicted and fined because of such transportation did not relieve the terminal company from its violation of the act on the theory that it was acting merely as an agent of the initial carrier.[41]

Where Stock Had Been Previously Confined.—Where the defendant, a terminal railroad company, received cattle from a connecting carrier for the sole purpose of transporting them to certain stockyards to feed, water, and rest them, and then to return them to the carrier from which they have been received, not knowing that such carrier had already confined them in the cars exceeding the time allowed by Act of June 29, 1906, providing that cattle shall not be confined for a longer period than thirty-six hours, the terminal carrier, having used due diligence in carrying the cattle to the stockyards and unloading them, was not guilty of itself "knowingly and willfully" violating such act; such words being intended to mean either an intentional violation of the statute or an indifferent disregard of its requirements.[42] Where a terminal company's railroad formed a part of a continuous line of interstate transportation over which live stock was transported, and the animals had been confined in the cars without being unloaded for food, water, and rest for a period longer than that prescribed by the act before being delivered to the terminal company for transportation to the stockyard for unloading, the terminal company could not relieve itself from liability for continuing such transportation on the ground that it found the cattle so confined at a place where they could not be unloaded except by being taken to the stockyards, nor except in exceptional cases, because its violation of the law would subserve a humane purpose; the terminal company being under no obligation to accept the cattle from its connecting carrier under such circumstances.[43] But a stock yards company without actual knowledge that cattle had been confined nearly twenty-eight hours, and without making any effort to find out whether they had been or not, which receives from a common carrier, and hauls a few miles to its stockyards, and there unloads, cattle for rest, food, and water, when the stockyards are nearer to the place of the receipt of the cattle than any other place where they could be unloaded, fed, and watered, is not guilty of knowingly and willfully confining the cattle, in violation of the act.[44] A terminal railroad 41. Terminal company.—United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 186 Fed. 947; New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 953, following United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 184 Fed. 971, affirmed in 187 Fed. 1006, 109 C. C. A. 211.

Where defendant stockyards company, as authorized by its articles of incorporation, constructed and maintained railroad tracks on acquired real estate and owned or leased and operated engines and cars for hire, by which it transported live stock brought to the Sioux City market by other interstate railroad companies between their terminals and the stockyards, and also hauled such of the products or freight of the packing houses from one to the other, as required, and cars loaded with fuel or ice to such houses from the different railroads entering the city, it was a railroad company or common carrier other than by water within the twenty-eight hour law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 918]), prohibiting any railroad or common carrier other than by water, whose road forms a part of a line of road over which animals shall be conveyed from one state to another, from confining the same for a longer period than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading, etc. United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 162 Fed. 556, judgment affirmed in 167 Fed. 126.

42. Where stock had been previously confined.—Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, § 1, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178); United States v. Stock Yards Terminal R. Co., 101 C. C. A. 147, 178 Fed. 19, affirming judgment, 172 Fed. 452.

Where a terminal carrier received horses with knowledge that its connecting carrier had already confined them for a period longer than that permitted by twenty-eight hour law, §§ 1, 3, it was the duty of such terminal carrier to transport them to destination as quickly as possible. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 953.

43. United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 186 Fed. 947.

44. St. Joseph Stock Yards Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 432, 187 Fed. 104, reversing judgment, 181 Fed. 625.

company, received a carload of horses from a connecting railroad company, which had transported them in interstate commerce. Such carrier had kept them confined in the car for more than twenty-eight hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, and was indicted and fined therefor. The terminal company received them for transportation over its line for some one thousand feet to stockyards, and moved them to such yards with all speed possible, and there unloaded them for rest, water, and feed. The terminal company was not chargeable with violation of the statute, but, on the contrary, its action aided in giving effect to its object and purpose.[45]

§ 4003. Knowingly and Willfully.—The words "knowingly and willfully" described an essential element of the offense on account of which penalties are prescribed, without proof of which they can not be recovered;[46] "knowingly" meaning with knowledge of the facts which, taken together, constitute a failure to comply with the statute, and "willfully" meaning purposely or obstinately, describing the attitude of a carrier, who, having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute, or is indifferent to its requirements.[47] The words

45. Northern Pac. Terminal Co. v. United States, 106 C. C. A. 583, 184 Fed. 603.

46. Knowingly and willfully.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 437, 169 Fed. 69.

Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 918), prohibits the confinement of live stock in transit for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours, and § 3 provides that any common carrier who "knowingly and willfully" fails to comply with the law shall be subject to a penalty. Held, that a complaint under such act, failing to charge that defendant carrier "knowingly and willfully" restrained stock in its possession, which had been confined for a period longer than twenty-eight hours, was fatally defective. United States v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 160 Fed. 526.

The words "knowingly and willfully," as used in the twenty-eight hour law, mean with a knowledge of the facts which, taken together, constitute failure to comply with the statute, and "purposely" or "obstinately" describe the attitude of the carrier, who, having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute or is plainly indifferent to its requirements. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co. v. United States, 205 Fed. 337, 123 C. C. A. 471.

"Willfully," as used in twenty-eight hour law, § 1, providing for a penalty or forfeiture by a carrier who knowingly and willfully fails to comply with the provisions of the act, means purposely or obstinately and describes the attitude of a carrier who, having free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute or is plainly indifferent to it. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 600.

But it has been held that it is not essential to a recovery for violation of the twenty-eight hour law to show that defendant knew that the animals did not have proper food, water, or space to rest in the cars. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 195 Fed. 241.

Allegation of negligence only.—In an action by the government against an interstate carrier for violation of the twenty-eight hour law, mere proof warranting a conclusion that the carrier's employees negligently, as distinguished from "willfully" and "intentionally," omitted to feed and water certain sheep, in transportation, during the rest period, was insufficient to subject the carrier to a penalty. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 204 Fed. 705, 123 C. C. A. 9.

47. United States v. St. Joseph Stock Yards Co., 181 Fed. 625.

The word "knowingly," means with a knowledge of the facts which taken together constitute a failure to comply with the statute, as is the case where a carrier receives from another a car loaded with cattle, and, with knowledge how long they have been confined without rest, water, or food, prolongs the confinement until the statutory limit is exceeded. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 437, 169 Fed. 69.

The word "willfully" is not used as implying a vicious or evil intent, but as meaning intentionally or voluntarily. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 166 Fed. 160; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 94 C. C. A. 433, 169 Fed. 65.

"Willfully," means purposely or obstinately, and describes the attitude of a carrier who having the free choice either intentionally disregards the statute, or is indifferent to its requirements. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 169 Fed. 69, 94 C. C. A. 437.

"Willfully" means "purposely or obstinately, and is designed to describe the attitude of a carrier who, having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute or is plainly indifferent to its requirements." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 194 Fed. 342.

"knowingly and willfully" require only that defendant should have failed to obey the statute purposely and with knowledge of the facts.[48]

Knowledge of Servants.—A railroad company is subject to the penalty imposed by the Act for knowingly and willfully failing to comply with its provisions as to the unloading of live stock for rest, water, and feeding, where its servants or employees in charge of its train knowingly keep such stock confined in cars for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours without any lawful excuse, as prescribed by the act.[49]

§ 4004. Separate Offenses.—Under the penal clause of such law, each shipment of stock confined beyond the period prescribed in violation of its provisions constitutes a separate offense.[50] Where several shipments of live stock, belonging to different owners, are contained in the same train, and the carrier fails to unload, as provided in such act, a penalty is recoverable for each shipment, the shipment, and not the train load, being the integer contemplated as the objective thing to which the offense relates.[51] Where a railroad train carried a number of different consignments of live stock, and the company failed to unload any of them for rest, water, and feeding, as required, it became subject to a penalty thereunder for each consignment.[52] The act provides that no railroad or common carrier other than by water, whose road forms any part of a line over which cattle shall be conveyed from one state or territory into or through another state or territory, shall confine the same longer than twenty-eight consecutive hours, except that on the written request of the owner the time of confinement may be extended to thirty-six hours, and that any carrier knowingly and willfully violating such provisions for every such failure shall be liable to a penalty. But a single penalty is incurred for confining live stock beyond the period of twenty-eight or thirty-six hours, so that the time of confinement beyond that period is not material, unless it be for another period of twenty-eight or thirty-six hours.[53] Where cars of cattle are loaded at nearly the same time, although at different points, are forwarded to the same destination, the consignor and consignee are the same, and they are consolidated into one train and so received by a connecting carrier, the failure of such carrier to unload the same for rest, water, and feeding as required by the act constitutes but one violation of the statute.[54]

The confinement of each animal does not constitute a separate offense, multiplying the penalty by the whole number of animals carried, but the confinement of an entire number of animals is a single offense.[55]

§ 4005. Negligence of Servant.—It is no defense to an action for "knowingly and willfully" violating the act that the defendant made rules requiring its

48. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 165 Fed. 833, 91 C. C. A. 519.

49. Knowledge of servants.—United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 157 Fed. 459.

50. Separate offenses.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 166 Fed. 160.

51. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 159 Fed. 33, 86 C. C. A. 223; United States v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 163 Fed. 642. But see United States v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 107 Fed. 870.

The individual shipment, and not the car load, is the unit in case of violation of the act. Judgment, United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 162 Fed. 412, affirmed in 171 Fed. 360, 96 C. C. A. 252.

Where several shipments of live stock belonging to different owners are carried in the same train in violation of the act, each shipment, and not the train load, is the integer for the purpose of ascertaining the number of offenses committed. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 699, 94 C. C. A. 76.

Each independent shipment or consignment of stock constitutes the basis for a separate charge, and each separate confinement of the same stock for longer than the prescribed time, although during the same continuous transportation, also constitutes a separate offense. United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 157 Fed. 459.

52. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 165 Fed. 833, 91 C. C. A. 519.

53. United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 162 Fed. 556, judgment affirmed, 167 Fed. 126.

54. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 938.

55. United States v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 15 Fed. 209.

employees to comply with such statute, and that its failure to do so was through the negligence of an employee, and in violation of its rules.[56] A carrier of live stock may employ a subordinate agency to perform a service undertaken by it, but the agency must be subordinate to the carrier, and not to one who neither employs it, pays it, nor has any right to interfere with it.[57]

§ 4006. Preparation and Facilities.—Under the act providing that no railroad company shall confine live stock in cars for a longer period than twenty-eight hours without unloading for rest, water, and feed, it is the duty of a railroad to be reasonably well prepared to care for stock at the places where it is unloaded for rest, water, and feed.[58]

§ 4007. Shipment Through Foreign Country.—The act prohibiting interstate carriers of live stock from confining the same in cars for a period longer than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, is applicable to a shipment originating in one state and ending in another, when confinement for more than the statutory period is shown, even though part of such period elapsed while the animals were in a foreign country.[59]

§ 4008. Shipment under Agreement.—A legal request for an extension of time of confinement of cattle, may be made before the transportation commences, although it is not induced by any unforeseen contingency.[60] But an agreement

56. Negligence of servant. — United States v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 98 C. C. A. 110, 173 Fed. 764.

In an action against a railroad company, to recover the penalty for knowingly and willfully violating such act, it is not a defense that such violation was by reason of the "oversight, forgetfulness, and unintentional neglect" of its train dispatchers, contrary to its rules and orders. Montana Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 164 Fed. 400.

57. United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 213 Fed. 332.

58. Preparation and facilities.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Curry, 106 S. W. 294, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 513; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piburn, 120 Pac. 923, 30 Okla. 262.

The twenty-eight hour law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178]) does not require a carrier to maintain any particular kind of equipment of its stock pens, permanent or otherwise, except in so far as to render them suitable for the humane purpose of properly feeding, watering, and resting the particular shipment of stock unloaded into them. United States v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 177 Fed. 205, 101 C. C. A. 375.

59. Shipment through foreign country.—Grand Trunk R. Co. v. United States, 191 Fed. 803.

Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178), prohibiting interstate carriers from confining animals transported in interstate commerce for more than twenty-eight or thirty-six hours without unloading them for feed, water, and rest, applies to shipments passing from one state through a foreign country (Canada) to another state. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 184 Fed. 971, judgment affirmed in 187 Fed. 1006, 109 C. C. A. 211.

60. Shipment under agreement.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12.

A request for extension of time for confinement of cattle, under Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178), may be made, though not induced by any contingency arising after transportation commences. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 15, 101 C. C. A. 143; Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 5, 101 C. C. A. 133, 21 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 819.

The twenty-eight hour law (Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, c. 918]) provides for the unloading of cattle, etc., for food, water, and rest at the expiration of twenty-eight consecutive hours' transportation, except that the time may be extended to thirty-six hours by the written request of the shipper, except that it shall not be required that sheep be unloaded in the nighttime; but where the time expires in the night, in the case of sheep, the same may be continued in transit to a suitable place for unloading, subject to the thirty-six hour limitation. Held, that such provision was not fatally defective for uncertainty; the meaning being that in case of sheep, if the twenty-eight hour limit expires at night, the transit may be continued to a suitable place for unloading, without the consent of the owner or custodian, except that in no case shall the thirty-six hour limit be exceeded. Judgment, United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 162 Fed. 412, affirmed in 171 Fed. 360, 96 C. C. A. 252.

between an interstate carrier and the owner of certain animals transported in interstate commerce for the confinement of the animals for a period longer than thirty-six hours is void.[61]

Form of Agreement.—An application for extension of time of confinement of cattle, may be printed, engraved, or stamped, or partly printed or stamped and partly in handwriting.[62]

Agreement Written on Waybill.—While a request for the continued confinement of cattle must be separate from any printed bill of lading or other railroad form, it is necessary that it be written on a virgin sheet, and is effective if written at the bottom of a waybill and signed by the shipper.[63]

Separate Agreement for Each Shipment.—The shipper of cattle, to justify their confinement longer than twenty-eight hours, must file a written request for each shipment, and may not file a single general request applicable to all future shipments of his cattle.[64]

By Whom Agreement Made.—A legal request for extension of time of confinement of shipment of cattle may be made by the authorized agent of the owner, or by the person in custody of the particular shipment.[65] There is a legal presumption that one to whom an owner of animals has intrusted their possession for delivery to a railroad for shipment is authorized to make the request and a railroad relying on this presumption can not be held to have knowingly violated the law by confining animals more than twenty-eight hours and less than thirty-six without knowledge of any defect in the authority of the agent.[66]

Agreement for Feeding by Shipper.—The railroad is not liable when it appears that there was a special contract that the shipper should feed and water the live stock, and there is no specific evidence as to amount of the damage from the failure to feed and water.[67]

§ 4009. Where Stock Confined by Another Carrier.—It is immaterial that a part of the period of confinement elapses while the stock is in possession of a connecting carrier; the carrier having possession of the stock being required to unload, feed, and water them as soon as the time limit is reached.[68] Where con-

61. Webster v. Union Pac. R. Co., 200 Fed. 597.

62. Form of agreement.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 12, 101 C. C. A. 140; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 15, 101 C. C. A. 143; Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 5, 101 C. C. A. 133, 21 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 819.

A legal request for extension of time of confinement of shipment of cattle, under Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178), may be made on a railroad form separate from a bill of lading. Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 5, 101 C. C. A. 133, 21 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 819.

63. Agreement written on waybill.—Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 605.

64. Separate agreement for each shipment.—United States v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 171 Fed. 586.

65. By whom agreement made.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 12, 101 C. C. A. 140; Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 5, 101 C. C. A. 133, 21 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 819.

66. Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 178 Fed. 5, 101 C. C. A. 133, 21 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 819.

67. Agreement for feeding by shipper.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 913.

The carrier is not liable, when it appears that it was agreed that plaintiff should water and feed the cattle, and the carrier was to stop for the purpose at a particular place, and there is no evidence that the carrier was requested to stop before reaching the place named. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 913.

68. Where stock confined by another carrier.—United States v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 160 Fed. 526.

A railroad company, which receives live stock from a connecting carrier after it has already been continuously confined in cars for more than twenty-eight hours and allows several more hours to pass before unloading the same, is prima facie guilty of a violation of the statute. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 156 Fed. 249.

Under the twenty-eight hour law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1178]), prohibiting interstate carriers in transportation of animals from retaining them in the cars for a longer period than twenty-eight or thirty-six hours without unloadnecting carriers are engaged in a continuous transportation of cattle in interstate commerce, the fact that the initial carrier had kept the cattle confined without unloading for a period longer than that authorized by the act when they were delivered to defendant, the connecting carrier, did not authorize the latter to confine the cattle for another period equal to the statutory time before it would be liable for violating the act, since, while there is no violation of the act so long as the carrier does not exceed the time fixed, yet, whenever the continuous carriage without unloading does exceed it, then every carrier forming any part of an interstate line over which the stock is being shipped that participates in such carriage beyond the limit is guilty of an independent offense.[69]

Fact Not Known to Defendant.—The defendant's railroad constituted a part of a line of railroad over which live stock was transported under an interstate shipment to the defendant's stockyards. At the time the cattle were delivered to the defendant by the connecting carrier, they had all been kept in the cars without being unloaded for rest, water, and feed for more than thirty-six hours, which fact was disclosed by the waybills, which were not delivered to the defendant until after the cattle were in the defendant's custody. The next and only place where the cattle could have been unloaded and watered was at defendant's yards at destination, where defendant delivered the cattle with all reasonable dispatch with the facilities it had for handling them. The defendant had not knowingly and willfully failed to comply with the provisions of the act, and was therefore not liable for a penalty for its violation.[70]

Presumption.—Where defendant received horses from a connecting carrier, which had confined them for a period longer than permitted by the act and transported them to destination without unloading, it would be presumed that it did so with knowledge of the connecting carrier's default, or in the absence of evidence that it made reasonable inquiry and could not ascertain the fact.[71]

Liability of Terminal Company.—A terminal railroad company is not liable for accepting from a connecting carrier cars of cattle which had already been confined for a longer time than permitted by the statute, and moving them with all reasonable dispatch to the nearest stockyards and there unloading them for rest, feed, and water.[72]

Where defendant carrier maintained only switching service and transported animals that had already been confined by trunk line carriers longer than the statutory period, to unloading chutes without unreasonable delay, it was not guilty of knowingly and willfully confining the animals in violation of the twenty-eight-hour law.[73]

§ 4010. Where Penalty Exacted from Another Carrier.—Initial Carrier.—It is no defense to a charge that a railroad company in transporting animals has confined them knowingly and willfully more than twenty-eight hours without unloading them, that another carrier, participating in the transportation of the shipment, was also guilty of a violation of the statute and has paid the ing them for food, water, and rest, where animals have been confined for the entire statutory period before being delivered to a connecting carrier, it is not necessary that a new period equal to the statutory time must again expire before the connecting carrier can be held guilty of violating the act; the liability being complete on the connecting carrier continuing the transportation toward the destination except to transport them to the yards at the junction point to unload them, under the provision that, in estimating the confinement, the time consumed in loading and unloading shall not be considered, but the time during which they have been confined on connecting roads is to be included. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 184 Fed. 971.

69. United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 186 Fed. 947.

70. Fact not known to defendant.—United States v. Sioux City Stockyards Co., 162 Fed. 556, judgment affirmed in 167 Fed. 126.

71. Presumption.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 953.

72. Liability of terminal company.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 600.

73. United States v. Chicago Junction R. Co., 211 Fed. 724.

penalty therefor.[74] But it has been held where the initial carrier of live stock has been subjected to the penalty for confining live stock longer than thereby permitted without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, in a second action against a connecting carrier to recover for the same confinement, the first twenty-eight hours of the confinement, which was necessarily included in the period covered by the judgment in the first action, can not be counted against the defendant.[75]

Subsequent Carrier.—A carrier that delivers a shipment of cattle to a connecting carrier in time according to the usual course of transportation for their carriage to and unloading within the time limit at pens suitably equipped, either at their destination or on the way, without notice that they must be delayed in their arrival, beyond such time, does not violate the act.[76]

§ 4011. Excuses for Failure to Unload, etc.—The act prohibits confinement of live stock in transit for more than twenty-eight hours, unless unloading is prevented by storm or other accidental or unavoidable causes, which can not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight. The act also imposes penalties recoverable by a civil action in the name of the United States. Though the exception is contained in the enacting clause of such act created a general offense, and not one limited to particular conditions; and hence a complaint to recover penalties imposed was not defective for failure to negative the exception.[77]

An "accidental or unavoidable cause which can not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight," and which will legally excuse an interstate carrier of live stock for confining such stock in cars for a period longer than twenty eight consecutive hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, is one which can not be avoided by that degree of prudence, foresight, care, and caution which the law requires of every one under the circumstances of the particular case, and as would have been exercised by a man of ordinary prudence under such circumstances. An accident occurring to a train through the negligence of the transportation company is not such a cause; nor is mere press of business, or the sidetracking of the train to allow for the passing of other trains, the meeting or passing of which could have been anticipated when the transportation was begun, or the lack of facilities for unloading or feeding.[78] A train load of cars of sheep started at 5 o'clock in the morning to make a run which ordinarily requires eleven hours. This train and its drawbars were inspected and found in good condition on the morning it started. In order to unload the sheep in time, it was necessary that this train should make the run in twelve hours. It was delayed about two hours by the breaking of a drawbar and chain of a train which met and passed it, by the slipping of a knuckle in the coupler which separated it into two parts and by the pulling out of two drawbars in its cars which made it necessary to draw the two parts of the train upon a side track and recouple them. Upon its arrival the company dragged the sheep out of two of the cars in the dark within the thirty-six hours, but left the others unloaded until the next morning after the expiration of the thirty-six 74. Where penalty exacted from another carrier.—United States v. Wabash R. Co., 182 Fed. 802; United States v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 181 Fed. 879; New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 953.

75. United States v. Stockyards Terminal Co., 172 Fed. 452.

76. Subsequent carrier.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 143, 178 Fed. 15.

77. Excuses for failure to unload, etc.—United States v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 160 Fed. 526.

78. United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 157 Fed. 459. See, also, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 194 Fed. 342.

An accident to a railroad train through negligence does not excuse noncompliance with Rev. St., §§ 4386-4388, forbidding interstate carriers of animals to confine them more than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, unless prevented "by storm or other accidental causes." Newport News, etc., Co. v. United States, 61 Fed. 488, 9 C. C. A. 579.

hours. These facts afford no substantial evidence that the company willfully violated the law, but they do afford substantial evidence that it was prevented from unloading the sheep within the time by accidental or unavoidable causes which could not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight.[79]

The measure of "due diligence and foresight" is that diligence and foresight which persons of ordinary prudence and care commonly exercise under similar circumstances. And the due diligence and foresight which condition the anticipation and avoidance of the other incidental or unavoidable causes specified in the act is that degree of diligence and foresight which reasonably prudent and careful men ordinarily exercise under like circumstances.[80]

Rush of Business.—A great unusual press of business does not, unexplained and of itself, excuse the confinement of live stock by a railroad company beyond time limited by the act, nor constitute a defense to an action to recover the penalty for its violation.[81]

Act of Person Accompanying Stock.—Where stock is transported in charge of a caretaker, the fact that, on the car being spotted at the carrier's stockyards for unloading for rest, the caretaker agreed to notify the consignee to unload the stock, did not relieve the carrier from using due diligence and foresight to see that the stock was unloaded within the time prescribed.[82]

Stock Refused by Another Carrier.—Where the defendant, an initial carrier of certain stock, tendered the same to its connecting carrier when nine hours of the statutory confinement period remained, and the connecting carrier refused to receive the stock, because it would probably be rejected by its next connecting carrier, the defendant's subsequent transportation to its own stockyards for unloading after the time expired did not constitute a willful and knowing confinement of the stock.[83]

Burden of Proof.—The burden is not on the government to show that the carrier was not prevented by storm or other accidental or unavoidable cause, which it could not have anticipated by the exercise of diligence and foresight, within the exception from liability created by such act, complaint contains the necessary allegation that the carrier acted "willfully" such allegation in itself is sufficient to negative the exception.[84]

§ 4012. Cars Provided for Food, Water and Rest.—To bring a case within the proviso which exempts a carrier of live stock from compliance with the requirements of unloading the same at least once in twenty-eight hours for rest, water, and feeding when the animals are carried in cars in which they can and do have proper food, water, space and opportunity to rest, the cars must not only be properly equipped for such purposes, but it is incumbent on the carrier to see that the animals do have proper and sufficient quantity of food and water supplied where they can reach it, and they are not so overcrowded but that they have sufficient space for all to lie down at the same time.[85] Unless cars provided

79. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 194 Fed. 342.

80. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 194 Fed. 342.

81. Rush of business.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 94 C. C. A. 433, 169 Fed. 65.

Failure of a railroad company to provide unloading stations, congested traffic conditions reasonably to be anticipated from past experience, and breakdowns en route resulting from negligent operation or omission to furnish properly equipped and inspected engines and cars are not such accidental or unavoidable causes as will relieve the carrier from liability for a violation of such act. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 166 Fed. 160.

82. Act of person accompanying stock.—Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co. v. United States, 123 C. C. A. 471, 205 Fed. 337.

83. Stock refused by another carrier.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 770.

84. Burden of proof.—United States v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 160 Fed. 526.

85. Cars provided for food, water and rest.—(Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 608 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1179]); for the carriage of cattle afford sufficient space for all to lie down at the same time, they are not sufficient to exempt the carrier from unloading for rest, water, and feeding.[86]

Where Stock Not Watered.—Where cattle were transported in patent cattle cars, equipped with troughs affording an opportunity to water them without unloading, but the cattle were kept in the cars for a period longer than that authorized by statute, without water being introduced in the troughs for at lease a part of the cattle, the carrier is liable for the penalty provided by the act.[87]

Where Stock May Lie Down at Different Times.—Where cars provided for the transportation of cattle were sufficiently large to enable all the cattle to lie down at different times, but not sufficient to permit all of them to lie down at the same time, they were not sufficient to exempt the carrier from the duty to unload for rest.[88]

Where Stock in Charge of Owner.—A carrier, in order to bring itself within the exception, must not only show that the animals can have the supplies specified, but that they are in fact afforded proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest, so that where animals were in charge of the shipper, and were retained in the cars for a longer period than twenty-eight hours without proper food, water, and an opportunity to rest, it was no answer to the carrier's liability that the shipper could have provided proper attention, and, on being inquired of en route as to how he was faring, stated that he was "all right," and that he could feed and water his stock.[89]

Stockyards on Fire.—The failure of a railroad company to comply with the statute and with its contract of shipment, wherein it agreed to furnish the owner with reasonable facilities for taking care of the horses, is not excused by the fact that its stockyards at one of its intermediate stations were on fire when the train arrived there, so as to relieve it from liability for injury to the horses caused by such failure.[90]

Condition of Stock When Accepted.—Under the statute allowing the recovery of a penalty from a carrier for a failure to properly care for stock in shipment, a carrier has the right to act on the presumption that stock is in proper condition when tendered for shipment, and is not required to water or feed oftener than would be done by an ordinarily prudent man with his own stock.[91]

United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 938.

If the stock is transported in cars which are not properly constructed for feeding and watering the stock, then it becomes the duty of the carrier to furnish places where the stock may be unloaded, watered, and fed, without injury, in any kind of weather. International, etc., R. Co. v. McRae, 82 Tex. 614, 18 S. W. 672, 27 Am. St. Rep. 926.

That the two cars, in which 43 horses were shipped, were two feet longer than ordinary cars, with racks and troughs in which to feed and water, is insufficient to show that the cars were such that the cattle could have "proper food, water, space, and opportunity for rest" (Rev. St. U. S., § 4388), so as to relieve the carrier from the duty of unloading them at stated intervals for rest, water, and feeding. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, 92 Va. 495, 23 S. E. 935, 44 L. R. A. 449.

86. United States v. Erie R. Co., 191 Fed. 941.

87. Where stock not watered.—United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 186 Fed. 541.

88. Where stock may lie down at different times.—"It seems to us that it is the object of the statute to secure to every animal in the shipment proper space and opportunity to rest. Not only is cruelty to a single one 'cruelty to animals,' but the landing of a single one in a condition bad for slaughtering exposes the persons who may eat the meat from that one carcass to a risk which might not exist if this statute were strictly conformed to. Every animal in this shipment might have proper opportunity to rest if they all agreed to take turns in occupying space." Erie R. Co. v. United States, 200 Fed. 406.

89. Where stock in charge of owner.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 184 Fed. 984.

90. Stockyards on fire.—Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Heggie, 86 Ga. 210, 12 S. E. 363, 22 Am. St. Rep. 453.

91. Condition of stock when accepted.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Stribling (Tex. Civ. App.), 34 S. W. 1002.

§ 4013. Damages.—A railroad company, engaged in the transportation of horses from one state to another, which keeps them confined in a car for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours, without unloading them for rest, water, or food, is guilty of negligence per se, and is liable, not only for the penalty provided in said section but also for any damage or injury that may be thereby sustained by the owner of the stock.[92]

§ 4014. Proceedings.—Nature of Proceeding.—Although the action to enforce the penalty is civil in form,[93] the statute is a criminal one.[94]

Pleading.—Technical objections to the declaration are without merit after verdict.[95] The plaintiff need not allege or prove the nonexistence of "accidental or unavoidable causes," which are matters of defense. A description of the defendant as "lessee" of the road, and otherwise following the language of the statute, is sufficient after verdict, although it does not expressly allege that defendant was at the time operating the road.[96] A carrier's confinement of a train load of cattle for a longer period than permitted by the act without unloading is a single offense, within the meaning of the act; and hence, in an action therefor, separate counts in the complaint of declaration for each car, intended to multiply the penalty by the number of cars, are not permissible.[97]

Province of Court and Jury.—In an action for the violation of the act, it is the province of the court to fix the amount of recovery, and that of the jury to determine the question of violation.[98] The question of the legality of written requests for an extension of time of confinement of cattle, is a question of law for the court.[99]

Instructions.—Where, notwithstanding the jury found in defendant's favor on the recitals and conditions in a requested charge, they could also conclude under the evidence that defendant "knowingly" and "willfully" failed to comply with the food and rest law, an instruction charging that if such conditions were found the jury should find for defendant was properly refused.[1]

Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—A proceeding under the statute to enforce the penalty, although the action is civil in form, the defendant is presumed innocent until every essential element of the offense is proved beyond a reasonable doubt.[2] In an action under such statute against a railroad company to recover the penalty imposed thereby for "knowingly and willfully" failing to 92. Damages.—Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Heggie, 86 Ga. 210, 12 S. E. 363, 22 Am. St. Rep. 453; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721, 107 N. W. 1045, 124 Am. St. Rep. 825.

The failure of a railway company, on an interstate shipment of stock, to unload it for rest, water, and feed, after being confined in cars for twenty-eight consecutive hours, as required by Rev. St. U. S., § 4386, constitutes actionable negligence at the suit of the owner injured thereby; nor does the fact that a penalty is imposed for breach of such duty prevent an action for negligence, such penalty not being given to the injured party in satisfaction of the injury. Burns v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 80 N. W. 927, 104 Wis. 646.

93. Proceedings.—United States v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 979; New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 165 Fed. 833, 91 C. C. A. 519.

94. United States v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 979.

95. Pleading.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 165 Fed. 833, 91 C. C. A. 519.

96. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 165 Fed. 833, 91 C. C. A. 519.

97. United States v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 107 Fed. 870.

98. Province of court and jury.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12.

In an action by the United States against a carrier for violation of the twenty-eight hour law, whether the animals were knowingly and willfully confined beyond the time limit, and whether this was due to accident, in that the carrier was justified in believing that the caretaker would unload the stock, held for the jury. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co. v. United States, 205 Fed. 337, 123 C. C. A. 471.

99. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 143, 178 Fed. 15.

1. Instructions.—Houston, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 307, 168 Fed. 895.

2. Presumptions and burden of proof.—United States v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 979.

comply with its provisions, based on the failure of defendant to unload a car load of cattle until nearly six hours after their receipt from a connecting road, by which they had been loaded twenty-four hours previously, the government is not entitled to recover on proof merely of such facts; there being no evidence that they were not unloaded and fed during such time, or that defendant had knowledge of the time when they were loaded.[3]

Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.—In an action by the United States against a railroad company to recover the penalty imposed by the Act for knowingly and willfully failing to comply with its provisions requiring the unloading of live stock for rest, water, and feeding, the government is required to establish its case only by a preponderance of the evidence.[4] The greater weight of evidence is sufficient, and proof beyond a reasonable doubt is unnecessary.[5]

§ 4015. Icing Perishable Goods.—Whatever transportation service or facility the law requires the carrier to supply they have the right to furnish. They can therefore use their own cars, and can not be compelled to accept those tendered by the shipper on condition that a lower freight rate be charged. So, too, they can furnish all the ice needed in refrigeration, for this is not only a duty and a right, under the Hepburn Act, but an economic necessity due to the fact that the carriers can not be expected to prepare to meet the demand, and then let the use of their plants depend upon haphazard calls, under which refrigeration can be demanded by all shippers at one time and by only a few at another. But of course this does not mean that, because the carriers have ice on hand, they can compel the shipper to have his fruit refrigerated, when, on account of the state of the weather or for other cause, he prefers to have it forwarded under ventilation only.[6] Carriers of citrus fruits from California to eastern points may be compelled by the interstate commerce commission to permit the consignors to ice the car bunkers at their warehouses, until the carriers shall offer to furnish ice at the

3. United States v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 979.

4. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.—United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 157 Fed. 459.

5. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 143, 178 Fed. 15.

6. Icing perishable goods.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

"The icing may have been so related to refrigeration as to authorize the carriers to render that service. But manifestly they could not be expected to build refrigerating plants near each warehouse; and, the carrier not being in a position to do such icing, the consignor had the same right to provide the necessary supply that he would have had to ice a shipment of fish, to furnish and place standards to secure lumber on an open car, or to fasten to the floor articles which otherwise might be damaged by the jerks and jolts of a moving train. In the absence, therefore, of the carriers' offer, under a filed tariff, to furnish ice at the time and place needed in pre-cooled shipments, or to substitute a service of equal value at practically the same cost, they had no right to prevent the consignor from filling the bunkers so as to fit the freight for proper transportation." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

"When ice is actually needed and is actually used, the question arises as to whether icing is a part of preparation which can be done by the shipper; or a part of refrigeration (transportation) which, by statute the carrier has the exclusive right to furnish. To this question no answer can be given that will apply in all cases. For in the shipment of fruit, as in that of other articles, it is impossible to lay down a rule which definitely fixes what loading includes and by whom it must be done. Nor is there any consistent practice on this subject, since from reported cases it appears that the claims of the parties are based rather on interest than on some definite principle. Sometimes the shipper, as here, insists on the right to load and provide necessary appliances. At other times he demands that such service and appliances be furnished by the railroad company. Conversely the carriers sometimes claim, as here, the right to furnish service and facilities, while in other cases insisting that one or both must be supplied by the consignor. National Lumber Dealers Association v. Atlantic Coast Line, 14 I. C. C. 154; Schultz v. Southern Pacific, 18 I. C. C. 234; In re Allowance for Lining and Heating Cars, 26 I. C. C. 681; 25 I. C. C. 497." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

time and place needed at practically the same cost.[7]

§§ 4016-4049. Prohibitions upon Carriers—§§ 4016-4044. Discrimination and Preferences—§ 4016. In General.—Statutory Provision.—The interstate commerce act provides that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever, or to subject any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic, to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever.[8]

The purpose of this act is to place all shippers on an absolute equality,[9] to require equal treatment of all shippers and to prohibit unjust discrimination in favor of any of them.[10] The sections in question were intended to prevent discrimination in all branches of freight traffic.[11]

Declaratory of Common Law.—The provision of the act which relates to undue preference is declaratory of the common law.[12]

Construction.—Although the English traffic acts do not appear to be as comprehensive as our own, and may justify contracts which with us would be obnoxious to the long and short haul clause of the act, or would be open to the charge of unjust discrimination, yet so far as relates to the question of "undue preferences," it may be presumed that congress, adopting the language of the English Act, had in mind the construction given to their words by the English courts, and intended to incorporate them into the statute.[13]

7. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

8. Discriminating and preferences.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

A common carrier engaged in interstate commerce can not grant special favors to anybody. Johnson v. New York, etc., Railroad (Me.), 88 Atl. 988.

9. United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 74 C. C. A. 466, 143 Fed. 266.

10. United States v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83, citing New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kirby, 225 U. S. 155, 56 L. Ed. 1033, 32 S. Ct. 648, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 501.

11. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

12. Declaratory of common law.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

13. Construction.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844. See, also, McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 28 L. Ed. 269, 4 S. Ct. 142; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

The provisions of § 3 of the Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155] have their near protype in § 2 of the English Railway Traffic Act of 1854, and the courts of this country have adopted the English interpretation of that section. Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 37; S. C., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

It was modeled upon § 2 of the English Act of July 10, 1854, and § 11 of the Act of July 21, 1873. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

Under the express provisions of Interstate Commerce Act, Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155], a common carrier is required not to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to

Necessity for Advantage to Carrier or Other Shipper.—By the provision of the act prohibiting discrimination in railroad rates by the giving of unreasonable preference to any person or locality, all discriminations are not forbidden, but only discrimination against some person, locality, or corporation, made for the advantage of the carrier, or by receiving greater or less compensation from one class of persons than from another for similar services;[14] and hence a contract by a railroad to maintain rates from a factory not exceeding, to competitive points, the rates from two other places, is not, on its face, void for discrimination.[15]

§ 4017. Undue and Unreasonable.—The Interstate Commerce Act does not prohibit the giving of all preferences and advantages, but prohibits only those that are undue and unreasonable.[16] And the mere circumstance that there is, in a given case, a preference or advantage, does not of itself show that such preference or advantage is undue or unreasonable within the meaning of the act.[17] The discrimination must be unjust between shippers, persons, localities, or corporations, by granting undue preference to one, or subjecting another to unreasonable disadvantage.[18] That a carrier, to injure or harass the business of a consignee, subjects it to a prejudice or disadvantage which is neither undue nor unreasonable, does not change the nature of the prejudice or create any cause of action therefor.[19]

The use of the word "discrimination" in the amendatory acts of February 19, 1903, and June 29, 1906, without the qualifying words "unjust," "undue," or "unreasonable," used in the original act of February 4, 1887, is not intended to broaden the provisions of the earlier act in that respect; the word "discrimination" itself, as so applied, implies an unjust or unfair distinction.[20] any particular firm, person, or corporation, or locality, or to any particular description of traffic, or subject any particular firm, corporation, or locality, or any particular description of traffic, nor to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever, but this duty only applies where the circumstances or conditions are substantially similar. Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

14. Necessity for advantage to carrier or other shipper.—Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

15. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 37 So. 134, 84 Miss. 339, 66 L. R. A. 453.

16. Undue and unreasonable.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 101 C. C. A. 583, 178 Fed. 223; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

Interstate Commerce Act, Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155], authorizes a preference, advantage, or discrimination between persons, localities, or traffics, provided such preference, advantage, or discrimination be not undue and unreasonable. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

17. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 77 C. C. A. 315, 147 Fed. 51, citing Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

18. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

19. Gamble-Robinson Comm. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 161.

The Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]) held not to prohibit the giving of all preference and advantages, or the production of all prejudices and disadvantages, but only those that are undue and unreasonable. Gamble-Robinson Comm. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 161.

20. The use of the word "discrimination" in § 1 of the Elkins Act (Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880]), as amended by Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 2, 34 Stat. 586 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 897), without the qualifying words "unjust," etc., used in the original Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, §§ 2, 3, 24 Stat. 379, 380 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155), was not intended to broaden the provisions of the earlier act. United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

All special contracts or traffic arrangements between carrier and shipper are not forbidden or condemned, but only such as operate unfairly, and evidence undue favoritism toward one, or deprive another of his just rights.[21]

What Constitutes Undue Preference.—That portion of the Interstate Commerce Act which relates to undue preference is declaratory of the common law, and, when considered in connection therewith, any undue preference which is based upon the theory that the preference is made with a view of promoting the interests either of a shipper or a carrier, without due regard to the interests of shippers who are similarly situated, must be considered violative of such sections.[22]

Question of Fact.—What is an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage given by a carrier of goods to a shipper within the inhibition of the interstate commerce act is a question of fact.[23] As the third section of the act, which forbids the making or giving any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or locality, does not define what, under that section, shall constitute a preference or advantage to be undue or unreasonable, it can not be doubted that whether, in particular instances, there has been an undue or unreasonable prejudice or preference, is a question of fact depending on the matters proved in each case.[24]

Evidence of Preference Alone.—The mere circumstance that there is, in a given case, a preference or an advantage does not of itself show that such preference or advantage is undue or unreasonable within the meaning of the act.[25]

Real Advantage to One Shipper.—Though under the Act of June 29, 1906, trifling differentiations may not be a forbidden discrimination, if the court can say that the distinction gives one shipper a real advantage over others, it is a forbidden discrimination.[26]

§ 4018. Similar Service and Circumstances.—To come within the inhibition of the act the positions of the respective persons or classes between whom differences in charges are made, must be compared with each other, and there must be found to exist substantial identity of situation and service, accompanied by irregularity and partiality resulting in undue advantage to one, or undue disadvantage to the other.[27] As between commodities and localities, special distinctions may be made where there is some basis therefore in reason and in fact; distinctions found, for example, in the character of the freight, the risk of injury, the increased difficulty of handling, and the increased damages which the carrier would be called upon to pay in case of loss or injury in one case as compared with another.[28] But a rule or classification, although couched in terms similarly fair on their face, can not be sustained where the practical effect thereof is to work an arbitrary and unreasonable discrimination or preference as between persons,

21. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

22. What constitutes undue preference.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

23. Question of fact.—State v. Adams Exp. Co., 171 Ind. 138, 85 N. E. 337, 19 L. R. A., N. S., 93, rehearing denied in 85 N. E. 966.

24. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

25. Evidence of preference alone.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

26. Real advantage to one shipper.—Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 735.

27. Similar service and circumstances.—Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 147 Fed. 51, 77 C. C. A. 315; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

28. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

places, or commodities.[29] To carry two barrels of sugar for one person on a given date, and to carry one barrel of sugar for another person, between the same points over the same route, two days later, are contemporaneous, and like services within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act.[30]

Similar Rates Charged.—The fact that a railroad company, in its schedule of freight rates, groups together two cities on its line, some distance apart, and charges the same rate for carriage to both, is not to be treated as a conclusive admission that the service is performed under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, within the meaning of the interstate commerce law, so as to make it necessarily unlawful to furnish, without additional charge, an additional service at the further city, by cartage from its depot to the places of business of the consignees.[31]

Competition.—The requirement of § 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act, that, in order to constitute the offense of unjust discrimination, the transportation must be "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," refers to the matter of carriage, and does not include competition, though it may be that the same phrase found in § 4 of the act has a broader meaning.[32]

Justifying Long and Short Haul Charges.—The same evidence which warrants a finding that dissimilar circumstances and conditions exist which justify a lower rate for a longer haul to one point than for a shorter haul to another also establishes that the charging of such rates does not give one point an undue preference and advantage over the other in violation of § 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act.[33]

Nature of Goods Shipped.—Special distinctions may be made as to special kinds of freight without violating the provision making it unlawful for any carrier to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or any particular description of traffic.[34]

Live Stock and Dressed Meats.—The cost of carriage, the risk of injury, and the larger amount which the railway companies are called upon to pay out in damages for losses may excuse a higher freight rate on live stock than on dressed meats and packing house products.[35]

Quantity of Goods Shipped.—Where common laundry soap in less than car-load lots was assigned to the fourth class in the first classification made under the Interstate Commerce Act, and was voluntarily maintained there by defendant railroad companies for more than thirteen years, defendants were not justified in reclassifying such freight so that it would pay twenty per cent less than third class rates, without changing the car-load classification, on the mere claim that the prior classifications had been inadequate to pay the cost of carriage in less than car-load lots, there having been no general reclassification which would prox-

29. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

30. United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 369.

31. Similar rates charged.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

32. Competition.—Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

33. Justifying long and short haul charges.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 57 C. C. A. 224, 120 Fed. 934.

34. Nature of goods shipped.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

35. Live stock and dressed meats.—A reduction of freight rates for dressed meats and packing house products from Missouri river points and other points similarly situated to Chicago, which makes such rates lower than those charged for live stock, does not work an undue and unreasonable preference, where the higher rate on live stock has not materially affected any of the markets, prices, or shipments, being reasonably fair to Chicago and the shippers, and the shipments of live stock from the West to Chicago are as great in proportion to the bulk of the business as before the change of rates, and where the lower rate given to the packers was the result of competition, and does not directly influence or injure shippers of live stock. Judgment 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

imately apportion the cost of the service equally among the different articles of traffic as between car loads and less than car-load lots.[36] Unlawful preferences and discriminations are created by fixing the freight rate for common soap in less than car-load lots in a new classification adopted to govern in official classification territory at twenty per cent less than third class, but not less than fourth class, at which that commodity had previously been rated, where the result of applying this classification to the varying rates is to leave soap in less than car-load lots in the fourth class to a considerable extent in one of the subdivisions of such classification territory, and in a higher class in the other subdivision.[37] The fact that defendant's road received much more traffic from the first shipper than from the second does not make the circumstances and conditions under which the two services were rendered substantially dissimilar.[38]

Custom and Usage.—The long existence, before the enactment of the interstate commerce law, of a custom to collect and deliver freight by cartage, in a particular city, and not in others, may be one of the "circumstances" mentioned in the act as elements entering into the question of unjust and unfair discrimination.[39] Other circumstances and conditions of great importance may be that, having long ago adopted such a plan of accessorial services by furnishing cartage, and adapted its terminal facilities thereto, the carrier's station is located a great distance from the traffic center of the city, and to now abandon such service, and extend its road and appliances to the traffic centers, would entail enormous expense for rights of way, and for construction and reconstruction; also, the fact that rival and competing carriers have their stations near the traffic centers, so that to abandon the cartage service would result in the annihilation of the company's business.[40]

Difference in Population and Traffic in Cities.—Differences in population and tonnage traffic may constitute a "circumstance" or "condition" of dissimilarity, within the meaning of the statute; and it can not be said that a railroad company may not reasonably and without undue preference or advantage, or unlawful discrimination, collect and deliver, at its own expense, goods at one city, and not at another when the difference in population and traffic is great.[41]

Findings of Commission Conclusive.—The findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission that industrial spur tracks within switching limits in a city were part of the carrier's terminals, and that the receipt and delivery on these tracks of car load freight in interstate commerce was a like service as compared with such receipt and delivery at team tracks and freight sheds within such switching limits, are conclusive on the courts.[42]

36. Quantity of goods shipped.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 559, decree affirmed in 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

37. The disturbance in the relations between freight rates for soap in car load and less than car-load lots created by advancing the former from class 6 to class 5, and the latter from class 4 to class 3 in a new classification adopted to govern in official classification territory, was not cured by classifying soap in less than car-load lots at twenty per cent less than third class, but not less than fourth class, where the result of applying this modified percentage classification to the varying rates is to leave soap in less than car-load lots in the fourth class in portions of the territory, and in a higher class in other portions. Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 559, affirmed in 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

38. United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 369.

39. Custom and usage.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

40. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

41. Difference in population and traffic in cities.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

42. Findings of commission conclusive.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 294, 34 S. Ct. 814; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 234 U. S. 315, 34 S. Ct. 820.

§ 4019. Persons Discriminated against.—The wrong prohibited by the section is a discrimination between shippers. It was designed to compel every carrier to give equal rights to all shippers over its own road, and to forbid it by any device to enforce higher charges against one than another.[43] But the provisions of Interstate Commerce Act, prohibiting unjust discriminations and undue and unreasonable preferences, have reference to the service rendered, and not to the sender or consignee.[44]

Identity of Situation and Circumstances.—To come within the inhibition of the act, the positions of the respective persons or classes between whom discriminations are made, must be compared with each other, and there must be found to exist substantial identity of situation and circumstances, accompanied by irregularity and partiality resulting in undue advantage to one or undue disadvantage to the other.[45]

Shipper under Special Contract to Build Up Milk Business.—A railroad company may enter into a contract with a person for a term of years to conduct the business of the transportation of milk on the lines of the railroad, such person to have full charge of the business and to receive as compensation a percentage of the freights earned, provided such person should charge rates not in excess of those charged by competitive lines. In the execution of the contract the rates were made by the railroad and such person was not given a monopoly of the milk traffic. The contract was not violative of the Interstate Commerce Act as giving an undue and unreasonable preference. The privileges granted to such person were only those which were incident to the anomalous relations existing between him and the railroad created by the contract. It is quite inconceivable that there were or could have been any shippers of milk who would have been willing or able to undertake such duties and responsibilities. In consideration of his assumption of peculiar obligations and hazards, the railroad gave such person privileges appertaining to his relation as a manager of the traffic, which was not an undue and unreasonable preference.[46]

Shipper Engaged in Foreign Commerce.—Where the plaintiff sought to establish his banana business in Central America, and expended considerable money in his plant, it was engaged in foreign commerce when it began to move men, material, and supplies to and from the United States and Central American ports in furtherance of its business, and was therefore entitled to compel defendant to furnish transportation facilities on the same terms that defendant furnished to others.[47]

§ 4020. Determining Discrimination or Preference.—The interstate commerce act does not attempt to define what particular acts shall constitute

43. Persons discriminated against.—Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 147 Fed. 51, 77 C. C. A. 315, citing Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

44. United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

45. Identity of situation and circumstances.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 147 Fed. 51, 77 C. C. A. 315.

46. Shipper under special contract to build up milk business.—Defendant railroad company entered into a contract with plaintiff for a term of years to build up, develop, and conduct the business of the transportation of milk on its lines of road. Plaintiff was to have full charge of such business, and was to receive as compensation a percentage of the freights earned therein. It was provided that he should charge rates not in excess of those charged by the competitive roads, and should be granted the exclusive privilege of transporting milk over defendant's lines "so far as it was permitted to do so by law." In the execution of the contract all rates were made by defendant, and plaintiff was not given a monopoly of the milk traffic. Held, that such contract was not violative of § 3 of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155], as giving an undue and unreasonable preference to plaintiff. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 147 Fed. 51, 77 C. C. A. 315.

47. Shipper engaged in foreign commerce.—American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 160 Fed. 184.

unlawful discrimination, but commits that to the Interstate Commerce Commission.[48]

Facts Considered.—That the surrounding circumstances and conditions are to be considered in determining whether there has been an undue and unreasonable preference in favor of another particular shipper is undoubtedly true; but in determining that question it necessarily follows that the circumstances and conditions surrounding the shipper should be considered, and not those that may happen to surround the carrier. Where the court is called upon to deal with the question of rates as between rival lines, it would have to consider the peculiar conditions and circumstances surrounding the carrier.[49]

Competition.—In applying the provision of the third section of the act which makes it unlawful for common carriers to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or locality, competition which affects rates is one of the matters to be considered,[50] for the Interstate Commerce Act was not designed to prevent competition between different roads.[51] In construing statutory provisions, forbidding railway companies from giving any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to or in favor of any particular person or company, or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatever, the English courts have held, after full consideration, that competition between rival lines is a fact to be considered, and that a preference or advantage thence arising is not necessarily undue or unreasonable.[52]

But the mere fact of competition, no matter what its character or extent, does not necessarily relieve the carrier from the restraints of the third and fourth sections, but only that these sections are not so stringent and imperative as to exclude in all cases the matter of competition from consideration in determining the questions of "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," or what are "substantially similar circumstances and conditions." The competition may in some cases be such as, having due regard to the interests of the public and of the carrier, ought justly to have effect upon the rates, and in such cases there is no absolute rule which prevents the commission or the courts from taking the matter into consideration.[53]

48. Determining discrimination or preference.—Puritan Coal Min. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 237 Pa. 420, 85 Atl. 426.

49. Facts considered.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

50. Competition.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687. See, also, Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844, and Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

51. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

It is not the purpose of the third section of the act to prevent competition in rates between different points on different lines of road. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

Competition between carriers is not a circumstance to be considered in applying the provisions of the second section, which seeks to prevent discrimination between shippers over the same line of road, and thus leaves no room for the operation of competition. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 45, 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, affirming decree 74 Fed. 715, 21 C. C. A. 51.

For a carrier to protect itself against the physical disadvantage it is under in relation to its rivals is not an unlawful discrimination, if it be not used as a colorable device to evade the statute. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 74 Fed. 803, 21 C. C. A. 103.

52. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

53. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

Ocean competition as constituting a dissimilar condition and as justifying a difference in rates between import and domestic traffic is a proper circumstance to be considered by the commission, which is not shut up by the terms of the act of congress, to consider only such "circumstances and conditions" as pertained to the articles after they had reached and been delivered at a port of the United States or Canada.[54]

Competition between Other Cities.—Where there exists great competition between two cities in trunk line territory and which are entered by a number of rail and water carrying lines, the fact that the charge to a third city is greater than that charge to the former cities, does not give such cities an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage, or subject the latter city to an undue or unreasonably prejudice or disadvantage, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act.[55]

§ 4021. In Charges.—See elsewhere.[56]

§ 4022. In Facilities.—Terminal and Wharfage Facilities.—An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission forbidding a carrier to give an undue preference in the use of its wharves at a seaport to an exporter of cotton seed products is not a regulation of purely intrastate or purely foreign commerce, which would be beyond the power of the commission, where the cotton seed products purchased by him, whether at points within or without the state, are all destined for export, and the concentration and manufacture of cotton seed cake into meal on the wharves are but incidents in the transshipment of the products in export trade.[57] Where all shippers are in fact treated alike, the mere fact that a carrier leases a terminal from a shipper does not constitute a discrimination in such shipper's favor.[58]

Lease of Wharfage Facilities to Shipper.—A lease to a shipper of one of the piers and improvements thereon, belonging to a terminal company, which relieves him from the payment of all wharfage and storage charges other than as the same may be included in the yearly rental, and has enabled him to acquire practically a monopoly of the export of certain products from that port, constitutes an unlawful or undue preference under the act to regulate commerce, where other shippers are not and can not be afforded the same facilities on the same conditions.[59] A corporation created to carry on, conformably to a municipal

54. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666. See, also, Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

55. Competition between other cities.—Conditions are such at Norfolk and Richmond, Va., by reason of the large number of carrying lines, both rail and water, which enter such places, and the fact that they are in what is known as the "trunk line territory," as to create a very active competition on shipments from the West, and to justify the making of low rates on such shipments; and the fact that such low rates are made on through shipments from Chicago, St. Louis, and East St. Louis by a material reduction from local tariff rates by the connecting line west of the Ohio river, while substantially the local rates are charged on the same lines on through shipments from the same points to Wilmington, N. C., which is not within the trunk line territory, but in the southern territory, and has fewer lines of transportation, and less active competition, resulting in higher through rates to the latter place, although the length of haul is substantially the same, does not operate to give Norfolk and Richmond an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage, or subject Wilmington to an undue, or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage, in violation of § 3 of the act to regulate commerce (24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]). Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 124 Fed. 624.

56. In charges.—See post, "Discrimination and Preference," §§ 4075-4096.

57. In facilities.—Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279.

58. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 231 U. S. 274, 34 S. Ct. 75.

59. Lease of wharfage facilities to shipper.—Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279.

ordinance and a confirmatory statute intended to secure public shipping facilities, a wharfage business at a seaport and to furnish terminal facilities for a railway and steamship system of which it forms a part and by which it is controlled through a holding company, is a common carrier, and as such is subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission acting in the exercise of its authority, under the act to regulate commerce, to prohibit undue preferences.[60]

Establishing Station.—A railroad company may, in the exercise of its right to private property, establish a station for the special accommodation of a particular customer, and refuse to establish a like station elsewhere for the accommodation of others.[61]

Switch Service.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act a common carrier of interstate freight can not lawfully deny switch connections or service to one person, place, locality, or kind of traffic which it affords to others similarly situated; and one who has built a switch connection with the track of a railroad, with the consent of the company, has an implied right to service at such switch, and, unless such service is limited, either expressly or by implication, he may lawfully insist that the carrier shall there receive and deliver all such freight as it customarily carries, and for the receipt and delivery of which the switch is suitable and convenient.[62] A contract between two railroad companies providing for the construction of a spur track to a customer and the switching of cars over the same for a specified charge does not violate the interstate commerce law, unless it contemplates some discrimination against other customers seeking or enjoying like privileges.[63]

Grant of Right to Build Warehouse.—A railroad company may grant to one person the right to erect a warehouse or elevator on its right of way, and refuse to grant the same privilege to another, in the exercise of its right to private property.[64]

§§ 4023-4035. In Distribution of Cars—§ 4023. In General.—A contract with a carrier to supply to an interstate shipper a specified number of cars on certain dates is not a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, unless the contract, if performed, will extend to that shipper an undue performance over other shippers.[65] The refusal of an interstate carrier to furnish cars for the shipment of complainant's crossties, while furnishing cars to others for interstate shipment of other freight, constitutes an unjust discrimination in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act for which plaintiff is entitled to recover full damages with an attorney's fee and costs.[66]

§§ 4024-4033. Between Mining Companies—§ 4024. In General.—A system of coal-car distribution which a railroad company has applied in a given field, if that system, under the circumstances and conditions peculiar to that field, be a reasonable one, and fair to all, and is applied to all alike, affords no just cause of complaint on the part of any shipper.[67]

Power to Regulate.—The governmental power of regulation extends, in time of car shortage, to compelling a just and equal distribution of cars among shippers, and to the prevention of an unjust and discriminatory one.[68] It may 60. Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279.

61. Establishing station.—Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

62. Switch service.—Interstate Stockyards Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 99 Fed. 472.

63. Cedar Rapids, etc., Light Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 145 Iowa 528, 124 N. W. 323.

64. Grant of right to build warehouse.—Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

65. In distribution of cars.—Ferrell & Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 119 Minn. 302, 138 N. W. 284.

66. American, etc., Timber Co. v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 175 Fed. 28.

67. Between mining companies.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

68. Power to regulate.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

not be doubted that the equipment of a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce, included in which are its coal cars, are instruments of such commerce. From this it necessarily follows that such cars are embraced within the governmental power of regulation, which extends, in time of car shortage, to compelling a just and equal distribution, and the prevention of an unjust and discriminatory one.[69]

At Common Law.—If it should appear in any such case that any particular shipper was given preference in excess in his pro rata share of its cars, then such preference would necessarily be an undue preference at common law.[70]

Under Statute.—The Interstate Commerce Act prohibits discrimination[71] and requires carriers to furnish transportation on reasonable request therefor, make it the duty of an interstate carrier to furnish equal facilities for transportation, as well as equal rates, to all shippers who are similarly situated.[72] Authority to regulate the distribution of a railway company's fuel cars in times of car shortage to the bituminous coal mines along its line was delegated to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the act to regulate commerce (Act Feb. 4, 1887), as a means of prohibiting the unjust preferences or undue discriminations forbidden by the act.[73] It is obvious, from even a casual reading of the statute, that at the time of its enactment certain shippers were unable to operate their mines so as to develop them, owing to the lack of car service, due to the unequal distribution of cars among those who were engaged in operating coal mines, and it was to correct this inequality that legislation of this character was deemed to be advisable and expedient.[74]

Under Agreement.—An arrangement between an interstate railroad company and coal shippers in a certain field, fixing a basis which should be considered equitable for the distribution of cars between such shippers, does not operate to relieve the railroad company from the obligations imposed on it by § 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, to treat shippers without discrimination.[75]

On Request for Full Service.—When called upon by a shipper for full car service the only defense which the carrier can interpose, in case of failure to comply with the demand, is that the supply which it has furnished is sufficient for normal demands, or that in case of shortage it has fairly and impartially prorated all of its car equipment.[76]

Prorating Cars.—While the capacity of a shipper of coal may be greater than his allotment of cars, yet, where such is also the case with every other operation similarly situated in the coal field, it is the duty of the railroad company, when the supply of coal cars is short, to prorate the supply on hand, without un-

69. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

70. At common law.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

71. Under statute.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. 380 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155).

72. Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 1, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892).

"The Interstate Commerce Act, in pursuance of which this suit was instituted, was passed on the 4th day of February, 1887, and was intended, among other things, to secure an equal and fair distribution of car facilities to all shippers similarly situated." Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

Where a short railroad is used and operated as a means of conducting interstate traffic in coal by companies owning connecting interstate roads, it must be accessible to all interstate shippers on equal and reasonable terms; the public can not be deprived of this right by the separate or joint action of the carriers, and they can not be permitted to use it for purposes of discrimination between mine owners on its line. Heck v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 1 Interst. Com. R. 495.

73. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

74. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

75. Under agreement.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 74 C. C. A. 466, 143 Fed. 266.

76. On request for full service.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

just discrimination, among all the operations, including the shipper in question.[77] Under the provisions of § 3 of the Interstate Commerce Law it is the legal duty of a railroad company, in furnishing cars to coal mines along its line, where a limited number only can be supplied, to distribute the same impartially, without unjust discrimination of favoritism.[78]

Profitable to Carrier or Mining Company.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has power to compel an equitable distribution as between the carrier and the shipper, and to preventing the carrier from unduly favoring itself to the prejudice of shippers in allotting cars for hauling freight for its own use.[79] An interstate carrier, in the distribution of cars, can not give a shipper a preference in order that it may profit thereby, or that the shipper may profit thereby.[80]

§ 4025. Ownership of Cars.—"There is nothing in the Interstate Commerce Act which prohibits a carrier from making any arrangement it may choose as respects the ownership of cars which it operates on its lines. That is a matter which is left entirely with the carrier; but, while such is the case, it is equally true that the carrier can not, by any such arrangement, by indirection, accomplish that which is prohibited by the statute."[81] Cars should be furnished irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof.[82] In the distribution of cars by an interstate railroad company between the operators of coal mines on its line, its own fuel cars, the fuel cars of other roads sent upon its line to be loaded, its regular equipment of cars, and the private or individual cars of any mine operator should be placed absolutely on the same basis as together forming the available car equipment of the road as a whole;[83] and where its own fuel cars or those of other roads are consigned to a particular mine, or the operator's own private cars are delivered to it, they should be charged against such mine, and it should be allotted only so many of the system cars as are necessary to make up its pro rata share of the whole.[84] The carrier can not evade such duty in the distribution of cars by claiming that it is not the owner of a portion of the cars carried over its lines.[85] The act provides that cars shall be furnished irrespective of ownership or any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof. This makes it the duty of the company to furnish cars, regardless of ownership or of any contract, express or implied. Therefore the question as to the ownership of the cars or the purposes for which they are used can have no bearing in this controversy. In other words, in a proceeding instituted pursuant to § 23 of the act, it would not be a good defense for the railroad company to insist that it was using a portion of its cars for the purpose of transporting fuel, and was therefore unable to give the relator its pro rata share of cars upon the basis agreed upon.[86]

Cars Owned by Mining Company.—In the distribution of cars by an interstate railroad company between coal mining companies on its line, when the supply is insufficient to meet all demands, a mining company which owns cars indi-

77. Prorating cars.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

78. United States v. West Virginia Northern R. Co., 125 Fed. 252, affirmed 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

79. Profitable to carrier or mining company.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. Ed. 291, 30 S. Ct. 163.

80. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

81. Ownership of cars.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

82. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113; Logan Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 154 Fed. 497.

83. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

84. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

85. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

86. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

vidually is entitled to have such cars assigned to its use.[87] If a carrier, by contractual arrangement, operates individual cars belonging to mine owners as a part of its equipment, such arrangement can not in the slightest degree relieve the carrier of the duty to furnish equal facilities to all shippers similarly situated. To adopt any other rule would be to make it possible for wealthy mine owners, by the purchase of car equipment, to utilize the means of transportation operated by the carrier to such an extent as to practically deprive other mine owners similarly situated of any means of transportation, and it was to avoid this very kind of discrimination that the provisions of § 1 and 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act was enacted.[88] A railroad company's duty to allot cars without unjust discrimination among coal shippers can not be altered by the furnishing of special cars to the railroad company by one shipper, to be used exclusively in the transportation of coal for that shipper, whether the cars are sold by the shipper to the railroad company on the installment plan, or the shipper retains title to the cars.[89] The mining company is not entitled in addition to a pro rata share of the cars owned by the railroad company, and such a distribution, if made, resulting in giving to such company larger facilities for transporting its product than are given to other companies similarly situated, but which own no private cars, constitutes the giving of an undue preference or advantage to such company, in violation of the interstate commerce law.[90]

Cars Owned by Consignee.—Under a rule providing that, in the distribution of the cars of a railroad company available for the transportation of coal, cars for the railroad's fuel supply, foreign railroad cars, specially consigned for the fuel supply of the consigning railroads, and individual cars owned by shippers and assigned to specified mines for loading, should be charged against the capacity of the mines at which they were placed, and that the difference between the rated capacity of the mine and the capacity of such assigned cars should be the rate on which all the other cars of the railroad company would be prorated, which rule operated slightly to the advantage of the owners of individual cars, was not objectionable as a discrimination against them.[91]

Cars Sold by Mining Company to Carrier.—If the cars are purchased from the shipper by the railroad company on the installment plan, the company thereby becoming interested therein at once, and finally the absolute owner thereof, then, in the event of an exclusive application of the same to the business of that shipper, 87. Cars owned by mining company.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

88. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

89. United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

90. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

Where some of the operators of coal mines along a line of interstate railroad own coal cars individually which are moved by the railroad company, they are entitled to the exclusive use of such cars, but in times when the total supply of coal cars, including such individual cars and those owned by the railroad company, is insufficient to meet the demand, in the distribution by the railroad company of cars between the different mine operators on a percentage basis, calculated on the production of the several mines, each operator is entitled to its percentage of all of the available cars, whether owned by the company or individually, in so far as it will not interfere with such right of the individual owners to the exclusive use of their own cars, and the action of the railroad company in deducting such individual cars before making the distribution and allowing their owners in addition thereto their full quota of its own cars subjects other operators who own no cars to an undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, in violation of § 3 of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. 380, c. 104 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]). Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

91. Cars owned by consignee.—It was so held under Pa. Const. 1874, art. 17, §§ 1, 3, 7, Interstate Commerce Act (Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]), prohibiting discrimination by carriers either in rates or transportation facilities, and P. L. 1846, p. 323, § 21, requiring railroads to transport cars owned by individual shippers on reasonable rules and regulations. Logan Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 154 Fed. 497.

there never would be a time, from first to last, during which the railroad company, by such a course, would not be devoting rolling stock which it owns, or in which it is interested as a common carrier, to the demands of one shipper to the exclusion of others similarly situated, which it may not do; or, even if it should never become interested in, or the owner of, the cars, still it may not rent its tracks or permit them to be appropriated by any one to the detriment of other shippers whom it should serve to the uttermost; and in the stress of unusual business such special cars in its service would have to be applied to the accommodation of all shippers alike.[92]

Cars to Be Charged Regardless of Ownership.—The fuel cars of the carrier, its regular equipment of cars, the cars of other roads sent in for fuel, and the private or individual cars of the mining operators should be placed absolutely upon the same basis in so far as the distribution of car service by the carrier is concerned. There is no theory upon which the carrier can relieve itself from a charge of discrimination, when it is shown that such cars are arbitrarily allotted to certain mines, and not charged to such mines as a part of the percentage to which they are entitled under the arrangement by which it is undertaken to secure a fair distribution of car service among shippers on its line.[93] Where the mining company's own private cars are delivered to it, they should be charged against such mining company, and the company should be allotted only so many of the cars of the railroad system as are necessary to make up its pro rata share of the whole.[94]

§ 4026. Fuel Cars.—Commerce, in the constitutional sense, includes the instrumentalities by which commerce is carried on, and extends to the coal cars owned by a railway company engaged in interstate commerce, in which it receives from the tipple of the coal mines along its line coal purchased by it and used solely for its own fuel purposes.[95] The rule in regard to individual cars applies to the use of fuel cars, whether they be those of the defendant company or fuel cars of other corporations purchasing coal from the relator. They should be treated the same as individual cars in the distribution of available cars, and the general trend of the decisions is to the effect that all cars, whether individual cars or owned by the railroad company, or assigsed by other railroad companies for fuel, shall be treated as an available car equipment as a whole, distributable pro rata to shippers desiring their use along the line, upon a basis giving each equal facilities with the other.[96] The same considerations apply to coal purchased by any buyer for its own use to be delivered into its own cars at the mine, and which does not become a subject of interstate commerce.[97]

92. Cars sold by mining company to carrier.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

93. Cars to be charged regardless of ownership.—This question has been passed upon by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of Railroad Commissioner v. Hocking Valley R. Co., 12 Interst. Com. Rep. 398. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

94. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

95. Fuel cars.—Decree, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 173 Fed. 930, reversed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. Ed. 291, 30 S. Ct. 163.

96. Logan Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 154 Fed. 497, quoted in Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

The practice of a railroad company in distributing coal cars for use between mine operators on its line in times of shortage of cars not to charge against a mine as a part of its quota cars of other railroad companies who had bought coal for fuel from such mine and sent the same, when the coal so sold is not taken into consideration in computing such mine's percentage, does not subject other mine operators to an undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in violation of § 3 of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. 380, c. 104 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]). Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

97. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

Charged to Mining Company.—An order of the interstate commerce commission commanding a railway company to desist from its practice not to take into account the company's fuel cars in the daily distribution of coal cars in times of car shortage to the bituminous coal mines on its line, and requiring it for a future period of two years to count such cars against the share of the mine receiving them, is within the authority delegated by Act June 29, 1906, upon complaint duly made, to declare a rate of practice affecting rates illegal, and to determine and prescribe for a term not exceeding two years what will be a just and reasonable rate, and what regulation or practice in respect to transportation is just, fair, and reasonable thereafter to be followed.[98]

Freedom of Contract Not Destroyed.—Requiring a railway company in making its daily distribution of coal cars in times of car shortage to the bituminous coal mines on its line to desist from it practice not to count the company's fuel cars against the share of the mine receiving them can not be said to destroy the freedom of contract, on the theory that any discriminations or preferences resulting from such practice arose from the fact that the railway company chose to purchase coal for its fuel supply from a particular mine or mines.[99]

§ 4027. Cars Used in Intrastate Commerce Only.—A railroad company engaged in interstate commerce in making distribution of cars between coal mining companies engaged in such commerce where there is a shortage has no legal right under Interstate Commerce Act to leave out of consideration private or foreign cars usd by such a company, although only in intrastate commerce, and make the allotment with reference to its own cars alone by which such company is given a preference or advantage over its competitors in interstate commerce.[1]

§§ 4028-4033. Determining Mining Company's Share of Cars—§ 4028.—In General.—The distribution should be based on a disinterested and intelligent examination by experts of the different mines, and upon a consideration of all the factors which go to make up their capacity, both actual and potential, the most important being the number of workings and their capacity for production, the equipment in use for handling and loading the product being secondary, because it may be readily and quickly increased if necessary to meet the requirements.[2] Judge Goff, in a very able and exhaustive opinion on this subject, in discussing the proper rule to be observed in working out the most desirable basis for securing a fair distribution of railroad cars to the mine owners, says: "I am of the opinion that in reaching a proper basis for the distribution of railroad cars it is necessary that an impartial and intelligent study of the capacity of the different mines be made by competent and disinterested experts, whose duty is should be to carefully examine into the different elements that are essentially factors in the finding of the daily output of the respective mines which are to share in the allotment. Among the matters to be investigated are the following: The working places, the number of mine cars and their capacity, the switch and tipple efficiency, the number and character of the mining machines in use, the hauling system and the power used, the number of miners and other employees, the mine openings, and the miners' houses. No one of these various and essential elements can safely be said to be absolutely controlling, though likely

98. Charged to mining company.—Decree, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 173 Fed. 930, reversed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. Ed. 291, 30 S. Ct. 163.

99. Freedom of contract not destroyed.—Decree, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 173 Fed. 930, reversed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. Ed. 291, 30 S. Ct. 163.

1. Cars used in intrastate commerce only.—Majestic Coal, etc., Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 162 Fed. 810.

2. Determining mining company's share of cars.—United States v. West Virginia Northern R. Co., 125 Fed. 252, affirmed in 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

the most important of them all are the real working places, the available points at which coal can be profitably mined. At each true working place a certain quantity of coal, to be determined by the thickness of the seam and conditions peculiar to the different coal fields, can be excavated and removed during stated periods of time; and so it follows that, if other essentials are adequate, the daily output of a mine can be computed by the number of its available working places." [3]

§§ 4029-4033. Facts Considered—§ 4029. Agreement of Parties.—In determining as to whether there has been an undue and unreasonable preference in any particular instance, the sole question to be considered is as to whether all the cars hauled over the carrier's lines have been prorated so as to give each and every shipper on its lines his proportionate share of facilities to which he is entitled on the basis agreed upon as the means by which there should be a fair and equal distribution of such car service.[4]

§ 4030. Rule of Carrier.—Where a railroad has adopted a system of distribution of cars in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, leaving out of consideration private cars, the court may leave them out of consideration in an action by a shipper for departure from the system of distribution resulting in discrimination.[5]

§ 4031. Capacity and Output of Mine.—In the distribution of cars by a railroad company between operators of coal mines on its line in times of shortage, the percentage of cars to which each mine is entitled should be determined solely by the physical capacity of the mine to furnish coal for shipment; and a rule of distribution by which such capacity is taken as one, while the amount of shipments for the preceding two years is taken as two, the sum of the rated capacity and such shipments being divided by three to determine the basis of distribution, is unfair and inequitable to new mines, and results in giving an undue preference or advantage to old mines, in violation of the interstate commerce law.[6]

Present Output.—Where, in a mandamus proceeding against a carrier to prevent discrimination in the distribution of cars among certain coal companies, it was admitted that the carrier owned no coal cars, but obtained them from another railroad, and allotted cars to the several mining districts according to a specified rating, the court had power to fix the percentage of cars which the carrier should distribute to relator in proportion to the present output of relator's mine, there being nothing to indicate any threatened or probable change in such output.[7]

Allotment to New Mines.—The method adopted by a railroad company for fixing the percentage of cars to which the several coal mines on its line in a certain district were entitled in distributing cars between them in times of shortage, by taking the actual shipments made from each mine during the season when there was a full supply of cars and also the possible output of such mine and making an average, counting the former as two units and the latter as one, is not discriminative as against the newer mines.[8] In such a distribution the allotment of an arbitrary number of cars for development to new mines which have had no opportunity to establish a percentage within reasonable limits is lawful.[9]

3. United States v. West Virginia Northern R. Co., 125 Fed. 252, quoted in Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

4. Facts considered.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

5. Rule of carrier.—Puritan Coal Min. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 237 Pa. 420, 85 Atl. 426.

6. Capacity and output of mine.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

7. Present output. — West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. United States, 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

8. Allotment to new mines.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

9. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

§ 4032. Unfulfilled Contract of Mining Company.—The contention that a mining company has large contracts, and therefore it must have a preference in cars by which it might keep its contracts, is untenable.[10]

§ 4033. Prompt Return of Cars by Mining Company.—A rule of a railroad company under which any coal mine operator on its line using its terminal tracks at the seacoast and there unloading its cars within five days on an average during any month is given as a premium a fifty per cent larger allotment of cars during the next month is an attempted evasion of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act requiring a fair and impartial distribution of cars between shippers, and gives an undue preference or advantage to shippers so favored, in violation of such act.[11] "Relator insists that the court below erred in its ruling in relation to what is known as the 'Curtis Bay premium.' The defendant says that to encourage a prompt discharge and return of coal cars, and also the use of its own tracks at Curtis Bay, the terminal of the railroad, at Baltimore, it put in force a rule by which all shippers or consignors who during the month average not more than five days' detention of the cars assigned to them were granted a premium of fifty per cent additional to their car supply for the next month. It is also insisted that this opportunity is open to all shippers who consign coal to Baltimore for water transportation. It is insisted by the relator that, if the road desires to bring about a quick unloading and return of cars, it should do so by a penalty in the nature of demurrage for delay and that to attempt to secure promptness by offering a premium is in violation of the spirit of the act. The method adopted by the railroad company in this respect seems to us to be still another means by which the carrier is enabled to evade the requirements of the act. By this system it is possible for certain favored companies to secure a large number of cars in excess of the amount to which they would be entitled under a fair and equal distribution of the same, while, on the other hand, the carrier could adopt a plan by which those who are not prompt in making deliveries at that point could be made to pay penalties by demurrage without affecting the car supply one way or the other, and thus, without inconvenience to the carrier, place all shippers on equality. That this system by which premiums are given to those who are prompt in making delivery at Curtis Bay can be used so as to give certain shippers an undue and unreasonable preference over those who are less fortunate is apparent, and we think constitutes a violation of the provisions of the act."[12]

§ 4034. Between Mining Companies on Main and Branch Lines.—Under Interstate Commerce Act, which requires railroad companies to furnish cars to shippers on collateral branch lines "without discrimination in favor of or against any such shipper," shippers on the main line of a road and those on a collateral branch line are entitled to precisely the same treatment in the distribution of cars.[13]

§ 4035. Between Warehousemen.—A railroad having permitted the erection of grain warehouses along its right of way in which grain was stored for

10. Unfulfilled contract of mining company.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

11. Prompt return of cars by mining company.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

But it had been held in the circuit court that the statute is not violated by the allowance by the railroad company of an extra percentage of cars to an operator which during the preceding month has unloaded and returned its cars within a certain average time; such practice having been adopted instead of the imposition of a demurrage charge to encourage prompt return of cars, and enlarge the available supply for use, and being open to all alike. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 154 Fed. 108.

12. Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

13. Between mining companies on main and branch lines.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

producers and owners for hire as well as grain purchased and owned by the warehousemen promulgated a rule requiring all orders for cars for the shipment of grain from such warehouses to be made by the warehousemen. The rule operated to the prejudice of private storers of grain through the use of cars ordered by the warehousemen for the shipment of their own grain before cars could be obtained for the shipment of grain in the warehouse owned by stores, and by the appropriation of cars intended for storers by the warehousemen. The railroad company, under its duty to see that no discrimination was practiced, was bound either to change the rule, or to see that it was not permitted to operate in favor of one shipper and against another.[14]

Warehouseman as Agent of Carrier.—Where a railroad having permitted the erection of grain elevators along its right of way for the storage of grain by producers and other owners, pending shipments, promulgated a rule requiring all orders for cars to be used in the shipment of grain for such warehouses to come through the warehousemen, a warehouseman in ordering cars for a storer of grain pursuant to such rule is the agent of the railroad company for that purpose, and not the agent of the storer, so that the railroad company is liable for the warehouseman's negligent or unfaithful performance of such duty.[15]

§ 4036. In Acceptance and Delivery of Freight.—Place of Loading Live Stock.—A railroad company may designate as its loading place for live stock the stockyards of a private corporation, and may refuse to deliver or receive live stock to or from other stockyards, whether they be public or private.[16]

Delivery to Carrier's Own Stockyards.—Where two stockyards are situated at substantially the same point as depots for live stock having the same general destination, but one is located on and maintained by the defendant railroad company while the other is located on the line of another railroad, that there is nothing in the Interstate Commerce Act, which requires the defendant company to accept live stock billed from foreign states to the yards on the other railroad rather than to its own yards located on its line, even though there is a connection between the two roads.[17] Unless a preference of its own depot to that of another road is forbidden, the defendant is not within the act of congress. Suppose that the other station and the defendant's station were side by side, and that their tracks were connected within or just outside the limits of the station grounds. It could not be said that the defendant was giving an undue or unreasonable preference to itself or subjecting its neighbor to an undue or unreasonable disadvantage if it insisted on delivering live stock which it had carried to the end of the transit at its own yard.[18]

Facilities for Unloading.—If the live stock are to be unloaded, the defend-

14. Between warehousemen. — Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

15. Warehouseman as agent of carrier. —Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975.

16. In acceptance and delivery of freight.—Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 159 Fed. 975, citing Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

17. Delivery to carrier's own stockyards.—Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

"All that was decided in Wisconsin, etc., Railroad v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. Ed. 194, 21 S. Ct. 115, was that by statute two railroad companies might be required to make track connections. So much of the statute as undertook to regulate rates was not passed upon. See Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. Ed. 1151, 22 S. Ct. 900. There is no act of congress that attempts to give courts the power to require contracts to be made in a case like this." Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

18. These views are sanctioned by what was said in Covington Stockyards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. Ed. 73, 11 S. Ct. 461. The fact that the plaintiff's stockyards are public does not change the case. Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

ant has the right to unload them where its appliances for unloading are, and can not be required to establish other appliances near by.[19]

Where Cattle to Remain in Cars.—If the live stock are to remain in the defendant's cars it can not be required to hand those cars over to another railroad without a contract, and the courts have no authority to dictate a contract to the defendant or to require it to make one.[20]

§ 4037. In Taking on and Letting Off Passengers.—Refusal by a railroad company to stop its train to let off a passenger who purchased a ticket at a point on its own road, outside the state, at a station at which it stopped its trains to let off passengers who purchased tickets over other roads at points outside the state, is a violation of Interstate Commerce Act.[21]

§ 4038. In Manner of Shipment.—The provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, making it unlawful for any common carrier to give any undue or unreasonable preference to any person, company, or locality, or particular description of traffic, and providing that such carriers shall afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for receiving, forwarding, and delivering passengers and property to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith, and shall not discriminate in their rates and charges between such connecting lines, but this shall not be construed as requiring any such common carrier to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business, does not require a railroad company to receive freight in the cars in which it is tendered by a connecting line, and transport it in such cars, paying car mileage therefor, when it has cars of its own available, and the freight would not be injured by transfer.[22]

§ 4039. In Time of Transportation.—An undue and unreasonable preference is accorded a shipper by an agreement to expedite a shipment of horses so as to reach a connecting carrier in time to be carried by a special fast train; the shipper being charged the regular rates, which make no provision for such special service.[23] But the action of a railroad passenger agent in guarantying that a theater troupe, to whom he sells a party-rate ticket, shall arrive at their destination at a given time, is not the giving of an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage, within the meaning of the interstate commerce law (24 Stat. 380, § 3).[24]

Switching Service.—Where an interstate carrier established a rate for special switching service, which was for particular services rendered individual shippers or consignees, an agreement that perishable shipments should be expedited by quicker switching service was not a discrimination.[25]

19. Facilities for unloading.—Covington Stockyards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. Ed. 73, 11 S. Ct. 461; Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

20. Where cattle to remain in cars.—Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. Ed. 291, 4 S. Ct. 185.

21. In taking on and letting off passengers.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.), 80 S. W. 426, judgment reversed 83 S. W. 362, 98 Tex. 302, 4 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 770.

22. In manner of shipment.—Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 51 Fed. 465.

23. In time of transportation.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, §§ 3, 6, and Act Feb. 19, 1903; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kirby, 32 S. Ct. 648, 225 U. S. 155, 56 L. Ed. 1033, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 501, reversing judgment, 90 N. E. 252, 242 Ill. 418.

For a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce to agree with a particular shipper to expedite the shipment at regular rates, even where no rate has been established for special expedition, is a discrimination, violative of Act Cong. Feb. 19, 1903. Johnson v. New York, etc., Railroad (Me.), 88 Atl. 988.

24. Foster v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 434.

25. Switching service.—Johnson v. New York, etc., Railroad (Me.), 88 Atl. 988.

§ 4040. In Reshipping Privileges.—The granting by the railroad companies operating lines of railroad from Mississippi and Ohio River points to Nashville, and beyond, of the privilege of unloading grain, grain products, and hay shipped from or through such river points at Nashville and reshipping the same for more distant points to the southeast, within six months at through rates, which rule has been in force for forty years, held, on the undisputed facts, to have been due to, and justified by, competition by water transportation on the Cumberland River from the Ohio and not to constitute an undue and unreasonable preference and advantage or an undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage as between Nashville and points in Georgia, in violation of Interstate Commerce Act.[26]

§ 4041. In Allowances to Shipper.—The provision of the Interstate Commerce Act that, if the owner of property transported shall render services connected with the transportation or furnish any instrumentality used therein, a just and reasonable allowance may be made therefor, and giving the interstate commerce commission power to determine and fix such allowance,[27] applies only to allowances provided for by the schedules published by the carrier and applicable to all shippers similarly circumstanced, and such provision is not available as a defense to a carrier when sued for discrimination by making a secret allowance to a favored shipper.[28]

§§ 4042-4044. Remedies—§ 4042. Burden of Proof.—When it is shown that the carrier has not supplied the facilities demanded, the burden is upon the defendant, in order to exonerate itself from such charge of undue preference, to show that it is prorating its cars fairly and equally among all the operators who are similarly situated and engaged in transporting freight over its lines.[29]

§ 4043. Mandamus.—Parties.—Where, on an application for mandamus against a carrier to prevent discrimination in the furnishing of cars to relator and two certain other coal companies, the petition alleged and the return admitted that the president of the railroad company was himself one of, and also largely interested in another of, the coal companies other than relator, and was, in effect, in control of the railroad company, and that what was done by such company was done through the president, he was a proper party to the proceedings.[30] Though the mandate was addressed to the railroad company and to its president, and each of them according to their several and respective powers, the judgment for costs went against the carrier alone, such judgment was not joint, but should be taken distributively, as affecting the president only according to his powers.[31]

Amendment of Writ.—Where an alternative mandamus against a carrier commanded it to furnish relator, for the transportation of its coal, without discrimination, at least a certain per centum of the total car supply to be distributed by the carrier at the time the writ was served, or to show cause to the contrary, the court's power to issue the writ being statutory, was not within the strict rule of the common law with respect to amendments, so that, on the court's announcing its conclusion that relator was only entitled to a less per centum of the car

26. In reshipping privileges.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 58.

27. In allowances to shipper.—(Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 15, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165]), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. 590 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1158); Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 194 Fed. 486. See post, "Allowance for Service of Shipper," §§ 4120-4124.

28. Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 194 Fed. 486.

29. Remedies.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

30. Mandamus.—West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. United States, 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

31. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. United States, 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

supply, the court was authorized to permit relator to amend the alternative writ to conform to the facts as found.[32]

§ 4044. Summary Remedy.—In the absence of legislation providing the means by which summary relief could be afforded the shipper, it would be an easy matter for the common carrier, by favoritism, to build up one class of shippers and at the same time utterly destroy the business of another class similarly situated, and it was to prevent this kind of discrimination that the original act[33] and the acts amendatory and supplemental thereto were passed.[34]

§ 4045. Combinations and Monopolies.—The seventh section of the Interstate Commerce Act provides that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provision of the act to enter into any combination, contract, or agreement, expressed or implied, to prevent by change of time schedule, carriage in different cars, or by other means or devices, the carriage of freights from being continuous from the place of shipment to the place of destination; and no break of bulk, stoppage, or interruption made by such common carrier shall prevent the carriage of freights from being, and being treated, as one continuous carriage from the place of shipment to the place of destination, unless such break, stoppage, or interruption was made in good faith for some necessary purpose, and without any intent to avoid or unnecessarily interrupt such continuous carriage or to evade any of the provisions of the act.[35] A contract for the carriage of stock provided that the stock should be unloaded at an intermediate point, and the shipper had a contract with live stock dealers at this intermediate point to sell the stock there and substitute other stock in the same cars for transportation to the point of destination; the original shipper receiving compensation for the use of his cars. As the railroad company was not a party to this agreement, it did not, even if in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, render the railroad's contract for the carriage of the stock invalid.[36]

Establishing Through Routes.—It is no violation of said section for a railroad company to enter into contracts with other companies for the establishment of through routes, and through rates, for the continuous carriage of interstate traffic.[37]

Charging Unlawful Rates.—In an action for injuries to complainant's property and business by an alleged combination and conspiracy between interstate railroads controlling the shipment of anthracite coal, an allegation that plaintiffs' loss resulted from their being obliged to pay "unlawful rates" for the transportation of coal due to such combination and conspiracy was not effective to allege that the rates charged had been declared unlawful by the Interstate Commerce Commission.[38]

Ownership of Lumber Mill by Railroad.—Common ownership or control of a lumber mill and a railroad which is an interstate carrier can not be prohibited 32. Amendment of writ.—West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. United States, 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

33. Summary remedy.—Act of Feb. 4, 1887, § 3.

34. Act Mar. 2, 1889, § 10, 25 Stat. 862, c. 382, which is now § 23 of Interst. Com. Act; Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

35. Combinations and monopolies.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. Ed. 268, 24 S. Ct. 132.

36. "The said contract was not only contrary to his authority and in violation of his duty to this defendant, but was also in violation of law and, particularly in violation of §§ 7 and 10 of the Interstate Commerce Act [Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, §§ 7, 9, 24 Stat. 382; U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3159, 3160], and also paragraphs B, C and D under said § 10, and therefore void, and can not form the basis of plaintiff's suit herein." Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Cox, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 79, 95 S. W. 1124.

37. Establishing through routes.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

38. Charging unlawful rates.—Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 162 Fed. 354.

by the interstate commerce commission nor made the basis of a denial to the railroad of rights accorded to another road not so owned.[39]

§ 4046. Pooling Agreements.—See elsewhere.[40]

§§ 4047-4048. Transportation of Goods Manufactured by Carrier—§ 4047. In General.—The power of congress to regulate commerce can be constitutionally so exerted as to compel a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce to dissociate itself in interest from the commodities which it transports in interstate commerce, even though, by existing state laws, the railroad company may have a lawful right of ownership or association with the commodity upon which the regulation operates.[41] Congress could properly enact, as a regulation of commerce, so much of the Act of June 29, 1906, as forbids a carrier from transporting articles or commodities in interstate commerce when they have been manufactured, mined, or produced by the carrier, or under its authority, and, at the time of transportation, such carrier has not, in good faith, before the act of transportation, dissociated itself therefrom, or when the carrier owns the article or commodity to be transported, in whole or in part, or when the carrier, at the time of transportation, has an interest therein, direct or indirect, in a legal or equitable sense although, by existing state legislation, such carrier may have a lawful right of ownership of or association with the articles or commodities upon which these provisions operate.[42]

Due Process of Law.—Railway companies enjoying the right, under existing state legislation, of ownership of or association with the articles or commodities carried, are not denied the due process of law guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, by so much of the provisions of the Act of June 29, 1906, as forbids a carrier from transporting articles or commodities in interstate commerce when they have been manufactured, mined, or produced by the carrier or under its authority, and, at the time of transportation, such carrier has not in good faith, before transporting them, dissociated itself therefrom, or when the carrier owns the article or commodity, to be transported, in whole or in part, or when the carrier, at the time of transportation, has an interest therein, direct or indirect, in a legal or equitable sense.[43]

Effect of Partial Invalidity of Act.—The possible invalidity of the clause of the act imposing penalties for violations of its provisions forbidding railway carriers from transporting in interstate commerce commodities with which they are associated, or in which they are interested, can not affect the validity of these provisions, since the penalty clause is wholly separable therefrom.[44]

Purpose and Object of Act.—The dissociation of railway companies prior to transportation from the articles or commodities transported, whether such association result from manufacture, mining, production, or ownership, or interest, direct or indirect, is the common purpose of the provisions of the act, making it unlawful for a railway carrier to transport in interstate commerce articles or commodities "manufactured, mined or produced by it or under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest, di-

39. Ownership of lumber mill by railroad.—Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

40. Pooling agreements.—See post, "Pooling Freights," § 4111.

41. Transportation of goods manufactured by carrier.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527; United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. Ed. 458, 31 S. Ct. 387.

42. Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527, reversing United States v. Delaware, etc., Co., 164 Fed. 215.

43. Due process of law.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527, reversing United States v. Delaware, etc., Co., 164 Fed. 215.

44. Effect of partial invalidity of act.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

rect or indirect."[45]

What Is Railroad Company.—A company, chartered to secure coal lands and mine coal, and to construct a canal and railroad for the purpose of transporting the products of its mines, being also engaged as a carrier by rail in the transportation of coal in the channels of interstate commerce, is a "railroad company" within the meaning of the Act of June 29, 1906, prohibiting such companies from transporting in interstate commerce commodities with which they are associated, or in which they are interested.[46]

The statute deals with railroad companies as public carriers, and the fact that they may also be engaged in a private business does not compel congress to legislate concerning them as carriers so as not to interfere with them as miners or merchants. If such carrier hauls for the public and also for its own private purposes, there is an opportunity to discriminate in favor of itself against other shippers in the rate charged, the facility furnished or the quality of the service rendered.[47]

Production, Ownership and Interest.—Transportation when the thing to be transported has been manufactured, mined, or produced by the carrier or under its authority, and at the time of transportation the carrier has not, in good faith, before the act of transportation, dissociated itself therefrom, or when the carrier owns the thing to be transported, in whole or in part, or when the carrier, at the time of transportation, has an interest therein, direct or indirect, in a legal or equitable sense, is all that is forbidden by the provisions of the act making it unlawful for a railway carrier to transport in interstate commerce articles or commodities manufactured, mined, or produced by it or under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect.[48] Following the rule that where a statute is susceptible of two constructions, the court will adopt that construction which will sustain the constitutionality of the act, rather than that which renders it unconstitutional, it is held that the statute must be construed as prohibiting a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce from transporting in such commerce articles or commodities under the following circumstances and conditions: (1) When the article or commodity has been manufactured, mined, or produced by a carrier or under its authority, and, at the time of transportation, the carrier has not, in good faith, before the act of transportation dissociated itself from such article or commodity; (2) when the carrier owns the article or commodity to be transported, in whole or in part; (3) when the carrier, at the time of transportation, has an interest, direct or indirect, in legal or equitable sense, in the article or commodity, not including, therefore, articles or commodities manufactured, mined, produced, or owned, etc., by a bona fide corporation in which the railroad company is a stockholder.[49]

Interest as Stockholder.—The ownership by a railway carrier of stock in a bona fide corporation manufacturing mining, producing, or owning the commodity carried is not the interest, direct or indirect, in such commodity, forbidden to the carrier by the act, but such words are to be taken as embracing only 45. Purpose and object of act.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527, reversing United States v. Delaware, etc., Co., 164 Fed. 215.

"The commodities clause was not an unreasonable and arbitrary prohibition against a railroad company transporting its own useful property, but a constitutional exercise of a governmental power intended to cure or prevent the evils that might result if, in hauling goods in or out, the company occupied the dual and inconsistent position of public carrier and private shipper." Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 363, 34 S. Ct. 65.

46. What is railroad company.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

47. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 363, 34 S. Ct. 65.

48. Production, ownership and interest.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

49. Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

a legal or equitable interest in the commodities to which they refer.[50] While it had been expressly held that stock ownership by a railroad company in a bona fide corporation, irrespective of the extent of such ownership, did not preclude a railroad company from transporting the commodities manufactured, mined, produced, or owned by such corporation,[51] it has been held in a subsequent case that nothing in that decision foreclosed the right of the government to question the power of a railroad company to transport in interstate commerce a commodity manufactured, mined, owned, or produced by a corporation in which the railroad held stock, and where the power of the railroad company as a stockholder was used to obliterate all distinctions between the two corporations. That is to say, where the power was exerted in such a manner as to so commingle the affairs of both as by necessary effect to make such affairs practically indistinguishable, and therefore to cause both corporations to be one for all purposes.[52] In view, therefore, of the express prohibitions of the commodities clause, it must be held that while the right of a railroad company as a stockholder to use its stock ownership for the purpose of a bona fide separate administration of the affairs of a corporation in which it has a stock interest may not be denied, the use of such stock ownership in substance for the purpose of destroying the entity of a producing, etc., corporation, and of commingling its affairs in administration with the affairs of the railroad company, so as to make the two corporations virtually one, brings the railroad company so voluntarily acting as to such producing, etc., corporation within the prohibitions of the commodities clause. In other words, that by the operation and effect of the commodities clause there is a duty cast upon a railroad company proposing to carry in interstate commerce the product of a producing, etc., corporation in which it has a stock interest, not to abuse such power so as virtually to do by indirection that which the commodities clause prohibits—a duty which plainly would be violated by the unnecessary comminglings of the affairs of the producing company with its own, so as to cause them to be one and inseparable.[53]

Where Railroad Has Controlling Interest in Corporation.—The exercise by a railway carrier of its power as a stockholder in a corporation manufacturing, mining, producing, or owning the commodity carried in such manner as to deprive the latter corporation of all independent existence, and to make it virtually but an agency, or dependency, or department of the carrier, is forbidden by the provisions of the act, making it unlawful for a railway carrier to transport in interstate commerce articles or commodities manufactured, mined, or produced by it or under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest direct or indirect.[54]

Mining and Shipping Coal to Separate Company.—The transportation in interstate commerce by a railroad company of coal produced from its mines, but sold at the breakers to a distinct bona fide coal company organized for the purpose, and in which the railroad company owned no stock, is not within the prohibition of the commodities clause of the Hepburn Act.[55] It is insufficient to 50. Interest as stockholder.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

51. Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

52. Stock ownership in sham corporation.—United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. Ed. 458, 31 S. Ct. 387.

53. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. Ed. 458, 31 S. Ct. 387.

54. Where railroad has controlling interest in corporation.—United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. Ed. 458, 31 S. Ct. 387.

55. Mining and shipping coal to separate company.—A contract between a railroad company owning coal mines and a coal company, by which the latter agreed to buy the coal produced by the former f. o. b. at the mines, and to pay for certain grades a per cent of the general average prices at tidewater points, held not to leave in the railroad company after such sales any interest in the coal which rendered its transportation by such company unlawful under the commodities clause of the Hepburn Act. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 213 Fed. 240.

render such transportation unlawful that a comparatively small number of persons own a controlling interest in both the railroad company and the coal company, and that some of the officers and directors of the two are the same, where the business of each is separately conducted, and no discrimination is shown to have been made by the railroad company in favor of the coal company as a shipper.[56]

Both Inbound and Outbound Shipments.—The statute relates to all commodities, except lumber, owned by the company and includes inbound as well as outbound shipments.[57]

§ 4048. Manufactured from Wood.—The exception in favor of timber and manufactured products thereof, contained in the provisions of the act, forbidding railway carriers from transporting in interstate commerce articles or commodities with which they are associated, or in which they are interested, does not render the statute invalid for discrimination.[58]

§ 4049. Limiting Liability. —A limitation of liability in a receipt for an express package is invalid, as to an interstate shipment.[59]

Injury to Goods by Connecting Carrier.—A carrier may not by contract limit the liabilities imposed on it by the Interstate Commerce Act, making the initial carrier of an interstate shipment liable for any loss or injury thereto caused by any connecting carrier, because of the rate charged for the transportation.[60]

§§ 4050-4057. Connecting Carriers—§ 4050. Discriminations.—It is the duty of a connecting carrier to take the cars as they are delivered to it by the initial carrier and in so doing it is not liable for a discrimination practiced by the initial carrier merely because such connecting carrier has participated in the adoption of a joint through rate, reasonable in itself, notwithstanding the provision contained in the Act of February 4, 1887, that a carrier which shall do, cause to be done, or permit to be done, any act, matter or thing in this act prohibited or declared to be unlawful shall be liable to the full amount of the damages sustained by one injured thereby.[61]

Distinguished from Discriminations against Shippers.—There is a great 56. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 213 Fed. 240.

57. Both inbound and outbound shipments.—Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 363, 34 S. Ct. 65.

58. Manufactured from wood.—Attorney General v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 835, 29 S. Ct. 527.

59. Limiting liability.—Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 24 So. 552, 43 L. R. A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Dismukes, 94 Ala. 131, 10 So. 289, 17 L. R. A. 113; Central, etc., R. Co. v. Sims, 169 Ala. 295, 53 So. 826; Southern Pac. Co. v. Crenshaw, 5 Ga. App. 675, 63 S. E. 865; Silverman v. Weir (App. Term), 114 N. Y. S. 6.

60. Injury to goods by connecting carrier.—Central, etc., R. Co. v. Sims, 169 Ala. 295, 53 So. 826.

61. Connecting carriers.—A connecting carrier which takes the cars as they are delivered to it by the initial carrier is not liable for a discrimination in favor of shippers of oil in tank cars and against shippers of oil in barrels, which may be practiced by the initial carrier, merely because such connecting carrier has participated in the adoption of a joint through rate for barrel shipments, which is, in itself, reasonable, although, by Act February 4, 1887, c. 104, § 8, 24 Stat. 379 a carrier which "shall do, cause to be done, or permit to be done, any act, matter, or thing in this act prohibited or declared to be unlawful," shall be liable to the full amount of the damages sustained by one injured thereby. Judgment, Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268.

Where complainant, an interstate carrier, maintained terminal facilities at N., having physical connection with the tracks of other railroads, including the B. & O. Co., over whose lines the B., R. & P. Co. transported freight into N., the latter was entitled to have its cars transported to terminal destination by complainant on the same terms and under the same conditions as prescribed for the traffic of other lines, under Interstate Commerce Act, § 3. Pennsylvania Co. v. United States, 214 Fed. 445.

difference between competing carriers claiming the right to use the facilities of one another, and the patrons of the same carrier contending for equality of treatment.[62]

Recognizing Through Tickets.—The Iron Mountain Railroad from St. Louis to Texarkana with its connections has a branch line to Memphis. The Little Rock and Memphis Railroad runs from Little Rock, where it has a physical connection with the Iron Mountain Railroad, to Memphis. At Memphis each road has equal facilities for connections with, and transfers to, roads running into the states east of the Mississippi River. The East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad with its leased line of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, runs from Memphis to the seaboard. Formerly, and before the building of the branch line of the Iron Mountain Railroad to Little Rock, the Little Rock and Memphis Railroad had traffic arrangements with the Iron Mountain Railroad and the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroads for the through ticketing of passengers both ways. Since the building of its branch line the Iron Mountain Railroad refused to recognize through tickets over the Little Rock and Memphis Railroad to or from points in the Iron Mountain system beyond Little Rock, and the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad declined to keep such tickets on sale, or to offer its passengers a choice of routes, because the Iron Mountain Railroad did not make such tickets; but it did issue on equal terms through tickets over either route to Little Rock itself. As between the Iron Mountain and Little Rock & Memphis roads, this was not a discrimination between connecting lines, prohibited by the Interstate Commerce Act, but only a legitimate offer of the superior facilities of a through line over a local line in competition for the through travel, and that the ownership of a rival line authorized such preference of one's own road; that, as between the Little Rock & Memphis and the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia roads, there was not any unjust, undue, or unlawful discrimination, because the facilities offered by the Iron Mountain, of a longer and through track to points not reached by the other road, were superior to those offered by the local and shorter road, and, until the Iron Mountain would make through rates with it that would afford equal facilities in this respect, there could be no through tickets sold usefully by the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia road, and hence there was no unlawful discrimination in the transaction.[63]

§§ 4051-4052. Facilities—§ 4051. In General.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that every common carrier shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic, between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding and delivery of property and passengers to and from their several lines, and those connecting therewith, and shall not discriminate in their rates and charges between such connecting lines, but shall not be construed as requiring any common carrier to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business.[64] In the absence of statutory provision, the interchange of traffic between two connecting railroads is a matter for contract between them, and the courts have no power to compel such interchange, or to fix the terms on which it shall be made. Nor is such power conferred upon the courts by the Interstate Commerce Act.[65] A railway maintaining a live stock depot as a point of delivery for cattle having a municipality as their general destination can not be compelled to receive live stock billed to a similar depot at substantially the same

62. Distinguished from discriminations against shippers.—Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279, distinguishing Weems Steamboat Co. v. People's Steamboat Co., 214 U. S. 345, 53 L. Ed. 1024, 29 S. Ct. 661, 16 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1222.

63. Recognizing through tickets.—Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 771.

64. Facilities.—Act Feb. 4, 1888, St. at Large 1885-87, p. 379.

65. Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 113, 55 C. C. A. 63, 63 L. R. A. 213, affirmed in 24 S. Ct. 339, 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565.

point on another railway, and to deliver the same to that railway at a point of physical connection between the two roads for ultimate delivery there, by virtue of the provision of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, making it unlawful for common carriers subject to the act to give unreasonable preferences and requiring them to afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivery of property to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith.[66] The provision in the charter of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company requiring the company to permit other companies to form "running connections" with it, includes only such arrangements as to the arrival and departure of freight and passenger trains, and as to stations, platforms, and other facilities, as will enable companies desiring to make connections to do so without serious inconvenience, and does not impose any obligation upon the company to carry freight in the cars in which it is tendered by a connecting line when its own cars are not in use, and the freight would not be injured by transfer to another car.[67]

Wharfage Facilities.—Where a railroad company, owning a wharf extending into public navigable waters, maintained thereon a station and passenger depot, and used the wharf for its own line of steamers, in connection with its railroad traffic. A steamboat company, not a rival of the railroad company in its railroad business, was entitled to the use of the wharf, for a reasonable compensation, to the extent of receiving and discharging passengers and freight.[68] That a wharf is too small to accommodate steamers, other than those of a railroad company which owns it, is not a ground for denying to a steamboat company, not a competitor except in its steamboat business, the right to use the wharf, for a reasonable wharfage, for the purpose of receiving and discharging freight and passengers, since a railroad, as a public carrier, must provide necessary facilities for the transaction of its business with safety and reasonable convenience to its passengers.[69] But a transportation company operating a railway and a line of steamboats connecting at the company's wharf is not required, by the third section of the interstate commerce act, to permit the boats of a competitor to land at such wharf.[70]

Prepayment of Freight.—A common carrier engaged in interstate commerce may at common law, and under the interstate commerce law, demand prepayment of freight charges, when delivered to it by one connecting carrier, without exacting such prepayment when delivered by another connecting carrier, and may advance freight charges to one connecting carrier without advancing such charges to another connecting carrier.[71] The act is not violated by receiving and forwarding, without prepayment of freight or car mileage, cars of other companies containing goods coming from one locality, and refusing to do so, unless prepayment is made, when the goods are from

66. Decree 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, 63 L. R. A. 213, affirmed in Central Stockyards Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. Ed. 565, 24 S. Ct. 339.

67. Oregon, etc., R. Co. v.. Northern Pac. R. Co., 51 Fed. 465, affirmed in 61 Fed. 158, 9 C. C. A. 409. See Act of Cong. July 2, 1864.

68. Wharfage facilities.—Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Ilwaco R., etc., Co., 51 Fed. 611.

69. Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Ilwaco R., etc., Co., 51 Fed. 611.

70. Ilwaco R., etc., Co. v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 673, 6 C. C. A. 495.

71. Prepayment of freight.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Miami Steamship Co., 30 C. C. A. 142, 86 Fed. 407.

The fact that a connecting road carries freight offered by some forwarding roads without prepayment of its charges does not oblige it to do likewise with freight offered by other forwarding roads. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 59 Fed. 400.

An interstate carrier does not subject another carrier to an "undue or unreasonable disadvantage" (Interstate Commerce Act, § 3, cl. 2) by exacting the prepayment of freight on all property received from it at a given station, though it does not require charges to be paid in advance on freight received from other individuals and competing carriers at such station. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 63 Fed. 775, 11 C. C. A. 417, 26 L. R. A. 192, affirming 59 Fed. 400.

a different locality.[72] The charter of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company requiring that company to permit other companies to form running connections with it on fair and equitable terms, includes only arrangements as to the time of arrival and departure of trains, and to stations, platforms, and other facilities, as will enable companies desiring to connect to do so without inconvenience, and does not apply to discrimination in the prepayment of freight and car mileage on goods tendered by connecting lines.[73]

Place of Interchange.—Where the charter of a railroad company provided "that any and all such railroad or railroads hereafter constructed may connect and join with the road hereby contemplated," the connection thus authorized is a physical and not a business connection, and it does not require an interchange of traffic at the point of junction.[74] The fact that a railroad company interchanges traffic with certain railroads, at its regular, established yard or depot (where it has provided all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for that purpose), and refuses to interchange traffic with a new road at a point of connection where no such facilities exist, does not constitute any "discrimination," or any "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," in favor of the railroads with which such interchange is made.[75]

Establishing New Connections.—The act does not require of a common carrier of interstate commerce the duty of either forming new connections or of establishing new stations for the reception and delivery of freights.[76] Under the terms of a contract made by a bridge company and three railroad companies, the railroad companies secured all reasonable and equal facilities for the interchange of cars and traffic between them, which interchange was conducted for many years at the regular, established yard or depot of one of them, and the expenses of such interchange were shared by them in certain fixed proportions. After the passage of the act to regulate commerce, one of the railroad companies voluntarily abandoned those facilities, and changed its business to another bridge, for its own private benefit and advantage, and then sought to compel the company (at whose yard the interchange of traffic had been conducted) to allow such interchange at a new point of connection, and to afford at such point facilities equal to those which the applicant had voluntarily abandoned. The application was properly refused.[77]

Who May Complain.—The Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, provides that carriers, in certain contingencies, shall construct, switch connections on the application of any lateral branch line of railroad or of any shipper tendering interstate traffic, and that, if the carrier fails to install such connection on application therefor in writing by any shipper, then the shipper may complain to the commission. Such act only contemplated a complaint by a shipper, and that a complaint by a lateral branch line railroad did not confer jurisdiction.[78]

One Line Extension of Other.—The offending line, being a separate, independent company from the favored line, owning no stock therein, neither having built, bought, nor leased it, conducted its business, nor received its earnings, could not escape the inhibition of the statute by a mere contract for the interchange of traffic. The effect of such contract could not be to make the one line a mere extension of the other.[79]

72. Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 9 C. C. A. 409, 61 Fed. 158, affirming 51 Fed. 465.

73. Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 9 C. C. A. 409, 61 Fed. 158, affirming 51 Fed. 465. See Act of Cong. July 2, 1864.

74. Place of interchange.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

75. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

76. Establishing new connections.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

77. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

78. Who may complain.—Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 166 Fed. 498.

79. One line extension of other.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 867.

Terminal Company.—Though the offending line and the favored line, being members of a terminal company, a combination of carriers by which the terminus of the favored line was connected with New York, were a legal unit within § 1 of the act providing that it shall apply to any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, when both are used under a common control for a continuous carriage or shipment from one state, it was not thereby relieved from its obligation under the act to all roads connecting directly with itself, of which petitioner was one.[80]

Remedies.—Where one connecting road is about to refuse another equal facilities for the exchange of traffic, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, because of a boycott declared by a labor organization, a court of equity may compel such interchange by mandatory injunction.[81]

§ 4052. Use of Tracks.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that common carriers shall afford equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between 80. Terminal company.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 867.

81. Remedies.—Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 746, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 293, 19 L. R. A. 395.

The normal condition—the status quo—between connecting common carriers under the interstate commerce law is a continuous passage of freight backward and forward between them, which each carrier has a right to enjoy without interruption, exactly as riparian owners have a right to the continuous flow of a stream without obstruction. Since Lord Thurlow's time, the preliminary mandatory injunction has been used to keep clear the stream. Robinson v. Lord Byron, 1 Brown Ch. C. 588; Lane v. Newdigat, 10 Vesey 192. So an obstruction to the flow of interstate freight must be preliminarily enjoined, even though it requires a mandatory injunction. The quasi public nature of the duty to be performed by the common carriers and the irreparable character of the injury likely to result are ample grounds for this. The interstate commerce law recognizes the necessity for such a remedy; for in summary equity proceedings at the instance of the interstate commerce commission, provided in § 16, as amended in 1889, express power to issue injunctions, mandatory or otherwise, to prevent violations of the orders of the commission, is given to circuit courts. Moreover, by a subsequent section, upon the application of an interested person, the district and circuit courts may issue mandamus to compel compliance by the common carrier with the provisions of the act. As this latter proceeding is denominated cumulative in the statute, it does not prevent the remedy by injunction; nor would it, in any event, because the inadequacy of the legal remedy which justifies equitable intervention by injunction is only the inadequacy of a recovery in damages by action at law. Attorney General v. The Mid-Kent Railway Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 100.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. 481, it was held that the duty imposed upon railroad companies by the Interstate Commerce Act, of receiving from connecting roads freight and passengers, is one which the federal courts will enforce by mandatory injunction where the injury resulting from its nonperformance is continuing; and it was further held, following the case of the Wabash Railroad, that a strike of locomotive engineers and firemen upon the petitioner's road, causing a boycott against it by the engineers and firemen of all other lines, defendant's included, and endangering a strike on defendant's line if it receives cars from plaintiff, is no excuse for refusal to receive them. The court said: "In the next place, what disposition shall be made of the complainant's application for a mandatory injunction against the defendant company and its managing officers, compelling them to perform their duty as required by the law of both congress and the state of Iowa? These defendants have appeared by counsel and admitted the truth of the allegations of the bill, and they do not deny that they are required by law to receive and move the complainant's cars. They admit that they have refused to perform this duty, and they give as a reason for their refusal that, if they receive and haul the complainant's cars their firemen and locomotive engineers will abandon their service and leave the company without the means of operating their lines. There can, of course, be no doubt about the law of both the general and state governments requiring the defendant corporation to receive and move the complainant's cars, whether empty or loaded. The law of Iowa provides that it shall be the duty of any railway corporation to receive and transport the empty or loaded cars furnished by any connecting road to be delivered at any station or stations on the line of its road to be loaded or discharged, or reloaded and returned to the road so connecting. 1 McClain's Ann. St., 367, § 10."

their lines, but this shall not be construed as requiring any such carrier to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier engaged in like business.[82] Where the defendant had contracted with a city to allow other roads to use its terminal facilities, and the state had provided by statute that different companies might have a joint use of such facilities. The contract, and the rights of the other roads, were not affected by the above provision but must be determined by the state statutes.[83] And an interstate carrier which enters into an arrangement with a connecting carrier for through billing, rating, and loading, and for the use of its tracks and terminals, is not obliged to make the same arrangement with other connecting carriers, though the physical facilities for an interchange of traffic are the same.[84]

§ 4053. Joint Through Routes.—Prior to the passage of the Act of June 29, 1906, connecting railroads were free to adopt or refuse to adopt joint through tariff rates, and this freedom was not abridged, as between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, by either § 12 of the Act of July 1, 1862, requiring the roads of such companies to be operated as one continuous line, so far as the public or the government are concerned, or § 15 of the Act of July 2, 1864, which requires them to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation without discrimination.[85] The personal preferences of many travelers for a southern route

82. Use of tracks.—The provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, that the requirement that all railroads shall provide reasonable facilities for the interchange of traffic shall not require one carrier to give the use of its track or terminal facilities to another engaged in like commerce, is not a substantive enactment, but a mere interpretation clause designed to restrain, if necessary, the generality of the language preceding it. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt (Ind.), 86 N. E. 328.

83. Iowa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Fed. 391.

84. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 63 Fed. 775, 11 C. C. A. 417, 26 L. R. A. 192, affirming 59 Fed. 400.

85. Joint through routes.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 188 Fed. 102.

Prior to act of 1906.—A court of equity has no power, either at common law or under the interstate commerce act, to compel a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce to enter into a contract with another company for a joint through rate and joint through-routeing of freight and passengers. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 559.

An interstate carrier may enter into a contract with one connecting carrier for through transportation, through joint traffic, through billing, and for the division of through water, without being obligated to enter into a similar contract with another connecting carrier. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Miami Steamship Co., 86 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

No authority is conferred upon common carriers of interstate commerce to issue through tickets to passengers, or through bills of lading for property at through rates, over connecting lines, in the absence of such arrangements between the companies. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 568, 2 L. R. A. 289.

In the absence of through traffic arrangements between two railroad companies, the one has the right to treat freights tendered to it by the other as local business, and to charge for the transportation thereof its local rates to destination; and in doing so no discrimination is made against the other company on the traffic it carries; nor does the company charging local rates on such freights make or give any undue or unreasonable preference to other lines, or to the traffic they handle, with whom it has agreements for through-routeing, and at through joint rates, which may be lower than its rates to the same points. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

Rev. St. § 5258 (embracing Act June 15, 1866), authorizing the carriage of traffic from one state to another, and, to that end, the formation of continuous lines by mutual agreement, confers no power to compel a railroad company to make through routes and through rates with one connecting line because it has, by agreement, made them with another. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

A railroad company, engaged in interstate commerce, can make an exclusive contract with a connecting carrier for through billing and rating, and such contract can not be alleged, by another connecting carrier, as an unjust discrimination. St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 65 Fed. 39.

between eastern points and points on the Northern Pacific Railway between Portland and Seattle do not make the through route via the Northern Pacific Railway unreasonable or unsatisfactory, so as to justify the interstate commerce commission in the exercise of its power to establish through routes where no reasonable or satisfactory through route exists, in ordering the establishment of through routes between those points via the Union Pacific Railway, so as to put the latter road on an equal footing with the Northern Railway Company in the use for through travel of the road belonging to the latter between Portland and Seattle.[86]

Where Route Has Been Established.—The commission has no power to make an order for a new through route if a reasonable and satisfactory through route already exists, and the existence of such a route may be inquired into by the courts.[87] While there was no through rate and no through route there was, in fact, a through shipment from St. Louis to Leadville. Its interstate character could not be destroyed by ignoring the points of origin and destination, separating the rate into its component parts and by charging local rates and issuing local waybills, attempting to convert an interstate shipment into intrastate transportation. For when goods shipped from a point in one state to a point in another are received in transit by a state common carrier, under a conventional division of the charges, such carrier must be deemed to have subjected its road to an arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment within the meaning of the act to regulate commerce. This common arrangement does not depend upon the establishment of a through route or the issue and recognition of a through bill of lading, but may be otherwise manifested.[88]

Routing Goods.—There is no principle of common law which forbids a single railroad corporation, or two or more of such corporations, from selecting, from two or more other corporations, one which they will employ as the agency by which they will send freight beyond their own lines, on through bills of lading, or as their agent to receive freight, and transmit it on through bills to their own lines, and without breaking bulk; and the right to make such selection is not taken away by the interstate commerce law.[89] Nor is a connecting road which permits through billing and routing with one forwarding road oblige to do likewise with another forwarding road, though the latter possesses all the necessary tracks and terminal facilities; and it may still insist on carrying all freight offered by such road in its own cars, and to that end require reloading and rebilling at local rates.[90] The Interstate Commerce Act as amended June 18, 1910, providing that, in all cases where at the time of delivery of a shipment two or more through routes shall have been established, the person making the shipment shall have the right to designate the route of transportation, does not apply to an interstate shipment made in 1907.[91]

Right of Tap Line to Participate in.—Tap line railroads connecting timber lands and lumber mills with trunk line railroads, though owned by the owners of the timber and mills, are entitled to participate with the trunk lines in joint through rates where organized as common carriers under the state laws.[92]

86. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417.

87. Where route exists.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417.

88. Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 233 U. S. 479, 34 S. Ct. 641.

89. Routing goods.—Prescott, etc., R. Co. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 438, explaining New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 867.

90. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 59 Fed. 400.

91. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Hayes (Ind.), 103 N. E. 839.

92. Right of tap line to participate in.—United States v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 741, 234 U. S. 1, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880.

A tap line railroad is entitled to the same allowance from the trunk lines out of joint through rates for logs and lumber offered to the tap line by its proprietary company as it receives out of the joint rate for non-proprietary log and lumber traffic under exceptions in Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, forbidding carriers to transport in interstate commerce articles in which they are associated or interested. United States v. Butler County R. Co., 234 U. S. 29, 34 S. Ct. 748.

§ 4054. Rates.—Railroad tracks connecting iron works with the track of an interstate railroad on the grounds of the iron company and engines used thereon are mere plant facilities, although transferred to a separate company organized as a railroad, and the latter is not a common carrier entitled to share in the interstate rates so far as related to the business of the iron company.[93]

The proportion in which freight earned by two connecting railroads under a joint tariff schedule is divided between them is a matter for their consideration alone, and cannot be taken cognizance of by a court for the purpose of determining that the share received by one constitutes an unjust or discriminative rate, under the interstate commerce law.[94] A reasonable division out of joint rates can not be denied a common carrier for transportation services by the interstate commerce commission because of any past or present derelictions or even the fear of further violations of law.[95]

§§ 4055-4057. Liability of Initial Carrier—§ 4055. In General.—The Act of June 29, 1906, provides that any common carrier receiving property for interstate shipment shall be liable for any loss or injury thereto caused by it or any common carrier to which such property may be delivered, or over whose line such property may pass, and that no contract shall exempt such common carrier from such liability.[96] This provision is not unconstitutional; but is in all respects a valid enactment.[97] But the holder of a bill of lading was not bound to sue the initial carrier, but might sue directly an intermediate carrier for loss of or damage to goods on its line.[98]

What Constitutes Through Shipment.—The delivery of an interstate shipment of freight to an intrastate railroad under a through bill of lading and a guarantee of through rate is a through shipment, and is governed by the Act of June 29, 1906, making initial carriars liable for loss or injury caused by connecting carriers.[99] And so is a bill of lading dated in one state, showing a destination in another, and containing stipulations governing the entire transportation, specifying not only rights, duties, or limitations relating to the parties, but also to subsequent carriers.[1] A bill of lading for a through shipment is a through

93. Rate.—Crane Iron Works v. United States, 209 Fed. 238.

94. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16. See post, "Charges of Connecting Carriers," § 4149.

95. Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

96. Liability of initial carrier.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Stark Grain Co., 103 Tex. 542, 131 S. W. 410; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 170; Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 73; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Carpenter, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 585, 114 S. W. 900; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107; International, etc., R. Co. v. Wilbourne (Tex. Civ. App.), 115 S. W. 111.

Under Rate Act (Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 593 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1164), § 7, an initial carrier is liable for damage caused by the wrongful diversion of an interstate shipment by a connecting carrier in another state. Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 73.

97. The Act of June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 593 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), is not violative of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution, and § 19, art. 1, Const. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 170; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107.

Due process of law.—Act of June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), is not unconstitutional as depriving a common carrier of life or liberty or property without due process of law. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wallace (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 169.

State sovereignty.—Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), does not interfere in any manner with the rights of a state and is not unconstitutional as infringing state sovereignty. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 170.

98. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ray (Tex. Civ. App.), 127 S. W. 281.

99. What constitutes through shipment.—Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 103 Tex. 452, 129 S. W. 594.

1. Southern Pac. Co. v. Meadors & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 129 S. W. 170.

bill, although it names intermediate lines over which the shipment is to pass.[2]

Liability for Delay.—The initial carrier, in an interstate shipment, issuing a through bill of lading and collecting the entire freight charge, is, liable for any damages from delay in shipment over the line of any connecting carrier.[3]

Presumption of Liability.—The common-law presumption that the damage to goods in transportation occurred on the line of the final carrier can have no place in construing the liability over of the carrier on whose line the damages actually occurred to the initial carrier, because the right of the initial carrier to recover against a connecting carrier, under the Act of June 29, 1906, giving a common carrier issuing a receipt or bill of lading to a shipper a right of recovery against the connecting carrier on whose line occurred the actual damage, for which the first carrier became liable to the shipper, since such right is made to rest alone on proof that the damage occurred on such connecting line.[4]

Remedies of Shipper.—The act provides that nothing in the section shall deprive the holder of a bill of lading of any remedy under existing laws.[5]

Jurisdiction and Venue.—An action against an initial carrier to enforce liability under the Act of June 29, 1906,[6] making a common carrier receiving property for interstate shipment liable for loss of or injury to such property caused by any connecting carrier, may be brought before the county court of the county in which the shipment originated, and need not be brought before a federal court, although the Act of Feb. 4, 1887,[7] provides that if any common carrier subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act shall do any act thereby prohibited or declared unlawful, such carrier shall be liable to the person injured for the full amount of damages, together with a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court and taxed as costs in the case, as the action is not founded on any violation of the Interstate Commerce Act or any of its amendments, and is not brought for the purpose of collecting any penalty incurred for the violation of such act.[8] The state courts have jurisdiction of a suit against an initial carrier operating a line within the state for goods lost in transit under a contract for through shipment to another state.[9]

Prerequisites to Recovery of Damages.—In an action against an initial carrier for the value of goods consigned to defendant which were never delivered,

2. The initial carrier issued at New Orleans a bill of lading reciting that it had received two cars of fruit to be transported by them and by steamers, railroad companies, or forwarding lines with which it connected to Waco, Tex., with as reasonable dispatch as its general business permitted; the consignment being to Waco via a named line at Houston. Another provision limited the initial carrier's liability to injuries happening on its own line. Rate Act (Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 595 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1164]), § 7, amending the Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 20, 24 Stat. 386 U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3169), makes any common carrier receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state liable for injury caused by it or any carrier over whose lines the property passes, and forbids the exemption of the initial carrier from liability by any contract. Another paragraph provides for recovery over by it against the carrier on whose lines the injury occurred. Held, that the bill of lading was for a through shipment from New Orleans to Waco, though it named intermediate lines over which the shipment was to pass, so that the initial carrier could not limit its liability to negligence on its own line. Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 73.

3. Liability for delay.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Carpenter, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 585, 114 S. W. 900.

4. Presumption of liability.—Carlton Produce Co. v. Velasco, etc., R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 1187.

5. Remedies of shipper.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ray (Tex. Civ. App.), 127 S. W. 281.

6. Jurisdiction and venue.—Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909).

7. Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 8, 24 Stat. 382 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3159).

8. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107, followed in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wallace (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 169.

9. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 103 Tex. 452, 129 S. W. 594.

the plaintiff is under no obligation to prove that the freight had not been paid not what the freight rate was.[10]

Time for Making Claim.—A stipulation in a bill of lading issued by the initial carrier of an interstate shipment that claims for loss must be made to the agent at point of delivery promptly after the arrival of the goods, and if delayed for more than thirty days after due time for delivery no carrier shall be liable, is a reasonable requirement for the protection of the initial carrier, liable for loss or injury caused by it or any connecting carrier, and must be complied with or the carrier is relieved from liability, unless the stipulation is waived.[11]

§ 4056. Limiting Liability.—Under the provision of the act making the initial carrier of an interstate shipment liable for loss on connecting lines, the initial carrier of such a shipment can not limit its liability to damages occurring on its own line.[12] Such liability is not affected by a bill of lading which stipulates that such carrier in receiving the shipment, limited its liability to damages done on its own line.[13]

§ 4057. Recovery over against Other Carrier.—The Act of June 29, 1906, provides for the recovery over by the initial carrier against the carrier on whose lines the damage or injury to the goods occurred.[14] A common carrier who has been held liable in damages at the suit of a shipper to whom it has issued a receipt may recover from a common carrier on whose connecting line the actual loss or damage occurred the amount that it may have been required to pay the shipper under the provisions of the same section. The right so granted to the carrier giving such receipt or bill of lading can not be impaired by any agreement between the shipper or holder of the receipt or bill of lading and any of the connecting carriers.[15] A shipper brought action against the defendant who had issued the receipt and two other carriers, and, upon the payment of the money to the shipper by the other carriers, the suit was discontinued as to them, and they were given an indemnity by the shipper against all liability. If the damage was caused by the indemnified companies, they could, under their indemnity, recover over against the shipper, so that the effect would be to raise an estoppel against the shipper's recovery from them or from the initial carrier, but that no such estoppel would arise unless the damage was caused by the act of one of the indemnified companies.[16] Where, in an action against connecting carriers for damages to a shipment of horses, the evidence was sufficient to sustain a judgment against the delivering carrier for all the damages, it can not be heard to complain on appeal that the judgment was against it for only one-half of the

10. Prerequisites to recovery of damages.—Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107.

11. Time for making claim.—Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Flanary & Co., 111 Va. 816, 69 S. E. 1107.

12. Limiting liability.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Meadors & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 129 S. W. 170; Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 73; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Carpenter, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 585, 114 S. W. 900; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107; International, etc., R. Co. v. Wilbourne (Tex. Civ. App.), 115 S. W. 111.

13. International, etc., R. Co. v. Wilbourne (Tex. Civ. App.), 115 S. W. 111.

The Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 593 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1167]), making the initial carrier of an interstate shipment liable for loss or injury to the shipment caused by it or any connecting carrier, renders void a stipulation in a contract for an interstate shipment limiting the liability of the initial carrier to loss occurring on its own line. Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Flanary & Co., 69 S. E. 1107, 111 Va. 816.

14. Recovery over against other carrier.—Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 73. See Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Carpenter, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 585, 114 S. W. 900; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper Co., 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107; International, etc., R. Co. v. Wilbourne (Tex. Civ. App.), 115 S. W. 111.

15. Carlton Produce Co. v. Velasco, etc., R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 1187.

16. Carlton Produce Co. v. Velasco, etc., R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 131 S. W. 1187.

damages, and the receiving carrier can not complain of a division of the damages as the interstate commerce act makes any common carrier receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state liable for any damage to such property caused by it or any other common carrier to which the property is delivered.[17] Where the damage from delay in transportation is loss of a market, and not deterioration in the goods shipped, it is error to charge that, if a verdict is found against any of the connecting carriers, the damages should be apportioned among them according to the degree of negligence of which either was guilty.[18]

§§ 4058-4149. Rates and Charges—§ 4058. In General.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that all charges made for services rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property, or in connection therewith, or for the receiving, delivering, storing, or handling of such property, shall be reasonable and just, and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful,[19] whether it be because too high or too low.[20]

Power of Congress.—Congress, in the exercise of its power over commerce, could enact the provisions of which rendered unenforceable a prior contract, valid when made, by which an interstate carrier agreed to issue annual passes for life in consideration of a release of a claim for damages.[21] There is no vested right in the shipper or in the carrier to have an agreement for free or reduced transportation or for rebates consummated by the payment of the rebate arranged for, or the performance of the stipulated service at the free or reduced rate. In other words, the power of congress to regulate commerce is not hampered by any

17. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Fenley (Tex. Civ. App.), 118 S. W. 845.

18. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Carpenter, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 585, 114 S. W. 900.

19. Rates and charges.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Covington, etc., Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. Ed. 560, 17 S. Ct. 198; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Cutting v. Florida R., etc., Co., 30 Fed. 663.

20. Either too high or too low.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

21. Power of congress.—The constitutional liberty of the citizen to make contracts was not infringed by the enactment by congress, in the exercise of its power over commerce, of the provisions of Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 6, 34 Stat. 592 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1163), which rendered unenforceable a prior contract, valid when made, by which an interstate carrier agreed to issue annual passes for life in consideration of a release of a claim for damages. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, reversing decree, 118 S. W. 982, 133 Ky. 652.

The agreement between the railroad company and the Mottleys must necessarily be regarded as having been made subject to the possibility that, at some future time, congress might so exert its whole constitutional power in regulating interstate commerce as to render that agreement unenforceable, or to impair its value. That the exercise of such power may be hampered or restricted to any extent by contracts previously made between individuals or corporations is inconceivable. The framers of the constitution never intended any such state of things to exist. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671.

Contracts for rebates.—And this is true, with respect to contracts for rebates, even though the property was transported before the act went into effect. The fact that the contract has been carried out to that extent confers no vested right upon the shipper to have it completed by the payment of the rebate agreed upon. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

obligation to preserve existing agreements intact or to deprive the parties thereto of the right to carry the same into execution only upon the payment of compensation for the rights thus injured or destroyed, but all such contracts must be considered as having been entered into subject to the power of congress at some future time to render the same illegal and impossible of performance through the enactment of statutes in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce. Were it otherwise, the extent to which the power of congress could be restricted would be measured only by the skill and foresight which designing parties could bring to bear in framing their agreements.[22]

Compliance with Statute.—The very terms of the statute, that charges must be reasonable, that discrimination must not be unjust, and that preference or advantage to any particular person, firm, corporation or locality must not be undue or unreasonable, necessarily imply that strict uniformity is not to be enforced.[23]

Estoppel to Collect Rate.—A railroad can not estop itself from right to collect the rate for carriage which, by the Interstate Commerce Act, it is required to charge.[24] As the published rates prevail over those agreed upon by the parties, the carrier is not estopped to collect the full amount prescribed by the rates published under the statute where such amount is in excess of that which the carrier by contract with the shipper has agreed to accept for a given shipment.[25]

Common Law Does Not Apply.—In an action for damages for charging unreasonable rates for transportation from one state to another, shipments made before the adoption of the interstate commerce act are governed by the common law, and those made after the adoption of that act by the common law as modified by the act.[26] The common-law rule forbidding common carriers from exacting unreasonable charges does not apply to interstate commerce, though the contract of carriage is made in a state where that rule prevails, since such commerce is governed solely by the laws of the United States, and the United States have never adopted the common law.[27]

Anti-Trust Act Does Not Apply.—The Sherman anti-trust law [28] does not give any right of action for damages sustained by the payment of excessive, unjust, or unreasonable rates to interstate carriers, such relief being provided for by the Interstate Commerce Act.[29]

§ 4059. Just and Reasonable.—The act requires that all charges made for transportation shall be reasonable.[30] When relief by way of damages is sought under the provisions of the interstate commerce act, upon the averment that a shipper has been charged an unreasonable rate for goods transported by a railway company, the plaintiff, in order to be entitled to recover, must show that the rate charged is unreasonable according to the provisions of that act.[31]

22. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, reversing 133 Ky. 652, 118 S. W. 982.

23. Compliance with statute.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

24. Estoppel to collect rate.—Louisiana R., etc., Co. v. Holly, 127 La. 615, 53 So. 882.

25. Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

26. Common law does not apply.—Murray v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 62 Fed. 24.

27. Swift v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 58 Fed. 858.

28. Anti-Trust Act does not apply.—(Act Cong. July 2, 1890, c. 647, § 7, 26 Stat. 210 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3202]).

29. Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 162 Fed. 354.

30. Just and reasonable.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 56.

Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 1, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154], requires that all charges made for the transportation of property shall be reasonable. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

31. Van Patten v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 81 Fed. 545.

Re-Enactment of Common Law.—The interstate commerce act which prohibits carriers from the imposition of unjust or unreasonable rates, is an express adoption by the national legislature of the principle of the common law on this topic.[32]

Opposite Directions between Same Points.—It has often been recognized by the commission that the mere fact that a rate is higher one way between the same points than it is the other does not prove that the higher rate is unreasonable.[33] And this is particularly true where there is a preponderance of empty cars moving in the one direction, of where there is here some suggestion. There is also some evidence that the rates westward from Mobile to New Orleans are lower than they should be, all of which goes to show that there is practically nothing to be made out of this contention.[34]

Competition.—Rates to a noncompetitive point can not be held unjust and unreasonable in themselves, and therefore unlawful, under the first section of the act, where they are made up of the rates charged to the nearest competitive point through which the shipments pass, which are low rates, forced by severe competition, combined with the local rates fixed by the state railroad commission between such point and the point of destination, thus giving the noncompetitive point the full benefit of whatever reduction in rates competition has effected on the line of the shipment, and where the total rates so charged are relatively just, as compared with those to other points in the state, on other lines of road, and similarly situated.[35]

Charge for Reconsignment.—An additional charge by a carrier of two cents per hundredweight for the privilege of reconsigning hay at East St. Louis, originating in northwestern territory and shipped into southeastern territory, is excessive, within § 1 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, prohibiting excessive rates, and thereby produced an unjust discrimination, in violation of §§ 2 and 3 of the act.[36]

Charge for Icing.—An icing charge made by a carrier in transporting interstate commerce is not prima facie unreasonable solely because it exceeds the actual cost of the ice alone; the carrier being entitled to charge a reasonable profit on the service.[37]

Terminal Charges.—A separate and fixed terminal charge of two dollars per car on live stock consigned to or from Chicago, made by the railroads entering that city, in addition to the charge for transportation over their own lines, to cover the cost of transferring such cars from their lines to the Union Stock Yards, which constitute the live stock market of the city, over the tracks owned by the stock yards company, and which is shown to be approximately the average cost of such service, when adopted and published as a part of their rates in accordance with the requirements of the interstate commerce law, does not render 32. Re-enactment of common law.—Tift v. Southern R. Co., 123 Fed. 789.

33. Opposite directions between same points.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541; Duncan v. Atch., Topeka & Santa Fe, 6 Interst. Com. Comm. R. 85, 103; McLoon v. Boston & Maine R. R., 9 Interst. Com. Comm. R. 642; Weil v. Pennsylvania R. R., 11 Interst. Com. Comm. R. 627.

34. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

35. Competition.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 83; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 57 C. C. A. 224, 120 Fed. 934.

36. Charge for reconsignment.—Judgment, St. Louis, etc., Grain Co. v. Southern R. Co., 149 Fed. 609, affirmed in 82 C. C. A. 614, 153 Fed. 728.

37. Charge for icing.—Geraty v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 227.

An order of the interstate commerce commission fixing a charge of $7.50 per car for services rendered in shipments of citrus fruits from California to the East, which, being pre-cooled, required no reicing, will not be disturbed on the ground that the carriers were required to haul the ice without reasonable compensation, where the revenue from the car is greater than that derived from a car of standard refrigeration, without corresponding increase in cost. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

such rates unreasonable and unjust, although the roads themselves furnish no terminal facilities at Chicago for handling stock, and the Union Stock Yards were originally established, and have ever since been used, as the general depot for live stock by all the roads.[38]

A combination rate made by adding to a competitive through rate charged between a point of shipment and a basing point a noncompetitive local rate charged between such basing point and a local station beyond is not violative of the Interstate Commerce Act.[39]

Penalty for Overcharge.—A violation of Interstate Commerce Act providing that, if a carrier willfully violates any provisions of the act, it shall be liable for penalty, is not made out by proof of an overcharge due to accident or mistake, but is only established by evidence of a willful act or omission.[40]

§ 4060. Established by Carrier.—Carriers have the right in the first instance to fix their own rates, subject to the supervisory power of the commission under the interstate commerce law.[41] It must be remembered that railroads are the private property of their owners; that while, from the public character of the work in which they are engaged, the public has the power to prescribe rules for securing faithful and efficient service and equality between shippers and communities, yet, in no proper sense, is the public a general manager.[42] Subject to the two leading prohibitions that their charges shall not be unjust or unreasonable, and that they shall not unjustly discriminate, so as to give undue preference or disadvantage to persons or traffic similarly circumstanced, the act to regulate commerce leaves common carriers as they were at the common law, free to make special contracts looking to the increase of their business, to classify their traffic, to adjust and apportion their rates so as to meet the necessities of commerce, and generally to manage their important interests upon the same principles which are regarded as sound, and adopted in other trades and pursuits.[43] "Section 13 authorizes any person complaining to apply to the commission, which shall in-

38. Terminal charges.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 C. C. A. 209, 103 Fed. 249, affirmed in 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

The imposition by railroad companies, in addition to the terminal charge embraced in the through rates to Chicago, of a terminal charge of $2 per car for delivering live stock to the Union Stock Yards in Chicago, although not justified by an additional average charge of $1 per car for trackage by the Union Stock Yards Company, can not be said to be unjust and unreasonable, where the through rates to Chicago have since been reduced from $10 to $15 per car, both the terminal charges and the through rates as reduced being in themselves just and reasonable when separately considered as distinct charges. Decree in 43 C. C. A. 209, 103 Fed. 249, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 22 S. Ct. 824, 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182.

39. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 69 Fed. 227.

40. Penalty for overcharge.—United States v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 185 Fed. 820.

41. Established by carrier.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 76 Fed. 183, question certified and determined in 167 U. S. 479, 493, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

Railway companies may contract with shippers for a single transportation or for successive transportations, subject to a change of rates in the manner provided in the interstate commerce act. Judgment, 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

42. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

43. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45, quoting from the opinion in 21 C. C. A. 51, 74 Fed. 715.

stitute an investigation. Section 15 authorizes the commission to pass upon the complaint. Section 16 authorizes it to make an award of damages, and provides a method by which the circuit court of the United States may enforce the payment of the damages; or, if the order is for anything other than the payment of money, may enforce obedience to it by injunction or other proper process. These provisions indicate that the intention of congress is that the carrier shall have the right to fix its rates in the first place; that the Interstate Commerce Commission may, upon investigation, determine them to be unreasonable; and that the circuit court of the United States may then, either at law or in equity enforce the orders of the commission. In this way a uniform system can be maintained, and inconsistent rulings as to reasonableness between courts and the commission, or between different courts, avoided."[44]

Operation and Effect.—The rates provided and published by carriers under and pursuant to the Interstate Commerce Act control over the rates agreed upon between the carrier and shipper whenever there is a conflict between the two.[45] A voluntary rate, established to meet competition, is not to be taken as the measure of what is reasonable.[46]

Where Not Unjust, Unreasonable nor Discriminatory.—Subject to the two leading prohibitions that their charges shall not be unjust and unreasonable, and that they shall not unjustly discriminate so as to give undue preference or disadvantage to persons or traffic similarly circumstanced, the Interstate Commerce Act leaves common carriers as they were at the common law, free to make special rates looking to the increase of their business, to classify their traffic, to adjust and apportion their rates so as to meet the necessities of commerce and their own situation and relation to it, and generally to manage their important interests upon the same principles which are regarded as sound and adopted in other trades and pursuits.[47]

§§ 4061-4065. Established by Commission—§ 4061. Under Original Act.—Under the original act it was held that congress had not conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the legislative power to prescribe rates, either maximum, minimum or absolute.[48] The power to pass upon the reason-

44. Wickwire Steel Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 181 Fed. 316.

45. Operation and effect.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

46. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541, citing Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. Ed. 858, 19 S. Ct. 565; Frederich v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., 18 Interst. Com. Comm. R. 481, 484; Breese-Trenton Mining Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 19 Interst. Com. Comm. R. 598, 600.

47. Where not unjust, unreasonable nor discriminatory.—Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Kutter, 147 Fed. 51, 77 C. C. A. 315, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 21 C. C. A. 51, 74 Fed. 715; S. C., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

48. Established by commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 202 U. S. 613, 50 L. Ed. 1171, 26 S. Ct. 766; Southern Pac. Co. v. Colorado Fuel, etc., Co., 42 C. C. A. 12, 101 Fed. 779; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northeastern R. Co., 27 C. C. A. 631, 83 Fed. 611; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107; Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 83 Fed. 249; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 505, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. Ed. 970, 10 S. Ct. 462; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. Ed. 1014, 14 S. Ct. 1047; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. Ed. 567, 15 S. Ct. 484; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. Ed. 77; Peik v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. Ed. 97; Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. Ed.

ableness of existing rates does not imply a right to prescribe rates. The reasonableness of the rate, in a given case, depends on the facts, and the function of the commission is to consider these facts and give them their proper weight. If the commission, instead of withholding judgment in such a matter until an issue shall be made and the facts found, itself fixes a rate, that rate is prejudged by the commission to be reasonable.[49]

Legislative and Judicial Acts.—The power to prescribe rates is legislative. It is one thing to inquire whether the rates which have been charged and collected are reasonable—that is a judicial act; but an entirely different thing to prescribe rates which shall be charged in the future—that is a legislative act, and beyond its powers.[50] The power given is the power to execute and enforce, not to legislate. The power given is partly judicial, partly executive and administrative, but not legislative.[51]

By Application to Court for Mandamus.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has not the right to prescribe rates which shall control in the future, by their application to the court for a mandamus to compel the companies to comply with their decision, that is, to abide by their legislative determination as to the maximum rates to be observed in the future.[52]

Joint Rates.—Modern commerce is largely carried on over railways owned and operated by different companies; that congress in passing the Interstate Commerce Act assumed the power to determine the reasonableness of joint tariffs as applied to connecting lines between the several states.[53] It is competent for the commission or the courts to consider the through rate, however composed, or however between different railroads so as to make a given charge, the reasonableness of which is attacked, a mere division of a through rate. Whether the disputed advance is made over one road or the other, or in the rates over all, can make no difference.[54]

§ 4062. Under Amendment of 1906.—It has been suggested that the traffic managers are much better able, by reason of their knowledge and experience, to fix rates, and to decide what discriminations are justified by the circumstances, than the courts. This can not be conceded so far as it relates to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which, by reason of the experience of its members in this kind of controversy, and their great opportunity for full information, is, in a sense, an expert tribunal.[55] It may be added that whether the members

791, 6 S. Ct. 542, 628; Thacker Coal, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 67 W. Va. 448, 68 S. E. 107, 28 L. R. A., N. S., 108.

In territories.—The Interstate Commerce Commission, prior to the amendment of the Act of August 28, 1906 (Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154] as amended by Act Cong. Aug. 28, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584), had no jurisdiction to fix freight rates on shipments wholly within a territory. Ft. Smith, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler Cotton Oil Co., 25 Okla. 82, 106 Pac. 10.

49. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

50. Legislative and judicial acts.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

51. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

52. By application to court for mandamus.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

53. Joint rates.—Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. Ed. 1151, 22 S. Ct. 900.

54. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223.

55. Under amendment of 1906.—East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 39 C. C. A. 413, 99 Fed. 52; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

of the commission be in fact expert or otherwise is not open to question, for they are, by the act, required to execute and enforce its provisions regulating commerce.[56] The power to prescribe rates is conferred on the commission by the amendment of June 29, 1906. Under the amended act therefore, rates may not only be investigated and be pronounced unjust or unreasonable or discriminatory, but other rates may be prescribed.[57]

Exclusive Power of Commission.—Exclusive right to fix rates for interstate commerce being vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission, the shippers and the courts are required to treat charges made as reasonable so long as they are acquiesced in by the commission.[58] What is a proper rate on fruit in precooling shipments, or a fair charge for hauling necessary ice or rendering other transportation services are all rate-making matters committed to the commission. It may determine what shall be the difference in rate between carload and less than carload lots. It may decide whether the difference in revenue, due to a difference in method of loading, warrants a difference in the rate on carload shipments of the same article. It may prescribe the form in which schedules shall be prepared and arranged and may approve tariffs stating that the single rate includes both the line haul and accessorial services absorbed in the rate. Conversely, it may prescribe a tariff fixing a through rate which includes not only the haul of the fruit, but the haul of the ice necessary to keep the fruit in condition. All these are matters committed to the decision of the administrative body, which, in each instance, is required to fix reasonable rates and establish reasonable practices. The courts have not been vested with any such power. They can not make rates. They can not interfere with rates fixed or practices established by the commission unless it is made plainly to appear that those ordered are void.[59]

Absolute or Arbitrary Power.—The authority granted to the Interstate Commerce Commission by § 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act to prescribe just and reasonable rates when it shall be of the opinion that the rates fixed by the carrier are unreasonable, is not an absolute or arbitrary power to act on any considerations which the commission may deem best for the public, the shipper, and the carrier, but its orders must be based on transportation considerations, and, while it may give weight to all factors bearing either on the cost or the value of the transportation services, it must disregard as well the demand of the shipper for protection from legitimate competition, domestic or foreign, for unlimited markets, or for the enforcement of equitable estoppels arising from a justifiable expectation that past rates will be maintained, as the demand of the carrier for the maximum rate under which the traffic will move freely.[60]

Restrictions on Power of Commission.—The provision which authorizes and empowers the Interstate Commerce Commission whenever, after full hearing upon a complaint, it shall be of the opinion that the prescribed conditions exist, to determine and prescribe maximum rates to be charged by a carrier, places no restrictions on the commission in respect to the matters which it may take into consideration, or the weight it shall give to every of such matters in informing itself what

56. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

57. (Act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. at L. 589, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1158); Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 34 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493; Lipman v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 90 S. C. 517, 73 S. E. 1026.

58. Exclusive power of commission.—Geraty v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 227.

59. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

60. Absolute or arbitrary power.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 190 Fed. 591.

opinion it ought to give, except that it shall not abuse its authority and proceed arbitrarily without regard to the justice of the case, or give a judgment not fairly within its power.[61]

For Period of Two Years.—If a complaint is made to the Interstate Commerce Commission concerning the unreasonableness of a rate, that body has the authority to examine the subject, and, if it finds the rate complained of is, in and of itself, unreasonable, having regard to the service rendered, to order the desisting from charging such rate, and to fix a new and reasonable rate to be operative for a period of two years.[62]

Joint Rates.—The authority of the commission to establish through routes and joint rates is conditioned by the proviso that "no reasonable or satisfactory through route exists." This condition is not addressed solely to the opinion of the commission, but may be re-examined by the courts as a jurisdictional fact.[63]

As to One of Several Connecting Carriers.—The Interstate Commerce Commission acting on complaint of a shipper of unreasonable through charges made up of the separate charges over connecting lines has power to revise the rate on one line only as applied to the through transportation.[64]

Fixing Rate Zones.—The act does not confer power on the Interstate Commerce Commission to lower through rates between certain points, as between Atlantic seaboard points and Missouri River points, and between Mississippi River points and Denver, without changing the rates to intermediate points, or finding that existing rates are unjust or unreasonable, or otherwise in violation of the act; the sole purpose and effect being to arbitrarily create zones of trade, tributary to given trade and manufacturing centers, and counteract the commercial advantages possessed by certain cities by reason of their geographical position or otherwise, by giving Atlantic Coast and Missouri River cities an artificial advantage over intermediate points in shipments to the Missouri River and westward to points east of Denver, and the east Mississippi cities, and Denver an advantage over Missouri River cities to points west of Denver.[65]

Fixing Through to Equal Local Rates.—On complaint made by shippers in New Orleans to the complainant railroad company that certain through rates on certain classes of goods were unreasonably high and amounted to more than the sum of the local rates, which had been in force for twenty years, and asking for a reduction, the complainant changed its schedule by raising the local rates so that their sum should equal the through rates which it had been charging. Thereafter the New Orleans board of trade filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which, after notice to the complainant and a full hearing, found that the rates charged were unjust and unreasonable and entered an order requiring a reduction of the local rates to the old schedule, and the reduction of the through rates to the sum of the locals so reduced. The complainant then brought suit to 61. Restrictions on power of commission.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

The interstate commerce act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 15, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165]), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. 589 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1158), conferring power on the interstate commerce commission to determine and prescribe "just and reasonable maximum rates," does not intend to prescribe any closer definition of the quality of an act done by the commission which will defeat its validity than that it is prohibited by the Constitution, or by legislation clearly or by necessary implication forbidding it. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

62. For period of two years.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

63. Joint rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

64. As to one of several connecting carriers.—Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 614.

65. Fixing rate zones.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 171 Fed. 680.

enjoin the enforcement of such order. There was no claim that the rates fixed thereby were confiscatory or unremunerative. On the facts appearing the order was within the scope of the powers of the commission, and that there was no ground upon which the court was authorized to interfere with its enforcement.[66]

Fixing Relative Rate.—"The point of the complainants' contention is that the commission, having found that the rates so complained of by the milling company were discriminatory, was bound to prescribe the maximum rate to be charged in the future for the services, but that it failed to do so, and exceeded its powers by prescribing relative rates. If the power conferred upon the commission were simply and alone to prescribe maximum rates, there would be much force in the complainants' contention. There is a marked distinction between that power and the power to fix minimum or absolute rates. There is still greater distinction between it and the power to fix relative rates; for, strictly speaking, power to prescribe the relations which shall exist between charges is not power to fix them at all. It is necessary to look further than to the power to prescribe maximum rates to find authority for the order in question. This order attempted to remove the discrimination against the milling company. It prescribed, in substance, that the charges against it should be the same as those charged other shippers for services similar in their nature. It did not prescribe how the charges should be equalized. Raising the rate to the Western shipper would have complied with the order as well as lowering the rate to the milling company. The end to be attained was the removal of the discrimination. Now, the removal of discriminations is one of the primary purposes of the act to regulate commerce, its supplements, and amendments. Many provisions are directed to that end. Consequently it is not to the specific power to prescribe maximum rates, but to the broad powers, applicable in the case of violations of the act by unjust discriminations, conferred by § 12, 'to execute and enforce the provisions of this act,' and, by § 15, 'to make an order that the carrier shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the commission find the same to exist,' that resort must be had." [67]

Where Other Schedules Deranged.—It is no objection to the validity of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission determining and prescribing rates to be charged by a carrier that it would derange the schedule of rates on other routes.[68]

Power to Protect Industries and Interests.—The order of the interstate commerce commission reducing the blanket rate charged by railroad companies for the carriage of lemons from Pacific Coast points to points east of the Rocky Mountains, is void as beyond the powers of the commission, because based primarily on the assumed authority to protect the lemon industry against foreign competition, and not on traffic considerations.[69] An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission setting aside new rates on lumber between certain points, and restoring substantially the old rates, is void as beyond its powers, where, from the record and the opinion of the commission, and from the express exclusion of one of the points from the benefit of the reduced rate, and the reasons assigned for such exclusion, it is clear that the commission was not exercising its authority to condemn unjust and unreasonable rates and fix reasonable ones, but was acting upon the assumption that it had the right to protect the lumber interests from the consequences of a change in rates, even if the change was from a rate which had been fixed unreasonably low, for the purpose of encouraging the industry, to a higher rate which is not in itself unjust or unreasonable.[70] But the Interstate 66. Fixing through to equal local rates.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

67. Power to fix relative rate.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

68. Where other schedules deranged.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

69. Power to protect industries and interests.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 190 Fed. 591.

70. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288, reversing decree, 177 Fed. 963.

Commerce Commission can not be said to have ordered a reduction in the rates on lumber because of the effect upon the lumber industry of the carriers' action in advancing the rates, where, although the commission considered that subject, its opinion, taken as a whole, affirmatively shows that it confined itself to the exercise of its statutory power to condemn unjust and unreasonable rates and fix reasonable ones.[71]

§ 4063. Prerequisites to Establishing.—By the express provisions of the statute, before going on to prescribe future rates, the commission must reach the conclusion that the existing rates established by the carrier are unjust and unreasonable.[72] It is only where after due notice and a full hearing, whether on complaint of a shipper or upon investigation by the commission of its own motion, it is made to appear that the rate is unjust and unreasonable that the commission is empowered to fix another.[73]

§ 4064. Form and Requisites of Order.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has no power to annul or change a rate, regulation, or practice established by a railroad company by its filed and published schedules, except by a formal order made in conformity to the Act of June 29, 1906.[74] Where the commission does not state in its order how long it should remain in force, nevertheless this inaction on the part of the commission does not invalidate the order. The act itself prescribes the maximum time an order can remain in force. The commission may prescribe a shorter time, but, in the absence of such limitation, an order remains in force the maximum time of two years. The law reads the limitation into it. But, while the absence of an express limitation in an order does not render it void, there is no reason why the direction implied in the statute that the time be prescribed in the order should not be complied with. There is no merit whatever in the contention of the commission, that there is a distinction with respect to the application of the two-year limitation between affirmative and negative orders.[75]

§ 4065. Review of Courts.—Questions of Law.—Enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, reducing gathering rates for citrus fruits and vegetables from production points in Florida to a basing point in the same state, will be enjoined where rendered without any evidence to support it; this being a question of law, which it is the duty of the courts to decide.[76]

Affirmative Order.—An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission which, amending a prior order refusing to compel certain trunk line railroads to establish or re-establish through routes and joint rates to certain tap lines, and which required the trunk line to desist from making allowances to the tap lines, is affirmative in character and reviewable in the commerce court.[77]

71. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

72. Prerequisites to establishing.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

73. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

74. Form and requisites of order.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 207 Fed. 733.

75. Under the provision of § 15 of the interstate commerce law (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165]), as amended by the Hepburn act (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. 589 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 900]), that "all orders of the commission, except for the payment of money, shall take effect within such reasonable time, not less than thirty days, and continue in force for such period, not exceeding two years, as shall be prescribed in the order of the commission" unless suspended or set aside, etc., an order relating to rates is not invalid because it fails to prescribe the time it shall remain in force, but in such case the order remains in force for two years, the maximum time prescribed by the statute; but the commission should comply with the implied requirement of the statute and fix the time. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

76. Review of courts.—Florida, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 234 U. S. 167, 34 S. Ct. 867.

77. Affirmative order.—United States v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 1, 34 S. Ct. 741, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880.

§ 4066. Established by Court.—Where an interstate carrier charged plaintiff the regular posted tariff rates, plaintiff could not maintain an action at law either under the Anti-Trust Act,[78] or the Interstate Commerce Act,[79] for a readjustment of such rates on the ground that the same were unreasonable or unlawful, its remedy being by application to the Interstate Commerce Commission to have the schedule of tariffs adjusted on a reasonable and lawful basis.[80] It is not within the legitimate province of a court of equity, in a controversy between interstate carriers and shippers, to interpose and fix a maximum freight rate, either upon an independent consideration of what is a reasonable charge or by relation to some other rate then or therefore in force, and thereupon enjoin the carrier from demanding more than the rate so established, inasmuch as such an order effectually deprives an interstate carrier of the right to fix its rate in the first instance, and to change the same, which power, as it seems, is conceded to the carrier by the Interstate Commerce Act.[81]

§§ 4067-4074. Determination of Reasonableness of Rate.—§ 4067. In General.—The commission is the tribunal that is intrusted with the execution of the interstate commerce laws, and has been given very comprehensive powers in the investigation of and determination of the proportion which the rates charged shall bear to service rendered, and this power exists, whether the system of rates be old or new. If old, interests will have probably become attached to them, and, it may be, will be disturbed or disordered if they be changed. Such circumstance is, of course, proper to be considered, and constitutes an element in the problem of regulation, but it does not take jurisdiction away to entertain and attempt to resolve the problem.[82] The power to determine the reasonableness of interstate joint tariff rates is conferred by the Interstate Commerce Act.[83] The Interstate Commerce Commission has original and exclusive jurisdiction to determine the question of the reasonableness of an established rate for the interstate transportation of freight, and when a schedule of rates has been duly filed and has gone into effect the rates thereby prescribed are the only lawful rates until changed by the commission, and a court has no power to enjoin their enforcement.[84] The final determination of the reasonableness of interstate freight rates is within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission and not with the courts.[85] While a court below rightly refuses to enforce an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, by which it is found that an alleged terminal charge, made by a carrier, for the delivery of live stock to the stockyards of a city, is unjust and unreasonable, and hence violative of the 78. Established by court.—Act July 2, 1890, c. 647, 26 Stat. 209 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3200].

79. Interstate Commerce Act, Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154].

80. "There is no right of action either under the Anti-Trust Act or the Interstate Commerce Act for a readjustment of tariff rates filed and posted other than through the Interstate Commerce Commission. A shipper can not maintain an action at law for excessive and unreasonable freight rates exacted on interstate shipments where the rates charged were those which had been duly fixed by the carrier according to the act and had not been found to be unreasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Clement v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 979." American Union Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 159 Fed. 278.

81. Southern Pac. Co. v. Colorado Fuel, etc., Co., 42 C. C. A. 12, 101 Fed. 779.

82. Determination of reasonableness of rate.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651.

It is no longer open to question that the Interstate Commerce Commission is an expert tribunal charged by law with the determination of the reasonable or unreasonable character of the rate charged for transportation in interstate commerce. Decree, Tift v. Southern R. Co., 138 Fed. 753, affirmed in 148 Fed. 1021, 79 C. C. A. 536.

83. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. Ed. 1151, 22 S. Ct. 900.

84. Great Northern R. Co. v. Kalispell Lumber Co., 165 Fed. 25.

85. Arlington Heights Fruit Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 175 Fed. 141.

act to regulate commerce, nothing in the decree refusing to execute the order of the commission should be construed as preventing that body, if it deems it best to do so, from hereafter commencing proceedings to correct any unreasonableness in the rate resulting from the additional terminal charge as to any territory to which the reduction referred to in the opinion, if any such there be, does not apply.[86] The power given the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Act of June 18, 1910, to authorize a carrier to charge less for a long than for a short haul, does not extend to the making of an order determining the relation between long and short haul rates, irrespective of absolute rates.[87]

It is the exclusive power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the first instance, to pass on the fairness of rates contained in the schedule of rates fixed by an interstate carrier on articles transported in interstate commerce.[88]

Power of Court.—Courts are without jurisdiction to determine the reasonableness of a tariff published and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, as required by the Act of June 29, 1906, unless redress be invoked primarily through the commission.[89]

Power of Secretary of Interior.—The authority of the secretary of the interior to review railway rates in Alaska, conferred on him by the Act of May 14, 1898, was superseded by the amendment of June 29, 1906, to the Interstate Commerce Act giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power to prescribe rates.[90]

§ 4068. Judicial Act.—The inquiry by the Interstate Commerce Commission whether rates which have been charged and collected are reasonable, is a judicial act.[91]

Determined on Evidence.—The hearing which is so provided for is not a perfunctory one. The carrier is entitled to know and to rely on the evidence adduced at it, either for or against the existing rate, and the commission is not authorized to disregard it and reach a conclusion not at all justified by it. If the rate attacked is shown to be unjust, it may be abrogated and a new one established. But, if that is not the outcome of the hearing, and, on the contrary, it is clearly shown that the rate is not unjust, the evidence as to this can not be put aside, and if it is, and the commission without reference to its proceeds to condemn the rate and to fix another, its action is invalid.[92] Tested by these principles, an order must be held invalid as exceeding the delegated powers of the commission, where there is no substantial evidence to sustain it. It is not merely that the evidence preponderates in favor of the reasonableness of the rates which have been cut down. Concededly, that would not be enough to challenge the action of the commission. Not only is the commission vested with a discretion which can not be disturbed, and which courts intend unqualifiedly to respect, but it is entitled to select the testimony which it will believe and rely upon, according as it addresses itself to the discriminating judgment of the commission. But it is not within the authority of the commission to reduce the rates

86. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

87. Act June 18, 1910, c. 309, § 8, 36 Stat. 547; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 191 Fed. 856.

88. Thacker Coal, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 67 W. Va. 448, 68 S. E. 107, 28 L. R. A., N. S., 108.

89. Power of court.—Starks Co. v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 165 Mich. 642, 131 N. W. 143.

90. Power of secretary of interior.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556, affirming judgment, 37 App. D. C. 266.

91. Judicial act.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

92. Determined on evidence.—"This construction of the commission's authority and the conditions which limit its exercise appear to us clearly and definitely settled by the recent decision in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108." Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

not merely against the weight of the evidence produced to sustain them, but without anything substantial to warrant the conclusion reached or the reasons assigned therefor.[93]

§ 4069. Question of Fact.—The question of reasonableness of a rate is one of fact.[94] The question whether there is at any point an additional service performed in the receipt and delivery on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city of car load freight in interstate commerce, justifying an extra charge in addition to the line-haul rate to or from such city, or whether there is a substituted service like that included in the line-haul rate, is a question of fact on which the Interstate Commerce Commission can pass.[95]

§ 4070. Facts Considered.—From whatever standpoint the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission may be viewed, they touch many interests, they may have great consequences. They are expected to be exercised in the coldest neutrality. The commission was instituted to prevent discrimination between persons and places. It would indeed be an abuse of its powers to exercise them so as to cause either. Therefore, the outlook of the commission and its powers must be greater than the interest of the railroads or of that which may affect those interests. It must be as comprehensive as the interest of the whole country, and if the problems which are presented to it are complex and difficult, the means of solving them are as great and adequate as can be provided.[96] The interests of both the public and the owner of the property are to be considered,[97] and those of the carrying company as well.[98] In determining whether the rates charged by a carrier to and from a city are unjust and unreasonable in themselves, the greatest weight should be given to the following considerations: The opinions of ex-

93. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

94. Question of fact.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

The reasonableness of the rate, in a given case, depends on the facts, and the function of the commission is to consider these facts and give them their proper weight. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 493, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

95. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 294, 34 S. Ct. 814; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 234 U. S. 315, 34 S. Ct. 820.

96. Facts considered.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

97. It was declared by the federal supreme court in Covington, etc., Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. Ed. 560, 17 S. Ct. 198, that in determining the question of reasonableness "its duty is to take into consideration the interests both of the public and of the owner of the property." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 511, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

98. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

In rate making, the welfare and advantage of the great body of the citizens who constitute the producers, shippers, and consumers should be considered, and also the welfare and advantage of the various localities and of the common carriers. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

In passing on the question of unreasonable preference under the Interstate Commerce Act, the court should consider, not only the difference in the charges, but also the convenience of the public, the interest of the carrier, the relative volume of the traffic involved, the cost and profit, and the situation and circumstances of the respective customers with reference to each other, as competitive or otherwise. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

pert witnesses, the effect of the rates charged on the growth and prosperity of the city, the cost of transportation as compared with the rates charged and the rates in force at numerous other cities, where the circumstances are as nearly similar as may be to those prevailing at such city.[99]

Improvements and Equipment.—In determining the reasonableness of a rate, the cost of permanent improvements and equipment ought not to be charged to operating expenses. Expenditures for additions to construction and equipment, as expenditures for original construction and equipments, should be reimbursed by all of the traffic they accommodate during the period of their duration, and improvements that will last many years should not be charged wholly against the revenue of a single year.[1]

Where Interests Dependent upon Old Rates.—If the rates are old, interests will have probably become attached to them, and it may be that such interest will be disturbed or disordered if the rates be changed. Such circumstance is, of course, proper to be considered, and constitutes an element in the problem of regulation but it does not take jurisdiction away to entertain and attempt to solve the problem.[2] On the other hand, the order of the commission is void, where it manifests that that body did not merely exert the power conferred by law to correct an unjust and unreasonable rate, but that it made the order which is complained of upon the theory that the power was possessed to set aside a just and reasonable rate lawfully fixed by a railroad whenever the commission deemed that it would be equitable to shippers in a particular district to put in force a reduced rate.[3]

Costs to Carriers.—Maximum rates prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, to be just and reasonable within the constitutional limitation, must have reasonable regard for the cost to the carrier of the service rendered and the value of the property employed therein, and also reasonable regard for the value of the service to the public; and where the cost to the carrier is not kept within reasonable limits, or for any reason its business can not reasonably be so conducted as to render it profitable, the misfortune must fall upon the carrier.[4]

Fixing of an interstate freight rate at a sum not exceeding the out-of-pocket expense of the service would be invalid, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances and conditions justifying such action.[5] Where a freight rate fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission not only was sufficient to cover the costs of the service, the operating costs fairly apportionable to the particular traffic, and to contribute to some extent to interest, charges, and dividends, it was not arbitrary or unreasonable.[6]

Remuneration to Particular Carrier.—While it is true that a carrier has 99. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741, judgment affirmed in 122 Fed. 800, 60 C. C. A. 540.

1. Permanent improvements and equipment.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700, distinguishing Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 402, 25 L. Ed. 274, 14 Ct. Cl. 587.

Expenditures for permanent improvements and equipment should not be charged to the current or operating expenses of a single year for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of an increased freight rate. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

2. Industries dependent upon rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651.

3. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

4. Costs to carrier.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

5. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 56.

6. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 56.

Profit in addition to operating expenses.—A freight rate on a particular commodity fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission is not necessarily objectionable as confiscatory on the theory that it was insufficient to pay its proportionate share of the carrier's entire operating expenses and a profit in addition. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 203 Fed. 56.

the right to exact a fair return for the public utilities it affords, the public is entitled to exact that no more be required of it for the use of such utilities than the services rendered are reasonably worth, and where there is a plain and irreconcilable conflict between the interest of the public and the interest of the carrier the former must prevail.[7] In determining the reasonableness of a freight rate between specified points, the interstate commerce commission is not limited to the requirements of a particular carrier or to the question whether a lesser rate would be remunerative to a particular carrier, but should, in addition, consider the rates in the particular territory to be affected by a change of a rate or rates in question.[8]

Dividends.—The public can not properly be subjected to unreasonable rates in order simply that the stockholders may earn dividends. If a corporation can not maintain such a highway and earn dividends for stockholders, it is a misfortune for it, and one which the constitution does not require to be remedied by imposing unjust burdens upon the public.[9]

Injury to Certain Shippers.—That advances in rates on certain goods would be severely felt by certain shippers is not a sufficient reason for holding that they were not properly made.[10]

Personal Interests of Traveling Public.—If a reasonable and satisfactory through route and joint rates exist, the commission can not establish a second such route and rates partly over the same road and partly over different and competing roads, merely because the public would prefer such second route, where the result of this establishment would be to place the competing lines on an equal footing with the other company as to the use of a portion of its route and at the same time divert from its route a large portion of its existing patronage.[11]

Extent of Single Person's Shipment.—The fact that there is a large amount of a commodity in the hands of a few persons under almost one control, which is offered for shipment as stated periods in fixed quantities, may be considered in rate making.[12]

Competition.—Competition may be a controlling factor in determining the reasonableness of freight rates.[13] Among the circumstances and conditions to be

7. Remuneration to particular carrier.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

8. Hooker v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 242; Eagle White Lead Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 256.

9. Dividends.—Covington, etc., Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. Ed. 560, 17 S. Ct. 198; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

10. Injury to certain shippers.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

11. Personal interests of traveling public.—The personal preferences of many travelers for a southern route between eastern points and points on the Northern Pacific Railway between Portland and Seattle do not make the through route via the Northern Pacific Railway unreasonable or unsatisfactory, so as to justify the Interstate Commerce Commission in the exercise of its power under the Act of June 29, 1906, § 4, to establish through routes and joint rates where "no reasonable or satisfactory through route exists," in ordering the establishment of through rates and joint rates between those points via the Union Pacific Railway, so as to put the latter road on an equal footing with the Northern Pacific Railway Company in the use for through travel of the road belonging to the latter between Portland and Seattle. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417.

12. Extent of single person's shipment.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

13. Competition.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493; Southern Pac. Co. v. Redding, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 43 S. W. 1061, affirmed in 93 Tex. 650, no op.

Where competition genuine.—Railway companies, in fixing their rates, may take into account competition with other carriers, provided that such competition is genuine. Judgment, 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

considered, as well in the case of traffic originating in foreign ports as in the case of traffic originating within the limits of the United States, competition that affects rates should be considered, and in deciding whether rates and charges made at a low rate to secure foreign freights, which would otherwise go by other competitive routes, are or are not undue and unjust, and fair interests of the carrier companies, and the welfare of the community, which is to receive and consume the commodities, are to be considered.[14] Where there is a competition between carriers at a given point, so as to result in a reduction of rates for certain descriptions of property, the fact that the competition had originated with defendant carriers can not be considered in determining whether the rates are unreasonable.[15] That in fixing rates on lumber from Willamette Valley points in Oregon to San Francisco and bay points the Interstate Commerce Commission made a classification based somewhat on condition and value, and in fixing a lower rate on rough fir lumber and lath than was permitted on better grades took into consideration the fact that without such rate the lower grades could not be slipped at all in competition with the same grades from points having water transportation, did not invalidate the order, where the rate fixed was just and reasonable in itself.[16] But a rate voluntarily established by a railroad company to meet competition is not to be taken as the measure of what is reasonable.[17] The Interstate Commerce Commission itself has in a large number of cases recognized competition, and especially water competition, as influential upon the establishment of reasonable rates.[18] The payment of an elevator charge by a railroad company which is compelled by competition is lawful.[19]

Nature and Size of Goods Shipped.—The weight and bulk of the article to be transported and the convenience to the carrier in transporting it may be considered in rate making.[20]

Value of Services to Shipper.—In determining whether charges for the transportation of property are reasonable, within the Interstate Commerce Act, the value of the services to the shipper, including the value of the goods and the profits which the shipper can make, are to be considered.[21]

14. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 105 Fed. 703.

15. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

16. Southern Pac. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 167.

17. Where competition voluntary. — Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

That defendant railroad companies might, if they chose, bring about as severe a competition in live stock as in its products, is immaterial in determining whether the rates charged were unreasonable within the Interstate Commerce Act. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

But where a competition was going on between different railroads, and each company was striving to get what business it could, and defendant railroad company reduced the rates to get its share of the traffic, the reduction of the rates made was forced upon it by the competition, and the reduction was not voluntary within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

18. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 58; Commercial Club of Omaha v. Chicago R. Co., 7 Interst. Com. R. 404; Raworth v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 3 Interst. Com. R. 862; Chattanooga Board of Trade v. Southern R. Co., 10 Interst. Com. R. 133; E. Sondheimer Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 17 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 60; Bulte Milling Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. R., 15 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 351; Monroe Progressive League v. St. L., etc., Ry., 15 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 534; Indianapolis Freight Bureau v. P. R. Co., 15 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 567; Columbia Grocery Co. v. L. & N. R., 18 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 502.

19. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22, and Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

20. Nature and size of goods shipped. —Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

21. Value of services to shipper.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

Necessary to Sustain Other Rate.—An unreasonably high rate on the traffic and between the points to which an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission relates, which reduced such rate, can not be justified on the ground that it is necessary to sustain some other rate.[22]

Comparison in General.—The question whether rates are just and reasonable in themselves is in some measure a relative one, and may be tested by a comparison of the particular rates with those accepted elsewhere for a similar service.[23] The rates from a certain point, not being alleged to be unjust or unreasonable in themselves, could not become so by comparison with other joint rates from an opposite direction, and from a different and competing point on a different line of road.[24] In rate cases, the Interstate Commerce Commission may receive evidence of comparison without proof of similarity of conditions.[25]

Comparison of Local and Joint Rates.—A carrier's rates on through business do not prove that a local rate is unreasonable, nor can the local rate throw light on the justice or injustice of discrimination between nonlocal shipments of the same origin and destination.[26] The fact that a shipper under a joint schedule of rates over two connecting railroads is charged a smaller rate on through shipments over the entire length of the joint line than to intermediate points does not establish a claim that the latter rates are unjust or unreasonable, nor does it entitle him to claim that such rates are discriminative.[27] Where two carriers owning connecting lines of road unite in a joint through tariff, they form for the connected roads practically a new and independent line. Neither carrier is bound to adjust its own local tariff to suit the other, nor compelled to make a joint tariff with it. It may insist upon charging its local rates for all transportation over its line. If, therefore, the two carriers by agreement make a joint tariff over their lines, or any parts of their lines, such joint tariff is not the basis by which the reasonableness of the local tariff of either line is deter-

22. Necessary to sustain other rate.—Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 195 Fed. 953.

23. Comparison in general.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

24. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

The rate charged on first-class goods in less than car-load lots from Cincinnati to Atlanta, in 1879, was $1.39 per 100 pounds. Afterwards it was $1.10, and subsequently $1.07, except for a short time, when it was $1.01. The only testimony heard by the commission as to the reasonableness of the rate was that of an officer of a railway company, that he considered a rate of $1.01 unreasonable. Upon that testimony, and upon the fact that the rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham is 89 cents, as compared with $1.07 to Atlanta, the distances being substantially the same, the commission ordered that the defendants should not charge more than $1 from Cincinnati to Atlanta. In this court, a number of railroad experts testified that the present rate of $1.07 is reasonable. As to the rate to Birmingham, there was evidence before the court which was not before the commission, viz. that the rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham, which was previously $1.08, was forced down to 89 cents by the building of a new road known as the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham Railroad. Held, that the existence of a lower rate from Cincinnati to Birmingham furnished no sufficient reason to determine that the rate from Cincinnati to Atlanta is unreasonable, when such lower rate is caused by conditions at Birmingham which do not exist at Atlanta. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

25. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

26. Comparison of local and joint rates.—Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 11 C. C. A. 489, 63 Fed. 903.

"The rates on through business do not prove that the local rate is unreasonable; and, on the other hand, the local rate can throw no light on the justice or injustice of discriminations between shipments of northwestern hay of the same origin and destination The local rate has nothing to do with the case as we view it. The comparison is between the through rate without the reconsigning privilege and the through rate with the reconsigning privilege." Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

27. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

mined.[28] The fact that the cost of carriage of all coal upon an entire railroad system, from all points of shipment to all destinations, is a certain per cent of the gross receipts from all coal, is no reason for concluding that upon a particular line or part of the system the cost of carriage bears the same ratio to the coal receipts of that particular line or part.[29] But the fact that a local rate is made part of a through rate does not render the through rate illegal, provided neither the local nor the through rate be unjust or unreasonable, and provided neither of them unjustly discriminates, or gives an undue preference or disadvantage to persons or traffic similarly situated.[30]

Comparison to Rates Affecting Another City.—In determining the effect of the rates charged upon the growth and prosperity of the city, as affecting the question of the reasonableness of such rates, comparison can not be made alone with another city, where competition has produced unusually low rates, but should be made with other cities where the circumstances and conditions are similar.[31]

Main Line and Extension.—The oversea extension of the Florida East Coast Railway from Homestead to Key West can not properly be considered a part of the main line, for the purpose of determining whether rates established by the Interstate Commerce Commission from points east of Homestead are remunerative or confiscatory.[32]

Different Rate for Shipment in Opposite Direction.—The fact that a rate over a road or line in one direction is materially higher than the rate on the same road or line, and between the same points, in the opposite direction, does not, as in the case of a haul over the same line in the same direction, establish prima facie the unreasonableness of the higher rate.[33]

Mode of Shipment.—An initial carrier of an interstate shipment, which furnishes two small cars in lieu of a larger car ordered by the shipper, is, under a rule of the interstate commerce commission, limited to the rate applicable to the larger car.[34]

28. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18; Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

29. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 74 Fed. 784.

30. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 21 C. C. A. 51, 74 Fed. 715.

31. Comparison to rates affecting another city.—"A low freight rate is an important factor in the prosperity of cities. But the prosperity enjoyed by Lynchburg as a result of low rates can not properly be used as a basis of comparison. Before it can be said absolutely that Danville has not prospered as it should have done, it must appear that comparisons are made, not with points where competition has produced unusually low rates, but with cities where the circumstances are similar to those existing at Danville. The evidence is that one or more industries were deterred from moving to Danville because of the high rates. But here again we are confronted with the same difficulty. Did not the proposing manufacturers contrast the Danville rates with those prevailing at some place or places where competition has brought about very low rates? If this is true—and the impression left on my mind that it is—this evidence can not be treated as of much weight. It is a further fact that the very low rates given Lynchburg have enabled her merchants to drive the Danville merchants out of territory nearer to Danville than to Lynchburg. But does this fact enable us to say that the Danville rates are inherently unreasonable? If I correctly understand the purport of the supreme court decisions, the rates given Lynchburg—being the result of substantial competition, and affording the defendant some profit—are not unlawfully low. Therefore the necessary consequence of the disparity in the rates respectively given Lynchburg and Danville can not be conclusive of the question before us." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741.

32. Main line and extension.—Florida, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 200 Fed. 797.

33. Different rate for shipment in opposite direction.—Duncan v. Railroad Co., 6 Interst. Com. R. 103; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613; Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

34. Mode of shipment.—Yorke Furniture Co. v. Southern R. Co., 162 N. C. 138, 78 S. E. 67.

§ 4071. Mode of Determination.—Zones.—A reduction in that part of the through rates on Atlantic seaboard shipments to Missouri river cities which applies to the haul between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers is not beyond the power of the interstate commerce commission, as introducing a new system of rate making by artificially apportioning the country into zones tributary to given trade centers, in order to build up or protect certain distributing centers at the expense of others where the commission, by its order, intended only to correct through rates which it found upon complaint were unreasonable in themselves, by substituting therefor reasonable rates.[35]

Distances.—Fixing rates under substantially similar traffic conditions so as to allow a higher rate for a shorter route is not so palpably unjust and unreasonable to the carriers as to be beyond the substance, if not beyond the form, of the power of the interstate commerce commission, where the commission was simply maintaining the same ratio of difference as that made by the carriers themselves.[36]

The cost of service to the carrier is not a practical theory for rate making, as such cost can not be reached accurately enough to make the factor controlling.[37]

Income and Dividends.—If the carrier's total income enables it to declare a dividend, that would not justify an order requiring it to haul one class of goods for nothing, or for less than a reasonable rate. On the other hand, if the carrier earned no dividend, it would not have warranted an order fixing an unreasonably high rate on such article.[38]

§ 4072. Burden of Proof.—The mere fact that a carrier increases its rates raises no presumption of unreasonableness, and persons complaining thereof have the burden of proof of unreasonableness.[39]

§ 4073. Evidence.—Comparisons are very commonly made in the investigation of rate cases, and they may often be quite persuasive. The competency of such evidence is not questioned nor the right of the commission to give it due weight. Neither is it doubted that the commission may receive evidence of this kind, giving to the facts so shown their proper value, without proof of similarity of conditions.[40] A finding that the rates charged by railroads for shipments to a particular point are unreasonable in themselves, and in violation of Interstate Commerce Act, can not properly be based on evidence which only tends to show that they are too high as compared with the rates charged between the initial points and one or two other points.[41]

35. Mode of determination.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; S. C., 218 U. S. 113, 54 L. Ed. 959, 30 S. Ct. 660, reversing decrees Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 171 Fed. 680.

36. Distances.—When the commission maintained the same ratio of difference between Omaha and St. Paul as that made by the carriers themselves, it can not be fairly said that such an order was so arbitrary as to be palpably and gravely unjust, and beyond the substance, if not the form, of its power. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

37. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

38. Income and dividends.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

39. Burden of proof.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

40. Evidence.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

41. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 57 C. C. A. 224, 120 Fed. 934.

"But what we do hold is that the comparisons made by the commission in its report in this case, taking into account all the facts and circumstances disclosed at the hearing, had no evidentiary bearing upon the reasonableness of the rates in dispute, and therefore furnish no appreciable support of the commission's conclusion." Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

"Having regard to the evidence, the § 4074. Review of Determination.—The action of the carriers, in fixing and adjusting the rates, where a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions has been made to appear, is subject to revision by the commission and the courts, when it is charged that such action has resulted in rates unjust or unreasonable.[42] A finding by the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the reasonableness or otherwise of a rate charged by a carrier in interstate commerce is in administrative function, properly and constitutionally delegated by the legislative power to the commission, and is, if lawfully made, conclusive.[43]

In Independent Action for Damages.—A finding by the Interstate Commerce Commission, on the hearing of a petition for reparation, that a given rate charged the complainant is unreasonable, while pertinent to the issue in a subsequent suit by such complaint to recover damages, in that it establishes a violation of the act, is not decisive of the question of liability for damages, either prima facie or otherwise, but its evidential value on that issue is for the determination of the court and jury. In such an action, a finding made by the commission that plaintiff was charged an unreasonable rate as a shipper by defendant, and an order of the commission awarding plaintiff damages in a sum representing the difference between the amounts paid by him under such rate and what he would have paid under a rate found to be reasonable do not constitute evidence making a prima facie case, since others than plaintiff as the shipper may have sustained the actual pecuniary loss from the overcharge, and the statute authorizes the recovery only of actual damages sustained by the plaintiff, and not of a penalty. The statute although making the findings of fact of the commission prima facie evidence of the facts found, does not make such facts prima facie evidence of anything; but their pertinency and evidential weight and value are for the determination of the court and jury as in other civil cases.[44]

§§ 4075-4096. Discrimination and Preference—§ 4075. In General.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that if any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall, directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device, charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers or property, subject to the provisions of this act, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination, which is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful.[45] Rates pre-only tangible ground upon which it will be found to rest is the fact that there had been an advance in the rates to Pensacola and Mobile, and that the Montgomery rate exceeded the sum of the rates through these points as they stood prior to this increase, making the increase in these intermediate rates the only proof of unreasonableness, not only as to Pensacola and Mobile, but Montgomery also. It is conceded by counsel for the government that, if this were true as to the rates to Montgomery, the order of the commission would be invalid, because it would not be based on the reasonableness or unreasonableness of these rates independently considered." Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

42. Review of determination.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45. See post, "Review," §§ 4183-4189.

43. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Meeker, 211 Fed. 785.

44. In independent action for damages.—On the trial of such an action for damages, in which plaintiff has been permitted to introduce the report of the commission, it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to what are and what are not findings of fact therein which are made prima facie evidence by the statute. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Meeker, 211 Fed. 785.

45. Discrimination.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Inscribed by the interstate commerce commission under the statute are not only required to be just and reasonable within the constitutional guaranty, but they must also not be unjustly discriminatory nor unduly preferential.[46]

Power of Congress.—There can be no question as to the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce to prevent favoritism and to secure equal rights to all engaged in interstate trade, and to this end congress had the constitutional power to adopt a policy looking to the equality of rates to shippers over interstate carriers, and to prescribe appropriate means to give it effect.[47]

Object of Statute.—The objects of the Elkins law are to prevent favoritism and to secure equal rights to all in interstate transportation, and one legal rate, to be published and posted so as to be open to public inspection and accessible to all alike; to prohibit and punish secret departures from the published rates, and to prevent and punish rebating, preferences and all acts of undue discrimination; and this without regard to whether persons or places be the sufferers.[48] The wrong prohibited is a discrimination between shippers. It is designed to compel every carrier to give equal rights to all shippers over its own road and to forbid it by any device to enforce higher charges against one than another.[49] The act prohibits any rebate or other device by which two shippers, shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances of carriage, are compelled to pay different prices thereof.[50]

Construction of Statute.—There is not only a relation, but an indissoluble unity between the provision for the establishment and maintenance of rates until corrected in accordance with the statute and the prohibitions against preferences and discrimination. This follows, because unless the requirement of a uniform standard of rates be complied with, it would result that violations of the statute as to preferences and discrimination would inevitably follow.[51] The proterstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

English statute adopted.—It is modeled upon § 90 of the English "Railway Clauses Consolidation Act," of 1845, known as the "Equality Clause." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

46. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

47. Power of congress.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671; New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

48. Object of statute.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

49. Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

50. Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

51. Construction of statute.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

It is not open to question that the provisions of § 2 of the act to regulate commerce were substantially taken from § 90 of the English Railway Clauses Consolidation Act of 1845, known as the "equality clause." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666. Certain also is it that, at the time of the passage of the act to regulate commerce, that clause in the English act had been construed as only embracing circumstances concerning the carriage of the goods, and not the hibitions of the act to regulate commerce as to rebates, favoritism, and discrimination having been construed by the interstate commerce commission, charged with its execution, to be inapplicable to the freight rates for coal charged by interstate carriers empowered to mine and market coal by their charters or by legislation existing at the time of the adoption of that act, this construction, which has long obtained in practical execution, and has been impliedly sanctioned by the re-enactment of the statute without alteration in the particulars construed, must be treated as read into the statute.[52]

Section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act, which declares it to be unlawful for a carrier to give "an undue or unreasonable preference" to any person, firm, corporation, or locality, or to subject any person, to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage "in any respect whatsoever," does not refer solely to facilities afforded to shippers, but applies also to discrimination in rates.[53]

Actual Discrimination.—Actual discrimination in rates charged is necessary to constitute a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act; and the mere making or offering of a discriminating rate, under which it is not shown that any shipment was ever made, constitutes no legal injury to a shipper who is charged a higher rate.[54]

Different Charges in Different Territory.—Unlawful preferences and discriminations are created by fixing the freight rate for common soap in less than carload lots in a new classification adopted to govern in official classification territory at twenty per centum less than third class, but not less than fourth class, at which that commodity had previously been rated, where the result of applying this classification to the varying rates is to leave soap in less than carload lots in the fourth class to a considerable extent in one of the subdivisions of such classification territory, and in a higher class in the other subdivision.[55]

Direct or Indirect.—The power of congress over interstate transportation embraces all manner of carriage, whether gratuitous or otherwise; and except as to the express exceptions made by the act itself, it must be held to have been the person of the sender; or, in other words, that the clause did not allow carriers by railroad to make a difference in rates because of differences in circumstances arising either before the service of the carrier began or after it was terminated. It was therefore settled in England that the clause forbade the charging of a higher rate for the carriage of goods for an intercepting or forwarding agent than for others. Great Western R. Co. v. Sutton, L. R. 4 H. L. 226; Evershed v. London & N. W. R. Co., L. R. 3 App. Cas. 1029, 5 Eng. Rul. Cas. 351, and Denaby Main Colliery Co. v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co., L. R. 11 App. Cas. 97; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392.

The section itself forbids the carrier "directly or indirectly by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device" to charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation, etc. And § 6 of the act, as amended in 1889, throws light upon the intent of the statute, for it requires the common carrier in publishing schedules to "state separately the terminal charges, and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates and fares and charges." Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

52. Decree 128 Fed. 59, modified in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 26 S. Ct. 272, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515.

53. United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 904.

54. Actual discrimination.—"I still think that a mere paper rate, which is never carried into effect, and is therefore simply a proposition to carry for a specified sum, is not such a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act as to prevent the carrier from recovering freight from other than the theoretically favored shippers. It is discrimination in fact, and not a mere intention to discriminate, that is punishable; and in the case before the court there was no evidence that a pound of coal had been carried to be sold in the market by any other shipper than the defendants. Hence no rival of the defendants was benefited by the unaccepted rate, and no harm was done to their business." Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Rainey, 112 Fed. 487.

55. Different charges in different territory. — Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 559, affirmed in 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

intention of congress to prevent a departure from the published rates and schedules in any manner whatsoever. The all embracing prohibition against either directly or indirectly charging was that the published rates show that the purpose of the statute was to make the prohibition applicable to every method of dealing by which the forbidden result could be brought about. If this were not so, a wide door would be open to favoritism in the carriage of property free, or partially free, of charge.[56] The prohibition in the Interstate Commerce Act against directly or indirectly charging less than the published rates shows that the purpose of the statute was to make the prohibition applicable to every method of dealing by carrier by which the forbidden result could be brought about. The public purpose for which the statute was intended was to compel the carrier as public agent to give equal treatment to all. To this extent and for these purposes the statute was remedial and is, therefore, entitled to receive that interpretation which reasonably accomplishes the great public purpose which it was enacted to subserve.[57] In view of the provision that no departure from the published rates shall be made directly or indirectly, the carrier can not take itself out of the statute, by electing to be a dealer and transport a commodity in that character. If a carrier has a right to disregard published rates by resorting to a particular form of dealing there is no obligation on the part of the carrier.[58]

Unjust and Unreasonable.—It is not all discriminations and preferences that are forbidden, only such as are unjust or unreasonable.[59]

§ 4076. Like and Contemporaneous Service.—In order to constitute an unjust discrimination the carrier must charge or receive directly from one person a greater or less compensation than from another, or must accomplish the same thing indirectly by means of a special rate, rebate or other device; but in either case it must be for a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions.[60] The evident meaning of the federal statute is that the discrimination condemned must have the effect of unduly favoring some individual, class, or place at the expense and to the prejudice and disadvantage of some other shipper or place, where the services rendered were "like and contemporaneous," and where the transportation was effected under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions."[61] The act implies that, in deciding whether differences in charges, in given cases, were or were not unjust, there must be a consideration of the several questions whether the services rendered were like and contemporaneous, whether the kinds of traffic were like, whether the transportation was affected under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. To answer such questions, in any case coming before the commission, requires an investigation into the facts; and we think that congress must have intended that whatever would be regarded by common carriers, apart from the operation of the statute, as matters which warranted differences in charges, ought to be considered in forming a judgment whether such differences were or were not unjust. Some charges

56. Direct or indirect.—American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315; United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 212 U. S. 509, 53 L. Ed. 629, 29 S. Ct. 313; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

57. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

58. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

59. Unjust and unreasonable.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

60. Like and contemporaneous service.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. Ed. 518, 25 S. Ct. 276; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

61. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

might be unjust to shippers—others might be unjust to the carriers. The rights and interests of both must, under the terms of the act, be regarded by the commission.[62] When substantially dissimilar circumstances and conditions exist, the carriers have a large discretion in fixing the rates accordingly, but subject to the supervisory control of the interstate commerce commission under the Interstate Commerce Act.[63]

What Constitutes Like Service.—To come within the inhibition of the statute the differences must be made under like conditions, that is, there must be contemporaneous service in the transportation of like kinds of traffic under substantially the same circumstances and conditions.[64]

What Constitutes Contemporaneous Service.—Services rendered to a complaining and a favored shipper are contemporaneous as long as the discriminating rates remain in force, and for the purpose of comparison they need not be rendered on the same day, nor during the same week or month.[65]

Like Kind of Traffic.—Classification of railway crossties in a different class from lumber generally, imposing on them a higher rate, constitutes unjust discrimination.[66]

Similar Circumstances and Conditions.—The similarity of circumstances and conditions under which a service of carriage is rendered, which, under the interstate commerce act, requires an equality of rate, relates to the circumstances and conditions which affect the service only, and, where different coal mining localities are grouped into a district for rate-making purposes, a carrier is not justified in making a different rate for the same or substantially similar service from a particular locality in such district, or on the product of a particular mine or vein, from that charged others because the difference in the product from such locality mine or vein and that from other mines in the district is such that it can pay a higher rate and still compete in the market.[67]

Contract for Continuous Shipment.—In the provision in the Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting discrimination between shippers under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions," such phrase relates to the circumstances and conditions of carriage only, and does not include matters affecting individual shippers; and a railroad may not charge one shipper of coal a lower rate than is charged another shipper between the same terminals, because the former is ship-

62. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

63. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, 21 S. Ct. 512; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687.

64. What constitutes like services.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

65. What constitutes contemporaneous service.—"The defendant also argues that in computing the damages 'contemporaneous service' must be confined to shipments made for the plaintiff and for the favored shippers at the same, or practically the same, moment of time; and that shipments a week apart, or certainly a month apart, would therefore be too remote. No doubt 'contemporaneous' means 'at the same time,' but at the same time with what? A term is evidently implied which must be looked for in the context and in the subject matter of the statute. In my opinion the well-known evil aimed at in § 2 requires the court to hold that the implied term in the comparison is the offending rates, making the word to mean, 'at the same time with the offending rates,' and that, as long as these rates remain in force, the services rendered to a complaining and to a favored shipper are 'contemporaneous' within the meaning of the statute. As far as I am aware, there is no decision upon this subject, but Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822, furnishes, I think, some inferential support to the construction just given." Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403.

66. Like kind of traffic.—American, etc., Timber Co. v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 175 Fed. 28.

67. Similar circumstances and conditions.—Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 174 Fed. 687.

ping under contracts extending over a term of years, based on lower rates which were in force when such contracts were made, while the other shipper has no such contracts.[68] An official classification, providing that car load rates shall apply to cars loaded with different packages intended for different consignees only when the consignor or consignee is the actual owner of the property, and a rule declaring that shipments of property combined into packages by forwarding agents claiming to act as consignors will only be accepted when the names of individual consignors and consignees, as well as the character and contents of each package, are declared to the forwarding railroad agent, when the property will be waybilled as separate shipments and freight charged accordingly, are reasonable and valid, and are not violative of Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting discrimination, and requiring equal charges to all for the same or like and contemporaneous service; there being a substantial dissimilarity of conditions relating to the matter of carriage of car load freight assembled by forwarding agents and the transportation of car load freight, though made up of shipments to various consignees, where the consignor or consignee is the owner of the property.[69]

Coal Shippers.—Where a railroad company engaged in the interstate carriage of coal from the mines in its schedule of rates filed and published has grouped all points within a given territory together as a single initial point of shipment from which it makes the same rates, whether such points are on its own or connecting lines, the service rendered to all shippers from any of such points in the contemporaneous transportation of coal to the same terminal point, or to points within the same terminal group, is under substantially similar circumstances and conditions within the meaning of the act, and a discrimination in favor of any such shipper over others is unlawful under said section.[70]

To Persons Similarly Situated.—The carriers are better qualified to adjust such matters than any court or board of public administration, and, within the limitations suggested, it is safe and wise to leave to their traffic managers the adjusting of dissimilar circumstances and conditions to their business. This last sentence does not declare that the determination of the extent to which discrimination is justified by circumstances and conditions should be left to the carriers, but means only that, when once a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions has been made to appear, the carriers are, from the nature of the question, better fitted to adjust their rates to suit such dissimiliarity of circumstances and conditions than courts of commissions.[71] The Interstate Commerce Act allows differential and discriminative rates so long as they are not unjust or do not operate unfairly, and the essence of the act is that whatever the rate is it shall be the same to all persons similarly situated.[72]

Similar Points of Shipment and Destination.—That carriers transport coal of other shippers from practically the same territory at the same rates to the same territory and at the same time refuse to carry petitioners' coal shows unjust discrimination.[73]

In respect to passenger traffic, the positions of the respective persons, or classes, between whom differences in charges are made, must be compared with each other, and there must be found to exist substantial identity of situation and of service, accompanied by irregularity and partiality resulting in undue advantage to one, or undue disadvantage to the other, in order to constitute unjust discrimination.[74]

68. Contract for continuous shipment.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

69. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 166 Fed. 498.

70. Coal shippers.—Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 194 Fed. 486.

71. To persons similarly situated.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

72. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Mitchell, 175 Ind. 196, 91 N. E. 735, 93 N. E. 996.

73. Similar points of shipment and destination.—Stony Fork Coal Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 195 Fed. 88.

74. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

The ownership or nonownership by the shipper of the goods tendered for carriage is not a dissimilar circumstance and condition, within the meaning of Act Feb. 4, 1887, prohibiting inequality and discrimination in rates. A carrier may not, therefore, under the Act make the ownership of goods tendered to it for carriage the criterion by which its charge for such carriage is to be measured.[75]

Facilities for Delivery.—Differences with respect to competition between coal intended for railway consumption and other coal, and with respect to the manner of delivery, depending upon a difference in the facilities possessed by the railroads and other consignees, do not make the interstate traffic therein dissimilar in circumstances and conditions, within the meaning of the Act of February 4, 1887, so as to justify the giving of a power rate for the transportation of railway fuel coal than is given to shippers of other coal between the same points.[76] In its most abstract form the simple statement of the controversy is whether the companies may charge a different rate for the transportation of fuel coal to a given point than for the transportation of a commercial coal to the same point. The commission insisted upon the simplicity of the problem and contended that there was nothing in the conditions of the traffic which dispensed with the clear legal duty of the companies under the Interstate Commerce Act to carry for all shippers alike. The fuel and commercial coal went to the same point, and were delivered at the same point. There was, it is true, a difference in the manner of delivery, depending upon the difference in the facilities possessed by the railroads and other consignees, and it was urged that the shipment of the fuel coal to a particular railroad "for the use of that railroad" makes special the traffic. And, further, that "a railroad is not a person," but is "rather in the nature of a geographical division and extends through long distances." The court held that it could not accept the likeness nor the distinctions which were said to establish it, and that the railroad company could not be put out of view as a favored shipper.[77]

Facilities.—Differences as to competition between coal intended for railway consumption and other coal, depending on difference in facilities possessed by the different parties, do not make interstate commerce therein dissimilar so as to justify the giving of a lower rate for transportation of railway coal.[78]

Shipment in Carloads.—A railroad company is not required by the Interstate Commerce Act to give the same carload rates on interstate shipments to forwarding agents who solicit property for shipment from different owners, each having less than a car load, and combine it into carload lots, that it makes on carload shipments by a single owner; the charges in such case not being for "a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," so as to render the difference in the rates made an unlawful discrimination.[79]

Shipments over Competitive Lines.—The phrase "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," as used in the second section of the act refers to the matter of carriage, and does not include competition between rival routes, is not open to the criticism that different meanings are attributed to the same words when found in different sections of the act, because, as the purposes of the several sections are different, the phrase in question must be read, in the 75. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392, reversing decree in 160 Fed. 499.

76. Facilities for delivery.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

77. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

78. Facilities.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

79 Shipment in carloads.—Lundquist v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., 121 Fed. 915.

second section, as restricted to the case of shippers over the same road, thus leaving no room for the operation of competition, but in the other sections, it covers the entire tract of interstate and foreign commerce, and a meaning must be given to the phrase wide enough to include all the facts that have a legitimate bearing on the situation—among which is found the fact of competition when it affects rates.[80]

§ 4077. Persons Discriminated against.—The provision of the act prohibiting unjust discriminations in charges has reference to the service rendered, and not to the person of the consignor or consignee.[81] Because a carrier has the power to prescribe rates, it does not follow that it can discriminate as to those who shall be entitled to avail themselves of them.[82]

Forwarding Agents.—A forwarding agent is a person within the meaning of the Act of February 4, 1887, forbidding preferences and discriminations in rates. Therefore a carrier may not forbid the aggregation of the shipments of various owners for the purpose of carload rating in official classification territory, or the combination of such shipments by forwarding agents for that purpose, where preferences and discriminations forbidden by the Act will result from the carrier's action.[83] The proposition that, as the wide range of carload rates and the extent of the facility for combining articles for the purpose of obtaining such rates allowed in official classification territory are the result of the voluntary act of the railroads, therefore the power existed in the railroads to restrict and limit the enjoyment of such rate, as was done by the assailed rules, rests upon the fallacious assumption that because a carrier has the authority to fix rates, it has the right to discriminate as to those who shall be entitled to avail themselves of them.[84]

Shipper Who Has Accepted Bonus.—An undue advantage and unlawful discrimination forbidden by the act is accorded by a contract between a packing house firm and a stockyard company, by which the company paid a bonus to the packers if they would erect their new plant adjacent to the stockyard instead of in another city as proposed, and operate the plant, and buy only such stock as moved through such stockyards, and pay regular charges on live stock not so bought as if the same had moved to the stockyards.[85]

Shippers Estopped by Contract.—Shippers subjected to discriminatory charges for delivery and receipt on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city of car load freight in interstate commerce are not estopped to bring the matter before the Interstate Commerce Commission, because, when making the contracts under which the spur tracks were constructed, the shippers consented to a special charge when freight should be received and delivered thereon.[86]

§§ 4078-4083. Determining Discrimination and Preference—§ 4078. Competition.—The interstate commerce commission, in considering the question whether there has been an unjust discrimination against one locality, or an undue preference to another locality, in the rates fixed by a railroad company for the transportation of passengers or freight to such localities, is bound to take into

80. Shipments over competitive lines.—Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

81. Persons discriminated against.—United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

82. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392.

83. Forwarding agents.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392, reversing 166 Fed. 499.

84. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392.

85. Shipper who has accepted bonus.—United States v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83, modifying judgment Attorney General v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

86. Shippers estopped by contract.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 294, 34 S. Ct. 814; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 234 U. S. 315, 34 S. Ct. 820.

consideration the existence of competition with such railroad company in one of such localities, to accept evidence thereof, and to investigate and decide thereon; and its failure to do so, if the existence of such competition is put in issue by the parties, renders its action erroneous.[87] The making of a lesser rate to a more distant and competitive point than is charged to a nearer noncompetitive point is not an unjust discrimination against the nearer point, nor does it give an undue preference to the more distant point, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, where such rate is induced by real and substantial competition.[88]

After Purchase of Competing Line.—The fact that a railroad company has acquired the ownership of the only road which previously competed with its own for business at a certain point can not affect the question whether its rates unjustly discriminate against such point in favor of another point where competition exists, where it affirmatively appears that the rates to the noncompetitive point have not been increased since the purchase of the competing road.[89]

Statute Not Intended to Prevent Competition.—The complainant's bill alleged that it was a wholesale dealer in merchandise, located at Portland; that the defendants, owners of connecting railroad lines, had established a schedule of joint-freight traffic between Portland and points in Idaho on the second line; that such second road, in connection with a third, had also established a schedule of joint rates on freight from San Francisco to the same points, under which the charge from San Francisco was the same as from Portland, although the distance was greater; and that, under the divisions made between the respective roads, the second road received a smaller rate, relative to the length of the haul over its line, under the latter than under the former schedule, in which the haul was from the opposite direction. The bill charged that such facts constituted an undue preference in favor of San Francisco and its merchants over Portland and its merchants, in violation of § 3 of the Interstate Commerce Law, and that therefore the rates charged from Portland were unjust and unreasonable, under § 1 of such law. The bill stated no grounds for relief under either section, for the reason that it is not the purpose of the third section of the act to prevent competition in rates between different points on different lines of road.[90]

§ 4079. Quantity of Goods Shipped.—Prior to the enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act the courts were of the opinion that discriminations by railway carriers in the rates of freight charged to shippers, based solely on the ground of the quantity of freight shipped, without reference to any conditions tending to decrease the cost of transportation, were contrary to sound public policy, and inconsistent with the obligations of such carriers to the public.[91] It might well be that shippers would be induced to increase their traffic with a carrier by the offer of such discrimination, perhaps by withdrawing part of it from a rival carrier, perhaps by stimulating the shipper to enlarge his business operations; and thus the discrimination might be profitable to the carrier. The English courts, in cases arising under the English Traffic Act, have held that preferences given to particular shippers to induce them not to divert traffic from the carrier, or to induce them to transfer traffic to one carrier which otherwise would go to another carrier, are unlawful, and can not be justified on the ground of profit to the carrier allowing them. If they were to justify a discrim-

87. Determining discrimination.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 409.

88. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741, judgment affirmed in 60 C. C. A. 540, 122 Fed. 800.

89. After purchase of competing line.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741, judgment affirmed in 60 C. C. A. 540, 122 Fed. 800.

90. Statute not intended to prevent competition.—Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

91. Quantity of goods shipped.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187, citing Hays & Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 12 Fed. 309, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 87; Burlington, etc., Co. v. Northwestern Fuel Co., 31 Fed. 652.

ination upon such reasons, a railway company might in any case grant a preference to one person over another, provided it acted bona fide in the belief that such a course would be to its advantage. A railway company can not, merely for the sake of increasing their traffic, reduce their rates in favor of individual customers, unless, at all events, there is a sufficient consideration for the reduction, which shall lessen the cost to the company of the conveyance of their traffic, or some equivalent or other services are rendered to them by such individuals in relation to such traffic.[92] The Interstate Commerce Act would be emasculated in its remedial efficacy, if not practically nullified, if a carrier can justify a discrimination in rates merely upon the ground that, unless it is given, the traffic obtained by giving it would go to a competing carrier. A shipper having a choice between competing carriers would only have to refuse to send his goods by one unless given exceptional rates to justify that one in making the discrimination in his favor on the ground of the necessity of the situation.[93]

§ 4080. Long and Short Haul.—In determining the question whether a difference in rates between points of shipment involves an unjust discrimination or an undue preference by a railroad company, it is error for the interstate commerce commission to reach its conclusion solely by contrasting the distance of such places, respectively, from the starting point, or upon a mileage basis, without taking into account the existence of competitive rates to one of such places.[94]

Where Long and Short Haul Clause Not Violated.—Where a lower rate for a long than for an included short haul is justified by dissimilar circumstances and conditions, and does not violate § 4 of the interstate commerce law, prohibiting a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer distance, it can not be held an undue preference, within the meaning of § 3.[95]

§ 4081. Disparity between Through and Local Rates.—The mere fact that the disparity between the through and the local rates was considerable did not, of itself, warrant the circuit court of appeals in finding that such disparity constituted an undue discrimination—much less did it justify the court in finding that the entire difference between the two rates was undue or unreasonable, especially as there was no person, firm, or corporation complaining that he or they had been aggrieved by such disparity.[96] A carrier's rates on through business do not prove that a local rate is unreasonable, nor can the local rate throw light on the justice or injustice of discrimination between nonlocal shipments of the same origin and destination.[97]

Question for Jury.—Whether the difference between a local rate and a through rate is an undue and unreasonable preference or advantage over the local shipper, within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act, is a question for the jury.[98]

92. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187, citing Harris v. Cockermouth & Worthington R. Co. (Eng.), 3 C. B., N. S., 693; Evershed v. London & Northwestern R. Co. (Eng.), 2 Q. B. Div. 254.

93. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187.

94. Long and short haul.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 409.

95. Where long and short haul clause not violated. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

96. Disparity between through and local rates.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

97. Judgment, St. Louis, etc., Grain Co. v. Southern R. Co., 149 Fed. 609, affirmed in 82 C. C. A. 614, 153 Fed. 728.

Congress did not intend to leave carriers the power to grant undue preferences, or to subject persons or places to undue disadvantages, by any devices, or by any adjustment of joint through rates with relation to local rates. When two carriers establish a joint through rate, the proportion thereof that one carrier receives for carriage of property between two points on its line may be compared with its local rates between the same points, for the purpose of establishing that an unreasonable preference has been given, or that a shipper has been subjected to an undue disadvantage. United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 904.

98. Question for jury.—United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 369; S. C., 39 Fed. 904.

§ 4082. Disparity in Rates between Different Localities.—The complainant's bill alleged that it was a wholesale dealer in merchandise, located in Portland; that the defendants, owners of connecting lines of railroad, had established a schedule of joint freight tariffs between Portland and points in Idaho and Utah, on the second line of road, which were unreasonable and excessive, both as a whole and the proportion thereof received by each company. But the injury complained of did not arise from the fact that such rates were unreasonable in themselves, but that they were excessive as compared with other rates charged to the same points on shipments from the opposite direction under a joint tariff between the second company and a third, which gave San Francisco merchants the same rate to such points as complainant, by reason of which fact complainant was unable to compete with the San Francisco merchants at such points. The relief prayed for was that the second company be enjoined from charging, under any joint rate with its codefendant from Portland, any greater rate per ton or fraction thereof per mile for carriage over its road than it charged for the carriage of like property per ton or fraction thereof per mile under its joint rate from San Francisco. The bill stated no grounds for relief under the interstate commerce law; its gravamen being, not the excessive rates, but the equality of rates between San Francisco and Portland.[99]

Rates Reasonable in Themselves.—Though the preference given to one locality or the disadvantage to which the other is subjected is not due to the voluntary act of the carrier, and although the interstate rates in force may be reasonable in themselves, the interstate commerce commission can correct the discrimination by requiring a just equalization in rates between the two localities.[1]

Power of Commission to Determine.—Section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, confers on the interstate commerce commission ample power, in a hearing under § 13, to determine whether rates put in force by carriers are unjustly discriminatory as between two cities, to extend the scope of its examination far enough to arrive at the true situation.[2]

Court Can Not Determine.—The question whether an undue preference to any locality forbidden by the Interstate Commerce Act arose from the operation of the intrastate rate as compared with an interstate rate, or whether any locality was unreasonably prejudiced, would be for the determination of the interstate commerce commission and not for the courts.[3]

§ 4083. Division of Freight by Connecting Carriers.—The proportion in which freight earned by two connecting railroads under a joint-tariff schedule is divided between them is a matter for their consideration alone, and can not be taken cognizance of by a court for the purpose of determining that the share received by one constitutes an unjust or discriminative rate, under the interstate commerce law.[4]

§ 4084. Special Rates.—A railway contract, whereby a shipper of lumber is allowed a special rate, which gives such shipper a preference of from one to two cents a pound over other shippers of lumber, is in violation of the interstate

99. Disparity in rates between different localities.—Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 106 Fed. 265.

1. Rates reasonable in themselves.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 205 Fed. 380.

2. Power of commission to determine.—Findings by the interstate commerce commission that rates put in force by Southern railroads between Norfolk and points in the southeastern territory, and between Newport News and the same points, were unjustly discriminatory against Newport News, and an order requiring the same rates to be maintained with respect to each city held within the power of the commission. Southern R. Co. v. United States, 204 Fed. 465.

3. Court can not determine.—Simpson v. Shepard, 33 S. Ct. 729, 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. Ed. 1511, 48 L. R. A., N. S., 1151, modifying decree Shepard v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 184 Fed. 765.

4. Connecting carriers.—Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

commerce law, so that it can not be enforced as relating to interstate shipments.[5] Where an interstate carrier had not provided a special rate for expedited shipments of cattle to market, an oral agreement to expedite a shipment transported under regular rates was void as discriminatory in violation of the act.[6]

§ 4085. Free Transportation.—Free Cartage from Station.—An allowance made to a shipper by a railroad company for cartage from its depot, and the refusal to make a similar allowance to another shipper, the railroad service proper and the rate being the same to each, is an unjust discrimination in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act notwithstanding such allowance was made to induce the favored shipper to transfer his transportation from a competing line with which he had a siding connection.[7]

Free Pass.—An agreement by an interstate carrier to issue annual passes for life in consideration of a release of a claim for damages, though entered into prior to the act was made unenforceable by the prohibition of the act against demanding, collecting, or receiving "a greater or less or different compensation" for the transportation of persons or property, or for any service in connection therewith, than that specified in the carrier's published schedule of rates.[8]

Pass Granted Prior to Act June 29, 1906.—The performance of a contract by which a railroad company, in consideration of the conveyance of land to it, agrees to give annual passes to the grantors during their lifetime, made prior to Commerce Act June 29, 1906, is forbidden by § 6 of that act, providing that no carrier shall charge or receive a greater or less or different compensation for the transportation of passengers than the rates specified in the tariff filed as required by the act.[9]

5. Special rates.—Kizer v. Texarkana, etc., R. Co., 66 Ark. 348, 50 S. W. 871.

6. Clegg v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 203 Fed. 971.

7. Free transportation. — Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

8. Free pass.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, reversing decree, 118 S. W. 982, 133 Ky. 652.

Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Hepburn Act, invalidated an agreement by a railroad company to issue an annual pass in consideration of a right of way grant, so that he could not compel specific performance thereof. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Crowe, 160 S. W. 759, 156 Ky. 27, 49 L. R. A., N. S., 848.

9. Pass granted prior to act.—Cowley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 68 Wash. 558, 123 Pac. 998, 41 L. R. A., N. S., 559. But see Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 133 Ky. 652, 118 S. W. 982.

"The act of congress to which reference has been made forbade the further performance of the contract by the defendant. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671." Cowley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 68 Wash. 558, 123 Pac. 998, 41 L. R. A., N. S., 559.

"In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 31 S. Ct. 265, 55 L. Ed. 297, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, it said: 'After the commerce act came into effect no contract that was inconsistent with the regulations established by the act of congress could be enforced in any court.' And again, Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 31 S. Ct. 265, 55 L. Ed. 297, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, it said: 'We forbear any further citation of authorities. They are numerous and are all one way. They support the view that, as the contract in question would have been illegal if made after the passage of the commerce act, it can not now be enforced against the railroad company, even though valid when made.'" Cowley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 68 Wash. 558, 123 Pac. 998, 41 L. R. A., N. S., 559.

The fact that a pass is issued under an established contract, valid when made, does not exempt the parties from the operation of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, as amended June 29, 1906. Gill v. Erie R. Co., 135 N. Y. S. 355, 151 App. Div. 131, reargument and appeal to court of appeals denied in 136 N. Y. S. 1135.

Decision contra.—Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 1, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892), prohibits any common carrier from giving any passenger interstate free transportation. Section 2 prohibits carriers from charging any different compensation for carrying passengers between points named in its tariff, as filed, than the fare specified therein, or from refunding any part of the fares. Held, that the statute is not retrospective, and does not apply to a contract made in 1871, by which a carrier agreed to issue an annual pass to one in-

Pass Issued for Consideration.—The Interstate Commerce Act does not prohibit the issuance of railway passes upon a valuable consideration, but only prohibits free transportation.[10] Annual passes, issued pursuant to a contract by which a carrier agreed to issue an annual pass for life to one injured by it in settlement of his claim for damages, are not "free passes" within the meaning of § 1 of the Act of June 29, 1906, prohibiting any common carrier from directly or indirectly giving any interstate free pass or ticket for passengers except to employees, nor did the contract violate § 2 prohibiting carriers from charging any different compensation between points named in its tariff than the fare specified therein, or from extending to any person any privileges except as specified in its tariff; it not appearing that the contract discriminated in favor of the person injured.[11]

Interchange of Passes.—The provision in the Act of June 29, 1906, following language appertaining solely to the carriage of passengers, that its provisions shall not be construed to prohibit the interchange of passes for the officers, agents, and employees of common carriers and their families, or to prohibit any carrier from carrying passengers free in certain cases, does not embrace free transportation by express companies, although, by the terms of that act, express companies are deemed common carriers.[12] In view of the interpretation thus given to the act it can not be doubted that the gratuitous transportation of property, upon franks issued by express companies, is within the terms of the act, and that express companies are prohibited from giving free transportation of personal packages to their officers and employees and members of their families, and to the officers of other transportation companies, and members of their families, in exchange for passes issued by the latter to the officers of the express companies, by the provision which forbids all transportation of property at less than the published rates.[13]

Exceptions.—Congress may in prohibiting interstate carriers from issuing free transportation except such persons from the operation of the general prohibition as it may see fit.[14] Section 22 of the Interstate Commerce Act as jured, in settlement of his claim for damages, though annual passes were issued under the contract after the statute was enacted. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 133 Ky. 652, 118 S. W. 982.

10. Pass issued for consideration.—Curry v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 58 Kan. 6, 48 Pac. 579.

11. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 133 Ky. 652, 118 S. W. 982.

Act Cong. June 29, 1906, §§ 2, 6, 34 Stat. 584, c. 3591, prohibiting interstate carriers from issuing free transportation or receiving different compensation for transportation of passengers or property between points named in published tariffs than the rates, fares, and charges specified in the tariffs, etc., did not invalidate a contract made October 2, 1871, by which an interstate carrier, in consideration of a release of damages for injuries to complainants, contracted to issue free passes over its lines to complainants during their natural lives, nor did such act authorize the carrier to refuse longer to issue passes good beyond the boundaries of the state. Mottley v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 150 Fed. 406.

12. Interchange of passes.—Elkins Act of Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880), as amended by the Hepburn Act (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584, 587 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, pp. 892, 898]); American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315.

13. American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315, affirming United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

Without considering §§ 2, 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1889, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379, prohibiting express companies from giving free transportation of personal packages to officers and employees and members of their families and to officers of other transportation companies and members of their families in exchange for passes issued by the latter to the officers of the express companies, it is held that such practice is forbidden by § 1 of Elkins law as amended by the Hepburn Act of June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584-587, and that an injunction to restrain the giving of such free transportation is authorized under § 3 of the Elkins law. American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315.

14. Exceptions.—Schuyler v. Southern Pac. Co., 37 Utah 581, 109 Pac. 458, rehearing denied in 37 Utah 612, 109 Pac. 1025.

amended by the Act of March 2, 1889, provides: "That nothing in this act shall prevent the carriage, storage or handling of property free or at reduced rates for the United States, state or municipal governments, or for charitable purposes, or to or from fairs and expositions for exhibition thereat, or the free carriage of destitute and homeless persons transported by charitable societies, and the necessary agents employed in such transportation, or the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation passenger tickets; nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit any common carrier from giving reduced rates to ministers of religion, or to municipal governments for the transportation of indigent persons, or to inmates of the National Homes or State Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and of Soldier's and Sailor's Orphan Homes, including those about to enter and those returning home after discharge, under arrangements with the boards of managers of said homes; nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent railroads from giving free carriage to their own officers and employees, or to prevent the principal officers of any railroad company or companies from exchanging passes or tickets with other railroad companies for their officers and employees; and nothing in this act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies: Provided, that no pending litigation shall in any way be affected by this act."[15] In order for a free transportation to be lawful it must come within one of the exceptions in the act.[16] Manifestly, from the face of the commerce act itself, congress, before taking final action, considered the question as to what exceptions, if any, should be made in respect of the prohibition of free tickets, free passes, and free transportation. It solved the question when, without making any exceptions of existing contracts, it forbade by broad, explicit words any carrier to charge, demand, collect, or receive a greater or less or different compensation for any services in connection with the transportation of passengers or property than was specified in its published schedules of rates; and the courts can not add exceptions based on equitable grounds when congress forbore to make such exceptions.[17] The exception allowed in favor of officers and employees of the road does not include the families of such persons.[18]

Railway Mail Service Employees.—The Act of June 29, 1906, providing that no carrier subject to the provisions of the act shall issue in interstate commerce free transportation, except to railway mail service employees, can not be construed to prohibit the issuance of a free pass to an employee of the railway mail service for transportation of such employee while not in the actual discharge of his official duties.[19]

The issuing of franks by an express company to officers, agents, attorneys, or employees of itself or other express companies or railroad companies, or to the families of such persons, upon which property is transported from one state to another free of charge, relates to interstate commerce, which it is within the constitutional power of congress to regulate, and is within the prohibitions of the interstate commerce act and its amendments against discrimination, undue preference, and departure from the published schedule of rates, and is unlawful. Such gratuitous carriage is not within the exceptions made in Interstate Commerce Act, which by its terms are restricted to certain classes of passengers car-

15. 25 Stat. at L. 862; 24 Stat. at L. 387. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

16. "If it is lawful, in view of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, to issue franks of the character under consideration in this case, then this right must be founded upon some exception incorporated in the act." American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 635, 29 S. Ct. 315.

17. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, citing Yturbide v. United States (U. S.), 22 How. 290, 16 L. Ed. 342.

18. Ex parte Koehler, 31 Fed. 315, 12 Sawy. 446.

19. Railway mail service employees. —Schuyler v. Southern Pac. Co., 37 Utah 581, 109 Pac. 458.

ried by railroads and property carried for certain classes of shippers and for stated purposes.[20]

Pass Issued to Wife of Employee.—A pass issued by a railroad for interstate transportation to the wife of an employee under the Act of June 29, 1906, must be deemed gratuitous, in view of prohibition against charging a greater or different compensation for transportation of passengers from that scheduled in the published rates.[21]

The word "family," in Interstate Commerce Act, prohibiting the issuance of any pass except to employees and their families, means a collective body of persons living in one house under one head, and does not include the father of an adult employee not living with him nor dependent on him.[22]

Liability of Officers and Agents.—An officer of a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce, who, as a personal favor, issues to a person not within any of the exceptions contained in Interstate Commerce Act, a free pass for transportation from one state to another, is guilty of unjust discrimination, in violation of the provision of the act, making the charging of a less rate to one person than to another, for the same services, unjust discrimination.[23]

Liability of Passenger.—Under the provision which makes it a misdemeanor for any common carrier subject to its provisions to issue any free ticket, free pass, or free transportation for passengers, except to persons therein excepted, and further provides that any person other than the persons excepted in this provision who uses any such interstate free ticket, free pass or free transportation shall be subject to a like penalty, one who, having in his possession an interstate free pass, sells it to another, knowing that he is not the person named therein, and is not entitled to ride thereon, with intent that he shall so use it, which he does by riding on an interstate journey, is guilty of using the ticket in violation of the statute.[24]

§ 4086. Reduced Rates.—For Purposes Not Prohibited.—Unjust discrimination and undue or unreasonable preference or advantage are made unlawful by the act and the declaration in another section that the act shall not prevent the giving of reduced rates for the purposes and to the classes of persons therein named does not exclude the idea that reduced rates for other purposes or to other classes may not be reasonable and just, and therefore lawful.[25]

Who May Complain.—A railroad company is not guilty of an unlawful discrimination or preference by receiving cotton from a shipper, shipping it to a compress, having it compressed there at the company's expense, and reshipped to other points for a rate equal to its published through rate, where such an arrangement is in compliance with a recognized custom, of which all other shippers, including the petitioner, could or did avail themselves, and where it does not appear that the petitioner desired to ship any cotton to such points, or that he was compelled to pay a higher rate under similar circumstances.[26]

Reduced from Schedule Rate.—Deliveries of coal by an interstate carrier

20. Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 22, 24 Stat. 387 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3170). United States v. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co., 161 Fed. 606.

21. Pass issued to wife of employee.—Charleston, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 234 U. S. 576, 34 S. Ct. 964.

22. Wentz v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Mo.), 168 S. W. 1166.

23. Liability of officers and agents.—In re Charge to Grand Jury, 66 Fed. 146.

24. Liability of passenger.—United States v. Martin, 176 Fed. 110.

Where a common carrier issued an interstate free pass to an employee, and said employee delivered the pass to a person not authorized by statute to receive or use it, and the said party used the same on an interstate journey, he violated Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892], and the employee delivering to said person such pass is guilty of aiding and abetting in said violation. United States v. Williams, 159 Fed. 310.

25. Reduced rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844, affirming 43 Fed. 37.

26. Who may complain.—Cowan v. Bond, 39 Fed. 54.

not empowered to mine and market coal by its charter or by any legislation existing at the time of the adoption of the act to regulate commerce, under a contract to sell and transport such coal at a stipulated price, come within the requirement of that act respecting the maintenance of published rates, and its prohibitions against undue preferences and discrimination, whenever, from any cause, the gross sum realized is insufficient to yield the carrier its published freight rates after deducting the purchase price of the coal and the cost of delivery, although the contract may not have been open to that objection when made.[27]

Necessity for Injury to Shipper.—The court is not warranted in finding that a mere disparity between the through and local rates, which is considerable, is, of itself, sufficient to constitute an undue discrimination, where there is no person, firm or corporation complaining that he or they are aggrieved by the disparity.[28]

In Shipments to Same Person.—Where several shipments are made to the same person it can not be said that any preference or discrimination within the meaning of the act is granted.[29]

In Payment for Construction Work.—A lumber company which was a shipper of railroad ties, made a contract with a railroad company by which it agreed to build a tie hoist for loading ties at a station, and the railroad company agreed to haul its ties to a designated point for a reduced rate per car, and to return to the lumber company ten per centum of the freights so received to apply on the cost of the hoist until entirely paid for, when it was to become the property of the railroad company. In the meantime, however, it could be used only by the lumber company. The rate given was materially less than the published rate, which was charged other shippers. Such contract was one designed to give the lumber company an undue preference or advantage over other shippers, in violation of Interstate Commerce Act, and was illegal and not enforceable in any part.[30]

In Payment for Use of Cars.—To an application for a mandamus to compel a carrier to transport relators' stock in the cars of a certain live stock transportation company, the respondent set forth that it had entered into a contract with another transportation company, by which that company was to furnish respondent a certain number of cars per year; that such cars were available to all shippers of stock; that they were much more useful to defendant than other live

27. Reduced from schedule rate.—Decree, 128 Fed. 59, modified in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 26 S. Ct. 272, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515.

28. Necessity for injury to shipper.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

29. In shipments to same person.—A grocery company of Hannibal, Mo., ordered a broker in Chicago to ship two barrels of sugar to a customer in Hepler, Kan. This order was executed by shipping the sugar over the C., B. & Q. R. Co. A through bill of lading was taken in the name of the broker, with the customer indicated as consignee, which reserved to the C., B. & Q. Co. the right to forward the property from Hannibal, Mo., over the line of any connecting carrier. At the latter place the sugar was unloaded, placed in the warehouse of the Mo. Pac. Ry. Co., and thence loaded on its cars, and carried to Hepler, where the total freight charges, at the rate of 51 cents per hundred, were paid by the consignee. Of this rate 34 cents per hundred only were retained for the Mo. Pac. Ry. Co. The Mo. Pac. Ry. and the C., B. & Q. Co. had a standing arrangement by which rates were fixed from Chicago to points on the road of the Mo. Pac., by adding an arbitrary sum—five cents—to the rate from Hannibal to such points. On the same day, the grocery company sold to the same customer one barrel of sugar, and shipped it over the road of the Mo. Pac. from Hannibal to Hepler, and paid the freight charges in advance, which were at the rate of 46 cents per hundred. Held, that the two services were not rendered for one and the same party in such sense that there could be no undue discrimination, within the meaning of the interstate commerce act. United States v. Tozer, 39 Fed. 369; S. C., 39 Fed. 904.

30. In payment for construction work.—Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Standard Lumber Co., 174 Fed. 107, 98 C. C. A. 81, decided under Act of Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. 380 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155).

stock cars, in that they could be converted into coal cars when not used for live stock; and that defendant paid mileage for the use of the cars. The refusal to transport relators' stock in the cars offered at the same rates charged for stock in the other cars was not an "unjust discrimination" in favor of the transportation company, whose cars respondent was using, within the meaning of the interstate commerce act, as the circumstances and conditions were not substantially similar.[31]

Sale of Tickets Through Broker.—A contract with a ticket broker, whereby he is enabled to sell railroad tickets to points in another state, over the company's line, for less than the regular fare, violates the provision of the act, prohibiting discriminations by common carriers.[32]

Party-Rate Tickets.—See post, "Party-Rate Tickets," § 4113.

Shipment on Through Bills of Lading.—The giving of a much lower rate on goods shipped on through bills of lading than on goods shipped on local bills may constitute an unjust discrimination.[33]

Because of Competition.—A genuine competition which results in a reduction of freight rates negatives any unlawful intent on the part of the carrier, and leaves open only the question as to whether the rates, as established, work an undue preference or discrimination.[34] But a carrier can not because of competition reduce its charges on through bills of lading to about half the amount charged on local bills for shipments through the same points.[35]

Because of Reduced Valuation of Goods.—Where a consignee of goods shipped from another state sues the common carrier for the value of goods lost in transit, his right to recover their value can not be limited by the contract of 31. In payment for use of cars.—United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 40 Fed. 101.

32. Sale of tickets through broker.—Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Swanson, 102 Ga. 754, 28 S. E. 601, 39 L. R. A. 275.

33. Shipment on through bills of lading.—Freight rates from London and Liverpool to San Francisco are fixed by the competition of the water and rail route via the Isthmus of Panama and the water route around Cape Horn. A carrier by rail from New Orleans to San Francisco gave a much lower rate on goods shipped from London and Liverpool to San Francisco on through bills of lading than from New York, Chicago, and other points to San Francisco (in some cases less than half the latter rate). The rate complained of was slightly remunerative to the carrier, and it would lose the traffic unless it carried at such low rate. Held, that under §§ 2 and 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act (24 Stat. 379, 380) the giving of such low rate is an unjust discrimination, and a charging of one person more than another for a like service under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, and an order of the commissioners prohibiting it will be enforced. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187.

34. Because of competition.—Judgment, 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

No undue prejudice to an intermediate point, in violation of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. 380 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155), can be predicated merely on the fact that a rail carrier charges a less rate to a terminal point on the Pacific Coast, where such rate is forced by competition. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 191 Fed. 856.

The discrimination in favor of competitive points on account of competition which compels a reduction of rates to those points below the rate charged for shorter distances is not an undue or unjust discrimination prohibited by § 3 of the act to regulate commerce. Decree, 99 Fed. 52, 39 C. C. A. 413, reversed in East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 S. Ct. 516, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719.

35. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187.

Under Interstate Commerce Law (24 Stat. 379, 380) §§ 2, 3, the fact of the existence of ocean competition will not justify a railroad company's rates for carrying merchandise from New Orleans to San Francisco which comes to New Orleans from domestic points, which rates are treble, and some cases four times, the rates charged for carriage of like kinds of merchandise from New Orleans to San Francisco which reach New Orleans from foreign ports, although such lower rates constitute the only condition on which the carrier can obtain any part in such foreign traffic. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 948, 6 C. C. A. 653, affirming 52 Fed. 187.

shipment, which provides that in consideration of reduced rates the valuation of the property shipped should not exceed a certain amount, and the carrier's liability should not exceed that amount, since such contract violates the provision forbidding special rates.[36]

§§ 4087-4090. Rebates—§ 4087. In General.—The word "rate" means the net amount the carrier receives from the shipper and retains, and any device by which such amount is reduced below the rate given in the published schedule is one for the giving of a rebate.[37] The word "rebate," as used in the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments, refers only to such a discount, deduction, or drawback as creates a discrimination in favor of a particular shipper and against other shippers in like situation.[38] The purpose of Congress in the enactment of Act of Feb. 19, 1903, known as the "Elkins Law," was to secure uniform freight rates to all shippers, and its provisions are violated by the giving or receiving of any rebate or concession whereby any property shall be transported at a less rate by any interstate carrier than that named in the tariffs published and filed by such carrier, whether by direct agreement between shipper and carrier or indirectly by "any device whatever."[39] The meaning of the clause, "by any device whatever" in the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, prohibiting rebates, is directly or indirectly in anyway whatever.[40] Section 10 of the Interstate Commerce Act as amended by the Act of June 18, 1910, making it unlawful to offer, grant, give, solicit, accept, or receive a rebate from a carrier for the transportation of goods in interstate commerce, was not impliedly repealed by Hepburn Act, June 29, 1906, making it an offense to receive transportation for less than posted rates by false billing, false classification, etc.[41]

Agreement of Parties Immaterial.—A claim against a carrier for rebates may be resisted as against public policy or contrary to state or federal regulations, notwithstanding any agreement of the parties.[42]

Carriers Subject to Act.—A private car company which delivers its cars to railroad companies to be furnished indiscriminately for the use of shippers, receiving pay for such use from the railroad companies on a mileage basis, is within the provision of the act forbidding rebates and the giving by such a car company of any rebate or allowance to a shipper using its cars, whereby he secures the transportation of his property at a less rate than that named in the published tariff of the carrier for transportation of such property in its own cars, although from its own funds and without the connivance or knowledge of the carrier, is a violation of the statute. Such a car company is therefore subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, charged with the duty of enforcing the statute and having power to inquire into the operations of any agency of transportation which may so conduct its business as to destroy uniformity of rates.[43]

Who May Complain of Rebate.—A coal shipper, which, with others, was given rebates by a railroad company in violation of law, can not maintain an action against the company to recover damages for discrimination because others were granted larger rebates.[44]

36. Because of reduced valuation of goods.—Ward v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 158 Mo. 226, 58 S. W. 28.

37. Rebates.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 148 Fed. 646. See post, "Receiving Rebates," § 4240.

38. American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 207 Fed. 733, reversing judgment, 200 Fed. 652.

39. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

40. Direct or indirect.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

41. Nichols, etc., Lumber Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 588.

42. Agreement of parties immaterial.—First Trust, etc., Bank v. Southern Indiana R. Co., 195 Fed. 330.

43. Carriers subject to act.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Reichmann, 145 Fed. 235.

44. Who may complain of rebate.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

§ 4088. What Amounts to Rebate.—Necessity for Refusing Rate Paid.—The offense of giving rebates in violation of the Act of February 19, 1903, is not complete nor the offense committed until the carrier, to whom the shipper has paid the full legal rate, has refunded to the shipper, upon a claim presented by him, a part of the legal rate already paid.[45] It follows, therefore, that the act applies and that a prosecution thereon may be sustained where the agreement for the rebate was made and the property transported pursuant thereto before the act went into effect, notwithstanding the actual refunding of a part of the legal rate was not made until after the law went into effect.[46]

In Absence of Discrimination.—If there is no unjust discrimination, an agreement by a railroad company that it will carry goods at a certain rate, and repay the shipper a part thereof as a rebate after the shipment, is not illegal, and the rebate may be recovered by the shipper in a proper case.[47] So long as there is no unjust discrimination, and no stipulation in the contract forbidding the carrier extending similar rates to all other shippers similarly situated, there is no express provision of law, and no sound reason arising out of public policy, which prohibits a carrier entering into a fair and equitable milling in transit arrangement with any of the numerous industries now operating under such plans.[48] But a lumber company, using a railroad owned by stockholders of a rival lumber company that operated as a separate corporation, would be given a rebate contrary to the Interstate Commerce Act if a nondiscriminatory agreement between the two lumber companies were construed to entitle the former company to the same proportion of the interstate freight rates on its shipments which the railway company receives on the interstate shipments by the other lumber company.[49]

Where Legal Rate Higher than Rebated Rate.—A shipper is not entitled to recover damages from a railroad company for discrimination in rates because of rebates paid to a shipper from another district; the rate from such district with the rebates deducted being higher than that paid by plaintiff.[50]

Allowance for Services of Shipper.—The published tariff schedules of an interstate carrier by rail gave its rate on packing house products from a certain point, including the rate charged by a belt line company for carriage between such point and a connection with the carrier's road. The carrier charged and received such rate from a packing company, paid the charge of the belt line company, and afterward paid back to the packing company the sum of one dollar upon each car so shipped. Such repayment constitutes the granting of a rebate, and can not be justified as lawful on the ground that it was an allowance to the packing company for the use of its own private track in moving the cars from its shipping building to a connection with the belt line tracks.[51]

Refunding for Use of Private Track.—Private tracks built by the owner of a packing plant on its own property, extending from a connection with the tracks of a belt line railroad company to and around its buildings, and used in loading cars for shipment, are not a part of the railroad system, but plant facilities, and the refunding by a railroad company, which made and published a schedule of through rates, including the belt line charge, of one dollar per car to such packing 45. Necessity for refunding rate paid.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304, affirming 146 Fed. 298; S. C., 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

46. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

47. In absence of discrimination.—Elliot on Railroads, § 1565; Rorer on Railroads, § 1375. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

48. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

49. Fourche River Lumber Co. v. Bryant Lumber Co., 33 S. Ct. 887, 230 U. S. 316, 57 L. Ed. 1498, reversing judgment, 135 S. W. 796, 97 Ark. 623.

50. Where legal rate higher than rebated rate.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403.

51. Allowance for services of shipper.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 148 Fed. 646.

company on shipments made by it and paid for at the schedule rate, on the ground that it was a payment for the use of such private tracks, thus making the rate charged one dollar per car less than that published and charged to shippers generally from the same point, constituted the giving of a rebate, in violation of § 1 of the Act February 19, 1903.[52]

Refunding Cartage Charges.—Where a railroad company, in order to obtain shipments from one so located as to require no cartage when he ships by another road, makes him a rebate to cover the cost of cartage, but makes no such rebate to other shippers who require cartage by whichever road they may ship, it is guilty of unjust discrimination.[53]

Refunding Elevator Charges.—Where an interstate carrier returned to a shipper of grain after payment of the freight an amount equal to elevator charges at the point of shipment, and the carrier had not published or filed any schedule showing that it had absorbed such elevator charge as a part of its rate between the points in question, the carrier was guilty of granting rebates prohibited by the act.[54] A railroad company whose published schedule rate for the carriage of oats in interstate shipment from Minneapolis to Duluth or Superior was five cents per one hundred pounds, and which received payment from a shipper at such rate, but, on shipments intended for through transportation over the lakes, later refunded to the shipper the elevator charges for transferring the grain from its cars to vessels after the termination of its own carriage amounting to one-half cent per bushel, was guilty of granting a rebate or concession from the published schedule rate, in violation of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, and it was no defense to a prosecution therefor that competing roads granted a like concession, and that it was compelled to do the same in order to secure its fair share of the business, or that it treated all shippers alike, or that the concession was made by its officers in good faith and in the honest belief that it was lawful.[55]

Agreed Valuation for Injury to Goods.—When an interstate shipment was made under a contract, providing that if the stock shipped was injured the shipper should obtain no compensation beyond an agreed valuation, a decision that the agreement as to valuation was invalid does not give the shipper rebate, but only compensation for loss suffered, which is not a lower rate than he is entitled to.[56]

Rebate from Joint Rate.—The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, makes it unlawful for a carrier to grant a rebate from a joint tariff which it has filed with the interstate commerce commission or published, or in which it participates when filed or published by another carrier. When a carrier unites with one or more 52. Refunding for use of private track.—Judgment, United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 148 Fed. 646, affirmed in 156 Fed. 558, 84 C. C. A. 324, 26 L. R. A., N. S., 551.

53. Refunding cartage charges.—Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

54. Refunding elevator charges.—Elkins Act, § 1 (Act Cong. Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880]); Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 169 Fed. 76, 94 C. C. A. 444.

A grain company made certain shipments of grain over defendant's road from Minneapolis to Milwaukee to the grain company's brokers, who received the consignments, paid the freight, and afterwards sold the grain for the shipper's account. Thereafter the grain company presented to defendant the receipted freight bills paid by the consignees with other papers, on which defendant, according to a pre-existing agreement, refunded elevator charges to the grain company. Held, that defendant at the time it paid such rebate had actual knowledge that the freight had been paid by the consignees acting for the grain company, and that such facts therefore sustained an indictment charging the railroad company with paying a rebate to the grain company from freight charges before then "received from the grain company:" Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 169 Fed. 76, 94 C. C. A. 444.

55. Judgment, United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 84, affirmed in 162 Fed. 835.

56. Agreed valuation for injury to goods.—Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

others in making a rate for interstate or foreign shipments, and a through bill is issued therefor, it is subject to the Interstate Commerce Act. An express agreement for the through rate is not required, but the successive receipt and forwarding in the ordinary course of business by two or more carriers under through bills, or any arrangement for a continuous carriage, constitutes assent to such common arrangement, and makes the carrier a party to the contract, within the meaning of the act.[57] Where the defendant railroad was a party to a joint rate for the shipment of coal for a certain price to the point of junction with a connecting carrier, and an increased amount for shipment to other points on the defendant's line, of which sum the defendant received a part, the defendant is not subject to prosecution for receiving a rebate, where coal was shipped for the defendant's own use to its yards, although within the city limits of the connecting point, where the joint agreement also provided that, where the point of destination of shipment is between any two points named in the schedule, the rate should be the same as to the next more distant point named.[58]

Trackage Charges Paid by Railroad to Stockyard Company.—The certificate of incorporation of a union stockyards company authorized it to hold shares of stock in a transit company, which owned stockyards, and a belt line which connected all the railroads entering the city. The transit company, most of whose stock was owned by the stockyards company, depended on the permanent market for cattle created by the presence of slaughtering and packing establishments. Some of the packers, known as "nonassociate," contemplated a removal from the vicinity of the stockyards. Other of the packers, known as "associate," purchased a large tract of land at a distance from the city, and made preparations to remove their plants and establish stockyards of their own. The stockyards company entered into a contract with the associate packers, by which it was to give them a large amount of interest bearing income bonds in consideration of a conveyance of the land purchased, and an agreement not to remove their plants, etc. On a bill to restrain the execution of the contract, it was held that trackage charges paid by the railroad companies to the stockyards company for the use of the latter's tracks were not repaid by the packers to the railroads, and that the agreement was not intended as a device to pay a rebate to the associate packers, in violation of the interstate commerce law, prohibiting discrimination in railroad rates.[59]

Shipment to Points Beyond Carrier's Line.—Where a railroad company has published and filed a schedule of rates on interstate shipments to points beyond its own line said section applies to such rates equally with those between points on its own road.[60]

57. Rebate from joint rate.—United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

58. Sharing joint rate of shipper of carrier's own goods.—Defendant operated a line of railroad from Montpelier to Wells River, in Vermont, a distance of 39 miles. By a joint tariff, to which it was a party, the rate on coal from a point in Pennsylvania to Montpelier was fixed at $3.55 per ton, and to all other points on its line at $3.80, of which it received 75 cents as its share. The published rules also provided that, where the point of destination of a shipment was between any two points named in the schedules, the rate should be the same as to the next more distant point named. Held, that the tariff rate to Montpelier should be construed as applying to the station in that city, and that where defendant received coal for its own use, which it received at such station and hauled over its own line to a chute between that and the next station, although within the limits of the city, the fact that it had the coal billed at the $3.80 rate and took its divisional share thereof did not render it subject to prosecution for receiving a rebate, in violation of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 382 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3160), as amended by Act Feb. 19, 1902, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1138). Montpelier, etc., Railroad v. United States, 187 Fed. 271, 109 C. C. A. 532.

59. Trackage charges paid by railroad to stockyard company.—Willoughby v. Chicago Junction R., etc., Co., 50 N. J. Eq. 656, 25 Atl. 277.

60. Shipment to points beyond carrier's line.—United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

Milling in Transit Agreement.—A "milling in transit" agreement, by which the railroad contracts to credit on the freight charges on manufactured goods any freight on raw material shipped to the factory, is not violative of this section.[61] It is no longer open to question that milling in transit arrangements by which a railroad contracts to credit on the freight charges on manufactured goods any freight on raw material shipped to the factory are recognized as valid agreements, which may be lawfully entered into between shippers and carriers.[62] It is well understood that at the present time this principle is applied to the movement of many commodities. Generally, in its application, the raw material pays the local rate into the point of manufacture. When afterwards the manufactured product goes forward, it is transported upon a rate which would be applicable to the product, had it originated in its manufactured state at the point where the raw material was received for transportation, whatever has been paid into the mill being accounted for in this final adjustment. Under this or some equivalent arrangement at the present time, grain of all kind is milled and otherwise treated in transit; flour is blended; cotton is compressed; lumber is dressed, and perhaps otherwise manufactured; live stock is stopped off to test the market.[63] It may be urged with much force that the act to regulate commerce does not sanction arrangements of this kind, and the commission, early in its history, intimated that such might finally be its conclusion.[64] Such practice were, however, in use to a considerable extent at the time of the passage of the act, and since then they have become universal. To abrogate these privileges would be to confiscate thousands and probably millions of dollars in value, by rendering worthless industrial plants which have been constructed upon the faith of their continuation. Nor is it a forced construction of the statute to hold that, when the product goes forward to the point of consumption, it but completes the journey upon which it entered when the raw material was taken up. There can be no doubt that the application of this principle has cheapened the cost of transportation, and probably of manufacture.[65]

Manner of Calculating Rate.—Whether the raw material pays the local rate into the point of manufacture, and afterwards the manufactured product pays a lower rate, calculated from point of original shipment, or whether the raw material pays the local rates, and this is credited in whole or in part upon the transportation of the manufactured products subsequently shipped, result is the same in principle; the one being, in the language of the interstate commerce commission, "an equivalent arrangement" of the other, and neither contravening the mandate of the law devised to protect shippers from unjust discrimination, whether the same arises from extortion or from unlawful rebates granted to a favored few.[66]

Validity Dependent upon Circumstances of Particular Case.—The legality of the principle of milling in transit arrangements being recognized, whether each special agreement will be upheld depends upon the varying circumstances attendant upon its making; but it can not be affirmed that such an agreement as is here under consideration can be declared to be, by its very terms, violative of the laws prohibiting unlawful rebates.[67]

61. Milling in transit agreement.—Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

62. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

63. Central Yellow Pine Ass'n v. V. S. & P. R. Co., 1 Inters. Commerce Com. Rep. 703.

64. Crews v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 1 Inters. Commerce Com. R. 401.

65. Central Yellow Pine Ass'n v. V. S. & P. R. Co., 1 Inters. Commerce Com. Rep. 703; Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

66. Manner of calculating rate.—Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

67. Validity dependent upon circumstances of particular case.—Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 84 Miss. 339, 37 So. 134, 66 L. R. A. 453.

Particular Instances.—It is unlawful for a corporation organized to control the interstate transportation of a brewing company to demand and receive as a consideration for the routing of the brewing company's products over certain lines of railroad a concession equal to one-eighth or one-tenth of the published freight rates.[68] But where a refrigerator company was incorporated to own and operate a private car line, and to have charge of all the interstate transportation of the products of a brewing company. A majority of the brewing company's stock, however, was owned by persons who had no interest in the refrigerator company, and the stock of the latter was bought and paid for by the holders with their own money and in their own interest; none of it being held in trust for the brewing company, though the majority of it was owned by persons who also owned brewing company stock. The brewing company paid its freights in full and received no rebates, nor was it a party to contracts between the refrigerator company and the railroad companies by which the refrigerator company received a rebate of from one-eighth to one-tenth of all freight moneys on all interstate traffic it controlled. Such facts were insufficient to establish that the brewing company had received rebates.[69]

§ 4089. Effect of Granting Rebate.—The granting of a rebate contrary to the provision of the interstate commerce law does not render the bill of lading void, so that no action can be maintained against the carrier for loss of the goods by negligence.[70]

Contract Made before Act Took Effect.—The act applies to an agreement for a rebate made and the goods transported before the act took effect, and notwithstanding the actual refunding of the part of the rate was not made until after the act took effect.[71] The payment of a rebate after the passage of the act, but upon shipments of property transported prior to that enactment, is comprehended by its provisions that it shall be unlawful to offer, grant, or give, or to solicit, accept, or receive any rebate in respect to property in interstate commerce transportation, whereby any such property shall be transported at less than the published rates.[72] A contract by which a railroad company, before the passage of the interstate commerce act, discriminates by agreeing to allow a certain shipper a rebate on freight charges, is not valid and enforceable at common law, and is not such a contract as could be impaired by the interstate commerce act prohibiting such discrimination.[73]

Rebate of Part of Rate.—A rebate or concession from a part of a single rate whereby property is transported thereunder at a less rate than the established rate is a concession from the entire rate, and renders all transportation thereunder illegal.[74]

§ 4090. Criminal Liability.—See elsewhere.[75]

68. Particular instances.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 145 Fed. 1007.

69. United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 145 Fed. 1007.

Lease of premises to shipper.—A contract by which a railroad company leased premises to a shipper for less than their rental value, as a means of granting to the lessee a rebate or concession from its published rates, held invalid, under Interstate Commerce Act, § 3, and Elkins Act, § 1, and also under 1 Gen. Code Ohio, § 505 et seq. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Hirsch, 204 Fed. 849, 123 C. C. A. 145.

70. Effect of granting rebate.—Merchants', etc., Storage Co. v. Insurance Co., 151 U. S. 368, 14 S. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195, affirming Insurance Co. v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 537, 19 S. W. 755.

71. Contract made before act took effect.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

72. Judgment, United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 298, affirmed in 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309.

73. Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 63 Vt. 169, 22 Atl. 76, 13 L. R. A. 70.

74. Rebate of part of rate.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

75. Criminal liability.—See post, "Rebates," § 4222.

§ 4091. Payment of Charges.—A common carrier can under the common law demand the prepayment of charges for freight of one and give credit to another, and such right is not made unlawful by the Interstate Commerce Act.[76] But a railroad company practices discrimination in respect to transportation, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, by systematically extending credit for freight charges to one interstate shipper, while exacting and collecting such charges from other shippers under substantially similar circumstances and conditions.[77] Plaintiff, a corporation, was engaged in the general produce business with offices in different places in two states. Defendant had stations at the towns in those states and in adjoining states. It was defendant's custom for the terminal carrier to advance charges of connecting lines upon freight consigned to parties at those stations, and to deliver the freight to consignees, and to receive freight and deliver it to consignees, and to hold the bills until the correctness of the charges had been adjusted. From a bad motive defendant, after notice, refused to advance charges to connecting lines and transport freight consigned to plaintiff unless the charges were prepaid, while it gave credit to other consignees similarly situated. The plaintiff is subjected to undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage within the Interstate Commerce Act.[78]

Payment in Advertising.—The acceptance of advertising by a carrier, in lieu of money in payment of interstate transportation furnished to the publisher, his employees and the immediate members of his and their families, violates the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act as amended prohibiting the furnishing of interstate transportation for a less or different compensation than that specified in the carrier's published rates.[79]

§ 4092. Demurrage Charges.—A demurrage or car service charge, made by an interstate railroad company for the time during which cars loaded with hay are left standing on its tracks at a suburban station in a city after the expiration of the time given for unloading, is not discriminative, because at another station which is the terminal of the road in the city, a hay shed is provided into which hay is unloaded at the request of a consignee to the extent of its capacity, and where it is stored at a somewhat less rate, the charge being the same at the two places where hay is left in the car.[80] The provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, requiring rates for the transportation and for the "receiving, delivering, storage or handling" of property by an interstate carrier to be reasonable, and prohibiting discrimination, are sufficiently broad to cover demurrage charges.[81]

76. Payment of charges.—Gamble-Robinson Comm. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 161.

An interstate carrier does not subject a consignee to an unreasonable disadvantage under Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155]) § 3, by exacting after due notice the prepayment of charges while it does not require such charges to be paid in advance on freight consigned to others similarly situated. Gamble-Robinson Comm. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 161.

77. United States v. Hocking Valley R. Co., 194 Fed. 234.

Giving of credit for freight charges pursuant to contract antedating the shipments to one shipper, while others under similar circumstances were denied such privilege, held a concession or discrimination in respect to transportation within the Elkins Act as amended by Act June 29, 1906. Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 735; Sunday Creek Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 747.

Extension to one shipper of credit for freight charges not given to others under similar circumstances held unlawful under Elkins Act as amended by Act June 29, 1906, though the other shippers, not knowing of the discrimination, had not demanded equal treatment. Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 735.

78. Gamble-Robinson Comm. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 161.

79. Payment in advertising.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Holman (Miss.), 64 So. 7.

80. Demurrage charges.—Michie v. New York, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 694.

81. Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, §§ 1, 3, 24 Stat. 379, 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3154, 3155]; Michie v. New York, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 694.

§ 4093. Purchase and Sale of Goods.—An interstate carrier, not empowered by its charter or by any legislation existing at the time of the adoption of the act to regulate commerce to mine and market coal, violates the mandate of that act respecting the maintenance of published rates, and its prohibitions against undue preferences and discriminations, by stipulating to sell and transport coal at an agreed price, insufficient to yield its published freight rates after deducting the cost of purchase and delivery.[82]

§ 4094. Justified Discrimination.—An unlawful discrimination in rates is not justified because the rate charged is the statutory local rate, and the transportation is over a railroad wholly within the state nor by the fact that the railroad is a small and weak road, whose business is unimportant as compared with other roads.[83]

To Safeguard Public.—It is settled law relative to questions of this kind that discriminations or preferences in rates may be justified to safeguard the interest of the public. It follows that the contrary proposition is true—that they may not be justified when they injure the interest of the public.[84]

To Overcome Natural Advantage of Particular Locality.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act, forbidding carriers to give any unreasonable preference or advantage to any shipper or locality, a carrier cannot lawfully make rates so as to overcome the natural advantage of one locality over another, or so as to build up one place at the expense of another.[85]

To Promote Carrier's Own Interest.—Conceding that a railroad company may, to a reasonable extent, so adjust its rates as to promote its own interest by favoring and building up a seaport on its own line at the expense of another on a rival road, it can not, with that purpose, adopt rates unreasonable in themselves, nor which are unduly preferential to its own port and unduly prejudicial to the other or to the public; and rates upon products shipped from points on its line where there is no competition, which are so grossly discriminating as to be prohibitory of shipments to the latter place, which affords the better market, adopted for the purpose of compelling the shipment of such products in the opposite direction to its own port, are unlawful, not only as unduly discriminating between 82. Purchase and sale of goods.—Decree, 128 Fed. 59, modified in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 26 S. Ct. 272, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515.

83. Justified discrimination.—The A. Railway connected at T. with the C. Railway and the W. Railway. Both the A. and C. Railways were engaged in interstate commerce, reaching by their own lines and connections the same regions. By the W. Railway, they both made connections with other important railways, and with routes of water transportation. For a considerable time, the W. Railway charged the same rate for transportation over its line of freight received from or destined to either of the other railways; but in December, 1895, it withdrew these rates as to the A. Railway, and thereafter charged for transportation, over its line, of freight received from or destined to the A. Railway, the full local rate of freight allowed by statute, which was considerably higher than the rate previously charged to both railways, and still charged to the C. Railway. There had been no change of conditions, and the service rendered to both railways continued to be substantially the same. Held, that the charge of such increased rate was an unlawful discrimination, not justified because the rate charged was the statutory local rate, and the transportation over the W. Railway was wholly within the state, nor by the facts that the A. Railway was a small and weak road, whose business was unimportant as compared with that of the C. Railway, or that there was no direct connection between the tracks of the A. and W. roads, the tracks of the C. Railway being used for switching, it not appearing that the C. Railway objected to such use of its tracks; and, accordingly, that the W. Railway should be enjoined from exacting more from the A. Railway than from the C. Railway, for similar services. Augusta, etc., R. Co. v. Wrightsville, etc., R. Co., 74 Fed. 522.

84. To safeguard public.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

85. To overcome natural advantage of particular locality.—State v. Adams Exp. Co., 171 Ind. 138, 85 N. E. 337, 19 L. R. A., N. S., 93, rehearing denied in 85 N. E. 966.

the two cities, but as making a discrimination injurious to the public.[86]

By Length of Time.—The length of time a discriminating rate has been maintained can not justify it. It was because time had not corrected abuses of discrimination that the interstate commerce act was passed.[87]

By Competition.—See elsewhere.[88]

§ 4095. Effect of Discrimination.—Effect on Contract of Shipment.—There is nothing in the interstate commerce law which vitiates bills of lading, or which, by reason of an allowance, special rates, rebates, or drawbacks, if actually made, would invalidate the contract of affreightment or exempt the railroad company from liability on its bills of lading.[89] Such a construction of the act would encourage rather than discourage such unlawful agreements for rebates. The carrier might prefer them to liability for the freight. Such a contract as to rebate would be void, and could not be enforced; but the shipper could nevertheless recover for loss of his freight through the carrier's negligence and, incidentally, of carrier's insurance.[90]

On Action for Damages for Delay.—If a contract for the shipment of stock was void as discriminating in favor of the shipper by giving him a rate which was too low in violation of Interstate Commerce Act, so that the carrier would be entitled to collect the correct rate, it would not prevent the shipper from recovering damages for delay in shipment where he had no actual knowledge that the rate was unlawful.[91]

§ 4096. Remedies.—When the act to regulate commerce was enacted there was contrariety of opinion whether, when a rate charged by a carrier was in and of itself reasonable, the person from whom such a charge was exacted had at common law an action against the carrier because of damage asserted to have been suffered by a discrimination against such person or a preference given by the carrier to another.[92] That the act to regulate commerce was intended to afford an

86. To promote carrier's own interest.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

87. By length of time.—East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 39 C. C. A. 413, 99 Fed. 52, reversed on another point in 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516.

88. By competition.—See ante, "Competition," § 4078; "Reduced Rates," § 4086.

89. Effect of discrimination.—The principles laid down in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844, fall far short of establishing that the alleged allowance of rebate to Jones Brothers & Company would render the railroad company's bills of lading invalid and defeat the right of the marine insurance companies, who had paid the losses, to subrogation against the railroad company on bills of lading issued to the owners or consignees of the cotton, who are not shown to have known of, or consented to, the railroad company's agent giving such rebates. Merchants', etc., Storage Co. v. Insurance Co., 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 195, 14 S. Ct. 367.

"The Interstate Commerce Act made the agreement as to the special rates, rebates, or drawbacks void, but did not otherwise invalidate the contract of affreightment." Kirby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 242 Ill. 418, 90 N. E. 252.

90. Merchants', etc., Storage Co. v. Insurance Co., 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 195, 14 S. Ct. 367.

91. On action for damages for delay.—Kirby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 242 Ill. 418, 90 N. E. 252.

"It seems clear to us that the shipper entered into this contract in good faith and without actual knowledge of its claimed unlawful character, and even if the contract were construed to be void as to the rate fixed, and even if the company may be permitted to collect the proper rate, still the rights of the shipper under the contract are not in other respects different from what they would have been if the contract had been free from the illegality mentioned. This view finds support in the case of Merchants', etc., Storage Co. v. Insurance Co., 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 195, 14 S. Ct. 367." Kirby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 242 Ill. 418, 90 N. E. 252.

92. Remedies.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075, citing Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

effective means for redressing the wrongs resulting from unjust discrimination and undue preference is undoubted. Indeed, it is not open to controversy that to provide for these subjects was among the principal purposes of the act.[93] And it is apparent that the means by which these great purposes were to be accomplished was the placing upon all carriers the positive duty to establish schedules of reasonable rates which should have a uniform application to all and which should not be departed from so long as the established schedule remained unaltered in the manner provided by law.[94] A shipper seeking reparation predicated upon the unreasonableness of the established rate must, under the act to regulate commerce, primarily invoke redress through the interstate commerce commission, which body alone is vested with power originally to entertain proceedings for the alteration of an established schedule, because the rates fixed therein are unreasonable.[95] An order of the interstate commerce commission requiring to desist from giving flour milled in transit at interior points a lower rate for export than was imposed upon grain brought from interior points by a milling company to a seaport, and there ground into flour and other grain products and exported, is within the powers of the commission and valid on a motion for a preliminary injunction to restrain its enforcement.[96]

Power of Commission as to Intrastate Rates.—The authority of the interstate commerce commission to remove discriminations against interstate traffic includes power to control intrastate rates by a carrier under state authority, necessary to remove resulting unjust discrimination against interstate commerce, notwithstanding the proviso in § 1 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, that its provisions shall not apply to purely intrastate traffic.[97]

Necessity for Payment of Freight.—To entitle a shipper to maintain an action to recover damages for being unjustly discriminated against in rates, it is not necessary that he should have paid the freight charged under protest.[98] A shipper may maintain an action at law under the Interstate Commerce Act to recover damages from an interstate railroad company because of the giving of a preference or advantage to another shipper by permitting him to keep cars on its terminal tracks without payment of the charges fixed by its schedules while denying the same right to plaintiff.[99]

By Prescribing Different Rate.—One of the primary purposes of the interstate commerce law is to remove discriminations, and under the broad powers given the interstate commerce commission to execute and enforce the provisions of this act and to make an order that the carrier shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the commission find the same to exist[1] where it has found that discrimination exists against a shipper or commodity, it may prescribe a relative rate, as that the charge shall be the same as that for a similar service to other shippers or on another similar commodity, instead of fixing maximum rate, which would enable the carrier to continue the discrimination by reducing the rate to other shippers or on the other commodity.[2]

93. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

94. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; S. C., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

95. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

96. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

97. Power of commission as to intrastate rates.—Houston, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 234 U. S. 342, 34 S. Ct. 833.

98. Necessity for payment of freight.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

99. Lyne v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 170 Fed. 847.

1. By prescribing different rate.—(Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 12, 24 Stat. 383 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3162], and § 15, as amended by Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. 589 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 900]).

2. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

Sufficiency of Petition.—A petition to recover under § 2 of the interstate commerce act is sufficient if it states facts which show the circumstances and conditions under which the defendant had charged plaintiff a given rate for transportation of freight, and alleges, in the language of the act, that for like services, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, the defendant had charged another a less given rate, without alleging facts which show that the services were alike, or rendered under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, or that plaintiff was charged more than the schedule rate.[3] The schedule of rates required to be established, published, and filed with the commissioners by a common carrier, by the interstate commerce act, is, prima facie, the criterion in determining whether or not a given charge is unreasonable; and a petition to recover, under § 1 of such act, which fails to allege either that the defendant had no published schedule of rates, or that it charged plaintiff in excess of rates thereby fixed, is insufficient.[4]

Sufficiency of Order.—An order of the interstate commerce commission designed to remove a discrimination in rates is not invalid or inoperative because it does not go as far as it might, and correct other discriminations.[5] The provision of the interstate commerce law that, where the commission finds that a rate or any practices affecting rates are unjustly discriminating, it shall determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable rate or rates; and what regulation or practice in respect to such transportation is just, fair, and reasonable to be thereafter followed,[6] does not require the commission, on finding that a certain rate is discriminatory, to prescribe in detail regulations and practices which are not necessary to remove the discrimination, but which may become necessary for the protection of the carrier, and it may properly authorize or permit the carrier to make such regulations if necessary.[7]

Provision in Order for Benefit of Carrier.—The interstate commerce commission in inserting in an order commanding carriers to desist from a discrimination a condition for the carriers' benefit acted within its province, even though the subject-matter of the condition be regarded as something subsequent to transportation.[8]

Damages.—In an action to recover damages for discrimination in rates, plaintiff is entitled only to recover for such discrimination as gave his competitor an unfair advantage in the same market.[9] The measure of damages is the difference between the amount paid by plaintiff and the amount it would have paid at the lowest rate charged on any other shipments carried under substantially the same circumstances and conditions during the same time, and not the difference between the rates paid by it and the average rate paid by any other shipper.[10] In an action to recover damages for unlawful discrimination in rates on coal shipped between plaintiff and other shippers, where the statement of claim alleged damages in certain sums per ton on shipments from its different mines, its recovery is limited to such sums.[11]

§§ 4097-4110. Long and Short Haul—§ 4097. Statutory Provision.—Section 4 of the interstate commerce act provides that it shall be unlawful for

3. Sufficiency of petition.—Kinnavey v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 81 Fed. 802.

4. Kinnavey v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 81 Fed. 802.

5. Sufficiency of order.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

6 Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 15, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165]), as amended by the Hepburn Act (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 4, 34 Stat. 589 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 900]).

7. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

8. Provision in order for benefit of carrier.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

9. Damages.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403.

10. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

11. Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403, dismissed for want of jurisdiction 183 Fed. 908.

any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or of like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, but this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier within the terms of the act to charge and receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance.[12] A proviso in this section provides that upon application to the interstate commerce commission, any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act may, in special cases, after investigation by the commission, be authorized to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property, and that the commission may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section of the act.[13]

English Traffic Act.—The English traffic acts do not appear to be as comprehensive as our own, and may justify contracts which with us would be obnoxious to the long and short haul clause of the act.[14]

§ 4098. Similar Circumstances and Conditions.—Substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions may justify common carriers in charging greater compensation for the transportation of like kinds of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line.[15] In order to entitle a person discriminated against to recover from a carrier it must appear that the higher rate which he has been charged for the shorter distance was for like services and under similar circumstances.[16] It seems that, where the circumstances and conditions are dissimilar, there is no prohibition; where the circumstances and conditions are similar, the prohibition attaches; and that, where it is difficult to point out clearly the circumstance or condition which produces dissimilarity, the doubt

12. Long and short haul.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

The imperative enforcement of Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 4, as amended by Act June 18, 1910, §8, forbidding carriers to charge a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, when the interstate commerce commission has refused an application for relief from such long and short haul clause, does not render the statute repugnant to Const. Amend. 5. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 476, 34 S. Ct. 986; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 234 U. S. 495, 34 S. Ct 995.

13. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

14. English Traffic Act.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

15. Similar circumstances.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666, where it is said that "the same observations (applicable to the second and third sections) are applicable to the fourth section, or the so-called long and short haul provision." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

16. Junod v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 290.

should go in favor of the object of the law, and the circumstances and conditions should be taken as substantially similar.[17]

Meaning of Terms as Used in Other Sections of Act.—The purpose of the second section of the act is to enforce equality between shippers over the same line, and to prohibit any rebate or other device by which two shippers, shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances of carriage, are compelled to pay different prices therefor; and it was there held that the phrase "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," as used in the second section, refers to the matter of carriage, and does not include competition between rival routes. This view is not open to the criticism that different meanings are attributed to the same words when found in different sections of the act; for what is held is that, as the purposes of the several sections are different, the phrase under consideration must be read, in the second section, as restricted to the case of shippers over the same road, thus leaving no room for the operation of competition, but that in the other sections, which cover the entire tract of interstate and foreign commerce, a meaning must be given to the phrase wide enough to include all the facts that have a legitimate bearing on the situation—among which is the fact of competition when it affects rates.[18]

Sufficient Dissimilarity.—Where the circumstances and conditions under which a lower rate is made for a long than for a short haul are substantially dissimilar, § 4 of the interstate commerce law does not apply, and the courts can not enter into the question whether the dissimilarity is sufficient to justify the difference in rates.[19] But § 4 of the interstate commerce law is to be applied upon a scale of comparison between the dissimilarity of conditions and the disparity of rates, and a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul may be enjoined, though there may be dissimilarity of conditions, provided the dissimilarity is not so great as to justify the discriminating rate.[20] In an action by a carrier to recover a greater rate for a shorter than for a longer haul, an answer alleging that there existed no reason, by way of the peculiar geographical position, competition, or trade or other conditions why a greater charge should be made for the shorter haul, showed that the rate was illegal and not recoverable.[21]

Question of Fact.—Whether, in particular instances, the circumstances and conditions of the carriage have been substantially similar or otherwise, is a question of fact depending on the matters proved in each case.[22] It has been forcibly argued that, in the present case, the commission did not give due weight to the facts that tended to show that the circumstances and conditions were so dissimilar as to justify the rates charged. But the question was one of fact, peculiarly within the province of the commission, whose conclusions have been accepted and approved by the circuit court of appeals, and there is nothing in the record to make it the court's duty to draw a different conclusion.[23] The inquiry

17. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 31 Fed. 862.

18. Meaning of terms as used in other sections of act.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822.

19. Sufficient dissimilarity.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

20. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

21. Great Northern R. Co. v. Loonan Lumber Co., 25 S. Dak. 155, 125 N. W. 644.

22. Question of fact.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

Whether the "circumstances and conditions" under which a railroad company has charged a greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer haul over the same line were "substantially similar," within the meaning of the fourth section of the interstate commerce law, is a question for the jury. Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

23. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223.

being essentially one of fact, the attempt to make competition an inference of law and dominating against the findings of the commission and their affirmance by the circuit court can not prevail.[24]

Admissions by Carrier.—Where a railroad company groups together two cities as stations to which freight rates from eastern cities may properly be made the same, it is a conclusive admission that transportation from the east to the warehouses of the company at the two places is under substantially similar conditions.[25]

Actual Similarity.—Where the carrier fixes an equality of compensation, in the aggregate, for two places some distance apart, on the same line, there must be an equality in fact as well as in form; but equality in form will be accepted as equality in fact, until it is shown to be colorable by him who challenges it.[26]

Determining Similar Circumstances and Conditions.—The omission of the substantially similar circumstances and conditions clause from the long and short haul provisions of § 8 of Act of June 18, 1910, takes from carriers their power to determine whether conditions are substantially dissimilar so as to justify the charge of a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, and vests in the interstate commerce commission the power to determine, in view of the preference and discrimination clauses of § 2 and 3 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, whether a petitioning carrier shall be relieved from the operation of the long and short haul clause.[27]

§ 4099. Competition.—Competition is a factor to be considered in determining whether shipments of freight to different points on the same line of railroad are made under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, so as to come within the long and short haul provision of the fourth section of the act to regulate commerce;[28] and if such competition is real and controlling as to the

24. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

25. Admissions by carrier.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 1005.

26. Actual similarity.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

27. Determining similar circumstances and conditions.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 476, 34 S. Ct. 986; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 234 U. S. 495, 34 S. Ct. 995.

28. Competition.—Ex parte Koehler, 31 Fed. 315, 12 Sawy. 446; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 21 S. Ct. 512, 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, modifying decree 93 Fed. 83, 35 C. C. A. 217; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 S. Ct. 516, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, reversing decree, 99 Fed. 52, 39 C. C. A. 413; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 20 S. Ct. 209, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741, judgment affirmed in 122 Fed. 800, 60 C. C. A. 540; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 45, 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414; Brewer v. Central, etc., R. Co., 84 Fed. 258.

In determining what are substantially dissimilar circumstances and conditions, such as will justify a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul, under the fourth section, the fact of competition between carriers which affects rates is to be taken into consideration. Judgment, 21 C. C. A. 51, 74 Fed. 715, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 45, 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414.

A greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul is not unlawful, when the rate for the shorter distance is not in itself unreasonable, and the more distant point is a commercial center and large distributing point, where strong competition exists both by land and water, none of which conditions are present at the other point. Brewer v. Central, etc., R. Co., 84 Fed. 258; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

Where a lower rate charged for the carriage of freight to a longer-distance point results solely from the controlling influence of competition at such point, which renders the circumstances and conditions substantially dissimilar from those existing at an intermediate point, so as to exclude the application to the case of the fourth section of the act (24 Stat. 379), and such competitive rate is not so low as to be unremunerative to the carrier, it can not afford basis for a claim of undue and unreasonable preference or advantage in favor of the competitive rate charged to one point, while it does not affect rates to another, it creates substantially different circumstances and conditions, as between the two, and such section has no application.[29] Competition is one of the most obvious and effective circumstances that make the conditions, under which a long and short haul is performed, substantially dissimilar, and as must have been in the contemplation of congress in the passage of the act to regulate commerce.[30] While a carrier may take into consideration the existence of competition as the producing cause of dissimilar circumstances and conditions, his right to do so is governed by the following principles: First. The absolute command of the statute that all rates shall be just and reasonable, and that no undue discrimination be brought about, though, in the nature of things, this latter consideration may in many cases be involved in the determination of whether competition was such as created a substantial dissimilarity of condition. Second. That the competition relied upon be not artificial or merely conjectural, but material and substantial thereby operating on the question of traffic and rate making, the right in every event to be only enjoyed with a due regard to the interest of the public, after giving full weight to the benefits to be conferred on the place from whence the traffic moved as well as those to be derived by the locality to which it is to be delivered.[31] point, or of unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage against the intermediate point, within the inhibition of the third section. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 93 Fed. 83, 35 C. C. A. 217.

"Freight carried to or from a competitive point is always carried under substantially dissimilar circumstances and conditions from that carried to or from noncompetitive points. In the latter case, the railway makes its own rates, and there is no good reason why it should be allowed to charge less for a long haul than a short one. When each haul is made to or from a noncompetitive point, the effect of such discrimination is to build up one place at the expense of the other. Such action is willfully unjust, and has no justification or excuse in the exigencies or conditions of the business of the corporation. In the former case, the circumstances are altogether different. The power of a corporation to make a rate is limited by the necessities of the situation. Competition controls the charge. It must take what it can get, or abandon the field, and let its road go to rust." "Competition may not be the only circumstance that makes the condition under which a long and short haul are performed substantially dissimilar, but certainly it is the most obvious and effective one, and must have been in contemplation of congress in the passage of the act to regulate commerce." Case quoted: Ex parte Koehler, 31 Fed. 315, 12 Sawy. 446. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

"That competition, the life of trade, cuts an important figure in the condition and circumstances attendant upon transportation of passengers and property, can not be well overlooked nor denied. Nor can it be well denied that, as between the short and long haul, competition may exist to that extent that what would otherwise be similar circumstances and conditions will be dissimilar circumstances and conditions." Case quoted: Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 31 Fed. 862. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

29. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 83.

Transportation of hay between Memphis, Tenn., and Charleston, S. C., between which points there is competitive transportation by rail, by water and rail, and by water alone, is not performed under substantially similar conditions with transportation between Memphis and an interior town in South Carolina, which is reached only by one railroad. Behlmer v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 71 Fed. 835.

Los Angeles, Cal., is a competing point in certain kinds of freight, between several transcontinental railway lines, direct, or by water, via Vancouver and San Francisco, also by ocean freights; and a through rate on the same kind of freight, lower than that to San Bernardino, an intermediate noncompetitive point, 60 miles from Los Angeles, on one of the competing rail lines, is not prohibited by the act, since the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 295.

30. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516.

31. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

Must Be Actual and Material.—The mere fact of competition, without regard to its character or extent, does not necessarily relieve the carrier from the provisions of these sections.[32] Competition which is real and substantial, and exercises a potential influence on rates to a particular point, brings into play the dissimilarity of circumstance and condition provided for by § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act, and may justify a lesser charge for the longer than the shorter haul.[33] The substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions provided for by the act to regulate commerce, depends, as has been repeatedly held, upon a real and substantial competition at a particular point affecting rates, not upon the mere possibility of the arising of such competition.[34] What was decided in the previous cases was that under the fourth section of the act substantial competition which materially affects transportation and rates might under the statute be competent to produce dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, to be taken into consideration by the carrier in charging a greater sum for a lesser than for a longer haul. The meaning of the law was not decided to be that one kind of competition could be considered and not another kind, but that all competition, provided it possessed the attributes of producing a substantial and material effect upon traffic and rate making, was proper under the statute to be taken into consideration.[35]

Under Construction of Act by Commission.—The settled construction of the interstate commerce act allows carriers to charge the lesser rate for the longer than for the shorter distance, if at the further point the lesser rate is justified by a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions there prevailing, consequent upon real competition.[36]

What Are Competing Carriers.—This rule applies to competition between rival carriers, both subject to the interstate commerce law.[37] Competition between rival railroads, and not merely between rail and water carriers, is a factor to be considered in determining the substantial similarity or dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions under the fourth section of the interstate commerce law.[38] Competition of river lines of transportation is a factor to be considered when determining whether property transported over the same line is carried under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions," as that phrase is found in the fourth section of the interstate commerce act.[39] The fact of competition at Nashville by the Cumberland River, in addition to that between railroads, does not justify the making of freight rates to Chattanooga ranging from twenty-five to seventy-four per centum higher on the different classes of freight than those charged on similar classes to Nashville, over the same route, which is one hundred and fifty-one miles beyond Chattanooga. Such rates are both an unlawful discrimination, under § 3, and a violation of § 4; and an order of the 32. Must be actual and material.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

33. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741, judgment affirmed in 60 C. C. A. 540, 122 Fed. 800.

34. The possibility of competition arising at a particular point does not render freight rates to that point, though higher than those for a longer haul to a point where competition prevails, obnoxious to the prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154] against a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Decree, Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 108 Fed. 988, 46 C. C. A. 685, affirmed in 23 S. Ct. 687, 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047.

35. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

36. Under construction of act by commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687.

37. What are competing carriers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

38. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45, followed in Brewer v. Central, etc., R. Co., 84 Fed. 258.

39. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

interstate commerce commission, forbidding higher charges to Chattanooga than to Nashville, will be enforced.[40]

Where Charge Unjust or Unreasonable.—The right of a carrier to take into consideration the existence of competition as the producing cause of dissimilar circumstances and conditions is subject to the requirement that all rates shall be just and reasonable and that competition shall not be artificial or merely conjectural, but material and substantial.[41] Where a lower rate charged for the carriage of freight to a longer-distance point results solely from the controlling influence of competition at such point, which renders the circumstances and conditions substantially dissimilar from those existing at an intermediate point, so as to exclude the application to the case of the fourth section of the act, and such competitive rate is not so low as to be unremunerative to the carrier, it can not afford basis for a claim of undue and unreasonable preference or advantage in favor of the competitive point, or of unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage against the intermediate point, within the inhibition of the third section.[42]

Where Preference or Discrimination Is Produced.—While a carrier may take into consideration the existence of competition as the producing cause of dissimilar circumstances and conditions, his right to do so is governed by the absolute command of the statute that all rates shall be just and reasonable, and that no undue discrimination be brought about, though, in the nature of things, this latter consideration may in many cases, be involved in the determination of whether competition was such as created a substantial dissimilarity of condition.[43] But where in consequence of competitive conditions existing at a particular point, the dissimilarity of circumstance provided in the fourth section of the act arises, it may justify a carrier on his own motion in charging a lesser rate for a longer haul to the competitive point than is asked for the shorter haul to the noncompetitive point, although in so doing a preference in favor of the competitive point arises or a discrimination against the noncompetitive point is produced. A preference or discrimination so arising or produced is not an undue preference or unjust discrimination prohibited by the third section.[44]

Where Distant Point Is Commercial Center.—A greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul is not unlawful, when the rate for the shorter distance is not in itself unreasonable, and the more distant point is a commercial center and large distributing point, where strong competition exists both by land and water, none of which conditions are present at the other point.[45]

Presumptions.—The effect of the competition of rival lines in justifying rates is, in every case, a question of fact, which is not to be settled by any presumptions, either prima facie or conclusive. The question is to be tried in the courts, under the same rules as to presumptions, burden of proof, and the like, whether or not the carrier has applied to the commission, in the first instance, for permission to charge less for a longer than for a shorter haul.[46]

Competition with Foreign Carriers.—The interstate commerce commission holds that where railroads which are subject to the act to regulate commerce

40. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

41. Where charge unjust or unreasonable.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 20 S. Ct. 209, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309.

42. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 83.

43. Where preference or discrimination is produced.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

44. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516, holding that a contrary rule is not sustained by the opinions in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209, followed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, 21 S. Ct. 512.

45. Where distant point is commercial center.—Brewer v. Central, etc., R. Co., 84 Fed. 258; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

46. Presumptions.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

compete with Canadian or other railroads, which are not subject to the act, such competition constitutes dissimilar circumstances and conditions; but that competition between two railroads, both of which are subject to the act, does not constitute dissimilar circumstances and conditions. The commission, however, also holds that it has no authority to raise railroad rates. If a railroad, which is subject to the act, is met with competition from other railroads, which are also subject to the act, and the commission has no authority to require such other railroads to increase their rates, even when the competition is ruinous, there is no practical difference between such a case and the case of competition with railroads not subject to the act. If the general conclusion is correct that competition will constitute dissimilar circumstances and conditions, in the sense of which that term is used in the act, there is no good reason for drawing the line where it has been drawn by the commission. On the contrary, competition of carrier with carrier, both subject to the act, is as much within the terms of § 4 as competition with a carrier not subject to the act.[47]

Competition between Markets.—Competition of market with market may not be so direct in its effect as competition of carrier with carrier; but when it does exist it is influential, and perhaps as effective and controlling, with carriers, as to their rates, as other competition. It may therefore constitute a part of the circumstances and conditions which a carrier can consider in fixing rates for the transportation of goods.[48]

§ 4100. Shipments over Same Line.—There was a clear distinction between the term "railroad," as used in the other parts of the act, and the term "line," as used in the fourth section. The use of the word "line" is significant. Two carriers may use the same "road," but each has its separate "line." One railroad company may lease trackage rights to another, but the joint use of the same track does not create the same "line" so as to compel either company to graduate its tariff by that of the other.[49] There must be a common arrangement between connecting carriers, such as the making of a joint tariff, before a new "line" can be formed; and the "line" so formed under the joint tariff of connecting companies is one which is separate and independent from that of either of the connecting carriers.[50] No power exists at common law, and none is given by the

47. Competition with foreign carriers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

48. Competition between markets.—The fact that the rate from Cincinnati to Social Circle is greater than the joint tariff rate from Cincinnati to Augusta, constitutes no "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" against Social Circle, and no "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage" in favor of Augusta. Railway companies are only bound to give the same terms, to all persons alike, under the same conditions and circumstances; and any fact which produces an inequality of condition, and a change of circumstances, justifies an inequality of charge. Augusta and Social Circle are not "under the same conditions and circumstances." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

49. Shipments over same line.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18.

50. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

There is no "common arrangement" or "joint tariff" between the Georgia Railroad Company and its connections as to traffic to its local stations. On the contrary, there is an express refusal by that company to make any "common arrangement" whatever in regard to that traffics. The Georgia Railroad Company demands and collects its full local rates on all shipments to its local stations. Whether shipments come from points west of Atlanta, or originate at Atlanta, the rate is precisely the same, and as to the Georgia Railroad the carriage is the same. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

The Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railway Company, the Western & Atlantic Railroad Company, and the Georgia Railroad Company have formed "a new and independent line," by the adoption of a joint through tariff from Cincinnati to Augusta; but such "new line" is distinct and separate from that of either of the railroads named. Case cited: Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

act to regulate commerce, to compel connecting railroad companies to unite in a joint tariff, or to enter into a through-rate arrangement for transportation, unless they desire to do so. They can not be compelled to abandon the full control of their separate roads, and neither of them is bound to adjust its own local tariff to suit the other.[51]

§ 4101. Through and Local Rates.—The fact that a shipper under a joint schedule of rates over two connecting railroads is charged a smaller rate on through shipments over the entire length of the joint line than to intermediate points does not establish a claim that the latter rates are unjust or unreasonable, nor does it entitle him to claim that such rates are discriminative.[52] The portion of a through rate received by one of the companies party thereto may be less than its local rate. All that is necessary is that the total through rate shall be greater than the local rate, so as not to violate in this respect the long and short haul clause.[53] A petition alleging that a rate of tariff between two points on a railroad, established by the company as a part of what purported to be a joint rate on through shipments to certain points on connecting lines, was less than the local rate charged for a shorter distance, does not show an unlawful discrimination, where the entire through rate is not shown, and it is not sufficiently alleged that any shipments were made at the lower rate except such as were billed through under the joint rate.[54] Where two connecting carriers unite in a joint

18. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

Social Circle is a local station on the Georgia Railroad, 52 miles east of Atlanta, and 119 miles west of Augusta. The Georgia Railroad Company charges its full local rate from Atlanta to Social Circle. The rate from Cincinnati to Social Circle is arrived at by adding to the rate from Cincinnati to Atlanta the full local rate of the Georgia Railroad from Atlanta to Social Circle. The rate thus made from Cincinnati to Social Circle is greater than the joint through tariff rate from Cincinnati to Augusta. Held no violation of the "long and short haul" clause of the act to regulate commerce, because the two rates are not made "over the same line," as the rate to Augusta is made by the "line" formed by a "common arrangement" between three companies for a joint tariff between those points; and the rate to Social Circle is made greater than the rate to Augusta by the Georgia Railroad Company demanding its full local rate on its own road, which road is separate and independent from the "line" made by said three companies. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

51. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925. Case quoted: Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18. See also, Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 559.

52. Through and local rates.—Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

53. Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; United States v. Mellen, 53 Fed. 229, following Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18.

The long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act (§ 4) does not apply to a case where the short haul rate is a combination of the local rates of two connecting lines, and the lower long haul rate is a joint rate made by the two lines acting together. United States v. Mellen, 53 Fed. 229, following Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 52 Fed. 912, 3 C. C. A. 347, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18.

Several independent, connecting railroads, forming a line from Memphis, Tenn., to Charleston, S. C., agreed upon a charge of 19 cents for certain freight between those points, which sum was to be divided between them in certain proportions. Upon the same freight, from Memphis to S., a point in South Carolina, but nearer Memphis, 8 cents was charged, the excess over the through rate all going, however, to the road which performed the transportation in South Carolina, and the other roads receiving only their proportion of the through rate. Held, that such charge was not a violation, on the part of such other roads, of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act. Behlmer v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 71 Fed. 835.

54. A joint tariff rate established by two connecting railroads on through shipments does not constitute a standard by which the reasonableness of local rates on either road are to be determined, nor does the fact that the part of such joint rate received by one of the roads is less than its local rate charged for a shorter distance render it subject to the penalty for violation of the long and short haul tariff, they form practically a new and independent line, and that the joint rate established over such line may be made less than the sum of the local rates, or even less than the local rate of either company over that part of its road constituting a part of the joint line, without violating the long and short haul clause found in the fourth section of the interstate commerce law.[55] The foregoing proposition is limited by the proviso that, under the first section of the Interstate Commerce Act, all rates, whether local or joint, must be reasonable and unjust. But the contention that a local rate between two points on the same road is necessarily unlawful because it is higher than the rate charged under a joint tariff for a much longer haul over a line which is composed in part of that portion of the road to which the local rate applies, is overruled.[56] The fact that a shipper under a joint schedule of rates over two connecting railroads is charged a smaller rate on through shipments over the entire length of the joint line than to intermediate points does not establish a claim that the latter rates are unjust or unreasonable, nor does it entitle him to claim that such rates are discriminative.[57]

Rate Fixed by Joint Agreement.—A railroad company can not justify a charge of a greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer haul, under substantially similar conditions, contrary to the interstate commerce law on the ground that the rate is fixed by a joint tariff agreement with other roads.[58]

Rates Are Independent.—Where two railroad companies owing connecting lines of road unite in a joint through tariff, they form for the connected roads a new and independent line, and the through tariff on the joint line is not the standard by which the separate tariff of either company is to be measured in determining whether such separate tariff violates the act which forbids greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer haul.[59]

Shipment from Foreign Country.—Where a through freight rate included a rate for foreign ocean transportation, the fact that the proportion of the through contract rate allowed for the carriage from the port of entry to destination was less than the rate scheduled for freight originating at such port of entry and carried to the same destination did not render the lesser rate necessarily unlawful as a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act.[60] clause of § 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Judgment, 11 C. C. A. 489, 63 Fed. 903, affirmed in Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 887, 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231.

55. Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 11 C. C. A. 489, 63 Fed. 903; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18.

56. Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

57. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

58. Rate fixed by joint agreement.—Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

The interstate commerce law (Act Cong. Feb. 1887) provides (§ 4) that a common carrier shall not charge a greater compensation for the transportation of a like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance. Held that, in an action for breach of this section, the fact that the rate for the longer distance was established jointly between defendant and connecting railroads does not exempt defendant from liability. Junod v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 290.

59. Rates are independent.—Chicago etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 52 Fed. 912, 3 C. C. A. 347, 53 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18, reversing 48 Fed. 49; Tozer v. United States, 52 Fed. 917.

60. Shipment from foreign country.—Fisher v. Great Northern R. Co., 49 Wash. 205, 95 Pac. 77.

Defendant carrier published a through rate on canned goods from Stavanger, Norway, to Seattle, of 85 cents per 100. The published schedule also contained a statement that such rates would be protected only when the ocean rate procurable was such as to allow the rail carrier from the Atlantic ports a minimum proportion of 75 cents per 100, and if the difference between the through published rate and the rail line's minimum proportion of 75 cents per 100 was less than the ocean proportion, the through rate would be the ocean proportion plus 75 cents per 100. Defendant made a contract rate for the shipment of canned goods for plaintiff between such ports in accordance with such published rate, but when the shipment was made the best ocean rate

§ 4102. Group Rates.—It is concededly not an infringement of the long and short haul clause for a carrier engaged in interstate commerce, by a so-called "group rate," to charge the same for like kinds of freight to and from different points on its line from and to points outside the state.[61] The railroad companies could consider the competitive rates prevailing at a competitive point and use those rates as a basis for the charges to points within the competitive area in order thereby to give a lower rate to such points than they otherwise would have enjoyed. It was not true that because the competitive rate to the competitive point was not unduly low, therefore any higher charge to an intermediate point, for the shorter distance, was unreasonable.[62] A violation of the long and short haul clause can not be justified because the result comes about by reason of the selection of different points on the line as a basis for computing rates, so as to charge one rate over one part of the road and a different rate over another part.[63]

§ 4103. Cartage Charges.—The fourth section of the interstate commerce law, prohibiting a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul over the same line in the same direction, in respect to railroad transportation, applies only to carriage by rail; and when the property has been discharged from the company's cars at the city of their destination, without any greater charge for the longer haul, the obligations of the company under this section are fulfilled, and it is no violation thereof for the company to then furnish free cartage to the stores or business houses of the consignees.[64] But where a railroad company ships goods from without the state to its station in the more distant of two cities, free cartage by the company to the business section of the city, for delivery to the consignees, is a violation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act, when the same freight rates are charged to the merchants of a nearer city, through which the road passes to reach the city given free cartage, but procurable was 38.7 cents per 100 on canned goods, which, added to the carrier's minimum, 75 cents per 100, made the total tariff of $1.137, which defendant claimed the right to charge. Held, that, in the absence of proof by defendant that the conditions attending ocean competition did not justify the contract rate stipulated for, thereby rendering it unlawful, such contract rate was not necessarily in violation of the interstate commerce law, and was therefore enforceable. Fisher v. Great Northern R. Co., 49 Wash. 205, 95 Pac. 77.

61. Group rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

62. The railroad companies had a right to take the lower rate prevailing at Atlanta (a competitive point) as a basis for the charge made to places in territory contiguous to Atlanta, and to ask in addition to the low competitive rate the local rate from Atlanta to such places, provided thereby no increased charges resulted over those which would have been occasioned if the low rate to Atlanta had been left out of view. That is to say, it seems incontrovertible that in making the rate, as the railroads had a right to meet the competition, they were authorized to give the shippers the benefit of it by according to them a lower rate than would otherwise have been afforded. True it is, that by this method a lower rate from New Orleans than was exacted at LaGrange obtained at the longer distance places lying between LaGrange and Atlanta, but this was only the result of their proximity to the competitive point, and they hence obtained only the advantage resulting from their situation. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687.

63. Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

64. Free cartage.—Judgment, 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

The prohibition of the fourth section is against a greater compensation for the shorter haul, "in the aggregate," which includes, not only the "rates" and "fares" (for transportation on the rails proper), but also the "charges" (for accessorial services, including cartage). And therefore, where the "aggregate" is the same for both the shorter and the longer haul, the section is not violated, in its very terms, although in the case of the longer haul an additional cartage service is furnished, which is not furnished in the case of the shorter haul. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 74 Fed. 803, 21 C. C. A. 103.

where such merchants are obliged to cart their goods from the railway station to their storehouses at their own expense; and such free cartage is not justified by the fact that competitors of defendant railroad company have stations at the more distant city, in the business center, thus placing it at a disadvantage; nor by the fact that such city is a much larger place than the nearer city, and that the greater amount of business which the company does at the more distant city enables it to do carting cheaper there than at the nearer city.[65]

§ 4104. Shipment Through Foreign Country.—A railroad ticket from Ft. Worth through El Paso to the City of Mexico, purchased at El Paso by a citizen thereof, at a less price than the regular fare from El Paso to the City of Mexico, is not void as being in violation of the United States interstate commerce act, in that it was purchased for less than others could purchase like transportation for, though the purchaser and the ticket agent had knowledge of the facts.[66]

§ 4105. Interest of General Public.—The interest of the public, especially at the place from which traffic moves and the place to which it is to be delivered, as well as of that of the carrier, must be taken into consideration in determining the right of the carrier to charge, of his own motion, a lesser sum for the longer haul.[67]

§ 4106. Destination of Shipment.—The fact that the freight for the longer distance was billed to some point short of the destination of the shorter haul will not bar plaintiff's recovery, when such freight was intended to be, and was in fact, taken to the destination of the shorter haul.[68]

§ 4107. Consent of Commission to Charge.—When the circumstances and conditions are such as to justify it, a railroad company may charge more for the shorter than for the longer haul without first obtaining leave from the commission.[69] It may, on the contrary, establish such rate in the first instance, and when the same is challenged in the courts, or before the commission, may justify itself by showing a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, within the meaning of the act.[70] Such charge is lawful if the circumstances and conditions are not in fact substantially similar, and the carrier may determine the question for himself, subject to a liability for violating the act, if, on investigation, the fact be found against him.[71] Competition which is actual and substantial in its effect upon rates, if resulting from the action of other carriers who were subject to the act to regulate commerce, may produce the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions provided in the fourth section of the act, so as to enable a carrier in adjusting rates to take into view such competition without the previous assent of the commission.[72] Congress did not intend, by the fourth section and the proviso thereto, to forbid common carriers, in cases where the circumstances and conditions are substantially dissimilar, from making different rates until and unless the commission shall authorize them so to do; much less

65. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 1005.

66. Shipment through foreign country.—Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Goodman (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 580.

67. Interest of general public.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 20 S. Ct. 209, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309.

68. Destination of shipment.—Junod v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 290.

69. Consent of commission to charge.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

70. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 74 Fed. 803, 21 C. C. A. 103.

71. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 295.

72. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, 21 S. Ct. 512.

was it the intention of congress that the decision of the commission, if applied to, could not be reviewed by the courts. The provisions of § 16 of the act, which authorize the court "to proceed to hear and determine the matter speedily as a court of equity, and without the formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity, but in such manner as to do justice in the premises, and to this end, such court shall have power, if it think fit, to direct and prosecute in such mode and by such persons as it may appoint, all such inquiries as the court may think needful to enable it to form a just judgment in the matter of such petition," extend as well to an inquiry or proceeding under the fourth section as to those arising under the other sections of the act.[73] The provision authorizing the interstate commerce commission in special cases, after investigation, to exempt a carrier from the prohibition against charging a lower rate for a long than for a short haul, is to be construed in harmony with the other provisions of the act, and as not giving the commission an unlimited discretion, but imposing upon it, not merely the right, but the duty, to grant such exemption whenever, on investigation, it shall find that no violation of any section of the act would thereby be involved. As so construed, the section is constitutional.[74]

The dissimilarity of circumstance and condition pointed out by the statute, which relieves from the long and short haul clause, arises from the command of the statute, and not from the assent of the commission; the law, and not the discretion of the commission, determining the rights of the parties. It follows that the construction affixed by the commission to the statute upon which its entire action was predicated was wrong.[75]

Where There Is Competition.—Where, in consequence of competitive conditions existing at a particular point, the dissimilarity of circumstance provided in the fourth section of the act arises, it may justify a carrier on his own motion in charging a lesser rate for a longer haul to the competitive point than is asked for the shorter haul to the non-competitive point, although in so doing a preference in favor of the competitive point arises or a discrimination against the non-competitive point is produced. A preference or discrimination so arising or produced is not an undue preference or unjust discrimination prohibited by the third section.[76]

Revision by Commission.—But it does not mean that the action of the carriers, in fixing and adjusting the rates, where dissimilar circumstances and conditions are shown, is not subject to revision by the commission and the courts, when it is charged that such action has resulted in rates unjust or unreasonable, or in unjust discriminations and preferences.[77] A railroad company being subject, under the facts found, to the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, in respect to its interstate freight, it follows that it was within the jurisdiction of the commission to consider whether the said company, in charging a higher rate for a

73. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

74. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 191 Fed. 856.

75. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516, citing Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

76. Where there is competition.—East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516, holding that a contrary rule is not sustained by the opinions in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209, followed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, 21 S. Ct. 512; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687.

77. Revision by commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, was or was not transporting property, in transit between states, under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions."[78]

Where Prohibited by Commission.—It is not unlawful to charge more for a shorter than for a longer haul, when the circumstances and conditions are in fact substantially dissimilar, although the interstate commerce commission has made an order forbidding such charges in the particular case.[79]

§ 4108. Determining Right to Different Charge.—Under the interstate commerce law the power of determining whether a railroad company is relieved from the operation of the long and short haul clause lies solely with the interstate commerce commission; and in an action for damages in a federal court for a violation of that clause, when no authority from the commission is shown, the company can not claim that it was justified in so doing by reason of the existence of a secret cut rate among competing roads, whereby a large part of the traffic naturally tributary to it was diverted.[80]

§ 4109. Establishing Zones.—The authority of the interstate commerce commission on an application by carriers for relief from the long and short haul clause of that section, extends to establishing by percentages the relation to be maintained between the lower rate for longer hauls and the higher rate to intermediate points, and to adopting zones of influence for the purposes of establishing percentages which, as to such zones, vary on the basis of the influence of the competition in such areas.[81]

§ 4110. Remedies.—Where the circumstances and conditions are similar, or substantially similar, and the result to the carrier is injurious, relief can be had only through the commission.[82]

Damages.—As the right of action given by the law is one for damages, as for a tort, any railroad company which makes the overcharge is liable for the full amount of the damages, notwithstanding that it has shared the illegal freight with another road under a joint tariff agreement.[83] In an action by a shipper against a railroad company for charging a greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer haul, in violation of the interstate commerce law, the measure of damages is the excess in the rate charged for the shorter haul over that for the longer haul.[84] It is the province of the jury, under the act, to determine whether interest shall be allowed on the amount of the overcharge which they have found.[85]

Enjoining Order of Commission.—The jurisdiction given to the commerce court of suits to enjoin orders of the interstate commerce commission, is not defeated so far as an order on application by carriers for relief against the long and short haul clause of that act is concerned, on the theory that the consequence would be to enjoin a criminal prosecution.[86]

78. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223.

79. Where prohibited by commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45, followed in Brewer v. Central, etc., R. Co., 84 Fed. 258.

80. Determining right to different charge.—Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49. See ante, "Similar Circumstances and Conditions," § 4098.

81. Establishing zones.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 476, 34 S. Ct. 986; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 234 U. S. 495, 34 S. Ct. 995.

82. Remedies.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 31 Fed. 862.

83. Damages.—Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

84. Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

85. Osborne v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 49.

86. Enjoining order of commission.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 476, 34 S. Ct. 986; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 234 U. S. 495, 34 S. Ct. 995.

§ 4111. Pooling Freights.—The fifth section of the Interstate Commerce Act provides that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of the act to enter into any contract, agreement, or combination with any other common carrier or carriers for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads, or any portion thereof; and in any case of an agreement for the pooling of freights as aforesaid each day of its continuance is deemed a separate offense.[87] Either a distribution of property offered for transportation among different and competing railroads in proportions and on percentages previously agreed upon, or a money pool, whereby the aggregate or net proceeds of certain different and competing railroads are divided among them, is prohibited.[88]

Any arrangement, oral or otherwise, or combination, which has for its purpose and eventuates in the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, is within the prohibition of the interstate commerce act.[89]

Percentage of Rates.—Where the initial carrier which had established a rule by which it reserved the right to route freight to destination beyond its own line, made arrangements with the connecting carriers to give them a certain percentage of its through tariff rates, in order to break up rebating by such connecting carriers, held, that this agreement was valid, and was not a violation of the provision against the pooling of freights.[90]

Main and Branch Lines.—The section of the Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting railroad companies from entering into agreements for pooling freights or dividing their earnings, does not invalidate a contract between two railroad companies, whose lines of road are parallel, by which certain territory is preserved to each, within which it shall prosecute the work of extending its branch lines, though it may prevent certain pooling provisions therein from being operative.[91]

Proportionate Share of Rate.—A combination of railroad companies into joint traffic associations, under articles of agreement by which each road carries the freight it may get, over its own line, at its own rates, and has the earnings to itself, though providing proportional rates, or proportional division of traffic, is not a pooling or traffic on freights, or division of net proceeds of earnings, within the prohibitions of the interstate commerce law, nor of the act against unlawful restraints and monopolies.[92]

Under Anti-Trust Law.—This provision does not authorize or prohibit an agreement between competing railroads relating to traffic rates for the transportation of articles of commerce between the states, such as the anti-trust law seeks to prevent.[93]

Agreement as to Routing Goods.—The pooling of freights of competing railroads, is not accomplished by the adoption by common carriers, as part of 87. Pooling freights.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 1125; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

88. In re Pooling Freights, 115 Fed. 588.

89. In re Pooling Freights, 115 Fed. 588.

90. Percentage of rates.—"No case is made out of the violation of the pooling provision in the fifth section of the act, even where the initial carrier promises fair treatment to the connecting roads, and carriers out such promises." Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

91. Main and branch lines.—Ives v. Smith, 55 Hun 606, 8 N. Y. S. 46, 28 N. Y. St. Rep. 917.

92. Proportionate share of rate.—Decree 76 Fed. 895, affirmed in United States v. Joint Traffic Ass'n, 32 C. C. A. 491, 89 Fed. 1020.

93. Under anti-trust law.—United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540.

an agreement for a through rate from California to the East for oranges and other citrus fruits, of a rule under which the right of routing beyond its own terminal is reserved to the initial carrier as the condition of guarantying the through rates to the shipper, even though the initial carrier promises fair treatment to the connecting lines, and carries out such promise, where such rule has served, as was intended, to break up rebating by the connecting lines, and, in its practical operation, the actual routing is generally conceded to the shipper, and his requests to divert shipments en route are usually allowed.[94]

Agreement to Prevent Rebating.—A rule in practice adopted and put in force by an agreement between competing railroads and their connecting lines, by which a through rate on a certain class of traffic is conditioned on a reservation to the initial carrier of absolute and unqualified power to route shipments beyond its own line, for the purpose of enabling such initial carrier to control and maintain the rate, the purpose of which is to prevent rebating, does not constitute a tonnage pool.[95]

Remedies.—The enforcement of an order of the interstate commerce commission directing common carriers to desist from maintaining or enforcing a rule adopted by them may be decreed by a federal circuit court if it finds such rule is, for any reason, in violation of the act, although such reason may not have been the one relied upon by the commission itself to invalidate the rule.[96]

§ 4112. Mileage Tickets.—The Interstate Commerce Act was not designed to prevent competition between different carriers, or to interfere with the customary arrangements made by railway companies for reduced fares in consideration of increased mileage, where such reduction does not operate as an unjust discrimination against other persons traveling on the same road.[97]

§ 4113. Party-Rate Tickets.—The issuance of party-rate tickets, each good for a party of ten or more persons, at the rate of two cents per mile, while single passengers are charged three cents, is neither an unjust discrimination nor an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage, within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act when such tickets are offered to the public generally.[98] There is no merit in the suggestion that such tickets may be used by ticket brokers as a means of evading the law, since, being for ten or more persons, they would hardly be available for that purpose, and, if issued for so small a number of persons as to become available, the courts would have authority to apply the proper remedy.[99] Where a railroad company is charged with violating the interstate commerce act, by the issuance of "party-rate tickets" at less than the rates charged single passengers, the burden of proving that such lower charge constitutes an undue preference is upon the person making the charge.[1]

Although not identical with mileage, excursion or commutation tickets, under the act, the principle is the same as that applicable to commutation

94. Agreement as to routing goods.—Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 132 Fed. 829, reversed in 26 S. Ct. 330, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585.

95. Agreement to prevent rebating.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

96. Remedies.—Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 132 Fed. 829, reversed 26 S. Ct. 330, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585.

97. Mileage tickets.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 12 S. Ct. 844, 36 L. Ed. 699, affirming 43 Fed. 37.

98. Party-rate tickets.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 37.

99. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844, affirming 43 Fed. 37.

1. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 37.

tickets.[2] The difference between commutation and party-rate tickets is that commutation tickets are issued to induce people to travel more frequently, and party-rate tickets are issued to induce more people to travel. This is, however, no difference in principle between them, the object in both cases being to increase travel without unjust discrimination, and to secure patronage that would not otherwise be secured.[3]

Where Not Sold to General Public.—If a case were presented where a railroad refused an application for a party-rate ticket upon the ground that it was not intended for the use of the general public, but solely for theatrical troupes, there would be much greater reason for holding that the latter were favored with an undue preference or advantage.[4]

United States Soldiers.—The government of the United States, in buying transportation on a railroad for its soldiers, in lots of ten or more, is not entitled to the benefit of a reduced party rate given by the railroad company's schedule to "theatrical, operatic, or concert companies, hunting and fishing parties, glee clubs, brass or string bands, boat, baseball, polo, or tennis clubs, football teams, and other parties of like character." Nor does the refusal to give it the same rates constitute an unjust discrimination against it, or subject it to undue prejudice or disadvantage, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, where it is shown that the purpose and effect of the party rate given by the schedule is to increase the company's business, and that tickets sold thereunder are closely limited in time, and are paid for in cash in advance, while those furnished on a requisition, and are only paid for after indefinite delay in the auditing and allowance of the claims by the war and treasury departments. In such case the conditions and circumstances under which the service is rendered are essentially different, and justify the making of different rates.[5]

§ 4114. Excursion Tickets.—The express recognition in the act to regulate commerce of the power of carriers engaged in interstate commerce to issue nontransferable reduced-rate excursion tickets, when considered with the restriction embodied in the act concerning equality of rates, and with the prohibition against preferences, must be regarded as charging the carrier with the duty of exercising due diligence to prevent the use of such tickets by other than the original purchasers, and hence causes the nontransferable clause to be operative and effective against anyone who wrongfully attempts to use such tickets.[6]

§ 4115. Terminal Charges.—The action of railroads entering Chicago in dividing their charges on live stock shipped to that city, which previously included delivery of the stock at the stockyards, so as to make a separate rate for the haul to points on their lines and a terminal charge covering its transfer from

2. But, assuming the weight of evidence in this case to be that the party-rate ticket is not a "commutation ticket," as that word was commonly understood at the time of the passage of the act, but is a distinct class by itself, it does not necessarily follow that such tickets are unlawful. The unlawfulness defined by § 2 and § 3 consists either in an "unjust discrimination" or an "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage," and the object of § 22 was to settle beyond all doubt that the discrimination in favor of certain persons therein named should not be deemed unjust. It does not follow, however, that there may not be other classes of persons in whose favor a discrimination may be made without such discrimination being unjust. In other words, this section is rather illustrative than exclusive. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

3. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

4. Where not sold to general public.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844.

5. United States soldiers.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 62 C. C. A. 465, 127 Fed. 785.

6. Excursion tickets.—Bitterman v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 207 U. S. 205, 52 L. Ed. 171, 28 S. Ct. 91, 12 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 693.

their own tracks to the stockyards, is not only legal, but desirable, as relieving shippers whose stock does not go to the yards from payment of the terminal charges; hence, where the terminal rate is just and reasonable in itself, it is not unlawful.[7] A terminal charge for delivering car loads of live stock to the Union Stockyards in Chicago, a point beyond the carrier's line, if in itself just and reasonable, and separately stated in the tariff schedules, as required by the act can not be condemned or the carrier required to reduce it, on the ground that it, taken with prior charges for transportation over the lines of the carrier, or of connecting carriers, makes the total charge to the shipper unreasonable.[8] A terminal charge for delivering carloads of live stock to union stock yards in a city, at a point beyond the carrier's line, if in itself just and reasonable, and separately stated in the tariff schedules, as required by the act, can not be condemned or the carrier required to reduce it, on the ground that it, taken with prior charges or transportation over the lines of the carrier, or of connecting carriers, makes a total charge to the shipper unreasonable. That which must be corrected and condemned is not the just and reasonable terminal charge, but those prior charges which must of themselves be unreasonable in order to make the aggregate of the charge from the point of shipment to that of delivery unreasonable and unjust. In order to avail itself of the benefit of this rule, the carrier must separately state its terminal or other special charge complained of; for, if many matters are lumped in a single charge, it is impossible for either shipper or commission to determine how much of the lump charge is for the terminal or special services.[9] It has been held that although a terminal charge by carriers of live stock of two dollars per car, abstractly considered, would be just and reasonable in view of the trackage charge made against the carriers by a stockyards company to which it delivered live stock, yet, because it was a mere addition to the sum of the terminal charge embraced in the prior through rate, such terminal charge in addition to the compensation included in the through rate was an unreasonable and unjust charge therefor in itself, but because, prior to the order of the commission so adjudging, the rates on live stock from points embraced in the territory covered by this complaint to all western markets including Chicago, had been reduced by from ten to fifteen dollars per car, considering the through rate as so reduced, it is not unreasonable,[10] and the carrier has the right to separate the carriage and termi-

7. Terminal charges.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 98 Fed. 173.

8. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 2, 34 Stat. 586 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 895). Decree, Stickney v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 638, affirmed in 30 S. Ct. 66, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. Ed. 112.

9. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. Ed. 112, 30 S. Ct. 66.

10. The rate which was unjust and unreasonable solely because of the $1 excess did not continue to be unjust and unreasonable after this rate had been reduced by from ten to fifteen dollars. This was based, not upon a finding of fact—as, of course, it could not have been so based—but rested alone on the ruling by the commission that it could not consider the reduction in the through rate, but must confine its attention to the $2 terminal rate, since that alone was the subject matter of the complaint. But the commission, in considering the terminal rate, and expressly found that it was less than the cost of service, and was therefore intrinsically just and reasonable, and could only be treated as unjust and unreasonable by considering "the circumstances of the case;" that is, the through rate and the fact that a terminal charge was included in it, which, when added to the two dollar charge, caused the terminal charge as a whole to be unreasonable. Having therefore decided that the $2 terminal charge could only be held to be unjust and unreasonable by combining it with the charge embraced in the through rate, necessarily the through rate was entitled to be taken into consideration if the previous conclusions of the commission were well founded. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

"The through rate existing prior to June the 1st, 1894, certainly in the absence of proof to the contrary, must be presumed to have provided in and of itself compensation for the services rendered in making delivery at the stockyards." Interstate Commerce Comm. v.

nal charges.[11]

Reasonableness Determined by Circumstances of Each Case.—Where railroad companies engaged in the transportation of live stock from points in other states to the union stockyards in Chicago have fixed a terminal charge for the moving of each car from the end of their own tracks in Chicago to the stockyards, stating the through rate to the end of their tracks and the terminal charge separately in their schedules, as required by the Interstate Commerce Act, the legality of each charge must be determined by itself, without regard to the other; and where the terminal charge, considered by itself, is reasonable for the service rendered, the interstate commerce commission is without power to reduce it on the ground that, when added to the through rate, the total charge from the point of shipment to the stockyards is excessive.[12]

§ 4116. Industrial Track Service.—Transportation of cars and freight intended for interstate commerce to and from industrial plants located from one-fifth of a mile to seven miles from the main track of the carrier is not the same service which the carrier performs when it delivers freight at its depot or team tracks, the carrier being bound to perform such industrial track service, in the absence of statute, only under an arrangement with the owner of the industrial plant, for which it may charge a reasonable compensation.[13] Where the work of a common carrier as to a proprietary company is merely a plant facility, and the services rendered to such company are merely plant or industrial services as distinguished from transportation services, it is within the powers of the interstate commerce commission to prohibit an allowance for such services in a joint tariff schedule.[14]

As Substitute for Receiving and Delivery Service.—Delivery and receipt on industrial spur tracks within switching limits of car load freight in interstate commerce is not an added service, for which the carrier can make an additional charge to the line-haul rate to or from such city, where that rate embraces a receiving and delivery service at team tracks or at freight sheds within such limits, for which the spur-track service is a substitute.[15]

§ 4117. Demurrage Charges.—Since carriers engaged in interstate commerce are entitled to impose, as a condition to hauling private cars, such terms as have a reasonable relation to the transportation service in which they are employed, and may adopt such rules as will tend to provide a reasonably dependable supply of equipment and prevent the withdrawal of such cars at will, to serve the private purposes of the owners and as will keep them in active and steady use, a rule imposing a reasonable demurrage charge on such cars while standing on private tracks and while returned unloaded until the lading is removed and the cars released, is reasonable and not violative of the owner's rights.[16]

Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824. See, also, Covington Stockyards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. Ed. 73, 11 S. Ct. 461.

11. Separation of terminal and freight charges.—There is no doubt as to the right of a carrier to divide its rates and thus to make a distinct charge from the point of shipment to Chicago and a separate terminal charge for delivery to the stock yards, a point beyond the lines of the carrier. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

12. Reasonableness determined by circumstances of each case.—Stickney v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 638.

13. Industrial track service.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 229; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 241.

14. Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

15. As substitute for receiving and delivery service. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 294, 34 S. Ct. 814; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 234 U. S. 315, 34 S. Ct. 820.

16. Demurrage.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 221.

§ 4118. Charges for Reconsignment of Goods.—An additional charge by a carrier of two cents per hundred-weight for the privilege of reconsigning hay at a central point, originating in northwestern territory and shipped into southeastern territory, is excessive, within the Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting excessive rates, and thereby produces an unjust discrimination.[17]

§ 4119. Through Rates.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act it is held that joint through tariff rates are a question of agreement between the companies and under their control, and that an initial carrier could agree upon joint through rates with one or several connecting carriers, or not, as it chose. The rule is that a common carrier need not agree to carry beyond its own road, and could agree upon joint through tariff rates; but where the carrier did take advantages of these rights, it was held that it could make such terms as it pleased, whether or not it agreed to be liable for default of connecting carrier, at least so long as they were reasonable and did not otherwise violate the interstate commerce act.[18] A shipment of freight over connecting carriers which have no contract for joint through rates is not within the Act of March 2, 1889, authorizing, but not requiring, connecting carriers to agree upon joint rates, and providing a penalty for failure of a carrier to enforce such rates when agreed on.[19] Where no specific rate from point of origin to destination of a through shipment is provided, and no specific manner of constructing the combination rate for it is prescribed, the lowest combination of rates applicable over the route is the lawful rate.[20]

Reasonableness.—The fact that a through rate is made up of a through rate to an intermediate point, with the local rate between that and the terminal point added, does not render it unreasonable, where each of the two rates is reasonable in itself.[21]

17. Charges for reconsignment of goods.—Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

Defendant railroad company, on shipments of hay to southeastern points from East St. Louis, made a charge of two cents per 100 pounds above the rates charged from Ohio river points on all hay which was not unloaded into a warehouse at East St. Louis from the cars in which it was there received, whether such hay was consigned to that point or billed through to points of final destination, while on all hay so unloaded into a warehouse the additional charge was four cents. Plaintiff owned warehouses in East St. Louis from which it loaded and shipped hay to southeastern points over defendant's road and was required to pay thereon the four-cent charge. Held, on the evidence, that an additional charge of one cent per 100 pounds for hay loaded from warehouses would cover the difference in the expense to defendant, and the charge made was to the extent of the excess above that unjust and unreasonable, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of such excess charges paid. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co. v. Southern R. Co., 149 Fed. 609, judgment affirmed in 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

18. Through rates.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. Ed. 291, 4 S. Ct. 185; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. West Coast Nav. Stores Co., 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. Ed. 1135, 25 S. Ct. 745.

It is also undoubted that the common carrier need not contract to carry beyond its own line, but may there deliver to the next succeeding carrier, and thus end its responsibility, and charge its local rate for the transportation. If it agree to transport beyond its own line, it may do so by such lines as it chooses. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. Ed. 291, 4 S. Ct. 185.

This right has not been held to depend upon whether the original carrier agreed to be liable for the default of the connecting carrier after the goods are delivered to such connecting carrier. As the carrier is not bound to make a through contract, it can do so upon such terms as it may agree upon; at least, so long as they are reasonable and do not otherwise violate the law. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

19. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Nelson, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 345, 23 S. W. 732.

20. Pecos, etc., R. Co. v. Porter (Tex. Civ. App.), 156 S. W. 267.

21. Reasonableness.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 186.

Each Railroad Considered Separate.—The making of a through rate on interstate shipments by the joint action of connecting railroads is the act of each, and brings each within the scope of the Interstate Commerce Act, and renders it responsible for such rate, without regard to the proportion thereof received for its own service.[22] The fact that a railroad line operated as a part of a large railway system, considered as a separate road, fails to pay expenses, does not justify the charging of unjust and unreasonable rates nor undue discrimination in rates.[23]

Joint Liability.—The joint through rates established by several carriers must be construed as entireties. It follows, necessarily, that each carrier who is a member of the through line must be regarded as severally as well as jointly responsible, if the rate is unfair and oppressive. While this unfairness may appear to be attributable to the exactions made by one particular carrier only, the other members, by their assent, are joint participants in the wrong.[24] Where there are regularly published rates, in which each of the carriers participate, and their proportionate divisions are brought about by agreement between themselves, this constitutes a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, as defined by § 1, of the act, and therefore each of the participating carriers is within the scope of the act, and to the extent of its authority under the control of the interstate commerce commission.[25]

Shipment Through Foreign Country.—A contract for shipment of goods from a foreign port to an inland point in the United States for a through rate does not necessarily violate the interstate commerce law, though the proportion of the through rate allowed for the carriage from the port of entry to the destination is less than the rate scheduled for freight originating at such port and carried to such destination.[26]

Apportionment of Charges.—Where goods are received in transit under a "conventional division of the charges," there is an apportionment of the charges by agreement of the participating carriers.[27]

§§ 4120-4124. Allowance for Service of Shipper—§ 4120. In General.—The law does not attempt to equalize fortune, opportunities, or abilities.[28] The Interstate Commerce Act contemplates that interstate carriers may use facilities owned by the shipper and make compensation therefor, and by the Act of June 18, 1910, it is provided that if the owner of property transported under this act directly or indirectly renders any service connected with such transportation, or furnishes any instrumentality used therein, the charge and allowance therefor shall be no more than is just and reasonable, and the commission may after hearing on a complaint or on its own initiative, determine what is a reasonable charge as the maximum to be paid by the carrier or carriers for the services so rendered or for the use of the instrumentality so furnished, and fix the same by appropriate order, which order shall have the same force and effect and be enforced in like manner as the orders above provided

22. Each railroad considered separate.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

23. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

24. Joint liability.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613, citing Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., N. S., 223; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

25. "In this case an injunction will be granted against each and all of the respondent companies, so that the order of the commission may be enforced." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

26. Shipment through foreign country.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Redding, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 43 S. W. 1061.

27. Apportionment of charges.—Mutual Trans. Co. v. United States, 102 C. C. A. 164, 178 Fed. 664.

28. Allowance for service of shipper.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22; Penn Refin. Co. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268.

for under this section.[29] It thus appears that the statute, while recognizing that the carrier may lawfully make compensation for services rendered or facilities furnished by the shipper, also recognizes that such transactions may be made the cloak for the granting of reduced rates, secret rebates, and other abuses, and carefully provides that such charge and allowance therefor shall be no more than is just and reasonable, and gives the commission power to determine what is such just and reasonable charge.[30] The compensation contemplated by this section for the use of facilities furnished by the shipper is not necessarily unlawful because it works a disadvantage to other shippers of the same commodity who do not own such facilities or who can not use them to advantage. In short, the law does not attempt to equalize fortune, opportunities or abilities.[31] On the other hand, the facility for the use of which compensation is made must be one which the carrier uses in interstate commerce. It is not lawful to make compensation or allowance to the shipper for facilities used merely for the purpose of bringing his products from his factory or mine out to the carrier's road where they may be taken up and started on their interstate journey.[32]

Discrimination between Shippers.—Neither the carriers nor the commission can enforce an arbitrary rule which would authorize the payment of one shipper for transportation service and deprive another of compensation for similar service. To receive the benefit of such work by one elevator without making compensation therefor would, in effect, be the involuntary payment by such elevator of a rebate to the railroad company, for it would enable the railroad to receive more net freight on its grain than was received from its competitor located on the railroad's tracks. This can not be directly done, nor indirectly by means of regulation. A rule apparently fair on its face and reasonable in its terms may, in fact, be unfair and unreasonable if it operates so as to give one an advantage of which another, similarly situated, can not avail himself.[33]

29. Act June 18, 1910, ch. 309, § 12, 36 Stat. at L. 553.

30. Penn Refin. Co. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 156 Fed. 558, 84 C. C. A. 324, 26 L. R. A., N. S., 551, affirmed in 212 U. S. 563, 53 L. Ed. 653, 29 S. Ct. 689; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39; United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 231 U. S. 274, 34 S. Ct. 75.

31. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22; Penn Refin. Co. v. Western, etc., R. Co., 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268.

Carriers can not be charged with discriminating against shippers of oil in barrels from the Pennsylvania oil fields to Perth Amboy, New Jersey, because they charge for the barrel package without making a corresponding charge upon shipments in tank cars owned by those shippers who can afford to build and furnish them, the carriers having none of their own, where the transportation by tank cars is more remunerative to the carriers than the transportation by barrels, and the barrel shippers have made no demand for tank cars, and can not use them economically for shipments to Perth Amboy on account of the lack of facilities for unloading at that point. Judgment, Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456, 28 S. Ct. 268.

32. Private tracks built by the owner of a packing plant on its own property, extending from a connection with the tracks of a belt line railroad company to and around its buildings, and used in loading cars for shipment, are not a part of the railroad system, but plant facilities, and the refunding by a railroad company which made and published a schedule of through rates, including the belt line charge, of $1 per car to such packing company on shipments made by it and paid for at the schedule rate, on the ground that it was a payment for the use of such private tracks, constituted the giving of a rebate, in violation of § 1 of Elkins Act February 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880]. Judgment, 156 Fed. 558, 84 C. C. A. 324, 26 L. R. A., N. S., 551, affirmed in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 563, 53 L. Ed. 653, 29 S. Ct. 689.

33. Discrimination between shippers.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

Where Allowance Amounts to Rebate.—The allowance by a railroad company to certain coal companies shipping over its line of a stated sum per ton ostensibly for the use of trackage owned by such companies and the service of their own locomotives in hauling cars thereon from the rate charged plaintiff, which was also a shipper in the same district under similar circumstances, is an unlawful discrimination in violation of interstate commerce.[34]

Shipper Connected with Transportation.—As used in the act providing that a shipper rendering service "connected with" the transportation may be paid therefor by the carrier, the phrase quoted is a synonym of "a part of it;" it does not mean something in addition to transportation that touches or is attached to transportation.[35]

§ 4121. For Elevation of Grain.—The long-mooted question as to whether elevation was such a part of transportation as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission was answered by the Act of June 29, 1906, in which congress declared that the term transportation shall include all facilities of shipment, irrespective of ownership, and all services in connection with the elevation and transfer in transit and handling of property transported. Carriers were required to provide and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor. The act recognized that the shipper himself might own the elevator or other facility included within the definition of transportation and provides, that if the owner renders any service connected with such transportation, or furnishes any instrumentality used therein, the charge and allowance therefor shall be no more than is just and reasonable, the commission being authorized to determine what is reasonable. In pursuance of the authority thus expressly conferred, the interstate commerce commission, fixed the allowance for elevating grain at three-fourths of a cent per hundred pounds, being actual cost, with no allowance whatever for profit.[36] Its final order prohibiting any payment to the owner who performed this transportation service,[37] was reversed, as being beyond the jurisdiction of the commission, because congress had expressly permitted such payment to be made.[38] An order forbidding the carrier to allow or pay to the owner of an elevator any compensation for elevation in transit of grain which he ships, unless he refuses to clean, clip, mix, inspect, or grade the wheat while it is passing through the elevator, is beyond the power of the commission.[39]

Where Allowance Amounts to Discrimination.—The interstate commerce commission has decided that the allowance or payment by a railroad company to an elevator company of any compensation for the elevation and transfer in transit of grain which it shipped and owned was unlawful where it derived, or might derive, a commercial advantage from cleaning, clipping, mixing, grading, and inspecting the grain during its elevation, and where there was danger that such a practice might lead the parties to it to violate the prohibition of rebates and of unjust discrimination embodied in the interstate commerce act.[40] A 34. Where allowance amounts to rebate.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 2, 24 Stat. 379 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155); Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 181 Fed. 403, dismissed for want of jurisdiction 183 Fed. 908.

35. Shipper connected with transportation.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. General Elect. Co., 146 N. Y. S. 322, 83 Misc. Rep. 529.

36. Owner of elevator.—12 Inters. Com. Rep. (U. S.), 86.

37. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. (U. S.), 315.

38. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

Order of the commission prohibiting allowance or payment by carriers of compensation to owners and operators of elevators for elevation and transfer in transit are beyond the delegated power of the commission. Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

39. Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

40. Where allowance amounts to discrimination.—In re Allowances to Elevators (U. S.), 12 Interst. Com. R. 85, 88; S. C. (U. S.), 14 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 315, 316.

contract by which an interstate railroad company agreed to pay an elevator company a certain amount a car for grain originating on its line and passing through the elevator, not allowed to all elevators, nor covered by a filed and published rate schedule, is void.[41]

Where Grain Weighed, etc.—A carrier can not refuse the allowance for elevator service on through grain in car loads at terminal points to elevator owners who, through ownership of the grain, derive an incidental advantage by using the opportunity afforded during the process of elevation to weigh, store, inspect, clean, mix, or otherwise treat the grain, in view of the provisions of Act June 29, 1906, recognizing that services in transportation, rendered by an owner of the property transported, are to be paid for by the carrier.[42] The interstate commerce commission can not make the allowance by a carrier to the owner of an elevator of the cost of the elevation in transit of grain in which he has an interest, conditional upon his failure to use the opportunity afforded during the process of elevation to treat, weigh, inspect, or mix the grain, since such allowance can not be deemed an undue preference or discrimination.[43]

Where Car Detained.—A carrier may make its allowance for elevator service on through grain in carloads at terminal points at elevators located on the lines of other carriers, as well as those located along its own tracks, conditional upon the return of the empty car to the carrier within forty-eight hours after delivery to the elevator, where such car can be unloaded and returned in a much shorter time.[44] But a carrier can not enforce a rule making its allowance for elevator service on through grain in carloads at terminal points conditional upon the return of the empty car to the carrier within forty-eight hours after delivery to the elevator, so as to defeat the right to compensation for elevator service rendered at elevators located on the lines of other railroads, where the return of the cars to the carrier was made impossible by the rules of a railway association of which the carrier was a member, and over which the elevator owners had no control, no such impossibility existing if the elevator was one of those located along the carrier's tracks.[45]

41. Elwood Grain Co. v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., 202 Fed. 845, 121 C. C. A. 153.

42. Where grain weighed, etc.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39, affirming judgment 178 Fed. 223, 101 C. C. A. 583.

43. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22, modifying decree Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

44. Where car detained.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

Complainants returned, more than 48 hours after their delivery to connecting lines, certain cars, and the Union Pacific Company refused to pay them compensation for elevating the grain out of these cars. The delay in the return of these cars was due to the companies having connecting lines to whom the cars were delivered by the Union Pacific Company by direction of the complainants or consignors to the complainants, and the Union Pacific Company paid no elevation charges to Peavey & Co. on grain unloaded from cars which were not returned to the Union Pacific Company within 48 hours. Held, that there was no unjust discrimination shown, and complainants were not entitled to damages because they received no compensation for elevation services in connection with such cars. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 178 Fed. 223, 101 C. C. A. 583.

45. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

The tariffs of a railroad company offered compensation for elevation of grain in transit on condition that cars delivered by it loaded to elevators or connecting lines should be returned to it empty within forty-eight hours. The regulations provided that foreign cars, cars belonging to the companies which had a direct connection with the switching territory, should be delivered to their owners so that the complainants, who were owners of elevators upon railroad tracks other than those of the railroad company, could not possibly return such cars to that company, while a third person, which had an elevator on the railroad tracks, could deliver such cars immediately after they were unloaded, and the railroad paid it compensation for elevating the grain unloaded from those cars, while it refused to pay complainants any compensation for unloading cars of like character. This created an unjust discrimination against

Elevation in Transit.—The interstate commerce commission decided that all allowances and payments to owners and operators of elevators for elevation in transit were unlawful and must cease.[46] Thereupon it issued orders which forbade the continuance of such allowances and payments.[47] Elevation in transit consists in the unloading of the cars which bring the grain to the elevator and the loading of the grain into those which carry it away.[48]

Reshipment of Goods in Particular Time.—Confining the allowance by a carrier to the owner of an elevator for elevating grain in transit in which he has an interest, to such grain as shall be reshipped within ten days, is within the power of the interstate commerce commission.[49]

Determining Validity.—Whether a railroad company's contract to pay an elevator company so much for each car on grain received by the elevator company and passing through the elevator is contrary to the Interstate Commerce Act should be determined as of the date of the service.[50]

§ 4122. For Construction of Grain Doors for Cars.—Where a carrier receiving grain and produce in bulk failed to furnish cars with grain doors or lumber for so equipping them, the shipper was entitled to recover the cost of lumber used in so equipping them.[51] In an action to recover from the defendant railway company the necessary costs of the labor, lumber, and material used in constructing grain doors for box cars used in transporting grain from Cook, Neb., to Kansas City, Mo., held, that the answer of the defendant company that the interstate commerce commission had made a rule to the effect that the carrier might not lawfully reimburse shippers for the expense incurred in attaching grain doors to box cars, unless expressly so provided in its tariff, and that there was no such provision in the tariff of the defendant company at the time the doors were so furnished (though afterwards one was adopted), and therefore that the defendant company was not liable, failed to state any defense.[52]

§ 4123. For Cartage.—The cartage of sugar from a refinery to cars does not constitute transportation, nor a service connected with transportation, within such act, for which the carrier is justified in making such allowance.[53] A carrier may lawfully grant shippers of coal doing their own hauling to the station a reasonable allowance from the published tariff, which, though naming the rate as from the station to the destination, is uniformly construed to include the haul from the mine.[54]

§ 4124. For Lighterage.—The fact that the owner of a terminal is paid as such for handling and lightering his own product, after it had become the property of a purchaser by delivery to the carrier at such terminal, does not constitute the giving of a rebate, in the absence of any evidence that it is a device complainants which entitled them to recover damages. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 101 C. C. A. 583, 178 Fed. 223, affirmed in 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. Ed. 171, 32 S. Ct. 39.

46. Elevation in transit.—Traffic Bureau Merchants' Exch. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (U. S.), 14 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 317.

47. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 178 Fed. 223, 101 C. C. A. 583.

48. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 178 Fed. 223, 101 C. C. A. 583.

49. Reshipment of goods in particular time.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. Ed. 83, 32 S. Ct. 22, modifying decree Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

50. Determining validity.—Elwood Grain Co. v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., 121 C. C. A. 153, 202 Fed. 845.

51. For construction of grain doors for cars.—Loomis v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 208 N. Y. 312, 101 N. E. 907, modifying judgment 132 N. Y. S. 138, 147 App. Div. 195.

52. Hanks v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 92 Neb. 594, 138 N. W. 750.

53. Cartage of sugar from refinery to car.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 652.

54. Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 33 S. Ct. 916, 230 U. S. 247, 57 L. Ed. 1472, modifying judgment 183 Fed. 908.

for that purpose; nor does it constitute the giving of an undue and unreasonable preference or advantage, as to another shipper, to shipments outside of the lighterage limits.[55]

Free Lighterage Zone.—Interstate trunk railway companies having their terminals on the New Jersey shore of New York harbor, having established a zone within which they perform lighterage service without additional charge, may pay reasonable compensation on tonnage basis to owners of water front within such zone operating a sugar refinery for maintenance of a public freight terminal station and for lightering, without allowing similar compensation to sugar refiners whose plant is situated some ten miles beyond the free lighterage zone; the compensation made being a proper allowance under Act June 29, 1906, and not an illegal preference within § 3 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887.[56]

§§ 4125-4145. Printing and Publishing Schedules—§ 4125. In General.—The act declares that every common carrier subject to the act shall file with the interstate commerce commission and print, post, and keep open to public inspection schedules showing rates, fares, and charges for transportation between different points on its own route and points on the route of any other carrier by railroad, etc.[57] That the act imposes upon common carriers subject to its provisions the duty of establishing in a prescribed mode the rates, whether individual or joint, to be charged for the transportation in interstate commerce of property over their lines, and that the rates so established are obligatory alike upon carrier and shipper, and must be strictly observed by both until changed in the mode prescribed, are propositions which are not only plainly stated in the act, but settled by repeated decisions of the federal supreme court.[58]

What Amounts to Publication.—Freight rates required to be established by carriers, according to the provisions of the interstate commerce law are not established by tariffs naming class rates that do not contain a classification of 55. For lighterage.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 200 Fed. 779.

The fact that the owners of a terminal are paid as such for handling and lightering their own product, after it had become the property of the purchasers by delivery to the carrier at such terminal, did not constitute the giving of a rebate in violation of Interest Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 2, 24 Stat. 379 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3155), in the absence of any evidence that it was a device for that purpose; nor did it constitute the giving of an undue and unreasonable preference or advantage over respondent company, within § 3, because petitioners did not pay for the lighterage of respondent's shipments, since they were not in fact made from a point within the lighterage limits, the device of having the lighters stop on the way from Yonkers at a place within such limits, where respondent had no terminal facilities and made no tender of delivery, being a mere subterfuge, which gave it no legal or equitable claim to be a shipper from there. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 200 Fed. 779.

56. Free lighterage zone.—Sugar refiners whose plant is situated ten miles beyond the limit of free lighterage zone, established on the river front of Greater New York by interstate trunk railroads, whose freight terminals are at the New Jersey shore of New York harbor, are not entitled to compensation from the railway companies under Act June 29, 1906, for lightering their sugar from the refinery to their terminals. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 231 U. S. 274, 34 S. Ct. 75.

57. Printing and publishing schedules.—Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 6, 24 Stat. 380 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3156), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 2, 34 Stat. 586 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1153).

58. United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323. See Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 17 S. Ct. 540; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

freight, but merely refer to a classification published by other parties and subject to change by such parties. A departure by a shipper from such rates does not constitute an offense under the Act Feb. 19, 1903.[59] A carrier filed with the interstate commission a schedule of rates, called "Official Classification," and also a rate sheet, called "Joint East-Bound Interstate Tariff." The former stated specifically the rates under its uniform bill of lading, which limits its common-law liability as a carrier, and further stated that the rates on property not shipped subject to the uniform bill of lading were a specified percentage higher than the rates under said bill. The rate sheet stated that all rates were to be used in connection with, and subject to, the official classification. This was a making and establishing of schedules of rates both under the uniform bill of lading, and also under the full common-law liability.[60]

A railway company operating, as lessee upon the basis of a division of profits, the railroad system owned by a stockyard company for the transportation of cars to and from trunk lines in the course of their transportation from beyond the state, and to points outside of the state, is an interstate carrier within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, and as such is obliged to file its tariffs with the interstate commerce commission, as required by that act.[61]

A corporation organized for the purpose of maintaining a stockyard, with the usual facilities of such yards as to loading and unloading and caring for freight, which lawfully owns and operates a railroad system for the transportation of cars to and from trunk lines, in the course of their transportation from beyond the state and to points outside of the state, is an interstate railway carrier, within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, and as such is obliged to file its tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission, as required by that act.[62]

§ 4126. Statutory Provision.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall print and keep open to public inspection schedules showing the rates and fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which any such common carrier has established and which are in force at the time upon its route.[63]

Constitutionality of Statute.—The mere incidental effect upon exports which may be produced by applying to a shipment from an interior point of the United States to a foreign port the provisions of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, making it an offense against the United States to obtain the transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, does not render such provisions repugnant to the constitution of the United States, forbidding the levying of export taxes or duties.[64] Preference is not given to the ports of one state over those of another by applying to articles in-

59. What amounts to publication.—United States v. Standard Oil Co., 170 Fed. 988.

60. Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 72 Minn. 357, 75 N. W. 602.

61. United States v. Union Stockyards, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83.

62. A stockyard company owning and operating under its charter a railway system for the transportation of cars to and from trunk lines in the course of their transportation from beyond the state and to points outside of the state did not cease to be an interstate railway carrier within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, and as such obliged to file its tariffs within the interstate commerce commission, as required by § 6 of that act, by leasing its railway and equipment to another corporation upon the basis of a division of profits, both companies being under a common stock ownership, with its consequent control. United States v. Union Stockyards, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83.

63. Statutory provision.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 6, as amended by Act Mar. 2, 1889.

64. Constitutionality of statute.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

tended for foreign export the provisions of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, making it an offense against the United States to accept transportation of goods in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates.[65]

Relation to Provision against Discrimination.—There is not only a relation, but an indissoluble unity between the provision for the establishment and maintenance of rate until corrected in accordance with the statute and the prohibitions against preferences and discriminations. This follows, because unless the requirement of a uniform standard of rates be complied with, it would result that violations of the statute as to preferences and discrimination would inevitably follow.[66] That the act to regulate commerce was intended to afford an effective means for redressing the wrongs resulting from unjust discrimination and undue preference is undoubted. Indeed, it is not open to controversy that to provide for these subjects was among the principal purposes of the act.[67] And it is apparent that the means by which these great purposes were to be accomplished was the placing upon all carriers the positive duty to establish schedules of reasonable rates which should have a uniform application to all and which should not be departed from so long as the established schedule remained unaltered in the manner provided by law.[68]

Construction—"Rates in Force."—"Rates in force," to which the act applies, are not limited to rates under which transportation has actually taken place, but are those which the carrier has established as its present charges, as distinguished from those which are obsolete, tentative, or perhaps only to take effect in the future. They are rates open to public inspection and on which shipments may be made, if offered.[69]

"Between Two Points."—The act declares that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, party to any joint tariff, to charge or receive a greater or less compensation for the transportation of persons or property or for any services in connection therewith, between any points as to which a joint rate is named thereon than specified in the schedule filed by the commission in force at the time. The words "between two points" do not limit such provision to points on the established route, but the provision prohibits the transportation of property between terminals in different states at a greater or less rate than the established rate, without reference to routes.[70]

§ 4127. Shipment over Connecting Carrier.—The acceptance by an initial carrier of a through shipment to be carried at less than the lawful rates is not rendered lawful by the fact that such carrier had a contract with a connecting carrier whose line formed a part of the through route that the latter would not increase its rate during a certain time and on the faith of such contract made a similar contract with the shipper, where in the meantime the connecting carrier had in fact published and filed with the commission a new schedule increasing

65. Preference of ports of one state over ports of another.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

66. Relation to provision against discrimination.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

67. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

68. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075, citing Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896.

69. Construction—"Rates in force."—Judgment United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 630, reversed in 92 C. C. A. 331, 166 Fed. 267.

70. "Between two points."—United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

the rate.[71]

Necessity for Contract for Through Carriage.—In the concert of action, in the successive receipt and movement of traffic by connecting carriers under through bills of lading for continuous carriage, is manifested the common arrangement contemplated by the interstate commerce laws, and no previous formal contract is necessary to bring the carriers under the provisions of the law.[72] The sanction of the other roads to schedules of freight rates containing a heading indicating their adoption by a particular road "in connection with" other designated railroads, which are the roads over which a haul, when there is such, from common points to the particular railroad would be made, is not essential to the establishment of such rates in a proceeding involving shipments over such railroad and a connecting line not included among the other roads designated, from a city which is not one of the common points.[73] It was not shown that these schedules were sanctioned by the other railroads designated therein, they being the roads over which the haul to the garnishee's road from the common points was to be made when the shipments were received from connecting lines at those points. Such a showing, however, was not necessary here. The other roads had no interest in the rate as applied to shipments received by the garnishee from the northern line at Kansas City, as were the shipments in question. As applied to them the rate was not joint, but an individual rate of the garnishee. The sanction of the other roads was essential only to its application to the haul from the common points, when there was such.[74] A railroad company which as initial carrier received an interstate shipment to be transported over its own and other lines under a joint through rate established and filed was not authorized to divert the shipment to another road, not a party to the joint rate, because its connecting refused to receive it, and is liable to the shipper for the excess of freight charged resulting from such diversion.[75]

Actual Relation of Carrier Immaterial.—Where a railroad company operating an interstate road treated points on a connecting road which it also operated as within a certain coal district, from all points in which, whether on such line or its own line, it made and published the same rates, such road for freight purposes was a part of its line, and its relations with the owner thereof are immaterial.[76]

Other Carriers Not Specified in Schedule.—Schedules of freight rates of a designated railroad, indicating that they were adopted by it "in connection with" other specified roads over which shipments from the common points, if any, would be made, may be applicable to a shipment over a different railroad from a city which is not a common point, where such schedules do not restrict the rate to shipments received from the roads specified but indicate its applicability to shipments received from any connecting line.[77] When, under the provisions of § 6 of the act, two or more common carriers lawfully contract for the establishment of through routes at or upon joint through rates, they can not be compelled to concede to all other connecting railroads the same or equal through rates, on traffic which the latter may offer for transportation.[78]

71. Shipment over connecting carrier.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 157 Fed. 830, affirmed in 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439.

72. Necessity for contract for through carriage.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 157 Fed. 830, affirmed in 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439.

73. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

74. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

75. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Dickerson, 191 Fed. 705, affirming judgment, 187 Fed. 874.

76. Actual relation immaterial.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

77. Other carriers not specified in schedule.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

78. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

Where No Joint Rate Established.—Shipments over connecting lines, even though moving on through bills of lading, must, under the Interstate Commerce Act, take the lawfully established local rate in force on each line, where there is no established joint through rate.[79] An agreement with a single shipper for shipments over connecting lines having no joint through rate, at less than the established local rates for each road, is void and does not prevent the collecting of the established local rate by such carriers, under the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, § 6, as amended by the Act of March 2, 1889, providing the manner for establishing rates, and making it unlawful for a carrier to depart from any rate so established and in force at the time and requiring connecting carriers agreeing on joint through rates to file schedules with the commission, and prohibiting any deviation from an established joint rate while in force.[80]

Shipment from Common Point.—Schedules of freight rates of a designated railroad "in connection with" other specified roads may be made applicable to a shipment over different railroad from a city which is not a common point.[81]

What Amounts to Establishing Rate.—The Missouri Pacific Railway Company received carloads of beer in St. Louis for transportation to Leadville, Colo., issuing receipts therefor showing contents, weight, destination, and consignee, and that the shipment was received subject to its uniform bill of lading, to be delivered to the consignee and routed over the line of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company. At Pueblo, Colo., it turned the cars over the latter company, which moved them to Leadville on a local waybill, showing the consignor and consignee and the rate and charge of each company. The two companies had no established joint rate between St. Louis and Leadville, but they constantly exchanged traffic between such points; each charging its own local rate to and from Pueblo. The total freight was collected by one, either from the consignor or consignee, and daily settlements were made between them. Held, that such course of business was in fact the establishment of a "through route" between the two points, within the meaning of § 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 2, 34 Stat. 586 (U. S. Comp. St. 1909, p. 1153), which requires the filing of schedules of the "separately established rates" applied by a carrier on through traffic, when there is a through route, but no joint rate, and that such rate established by the Denver Company was within the terms of the act, and as a part of the through charge was subject to regulation by the interstate commerce commission under § 15 of the act as amended.[82]

Necessity for Publication of Rates.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act requiring the filing with the commission of established joint rates by connecting 79. Where no joint rate established.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

Through shipments of iron pipe were made from points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania to Winnipeg, Canada, part over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and part over the Philadelphia & Reading to the Great Lakes; thence by the Mutual Transit Company, a water carrier, to Duluth; and thence by the Great Northern Railway and its connections. There was no through joint rate filed or published, but there was a joint rate of 24½ cents per 100 pounds between the initial points and Duluth published and filed by participating carriers, and one of 25 cents per 100 between Duluth and Winnipeg filed by the Great Northern Railway Company. Held, that the lawful rate for the through carriage was the sum of such two rates, or 49½ cents per 100, and that under the interstate commerce law, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, c. 382, 25 Stat. 855 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3156], neither line over which the shipments passed could lawfully charge a greater or less sum than was specified in the filed and published schedule of rates to which it was a party. United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

80. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

81. Shipment from common point.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

82. What amounts to establishing rate.—Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 968.

carriers, where a receiving carrier files with the commission an established joint rate, failure of the other connecting carriers to give publicity to the rate does not invalidate a contract for the shipment of freight over such connecting lines, as violative of the interstate commerce law, which is otherwise valid.[83]

§ 4128. Shipment Through Foreign Country.—The rates of transportation from places in the United States to ports of transshipment and from ports of entry to places in the United States of property in foreign commerce, carried under through bills of lading, are required to be filed and published.[84]

Inland and Ocean Carriage.—If property is carried under a joint through rate by virtue of a common control or arrangement of inland and ocean carriers, the joint rate is required to be filed and published.[85] Where property is carried under an aggregate through rate, which is the sum of the ocean rate and the rate from or to a place in the United States to or from the port of transshipment or of entry, the latter rate is required to be filed and published.[86]

Shipment to Foreign Country under Local Bill.—Shipments of freight under local bills of lading calling for transportation from interior points in Louisiana to New Orleans, there to be delivered to the shipper's or consignee's order, but intended by the shippers to be exported to foreign countries, and treated accordingly by both shippers and carriers, constitute foreign commerce, and as such are governed as to the intrastate transportation by the tariffs on file with the interstate commerce commission, to the exclusion of the rates established by the state railroad commission.[87]

§§ 4129-4131. Form, Requisites and Validity—§ 4129. In General.—The interstate commerce commission may determine and prescribe the form in which the schedules, required by the act to be kept open to public inspection, are to be prepared and arranged, and may change the form from time to time as shall

83. Necessity for publication of rates.—Virginia, etc., Iron Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 S. E. 310, 98 Va. 776.

84. Shipment through foreign country.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

A carrier, which had never published or filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a through rate to a foreign port, was neither required nor could it make a through rate to such port without violating Hepburn Act June 29, 1906, § 2. Hamlen & Sons Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 212 Fed. 324.

85. Inland and ocean carriage.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

86. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

87. Shipment to foreign country under local bill.—Railroad Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 229 U. S. 336, 33 S. Ct. 837.

A shipment of lumber destined by the purchaser for export, made by the seller under a local bill of lading from an interior point in Texas to a Texas Gulf port, at which the lumber was unloaded without delay by the purchaser's order into slips or docks, in reach of ship's tackle, and was then loaded into chartered ships, by which it was carried to foreign ports—such shipment not being an isolated one, but typical of many others—constitutes foreign commerce, and as such is governed by the tariffs on file with the interstate commerce commission to the exclusion of the rates established by the state railroad commission, although the seller had no connection with the lumber after it reached the railway terminus, and had no concern with its destination after it came into the hands of the purchaser, and no knowledge thereof, and although the lumber had no definite foreign destination at the time of the initial shipment. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 33 S. Ct. 229.

In Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. Ed. 310, 31 S. Ct. 279; Railroad Comm. v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 56 L. Ed. 1001, 32 S. Ct. 653, and Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 33 S. Ct. 229, there was necessarily a local movement of freight, and it necessarily terminated at the seaboard, but it was decided that its character and continuity as a movement in foreign commerce did not terminate, nor was it affected by being transported on local bills of lading. Railroad Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 229 U. S. 336, 33 S. Ct. 837.

be found expedient.[88] The purpose of this provision was to compel the schedules to be so drawn as to plainly inform of their import, and to exact that when the rates were changed the change should be so stated as not to mislead and confuse.[89] Nor does the provision granting power to the commission to prescribe forms of schedules of rates, as provided for in the sixth section, have any such effect.[90]

§ 4130. Printed.—The schedules of rates, fares and charges required to be printed by a common carrier shall be plainly printed in large type.[91]

Terminal Charges.—The terminal charges of a carrier for delivering live stock beyond its own lines to a union stockyard may be stated in a separate item, and not necessarily upon the general freight charges of the carrier.[92]

§ 4131. Validity.—Where a railroad company filed two rates with the interstate commerce commission, the lower providing for an agreed valuation of live stock shipped, which condition was invalid, under the state law, for limiting the railroad company's liability for negligence, a decision that the shipper might recover despite the condition, while giving him all the benefits of the higher rate, is not erroneous in giving the shipper a less rate than required by law, because of the filing of the schedule of rates with the interstate commerce commission, for the validity of the agreement limiting the carrier's liability for negligence can not be assumed to have been approved by the commission, when invalid under the state law.[93]

§ 4132. Contents.—It is provided that the schedules of rates, fares and charges, required to be printed by a common carrier shall plainly state the places upon its railroad between which property and passengers will be carried, and shall contain the classification of freight in force, and shall also state separately the terminal charges and any rules or regulations which in any way change, affect, or determine any part of the aggregate of such aforesaid rates, fares and charges.[94]

Special Charges.—It at least seems to have been recognized by congress that there may properly be rules or regulations which in some wise change, affect, or determine a part or the aggregate of the scheduled rates and charges, and there is nothing in the act clearly indicating that the rate or charge for every service must be included in one specified sum.[95]

88. Form of schedules. — Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

89. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

90. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

91. Printed.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887.

92. Terminal charges.—Carriers separately state the terminal charges for delivering live stock beyond their own lines to the Union Stockyards in Chicago, as required by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 2 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 895), where their tariff schedules inform shippers that the live stock rates to Chicago apply only to deliveries at the carriers' own yards, and that, for transportation to the Union Stockyards, a stated additional charge will be made, the amount of such charge being entered, not upon the general freight charges of the companies, but as a separate item. Decree, Stickney v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 638, affirmed in 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. Ed. 112, 30 S. Ct. 66.

93. Validity.—Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

94. Contents. — Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 258, 17 S. Ct. 822; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358.

95. Special charges.—Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

Terminal Charges.—Railroad companies may make a distinct charge for carriage from the point of shipment of live stock to a city, and a separate terminal charge for delivery to stockyards, a point beyond the lines of the respective carriers—especially in view of the sixth section of the act to regulate commerce, providing that schedules of rates to be filed by carriers shall state separately the terminal charges and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect, or determine any part of the aggregate of said aforesaid rates and fares and charges.[96] Carriers who had long delivered live stock to the union stockyards in Chicago without making any distinct terminal charges did not, by giving notice to the public that a terminal charge would be made for delivery at the stockyards, in addition to the entire previous through rate to Chicago, and by filing a memorandum to that effect with their rate sheets with the interstate commerce commission, separate in their schedules the entire terminal charge from the through rate, as required by the sixth section of the act to regulate commerce, but simply added this additional charge to the sum of the terminal charge embraced in the prior through rate.[97] A consignee of a shipment of fruit, which, after the same was delivered to it and with full knowledge of the facts, paid without objection the charges of the carrier, including a charge for icing in transit, in addition to the published tariff rate for carriage, can not thereafter maintain an action to recover back the amount of such icing charge, on the ground that it was illegally exacted.[98]

Charges for Icing.—So far as the accomplishment of the great purposes of the Interstate Commerce Act is concerned, it would not seem to be very material whether charges for icing are fixed at a specified rate per ton of ice furnished and therefore separately stated in the schedules, or measured according to the weight of the commodity subject to refrigeration and the distance of transportation, in which event they might be more easily covered into the transportation rate. The former method would probably result in a closer approximation of charge imposed to value of service performed, and be more adjustable to the variable conditions of the seasons and the demands of the shippers, while the latter might the better conduce to simplicity in the schedules. Which should be adopted would seem to be a question of practice and expediency, rather than one of law.[99] "The interstate commerce commission, not consider-

96. Terminal charges.—Decree, 43 C. C. A. 209, 103 Fed. 249, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824.

Under Act to Regulate Commerce, § 6, providing that terminal charges shall be stated in the published schedules, a shipper's charge against a carrier for "spotting" cars on the shipper's tracks in its own yards could not be collected as a terminal charge, where it had never been published as such. New York, etc., R. Co. v. General Elect. Co., 146 N. Y. S. 322, 83 Misc. Rep. 529.

97. Decree, 43 C. C. A. 209, 103 Fed. 249, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824; Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

"In Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824, the court upheld the right of the railroads to make a distinct charge from the point of shipment to Chicago, and a separate terminal charge for delivery to the stockyards in that city, which was a point beyond their lines; but, because it did not arise in the case, the court declined to express an opinion upon the question whether the rule would be applicable to terminal services by a carrier upon its own line which it was obliged to perform as a necessary incident to its contract to carry." Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

"In Walker v. Keenan, 19 C. C. A. 668, 73 Fed. 755, the court, in discussing the Keith Case, said there was no reason why the compensation of a carrier should not me apportioned if the public convenience were subserved thereby, but that since the passage of the interstate commerce law the apportionment should be specified in the tariff schedules for the information of shippers." Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

98. Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 149 Fed. 973.

99. Charges for icing.—Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

ing that the question was foreclosed by any provision of the act of congress, has thus expressed its views: "There are at least three methods which may be adopted by the carrier in imposing such charges. It may charge for the ice actually used at so much per ton; it may charge for the service of refrigeration at so much per car, whatever the quantity of ice consumed may be; or it may charge at a rate by the hundred pounds,when property moves under refrigeration. All these different systems have their advantages and disadvantages. Some witnesses were in favor of one system, some of another. It is not within the province of this commission to prescribe the method which shall be adopted, so long as the price charged the shipper is fair.' " [1]

Cartage.—It is doubtful whether cartage, when furnished without charge by a railroad company, comes within the meaning of the phrase "terminal charges," or can be regarded as "a rule or regulation" which in anywise "changes, affects or determines" any part or the aggregate of the rates, fares and charges.[2] However, it has been said, in a matter of this kind, much should be left to the judgment of the commission, and should it direct, by a general order, that railway companies should thereafter regard cartage when furnished free as one of the terminal charges, and include it as such in their schedules, such an order might be regarded as a reasonable exercise of the commission's power.[3] Therefore, it has been held that the failure of a railroad company to state in its schedules posted and published at a point on its line, the fact that it furnishes free cartage at such point, is not a violation of § 6 of the interstate commerce act, from the fact that the failure to publish the fact of free cartage in its schedule might result in ignorance by some shippers of the existence of such a privilege.[4]

Privileges and Facilities Granted.—The furnishing of lumber for bulkheads for a grain car was not the furnishing of "privileges of facilities" within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act, requiring the schedules filed by a carrier with the interstate commerce commission to state the privileges and facilities granted or allowed by the carrier, and the fact that a carrier's printed schedule did not show that bulkheads were furnished in grain cars would not prevent a shipper, who furnished material for constructing bulkheads in cars furnished him for shipping grain, in order to make the cars available for use, from recovering the expense of such bulkheads from the carrier; the carrier being under a common-law obligation to pay such expense.[5]

Baggage Regulations.—By requiring the baggage regulations, including the excess valuation rate, to be filed and become part of the tariff schedules, the rule of the common law that the carrier becomes an insurer of the safety of baggage against accidents not the act of God or the public enemy or the fault of the passenger is not changed. The effect of such filing is to permit the carrier by such regulations to obtain commensurate compensation for the responsibility assumed for the safety of the passenger's baggage, and to require the passenger whose knowledge of the character and value of his baggage is peculiarly his own to declare its value and pay for the excess amount. There is no question of the reasonableness or propriety of making such regulations, which would be binding upon the passenger if brought to his knowledge in such wise as to make an agreement or what is tantamount thereto.[6]

1. Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.
" 'This was said in a cause pending before the commission involving the very practice now challenged by the plaintiff.' 11 Int. Com. Com'n R. 129, 141." Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

2. Cartage. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

3. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

4. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

5. Privileges and facilities granted.—Loomis v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 132 N. Y. S. 138, 147 App. Div. 195.

6. Baggage regulations.—Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

§ 4133. Publishing.—Effective railroad regulations under the Interstate Commerce Act must begin with the publicity of rates, and the penalty for failure to publish and file the rates is as severe as the penalty for failure to observe them after filing.[7] The consignee is, on tender of the freight stipulated in the bill of lading, though it is less than the rate approved by the interstate commerce commission, entitled to possession of goods transported by connecting carriers jointly, in the absence of proof of publication of the latter rate as provided by § 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act.[8]

Where Carrier's Line Is Wholly Intrastate.—Under the provision requiring several common carriers operating a through line engaged in interstate commerce to file schedules of rates constituting the basis of a through interstate rate, each carrier, though operating a line wholly within a state, which line is a portion of a through route engaged in interstate commerce through a common arrangement between several connecting carriers, is bound to comply with such act.[9]

Prerequisite for Conviction for Giving Rebate.—It is not essential, however, to the commission of the offense of giving a concession from a through rate over connecting lines of railroad, under the Act of February 19, 1903, that the rate be a joint one established by all of the carriers and published and filed with the interstate commerce commission. If an initial carrier accepts traffic for transportation, and issues its bill of lading over a route made up of connecting roads for which no joint through rate has been published and filed with the commission, the lawful rate to be charged is the sum of the established local rates published and filed by the individual roads; or if there is a local rate over one road and a joint rate over the others for the remainder of the route, all published and filed with the commission, the lawful through rate to be charged is the sum of the local and joint rates.[10]

Terminal and Demurrage Charges.—Demurrage charged for the detention of cars in loading or unloading is a terminal charge, required to be shown by the schedules of rates filed and published by an interstate railroad company by the terms of the interstate commerce act which define transportation as including all the instrumentalities and facilities of shipment and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, and handling of property transported, and require the filing and publishing of schedules showing all the rates, fares, and charges for transportation, stating separately all terminal charges.[11] A carrier subject to the act may furnish free cartage from its depot at one station without publishing the fact, and not do so at another near by, without infringing upon § 4 or § 6, especially when the practice has been long established.[12] Cartage is not in general a terminal expense, and is not in general assumed by the carrier. The transportation as between the carrier and its patrons ends when the freights are received at the warehouse, and the charge made is for a service which ends there.[13] Under the facts the general traffic rate for interstate freight does not include delivery to an industrial plant of the consignee or the transportation of the cars from the industrial plant of the shipper to the carrier's yard or main line over a distance varying from one-fifth of a mile to seven miles, but the carrier performing such service is entitled to exact a reasonable charge therefor.[14]

7. Publishing.—United States v. Illinois Terminal R. Co., 168 Fed. 546.

8. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Horne, 106 Tenn. (22 Pickle) 73, 59 S. W. 134.

9. Where carrier's line is wholly intrastate.—United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 630.

10. Prerequisite for conviction for giving rebate.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 157 Fed. 830, affirmed in 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439.

11. Terminal and demurrage charges.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 513, 188 Fed. 879, affirming judgments United States v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 184 Fed. 543, and United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 184 Fed. 546.

12. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

13. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. Ed. 306, 17 S. Ct. 986.

14. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 229.

As Prerequisite to Engaging in Transportation.—The act requires every carrier subject to the act to file with the interstate commerce commission, print, and keep open to public instruction, schedules showing all the rates for transportation between different points on its own route, and between points on its own route and that of any other railroad company, when a through route and a joint rate have been established, and also forbids the carrier to engage in the transportation of property between states without filing such rates. It is only the "business" of a common carrier, which could not be exercised without filing rates, and a railroad company was not prohibited from receiving freight for transportation to another state by the fact that no through route and joint rates had been established between the points of shipment and delivery.[15]

§ 4134. Posting.—Copies of the printed schedules, for the use of the public shall be posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, station, or office of such common carrier where passengers or freight, respectively, are received for transportation, in such form that they shall be accessible to the public and can be conveniently inspected.[16] Where a schedule of rates had been filed with the interstate commerce commission and copies thereof furnished to the freight officers of the railroad company, it was held that such schedule of rates had become legally operative, notwithstanding copies had not been posted in its depots as required by the act to regulate commerce.[17] A carrier, filing its rates with the interstate commerce commission as required by the interstate commerce act is barred from making any agreement for a greater or less rate than that prescribed by the rates filed, though it failed to post and publish the rates as prescribed by the act, but only posted a card to the effect that the rates were in charge of an agent in an office, and kept there for the convenience of the public.[18] But where the evidence showed that the rate as promulgated by the interstate commerce commission had not been posted in the station at the shipping point, and the carrier's agent there was not notified of its existence, but acted on the tariff sheet in his possession, contracting with reference thereto to carry hay

15. As prerequisite to engaging in transportation.—Reid v. Southern R. Co., 153 N. C. 490, 69 S. E. 618.

16. Posting.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802.

17. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 32 S. Ct. 316, 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, reversing judgment 99 Pac. 819, 79 Kan. 59.

That a carrier failed to post its schedules and tariff sheets in a depot, as required by the interstate commerce law, does not affect the validity of the rates promulgated, filed with the interstate commerce commission, and deposited with the station agent. Mires v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 134 Mo. App. 379, 114 S. W. 1052.

"Like views of the posting clause were expressed in Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358, and upon further consideration we perceive no reason for departing from them. See, also, Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316." United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323.

Where a railroad company seasonably made out and filed its traffic schedules, as required by Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, and forwarded copies to its local agents, the fact that some of its local agents failed to post them did not invalidate the rates established. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 153 S. W. 198, 152 Ky. 145, petition for rehearing overruled 154 S. W. 371, 152 Ky. 837.

18. Houseman v. Fargo, 124 N. Y. S. 1086.

Erroneous quotation by agent of an interstate carrier of a lower freight rate than that fixed by the published tariff gives no right of action to a shipper who sustains injury by acting on the faith of the quoted rate, though such tariff was not posted in the carrier's local station. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Henderson Elevator Co., 33 S. Ct. 176, 226 U. S. 441, 57 L. Ed. 290, reversing judgment 127 S. W. 779, 138 Ky. 220.

Where defendant failed to post an established rate at a station from which plaintiff's cattle were shipped, whereby he was compelled to pay a rate higher than if he had shipped under a competitive rate over another road, he was entitled to recover the difference under Interstate Commerce Act, § 8. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Lewellen Bros., 192 Fed. 540, 113 C. C. A. 414, writ of certiorari denied in 32 S. Ct. 835, 225 U. S. 701.

for a shipper, the carrier was liable in an action by the shipper for charges in excess of such contract rate collected at the point of destination at the rate specified in the new tariff.[19]

Distinguished from Publication.—Publication and posting in the sense of the act are essentially distinct.[20] From all the provisions on the subject it is evident that the publication intended consists in promulgating and distributing the tariff in printed form, preparatory to putting it into effect, while the posting is a continuing act enjoined upon the carrier, while the tariff remains operative, as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates in force thereunder. In other words, publication is a step in establishing rates, while posting is a duty arising out of the fact that they have been established.[21]

Posting Notice That Copies in Possession of Agent.—The provision relative to a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce over a line owned entirely by it, that it shall post printed copies of its schedules of rates for the use of the public in two public and conspicuous places in every station where freight is received for transportation, in such form that they shall be accessible to the public, and can be conveniently inspected, is not satisfied by the station agent having copies of the schedule, and the posting of a notice of this fact, and that they can be inspected on application, so as to put into effect the further provision of the section that when the carrier shall have established and published its rates in compliance with the provision of the section, it shall be unlawful for the carrier to charge a smaller rate than specified in such published schedules.[22]

Where Copies Torn Down.—The posting of copies of rates at a railroad station, where they are afterwards torn down, is not a compliance with the interstate commerce act, requiring a carrier to keep copies of its schedules of rates posted at its stations, etc.[23]

Prerequisite to Establishing Rates.—Obviously, posting is not a condition to making a tariff legally operative. Neither is it a condition to the continued existence of a tariff once legally established. If it were, the inadvertent or mischievous destruction or removal of one of the posted copies from a depot would disestablish or suspend the rates—a result which evidently is not intended by the act, for it provides that rates only lawfully established shall not be changed otherwise than in the mode prescribed.[24] In none of its expressions is there any suggestion that posting is a necessary step in establishing rates; that is, in making them legally operative.[25] Posting, is not essential to make rates legally operative, and is required only as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates actually in force.[26] But where a railroad

19. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.), 86 S. W. 793.

20. Distinguished from publication.—United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323.

21. United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323.

22. Posting notice that copies in possession of agent.—Wabash R. Co. v. Sloop, 200 Mo. 198, 98 S. W. 607.

23. Where copies torn down.—Griffin v. Wabash R. Co., 115 Mo. App. 549, 91 S. W. 1015.

24. Prerequisite to establishing rates.—United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323. See, also, Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

The posting of schedules required by the Interstate Commerce Act is solely for the information of the public, and is not necessary to the establishment of the rate; and hence, where a rate is known to the persons operating the railroad as a fixed rate, having a uniform character, and undertaking to treat all shippers alike in proportion to the distances shipped, then such rate is established, within the meaning of the section making discrimination a crime. United States v. Howell, 56 Fed. 21.

25. United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323.

26. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358.

Interstate freight rates are established when schedules thereof are regularly printed, filed with the interstate commerce commission, and kept open to public inspection by the carrier at its freight offices, although such rates may not be posted in public and conspicuous places, company failed to post a schedule of tariff rates as required by Interstate Commerce Act for the use of the public in every depot where passengers of freight are received for transportation, and a shipper in ignorance of such schedule, relying upon a schedule previously in force, contracted for shipment of grain, to his damage, he could recover of the railroad company therefor at common law.[27]

Prerequisite for Prosecution for Rebate.—Compliance with the requirements of § 6 of the act to regulate commerce of June 29, 1906, that copies of schedules and tariffs for the use of the public shall be "posted" in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, so as to be readily accessible to the public, is not essential to bring a tariff within the provision of such act making it a misdemeanor for any shipper knowingly to solicit, accept, or receive a rebate or concession whereby property is transported in interstate commerce at a less rate than that named in the tariffs "published and filed" by such carrier, as publication is a step in establishing rates, while posting is a duty arising from the fact that they have been established.[28]

Demurrage Charges.—A charge for demurrage on cars is not invalidated though the rules regarding such demurrage were not posted in two public places in the company's depot as required by the rules of the interstate commerce commission.[29]

§ 4135. Filing with Commission.—Every common carrier subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act is required to file with the interstate commerce commission copies of its schedules of rates, fares and charges which have been established and published in compliance with the requirements of the act, and to promptly notify the commission of all changes made in same.[30] In order to establish an interstate freight rate, under the Interstate Commerce Act as it stood in 1908, the carrier is bound to file the schedule with the interstate commerce commission.[31] On action for demurrage, failure to file tariffs or the filing of defective ones with the interstate commerce commission has no legal bearing on the right to recover the ordinary and usual charges.[32] A common carrier is not deprived of its right to make a charge for demurrage though the rules and tariffs are separately filed with the interstate commerce commission.[33]

as required by § 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, as amended by the Act of March 2, 1889, as posting is not essential to make rates legally operative, but is required only as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates actually in force. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

Interstate freight rates are established when a schedule thereof is filed by a carrier with the interstate commerce commission and copies are furnished by the railway company to its freight offices, although such rates may not be "posted," as required by § 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended March 2, 1889, c. 382, 25 Stat. 855 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3158], which is not made a condition precedent to the establishment and putting in force of the tariff of rates, but is a provision based upon the existence of an established rate, which has for its object the affording of special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates actually in force. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358.

27. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Henderson Elevator Co., 138 Ky. 220, 127 S. W. 779.

28. Prerequisite for prosecution for rebate.—United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323.

29. Demurrage charges.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Berwind, etc., Min. Co., 171 Ill. App. 302.

30. Filing copies with commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

31. Hunter v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 167 Mo. App. 624, 150 S. W. 733.

32. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Berwind, etc., Min. Co., 171 Ill. App. 302.

33. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Berwind, etc., Min. Co., 171 Ill. App. 302.

Agreements with Other Carriers.—It is also required that every such common carrier shall file with the commission copies of all contracts, agreements, or arrangements, with other common carriers in relation to any traffic affected by the provisions of the act.[34] Such carriers are required to file with the interstate commerce commission copies of their joint tariffs, which shall be made public by the carriers when directed by the commission, in so far as in the judgment of the commission it is deemed practicable, the commission being given power to prescribe the measure of publicity to be given and the places in which the joint tariffs shall be published. There is also a prohibition like the above of any advance of such joint rates except after ten days' notice, or any reduction except after three days' notice.[35] In a prosecution against certain interstate carriers for shipping certain freight at a ten-cent rate, when the published and filed rate was fifteen cents per hundredweight, evidence that the ten-cent rate had been published by defendant's connections and sent "broadcast," though not filed, was inadmissible as a matter of defense, since the charging of a rate less than the filed rate constitutes a concession to the shipper, in violation of the act, as a matter of law.[36]

Effect of Filing.—The mere filing of schedules of rates with the interstate commerce commission raises no interference that the commission agrees to such rates, or all the proposed conditions of shipment.[37] As the filing of schedules of rates raises no inference that the interstate commerce commission agreed to them, or the proposed conditions of shipment, the mere filing of a schedule by a railroad company, in view of the fact that when the schedule was filed the Commission had no authority to fix rates for future shipments, and no power to issue general orders to carriers, and in view of the Interstate Commerce Act providing that the initial carrier shall be liable for the negligence of any connecting carrier despite any contract receipt rule, or regulation to the contrary, will not validate a condition in such a schedule, limiting the carrier's liability for negligence by means of an agreed valuation of the goods shipped, and thus abrogate the provision of a state statute which makes such a contract void.[38] Where a railroad company filed two rates with the interstate commerce commission, the lower providing for an agreed valuation of live stock shipped, which condition was invalid, under the state law, for limiting the railroad company's liability for negligence, a decision that the shipper might recover despite the condition, while giving him all the benefits of the higher rate, is not erroneous in giving the shipper a less rate than required by law, because of the filing of the schedule of rates with the interstate commerce commission, for the validity of the agreement limiting the carrier's liability for negligence can not be assumed to have been approved by the commission, when invalid under the state law.[39]

34. Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

Agreements with other carriers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 459, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

35. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802.

36. Published but not filed.—United States v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., 187 Fed. 363.

37. Effect of filing.—Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

38. Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

39. Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

"We do not understand that the interstate commerce commission approves and adopts all rates and conditions contained in any schedule of rates filed by a common carrier. At the time when the shipment in question was made, the interstate commerce commission had no authority to fix rates for future shipments. It did have power, however, to determine upon the reasonableness of rates, when that question was brought before it. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co.,

§ 4136. Distributing in Offices of Agents.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act providing that a carrier, in order to establish an interstate rate, must file the schedule with the interstate commerce commission and publish the same, the carrier, to prove the establishment of an interstate rate for a particular station, is bound to prove that the printed schedule containing such rate had been furnished to that station, or to the agent in charge thereof; and proof that a printed copy of the schedule containing the rate was furnished to the carrier's depot and freight agent at another station, some six miles from the station in question, was insufficient.[40]

§ 4137. Construction of Schedule.—In construing classification sheets the intent of the framers as to the meaning of words used when it can be ascertained should be given effect, regardless of the intent of the shipper or of the local usages relating to the meaning of terms used therein.[41] When the plaintiff applied for cars for the transportation of oak cross ties, one of the defendant carriers had a joint rate to certain points, including the destination of the ties, applying to "lumber, car loads, all kinds." The other defendant carrier had a similar rate on "lumber, all kinds," but neither carrier had a specific rate on cross ties. "Lumber" being generally defined to include "any timber sawed or split for use," whether by maul, wedge, or the use of machinery in a mill, anything manufactured out of a log with saw, ax, maul, wedge, or machine, for building houses, bridges, fences, or railroads, after the product leaves the log for commercial use, it included the cross ties within such joint-rate schedules.[42] Showcases are "furniture" within the ordinary meaning of the word, which governs in the construction of tariff schedules published for the information of the public, and are included in a commodity rate on "furniture (new) all kinds."[43]

Agreement of Parties.—A carrier fixed certain rates for peaches in baskets covered with gauze, and other rates for peaches in baskets with wood covers. A shipper placed his peaches in gauze-covered baskets, and placed a layer of baskets on the floor of a car. He then nailed cross-pieces to the upright posts, and then laid a new floor on the crosspieces, just above the first tier of baskets, and then placed another tier of baskets on the new floor, and so on to the top of the car. It was held that he shipped his peaches in baskets covered with gauze and the carrier was entitled to the higher rate, notwithstanding an agreement with the agent for the lesser rate, on the theory that the peaches were shipped in baskets with wood covers.[44]

168 U. S. 144, 18 S. Ct. 45, 42 L. Ed. 414; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 17 S. Ct. 896, 42 L. Ed. 243. But it had no power to issue general orders in relation to carriers. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 16 S. Ct. 666, 40 L. Ed. 940." Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 153 Iowa 103, 133 N. W. 387.

40. Distributing in offices of agents.—Hunter v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 167 Mo. App. 624, 150 S. W. 733.

In order to establish an interstate freight rate, under the Interstate Commerce Act as it stood in 1908, the carrier is bound to promulgate and distribute the tariff in printed form in the offices of its agents. Hunter v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 167 Mo. App. 624, 150 S. W. 733.

Under Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, a carrier must file with the Commission its schedule of rates and distribute them that shippers may have access to them and ascertain their terms. Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Thisler, 133 Pac. 539, 90 Kan. 5.

The posting of copies of a carrier's schedule of rates at stations is not necessary to render a change in the rates effective, it is necessary that the schedules be distributed among the different stations at which it has effect, and merely filing the schedules with the commission is not sufficient. Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. (N. C.), 82 S. E. 1.

41. Construction of schedule.—Smith v. Great Northern R. Co., 15 N. Dak. 195, 107 N. W. 56.

42. American, etc., Timber Co. v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 175 Fed. 28.

43. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feintuch, 191 Fed. 482.

44. Agreement of parties.—Houseman v. Fargo, 124 N. Y. S. 1086.

§§ 4138-4145. Operation and Effect of Schedules—§ 4138. In General.—Where a carrier makes its schedules of rates and files them with the interstate commerce commission, which approves and promulgates them as required by the Interstate Commerce Act both the carrier and shipper must observe them, and any known departure therefrom will subject them to a fine.[45] Where a commodity rate is named in a tariff on a commodity and between specified points, the commodity rate is the lawful rate, though a class rate or some combination may make a lower rate.[46] Where a tariff has been established on a commodity for a through interstate shipment, as provided by the act, there can be no departure therefrom unless made according to law.[47]

Shipper's Right Therein.—Under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act which require railroad companies to adhere to their filed and published rates, a shipper who delivers property for carriage has a contract right to the rates and all privileges and facilities specified in the schedules then in force.[48]

§§ 4139-4141. As Standard Charge—§ 4139. In General.—It is now the established rule that a carrier can not depart to any extent from its published schedule of rates for interstate transportation on file without incurring the penalties of the statute.[49] Where a common carrier has established and published its rates and charges in compliance with the provisions of the section requiring that the schedule showing such rates shall be posted in every station where freight is received it shall be unlawful for the carrier to charge a greater or less compensation than is specified in such published schedule of rates and charges as may at the time be in force.[50] The Interstate Commerce Act provides for and prescribes a standard by comparison with which it may be deter-

45. Operation and effect of schedules.—Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526, citing Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Henderson Elevator Co., 138 Ky. 220, 127 S. W. 779; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Minn.), 143 N. W. 249; Melody v. Great Northern R. Co., 25 S. Dak. 606, 127 N. W. 543, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 727.

46. Pecos, etc., R. Co. v. Porter (Tex. Civ. App.), 156 S. W. 267.

47. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

48. Shipper's right therein.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 207 Fed. 733, reversing judgment on rehearing 200 Fed. 652.

49. As standard charge.—United States.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 37 L. Ed. 896, 13 S. Ct. 970; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor, 232 U. S. 508, 34 S. Ct. 380.

Kansas.—Christl v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Kan.), 141 Pac. 587.

South Carolina.—Hardaway v. Southern R. Co., 90 S. C. 475, 73 S. E. 1020, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 266.

An interstate carrier can charge no more and no less than the rate filed with and approved by the interstate commerce commission and published as the lawful rate, and a greater or less charge can not be justified on the ground of mistake. Aldrich v. Southern R. Co., 79 S. E. 316, 95 S. C. 427.

50. Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, 24 Stat. 379, c. 104, § 6, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, 25 Stat. 855, c. 382 (Interstate Commerce Act).

The act provides that when any common carrier shall have established and published its rates, fares and charges in compliance with the provisions of said section, it shall be unlawful for such common carrier to charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property, or for any services in connection therewith, than is specified in such published schedule of rates, fares and charges as may at the time be in force. Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802.

mined whether a given rate is or is not to be deemed unreasonable within the meaning of the act; and that standard is the rate adopted, printed, and kept posted, as required by the statute, by those engaged in the business, and subject to the effects of free competition. Courts and juries can not resort to any other standard.[51] Where the evidence showed that the rate as promulgated by the interstate commerce commission had not been posted in the station at the shipping point, and the carrier's agent there was not notified of its existence, but acted on the tariff sheet in his possession, contracting with reference thereto to carry hay for a shipper, the carrier was liable in an action by the shipper for charges in excess of such contract rate collected at the point of destination at the rate specified in the new tariff.[52]

Where Lesser Rate Contracted for.—If a rate quoted is less than the schedule rate approved by the interstate commerce commission and published, the shipper is liable for the full rate, whether he actually knows that the rate quoted is less than the schedule rate or not.[53] Where a freight rate has been duly fixed by the interstate commerce commission and posted by a railroad company, a lesser rate contracted for between the shipper and a company, whether intentional or through mistake, is not binding, and the company can hold the freight until the legal rate is paid.[54]

Where Rate Not Known to Carrier.—In a prosecution of an interstate carrier for shipping freight at a rate less than that filed with the interstate commerce commission, defendant could not be heard to say that it did not know of the filed rate, which it had established in accordance with the law, as a justification for its departure therefrom.[55]

Hay and Old Hay.—An interstate commerce rate for "hay" prevents a contract for another rate for "old hay."[56]

Under Provision as to Rebates.—Where fruit was being shipped from California to the eastern markets and several railroad companies published a guaranteed through rate on such goods, taking advantage of this rate, the shippers, at the end of the initial carrier's road, made agreements with the connecting carriers, whereby they obtained rebates on routing the goods over the latter roads; but the initial carrier, in order to avoid this, reserved the right to route the goods beyond its own lines, the court committed error in sustaining the action of the interstate commerce commission in ordering the initial carriers to desist from enforcing the new rule, as the payment of rebates was a violation of the commerce act, and there is nothing in § 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act, providing for the filing of through joint tariff rates when agreed upon, to prevent it. This statute should not be construed so as to prohibit a rule to prevent the obtaining of rebates.[57]

Through and Local Rates.—Schedules of joint rates are required to be filed with the commission. And when so filed it is unlawful to charge more or less than is named therein.[58] But this does not prevent the carrier from reserv-

51. Van Patten v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 81 Fed. 545.

52. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.), 86 S. W. 793.

53. Where lesser rate contracted for.—Baldwin, etc., Land Co. v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 58 Ore. 285, 114 Pac. 469.

54. Sutton v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 159 Mo. App. 685, 140 S. W. 76; Gerber v. Wabash R. Co., 63 Mo. App. 145.

Where a carrier in good faith quoted on an interstate shipment of sheep a lower rate than the tariff rate, and then demanded the schedule rate before shipment commenced, which was paid, it was not liable to the shipper for the difference between the rate quoted and the tariff rate. Baldwin, etc., Land Co. v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 58 Ore. 285, 114 Pac. 469.

55. Where rate not known to carrier.—United States v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., 187 Fed. 363.

56. Hay and old hay.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Bowles, 1 Ind. T. 250, 40 S. W. 899.

57. Under provision as to rebates.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

58. Schedule of joint rates.—Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 6, 1889. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Inter-

ing the right to route goods beyond his line, when necessary to break up rebating by connecting carriers.[59] Where it appeared that local freight rates had been filed with the interstate commerce commission, but there was no proof that no through rate had been filed, an agreement by a carrier to transport at a rate less than the local rates was not shown to be illegal, though, if no through rate had been filed, the local rate would control.[60]

Where Goods Reshipped.—All goods offered for shipment at a certain point must be carried at the established rate for such goods from such point, whether the shipment originates there or is delivered from a connecting carrier for reshipment.[61]

Demurrage and Storage Charges.—Where a carrier gave notice of the arrival of freight before it had so placed the cars that the freight could be delivered to the consignees, and thereafter attempted to charge storage while the cars remained in its possession as the carrier, in addition to the freight rates it was authorized to charge under its published tariffs, there was a willful violation of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, providing that no carrier shall charge, demand, or collect different compensation for service than the rates specified in the tariff filed.[62]

Damages for Charge in Excess of Schedule.—A shipper, who is charged by a railroad company on an interstate shipment a rate in excess of that established by the company and filed with the interstate commerce commission, is injured by such unlawful rate within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act without regard to the question of its reasonableness, and under § 16 the interstate commerce commission has power to make an award of damages therefor which may be enforced by action in a circuit court.[63]

Proceedings to Attack Schedule Rate.—The shipper has the right, by appropriate proceedings, to attack the rate or the classification and if either or both are held to be unreasonable can secure appropriate relief either by reparation order, or by suit in court, after such finding of unreasonableness. But so long as the tariff rate, based on value, remains operative it is binding upon the shipper and carrier alike and is to be enforced by the courts in fixing the rights and liabilities of the parties.[64]

§ 4140. Contractual Rate.—Common carriers having adopted classification sheets fixing transportation charges, and having filed them with the interstate commerce commission, are, as well as the shippers, bound thereby, and contracts between carriers and shippers are governed by the classification of the sheet in force at the date of the shipment.[65] An agreement whereby a carrier state Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

59. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

60. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614.

61. Where goods reshipped.—Bigbee, etc., Packet Co. v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 60 Fed. 545.

62. Demurrage and storage charges.—United States v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 185 Fed. 820.

63. Damages for charge in excess of schedule.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feintuch, 191 Fed. 482.

64. Proceedings to attack schedule rate.—Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor, 232 U. S. 508, 34 S. Ct. 380; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 33 S. Ct. 391; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 S. Ct. 397.

65. Contractual rate.—United States.—United States v. Standard Oil Co., 183 Fed. 223; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Segari & Co., 205 Fed. 998.

Alabama.—Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 24 So. 552, 43 L. R. A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936.

Georgia.—Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Swanson, 28 S. E. 601, 102 Ga. 754, 39 L. R. A. 275.

Iowa.—McManus v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 156 Iowa 359, 136 N. W. 769.

Kansas.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hubbell, 54 Kan. 232, 38 Pac. 266.

Kentucky.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 153 S. W. 198, 152 Ky. 145, petition accepts from the shipper less than the established and published rate violates the Interstate Commerce Act and is wholly illegal.[66] The rate is fixed by law and not by contract.[67] There is no provision excepting special contracts from the operation of the law. One rate is to be charged, and that the one fixed and published in the manner pointed out in the statute, and subject to change in the only way open by the statute. There is no provision for the filing of contracts with shippers, and no method of making them public defined in the statute. If the rates are subject to secret alteration by special agreement, then the statute will fail of its purpose to establish a rate duly published, known to all, and from which neither shipper nor carrier may depart.[68]

Made before Act Took Effect.—Where a carrier is engaged in business authorized by charter or legislation prior to Interstate Commerce Act, and so interblended with the transportation as to defy separation, the authority of regulating is limited to compelling just and reasonable rates.[69] for rehearing overruled 154 S. W. 371, 152 Ky. 837.

Massachusetts.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. York, etc., Co., 102 N. E. 366, 215 Mass. 36.

New Mexico.—Pecos Valley, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, 14 N. Mex. 410, 94 Pac. 951.

New York.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mogi, 128 N. Y. S. 643, 71 Misc. Rep. 412; judgment, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614, reversed in Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 112 N. Y. S. 964, 128 App. Div. 594.

North Carolina.—Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. (N. C.), 82 S. E. 1.

North Dakota.—Smith v. Great Northern R. Co., 15 N. Dak. 195, 107 N. W. 56.

Texas.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Redding, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 43 S. W. 1061; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Dumas (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 609. See, also, Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Trinity County Lumber Co., 1 Tex. Civ. App. 553, 21 S. W. 290; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 611, 23 S. W. 698.

Washington.—Fisher v. Great Northern R. Co., 49 Wash. 205, 95 Pac. 77.

The time during which a rate different from the rate agreed upon between the carrier and a shipper is established by the filing and publishing of such rate is excepted from the term of such contract by the acts of congress regulating commerce which are a part thereof. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

An interstate shipper is liable to pay the freight fixed by printed and published schedules of the initial carrier on file with the interstate commerce commission, notwithstanding any stipulations in the bill of lading to the contrary. Yorke Furniture Co. v. Southern R. Co. (S. C.), 78 S. E. 67.

Made before act took effect.—Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, entitled "An act to regulate commerce," abrogated all existing contracts with common carriers for special interstate commercial rates, and vested in the federal courts or tribunals specified therein exclusive jurisdiction to inquire into and adjust such interstate rates as are alleged to be unfair or discriminative. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, etc., Constr. Co., 41 Neb. 374, 59 N. W. 838.

Payment of schedule rate as prerequisite to recovery of goods.—24 Stat. 379, declares that, if any common carrier shall receive from any person a greater or less compensation for any service rendered than it receives from others for a like service, such carrier shall be guilty of unjust discrimination, which is declared to be unlawful. Held, that where plaintiff sued a railroad company to recover certain chattels without first paying freight charges thereon according to the company's published schedule, and plaintiff claimed an agreement whereby transportation charges were to be less than the published schedule, there could be no recovery, such contract being unlawful as to both parties. Church v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 85 N. W. 1001, 14 S. Dak. 443.

66. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543, citing Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

67. The interstate commerce law (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]) abrogated the right of the carrier and shipper to fix the freight rate by contract; the law fixing the rate. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. New Albany Box, etc., Co., 48 Ind. App. 647, 94 N. E. 906, 96 N. E. 28.

68. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671.

69. Made before act took effect.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

Where Rate Intentionally Misquoted.—The contract being against the public policy of the United States, as expressedly declared by these statutes, the fact that the shipper did not intend to violate the law is immaterial.[70] Where an unusually low rate has been given by the agent of several connecting carriers on a shipment of unusual character, and the initial carrier willfully misroutes the goods so that the shipper is compelled to pay a much higher rate, such initial carrier can not escape liability for damages on the ground that the rate given was in violation of interstate commerce law.[71]

Where Mistake in Quoting Rate.—A common carrier may exact the regular rate for an interstate shipment, as shown by its printed and published schedules on file with the interstate commerce commission and posted in the stations of such carrier, as required by the Interstate Commerce Act, although a lower rate was quoted by the carrier to the shipper, who shipped under the lower rate so quoted;[72] since otherwise, a discrimination in favor of the shipper would result, and this is so whether the mistaken rate is fixed in the bill of lading, or whether it was by parol agreement on a mistaken quotation of the rates made by the agent at point of shipment; and whether the shipper was ignorant of the actual published rate is immaterial.[73] A railroad company being prohibited by the interstate commerce act from charging any less freight on interstate traffic than prescribed by the interstate commerce commission for the route over which the shipment is actually carried, no contract, and no mistake in naming a wrong rate, can affect the right to collect such prescribed rate.[74] Where a carrier made an unintentional mistake in quoting a freight rate less than the regular tariff rate on file with the interstate commerce commission upon which the shipper fixed a price to be asked a customer for grain shipped and the difference between the quoted rate and the regular rate on file with the commission was subsequently collected, there could be no recovery by the shipper against the carrier; the Interstate Commerce Act binding both parties.[75] A contract between a station agent and a shipper for an interstate shipment was entered into on authority from railway headquarters, acting under the mistaken supposition that the shipment was to be within the state. The rate agreed on was less than the rate posted under the interstate commerce law. The contract could not be enforced.[76] A carrier can not contract for a different rate, directly or indirectly, as by payment under a mistake of fact as to weights, and settlement of such mistake.[77]

70. Where rate intentionally misquoted.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543.

71. Pond-Decker Lumber Co. v. Spencer, 30 C. C. A. 430, 86 Fed. 846.

72. Where mistake in quoting rate.—United States.—Judgment, 98 Tex. 352, 83 S. W. 800, 107 Am. St. Rep. 633, reversed in Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Henderson Elevator Co., 226 U. S. 441, 57 L. Ed. 290, 33 S. Ct. 176; Dunne v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 166 Mo. App. 372, 148 S. W. 997.

A carrier is not liable for the damages resulting from its mistake in quoting a rate less than the full published rate. Hamlen & Sons Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 212 Fed. 324.

Where a shipper of flour was, by a mistake of a responsible officer of plaintiff railroad company, given a rate which was less than that legally prescribed and shipped pursuant to such rate for two years, the railroad company, upon discovering the mistake was entitled to recover the difference between the legal rate and the rate paid by the shipper; equities in favor of the shipper constituting no defense. Central R. Co. v. Mauser, 88 Atl. 791, 241 Pa. 603.

73. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wolf, 100 Ark. 22, 139 S. W. 536.

74. Louisiana R., etc., Co. v. Holly, 127 La. 615, 53 So. 882.

75. Schenberger v. Union Pac. R. Co., 84 Kan. 79, 113 Pac. 433, 33 L. R. A., N. S., 391.

76. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Dumas (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 609.

77. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Spring River Stone Co., 169 Mo. App. 109, 154 S. W. 465.

Misrepresentation of Shipper.—Where joint tariff rates were adopted by connecting carriers, and filed with the interstate commerce commission, as required by the interstate commerce law, fixing a lower freight rate for narrow-gauge cars for use of railroads engaged in the carrying business than for those intended to be used for logging purposes, a bill of lading fixing the lower rate for cars intended to be used for logging purposes, procured through the shipper's misrepresentation that they were intended to be used in the carrying business, is not binding on the railroad company, and it is entitled to recover the higher rate from the consignee, since it would be guilty of a criminal offense, under the Interstate Commerce Act, in accepting a lower rate than that fixed in the schedule of rates filed with the commission.[78] The fact that it may be unlawful for carriers to make a difference in the rate for such cars will not prevent the railroad company from recovering the higher rate for the transportation of the cars in question, where the evidence shows such compensation to be reasonable.[79]

Shipper's Knowledge of Schedule Rate.—One who has obtained from a common carrier transportation of goods from one state to another at a rate, specified in the bill of lading, less than the published schedule rates filed with and approved by the interstate commerce commission, and in force at the time, whether or not he knew that the rate obtained was less than the schedule rate, is not entitled to recover the goods, or damages for their detention, upon the tender of payment of the amount of charges named in the bill of lading, or of any sum less than the schedule charges.[80]

Shipment Through Foreign Country.—A contract for shipment of goods from a foreign port to an inland point in the United States for a through rate does not necessarily violate the interstate commerce law, though the proportion of the through rate allowed for the carriage from the port of entry to the destination is less than the rate scheduled for freight originating at such port and carried to such destination.[81]

Shipment over Connecting Lines.—Where freight is shipped over connecting lines, which have agreed on a joint tariff of rates, in compliance with the Interstate Commerce Act, the delivering line must collect the interstate commerce rate, and not that named in the bill of lading.[82] A stipulation in a bill of lading for a greater or less rate or permitting the carrier to make a different routing under conditions not provided for in the schedules, by which the cost to the shipper is affected, is void, and affords no defense to an action by the shipper to recover a sum exacted in excess of the schedule rate.[83] A contract for the shipment of freight beyond the line of a receiving carrier, at a rate which it has furnished the commission, and which is less than the aggregate of the rates charged by the connecting carriers, is not invalid, where the receiving carrier, without intending to violate the act, fixed such rate on quotations made to it by the connecting carriers, one of which, in quoting its rate and that of a connecting line, by mistake fixed the rate for such connecting line at less than it charged.[84]

78. Contractual rate procured through misrepresentation of shipper.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Trinity County Lumber Co., 1 Tex. Civ. App. 553, 21 S. W. 290.

79. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Trinity County Lumber Co., 1 Tex. Civ. App. 553, 21 S. W. 290.

80. Shipper's knowledge of schedule rate.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628.

81. Shipment through foreign country.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Redding, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 43 S. W. 1061.

82. Shipment over connecting lines.—Where a carrier makes a contract for shipment of goods for a rate less than the interstate rate of the other lines over which it is forwarded, the delivering carrier may collect, not only the interstate rate, but the charges of the contracting line; such charges having been advanced by it to the connecting lines at the regular rates, in ignorance of the special contract. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Stoner, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 50, 23 S. W. 1020.

83. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Dickerson, 191 Fed. 705, affirming judgment, 187 Fed. 874.

84. Virginia, etc., Iron Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 98 Va. 776, 37 S. E. 310.

The agent of an interstate railway contracted with a shipper to transport live stock from a point in Arkansas to a point in Oklahoma. The shipments had to pass over the lines of the initial carrier and of another interstate carrier. The junction point was in Kansas. No through rate had ever been filed with the interstate commerce commission and published, but the initial carrier had on file and published an interstate rate on shipments from the point of origin of the shipments involved to the junction point, and the delivering carrier had on file and published a rate from the junction point to destination. The through rate contracted for by the initial carrier was less than the sum of the combined rates. Under the Interstate Commerce Act requiring the filing and publication of rates and forbidding interstate carriers from charging greater or less rates, the special contract was void, and the delivering carrier who on delivery of the consignment to it by the initial carrier had paid the freight charges of the initial carrier in accordance with its tariff was entitled on delivery of the shipments to the consignee to collect from him the freight charges so paid, and its freight charges in accordance with the tariff on file.[85]

Estoppel can not be based on an illegal contract; consequently the collection by an interstate carrier of a lesser rate than that contained in the public schedule, which is contrary to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, can not raise an estoppel, precluding the carrier from collecting the balance.[86]

Under Joint Schedule.—Where carriers have filed and published schedules of joint through rates, it is the right of a shipper to have his property transported upon the lines joining in such schedules and at the rates therein specified, and the carrier receiving it can not avoid its obligation by any contract inserted in its bill of lading.[87] An initial carrier which has become a party to a joint through rate for the transportation of property over its own and connecting lines between two points in different states, which rate has been filed and published as required by the act, can not lawfully transport property between such points at a less and unpublished rate over another route and with different connections.[88]

Shipment of Fruit.—Where the initial carrier guaranteed a through rate and had the privilege to route the goods over the roads of the connecting carriers, it was held that the fruit was a special business and had nothing in common with other freight; therefore, there was no unlawful discrimination be-

85. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Bell, 31 Okla. 238, 120 Pac. 987, 38 L. R. A., N. S., 351.

86. New York, etc., R. Co. v. York, etc., Co., 215 Mass. 36, 102 N. E. 366.

87. Under joint schedule.—Dickerson v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 187 Fed. 874; Wabash R. Co. v. Priddy, 101 Ind. 483, 101 N. E. 724.

Defendants' connecting carriers operated a through line from Kansas City to Spokane, and had filed a through rate on empty freight cars traveling on their own wheels of $90 per car in addition to freight earned by the use thereof in transit. Defendants and the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company operating a line from St. Louis to Kansas City had never published a joint free rate on such cars from St. Louis to Spokane, nor was the Missouri Pacific a party to any contract to transport plaintiff's cars from St. Louis to Spokane without charge other than the freight earned by such cars. Defendants had no line between St. Louis and Kansas City, but contracted to transport the cars from Kansas City to Spokane for a free rate. The fact that this rate was contrary to the rates filed with the interstate commerce commission having been discovered, the shippers were notified that the rate would not be adhered to before the cars were shipped, and defendants refused to deliver the cars without payment of the schedule rate. Held, that there was no authority for any rate on such shipment less than the joint rate from Kansas City to Spokane plus the rate from St. Louis to Kansas City. Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 95 Pac. 71, 49 Wash. 244.

An agreement with a single shipper for shipment over connecting lines having no joint through rate at less than the local rates for each road held void and not to prevent collecting the established rates by such carriers under Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 6, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, § 1. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 32 S. Ct. 316, 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, reversing judgment 99 Pac. 819, 79 Kan. 59.

88. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

tween the shippers, and the provision in the Interstate Commerce Act prohibiting unlawful discrimination was not applicable.[89]

Contract for Excursion Rates.—Where a carrier sells a return excursion ticket for interstate transportation at a rate duly scheduled and filed as required by the Interstate Commerce Act, to expire on a certain date three days later than allowed by the schedule, the carriage of the passenger during the three days, the mistakenly written expiration date of the ticket issued to the passenger, is not a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, since the erroneous issuance of a ticket in terms not conforming to the actual contract does not make an unlawful contract.[90]

Contract with Owner of Private Track.—An agreement by an interstate railroad carrier to accept less than its established and published rate by dividing the same with a shipper which built a private track over its own lands connected with the railroad company's line violates the Interstate Commerce Act, and is wholly illegal and unenforceable.[91]

Contract for Rebate.—Under this section of the Interstate Commerce Act a railroad's agreement to refund a part of rates lawfully charged and collected is in violation of law and unenforceable.[92]

Contract at Existing Rate for Fixed Time.—A contract between a carrier and a shipper to transport the latter's goods in interstate or foreign commerce, at the then established rate, for a definite time, is ineffective after a higher rate has been filed and published as required by law.[93]

Milling in Transit Agreement.—In a suit against a railroad for breach of a contract to maintain rates from a factory to competitive points not exceeding the rates from two other places, and providing for a milling in transit agreement whereby the railroad was to credit on the freight charges on manufactured goods any freight on raw material shipped to the factory, the railroad filed a plea alleging that when the contract was made it was a common carrier engaged in interstate as well as domestic commerce, that it had then caused to be published schedules showing rates charged, that the rates specified in the contract were less than the published schedules, and that the contract was in violation of the act, and a further plea alleging in addition that the published schedule had been filed as required by the act. General demurrers were filed to each plea, and also a special demurrer to the former plea, on the ground that it was not shown that the railroad could not lawfully have amended its schedules so that it could lawfully have performed the contract, or that the schedules had been filed with the interstate commerce commission as required by the act, and to the latter plea on the ground that it was not shown that if the railroad should perform the contract it would be required to make any unreasonable preferences. The demurrers, general and special, were erroneously sustained.[94]

89. Shipment of fruit.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

90. Contract for excursion rates.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Fleming, 148 Ky. 473, 146 S. W. 1110; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Roberts, 148 Ky. 478, 146 S. W. 1113.

91. Contract with owner of private track.—Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543.

92. Contract for rebate.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Coquillard Wagon Works' Assignees, 147 Ky. 530, 144 S. W. 1080.

93. Contract at existing rate for fixed time.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

94. Milling in transit agreement.—Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Laurel Cotton Mills, 91 Miss. 166, 45 So. 982.

"We think the cases of Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075, and Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358, referred to by the learned counsel for the appellant, shed strong collateral light upon this inquiry, whilst not on exactly the same case on their facts." Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Laurel Cotton Mills, 91 Miss. 166, 45 So. 982.

A contract by a railroad company to charge no greater rate from a certain factory to competitive points than was charged from certain other places, and to maintain a "milling in transit" agreement, is not illegal on its face, in the absence of any showing that the rates fixed by the contract were different from

Actual Weight of Goods.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act, prohibiting discrimination by special rate or device, a contract by a carrier for transportation for a less compensation than the published rate is invalid, and where at the time of a shipment neither the carrier nor the shipper had any actual knowledge of the actual weight of the goods, and the carrier received compensation based on a specified weight while the goods actually weighed more, it could recover the balance according to the schedule of rates established and filed.[95] Where a carrier receives goods for interstate shipment under the Interstate Commerce Act providing that the prescribed rates shall be charged on the basis of the marked capacity of the car, and its agent by mistake quotes and fixes a rate for a car based on the shipments' actual weight, the carrier's lien is for the amount fixed by the published rates, and can be discharged and the consignee become entitled to the goods only by payment or tender of such amount.[96]

Where Others May Make Same Contract.—A contract by a railroad company with a shipper to ship his horses to another state on a special through stock train, was not an agreement to perform a special service in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act every shipper being entitled to the same privilege upon request.[97]

Where Schedule Changed after Contract Made.—Where a contract for the interstate shipment of freight is illegal in being lower than the established schedules, as prohibited by the Interstate Commerce Act, a subsequent lowering of the rate to that specified in the contract does not validate the contract, and render the carrier liable for a breach thereof, on a future increase in the rate, and its refusal to carry the goods for the agreed rate.[98]

Purchase and Sale of Goods.—A carrier engaged in interstate commerce, which is not specially authorized to do so by its charter or existing legislation prior to the interstate commerce act, violates the provisions of such act, that the published rates must be adhered to, and prohibiting undue or unreasonable discriminations, and preferences, or rebates, in substance, if not in form, by buying, transporting and selling a commodity, even to complete a contract for the commodity sold, when the stipulated price does not fully cover the cost price, delivery and published tariff rates. Such prohibitions would be rendered wholly ineffective by deciding that a carrier may avoid those prohibitions by making a contract for the sale of a commodity stipulating for the payment of a fixed price in the future, and thereby acquiring the power during the life of the contract to continue to execute it, although a violation of the act to regulate commerce might arise from doing so.[99] Because no express prohibition against a carrier who engages in interstate commerce becoming a dealer in commodities those approved by the commissions, or that rates had been submitted to the commissions at all before the contract was made. Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 37 So. 134, 84 Miss. 339, 66 L. R. A. 453.

95. Actual weight of goods.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mogi, 128 N. Y. S. 643, 71 Misc. Rep. 412.

96. Actual weight instead of car capacity.—Where a carrier receives goods for interstate shipment under the Interstate Commerce Act providing that the prescribed rates shall be charged on the basis of the marked capacity of the car, and its agent by mistake quotes and fixes a rate for a car of eighty thousand pounds capacity, based on the shipments' actual weight of forty thousand pounds, the carrier's lien is for the amount fixed by the published rates, and can be discharged and the consignee become entitled to the goods only by paying or tender of such amount; since, otherwise, a discrimination in favor of the shipper would result, and this is so whether the mistaken rate is fixed in the bill of lading, or whether it was by parol agreement on a mistaken quotation of the rates made by the agent at point of shipment; and whether the shipper was ignorant of the actual published rate is immaterial. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wolf, 100 Ark. 22, 139 S. W. 536.

97. Where others may make same contract.—Kirby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 242 Ill. 418, 90 N. E. 252.

98. Where schedule changed after contract made.—Southern R. Co. v. Wilcox, 99 Va. 394, 39 S. E. 144.

99. Purchase and sale of goods.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

moving in such commerce is found in the act, it does not follow that the provisions which are expressed in that act should not be applied and be given their lawful effect. Even, therefore, if the result of applying the prohibitions as we have interpreted them will be practically to render it difficult, if not impossible, for a carrier to deal in commodities, this affords no ground for relieving us of the plain duty of enforcing the provisions of the statute as they exist.[1] As the prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act is ever operative, even if the facts established that at the particular time the contract was made, considering the then cost of coal and other proper items, the net published tariff of rates would have been realized by the carrier from the contract, which is not the case, it is apparent that the deliveries under the contract came under the prohibition of the statute whenever, for any cause, such as the enhanced cost of the coal at the mines, an increase in the cost of the ocean carriage, etc., the gross sum realized was not sufficient to net the carrier its published tariff of rates. This must be the case in order to give vitality to the prohibitions of the interstate commerce act against the acceptance at any time by a carrier of less than its published rates.[2]

Contract Unenforceable.—The rule that an illegal contract will not be enforced at the suit of either party, and that the law leaves each party where it finds him, is applicable to a contract for a charge of a rate different from the schedule.[3] It being set up in defense that by reason of a large claim against the carrier, arising out of a similar preceding contract between same parties, from which it was released as part consideration for making the contract now considered, and that this caused the price largely to exceed in reality the cost of the coal with the published rates added thereto, it was held: Concluding, therefore, that both the contracts made by the carrier with the purchaser were contrary to public policy, and void because in conflict with the prohibitions of the act to regulate commerce, it obviously follows that such contracts were not susceptible of being enforced by the purchaser, and afforded no legal basis for a claim of the purchaser against the carrier, and therefore this was no valid defense to the charge of infringing these prohibitions of the statute.[4] A contract between plaintiff, a lumber company, and defendant, an interstate railroad company, by which plaintiff agreed to build a private track on its own lands connecting with defendant's line, and to ship all of its product, with a certain exception, over defendant's road, in consideration of which defendant agreed to furnish cars and to carry plaintiff's product at certain rates differing from its established and published rates, was an entire and indivisible agreement, and being illegal as in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, no action can be maintained for its breach by defendant for refusing to furnish cars.[5]

Estoppel to Assert Invalidity of Contract.—The act of the agent of a railroad company in contracting to carry goods at an illegal rate will not estop the carrier from repudiating such contract, as an estoppel can not be founded upon an illegal act.[6]

1. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

2. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

3. Contract unenforceable.—Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543.

4. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

5. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543.

6. Estoppel to assert invalidity of contract.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. New Albany Box, etc., Co., 48 Ind. App. 647, 94 N. E. 906, 96 N. E. 28.

Under the Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]), a person dealing with a carrier is as effectually bound by the law and the orders of the commerce commission, as to both freight and passenger tariffs, as is the carrier itself, and neither is estopped to assert the illegality of a contract made in violation of the act and orders of the commission. Melody v. Great Northern R. Co., 25 S. Dak. 606, 127 N. W. 543, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 727.

Effect on Action for Breach of Contract.—The illegality of a contract for the interstate shipment of freight at a less rate than specified in the printed schedules of rates, which is prohibited by the interstate commerce act, prevents the recovery by the shipper for a breach thereof.[7]

Right of Passenger to Ride on Ticket.—A ticket issued to a passenger by a carrier in violation of the terms and conditions of orders of the interstate commerce commission confers no right to passage, and is not required to be accepted by the conductor of a train, and such passenger may be ejected without liability by the carrier to damages.[8]

Carrier's Lien.—Whatever may be the rate agreed upon, the carrier's lien on the goods is, by force of the act of congress, for the amount fixed by the published schedule of rates and charges, and this lien can be discharged, and the consignee can become entitled to the goods, only by the payment, or tender of payment, of such amount.[9]

Recovery of Excess of Schedule over Contract Rate.—In interstate commerce, the freight charges are fixed by the rates filed and posted in accordance with the act and where a carrier quotes a lower rate and collects it, it may thereafter recover the difference between the rate collected and that which should have been collected.[10] And where the published rate is collected at the destination, the difference between the rate agreed upon and the published tariff can not be recovered in an action by the shipper.[11] On an interstate shipment a given rate, less than the lawful schedule rate, was quoted to the shipper by the agent of the railroad at the point of shipment. On the arrival of the goods at their destination the road exacted the schedule rate, whilst the shipper insisted he was entitled to the lower and quoted rate. And a recovery of the excess collected over the quoted rate was allowed by a court of the state of Texas. Reversing the judgment, it was here held that the rate fixed in the schedule filed pursuant to the act to regulate commerce was controlling, that it was beyond the power of the carrier to depart from such rates in favor of any shipper, and that the erroneous quotation of rates made by the agent of the railroad did not justify recovery, since to do so would be in effect enabling the shipper, whose duty it was to ascertain the published rate, to secure a preference over other shippers, contrary to the act to regulate commerce.[12]

Burden of Proof.—Though the parties to an interstate transportation contract can not, by agreement, mistake, or otherwise, fix a rate different from any established under the Interstate Commerce Act, nevertheless proof, in an action for overcharge, that a rate less than that charged by the carrier at destination was contracted for and inserted by the carrier's agent in the bill of lading, and that plaintiff paid the increased rate at destination under protest, was sufficient to establish a prima facie case, the burden then shifting to the carrier to show that the higher rate had been established in accordance with the requirements of the Interstate Commerce Act.[13] In an action against a final carrier for damages caused by its failure to deliver cattle upon their arrival of destination, and demanding the payment of additional freight in excess of that contracted for by the initial carrier, where the petition alleged a valid and binding contract on the

7. Effect on action for breach of contract.—Southern R. Co. v. Wilcox, 99 Va. 394, 39 S. E. 144.

8. Right of passenger to ride on ticket.—Melody v. Great Northern R. Co., 25 S. Dak. 606, 127 N. W. 543, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 727.

9. Carrier's lien.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. Ed. 1011, 26 S. Ct. 628; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802.

10. Recovery of excess of schedule over contract rate.—Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 24 So. 552, 43 L. R. A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936; Georgia Railroad v. Creety, 5 Ga. App. 424, 63 S. E. 528.

11. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Bowles, 1 Ind. T. 250, 40 S. W. 899; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Holmes, 90 Pac. 22, 18 Okla. 92.

12. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

13. Burden of proof.—Hunter v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 167 Mo. App. 624, 150 S. W. 733.

part of the initial carrier and the connecting lines to convey the cattle to their destination, it was not incumbent on plaintiff to allege or prove that the amount paid as freight was the full amount that defendant should have collected under published rates fixed by the interstate commerce commission; but the burden was on defendant to prove that a rate had been fixed by the commission between the points of shipment, that such rate had been published, and that defendant only demanded the amount so fixed and published.[14] Any departure by an interstate railroad company from the demurrage charges fixed by its filed and published schedules constitutes a misdemeanor.[15]

Contract without Limitation of Liability.—A special contract for an interstate shipment without limitation of the carrier's liability to an agreed value has no binding force where the carrier's tariffs on file with the interstate commerce commission graduate the rates according to declared value and limit the carrier's liability accordingly.[16]

§ 4141. Presumed Legal Rate.—A freight charge made by a common carrier which conforms to the schedule of rates required to be fixed and published by the Interstate Commerce Act is prima facie a reasonable charge.[17] By requiring the fixing and publication of freight rates to be charged by common carriers, the Interstate Commerce Act supplies prima facie evidence of the contract rate, which can only be overcome by averment in avoidance thereof.[18]

Presumed Reasonably Low Rate.—No presumption of law that a freight rate upon a particular commodity is reasonably low exists because such rate has been duly published and filed by the carrier with the interstate commerce commission.[19]

Demurrage Charges.—Where the charges of a railroad for demurrage are based on tariffs filed with the interstate commerce commission, as provided by the Interstate Commerce Act, such charges as to cars engaged in interstate commerce are conclusively presumed reasonable in a state court, in the absence of any action of the commission thereon.[20]

§ 4142. As Constructive Notice to Shipper.—Where a carrier has promulgated its rates under the interstate commerce law, and has complied with the statute by filing a copy of the schedule with the commission, deposited a copy with its agent, and posted copies in two conspicuous places in the depot, the shipper is presumed to know the existence of the schedules and the rates contained therein.[21] The shipper as well as the carrier is bound to take notice of the

14. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Burgess Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 90 S. W. 189.

15. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 513, 188 Fed. 879, affirming judgments, United States v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 184 Fed. 543, and United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 184 Fed. 546.

16. Contract without limitation of liability.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, 34 S. Ct. 556; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 233 U. S. 182, 34 S. Ct. 558.

17. Presumed legal rate.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614.

Rates fixed and published by the interstate commerce commission must be considered reasonable and must stand until the rate is changed upon application to the commission. Wabash R. Co. v. Priddy, 101 Ind. 483, 101 N. E. 724.

18. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614.

19. Presumed reasonably low rate.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

20. Demurrage charges.—Erie R. Co. v. Wanaque Lumber Co., 75 N. J. L. 878, 69 Atl. 168.

21. As constructive notice to shipper.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Faulkner (Ark.), 164 S. W. 763; Christl v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Kan.), 141 Pac. 587; Mires v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 134 Mo. App. 379, 114 S. W. 1052.

Every shipper is presumed to know the schedules for interstate rates fixed by the interstate commerce commission, and whether the rates charged by the carrier were the regular tariff rates or not. Wyrick v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. App. 406.

A shipper is chargeable with knowledge of the lawful rate on his shipment where it has been published and filed as required by law, where it is accessible to filed tariff rates and that so long as they remain operative they are conclusive as to the rights of the parties, in the absence of facts or circumstances showing an attempt at rebating or false billing.[22]

A shipper is conclusively presumed to know the published rates of an interstate carrier, and may not rely on the representations of the carrier's agent.[23]

Rate Based on Value of Freight.—A shipper's knowledge that the carrier's rate was based upon the value of the shipment is to be presumed where this plainly appears from the terms of the bill of lading and from the published rates on file with the interstate commerce commission.[24]

§ 4143. As to Joint Rates.—A tariff rate between two points on different railroads, filed and published by one company and concurred in by the other, which does not designate any particular route, must be held as a matter of law to apply to the natural and direct route over the lines of the two companies between the designated points, and to constitute the lawful rate over such route.[25] Nothing in the provisions of the act requiring joint traffic rates, when agreed upon, to be filed with the interstate commerce commission, and made public when required, and empowering the commission to prescribe forms of schedules of such rates, forbids the adoption by common carriers, as part of an agreement for a through rate from California to the East for oranges and other citrus fruits, of a rule under which the right of routing beyond its own terminal is reserved to the initial carrier as the condition of guarantying the through rates to the shipper, where such rule has served, as was intended, to break up rebating by the connecting lines, and, in its practical operation, the actual routing is generally conceded to the shipper, and his

the public, unless he was misled after using proper diligence to ascertain such rate. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305.

"The supreme court of the state in this case affirmed the instruction of the trial court upon which the case was given to the jury and held an instruction that the oral contract between the carrier and shipper is binding unless it is affirmatively shown that the written agreement, based upon the filed schedules, was brought to the knowledge of the shipper and its terms assented to by him is erroneous, as it ignores the terms of shipment set forth in the schedules and permits a recovery upon the contract made in violation thereof in a case where there was no proof that there was an attempt to violate the published rates by a fraudulent agreement showing rebating or false billing of the property, and no circumstances which would take the case out of the rulings heretofore made by this court as to the binding effect of such filed schedules, and the duty of the shipper to take notice of the terms of such rates and the obligation to be bound thereby in the absence of the exceptional circumstances to which we have referred." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, 34 S. Ct. 556.

22. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, 34 S. Ct. 556; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 33 S. Ct. 391; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 S. Ct. 397; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cramer, 232 U. S. 490, 34 S. Ct. 383; Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor, 232 U. S. 508, 34 S. Ct. 380.

23. Hamlen & Sons Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 212 Fed. 324.

24. Rate based on value of freight.—Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 33 S. Ct. 148.

Having the notice which follows from the filed and published regulations, as required by the statute and the order of the interstate commerce commission, the shipper might have declared the value of his luggage, paid the excess tariff rate and thus secured the liability of the carrier to the full amount of the value of his baggage, or he might, for the purpose of transportation, have valued it at $100 and received free transportation and liability to that extent only, or, as he did, he might have made no valuation of his baggage, in which event the rate and the corresponding liability would have automatically attached. Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts erred in deciding that the Interstate Commerce Act did not in anywise change the common-law rule, applicable in Massachusetts, that regulations of this character, limiting the amount of recovery for baggage lost, must be brought home to the knowledge of the shipper and assented to or circumstances shown from which assent might be implied. Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

25. As to joint rates.—Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 172, 179 Fed. 614.

requests to divert shipments en route are usually allowed.[26]

§ 4144. As to Privileges and Facilities.—Under the provision that the schedule printed as by any common carrier shall plainly state all privileges or facilities granted or allowed and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect or determine the value of the service rendered the passenger, shipper or consignee, a provision in a passenger's ticket sold by a railroad company making it nontransferable, where no such limitation is shown in the company's schedule, is unlawful and void, and the company can not maintain a suit in equity based on such provision to enjoin transfers of such tickets.[27] Under the Act of June 29, 1906, prohibiting a carrier from extending to any shipper facilities in transportation, except such as are specified in the tariff, a shipper can not, under a special contract with a carrier, claim special facilities in transportation, such as that the freight be transferred in a single, covered express wagon by itself, so that, in an action by a shipper based on such special contract, the express company could show as a defense that the tariff rates applicable did not provide for such privileges.[28]

As to Stop-Over Privileges.—Where the tariff filed fails to provide for stop-over of shipments of syrup, an agreement for such stop-over is invalid because the same service could not be demanded by other persons.[29]

§ 4145. As to Contract for Exemption from Liability.—If the limitation of liability for baggage is required to be filed in the carrier's tariffs, the shipper is bound by such limitation.[30] The schedules are required to state, among other things, in naming certain charges, "all other charges which the commission may require, all privileges or facilities granted or allowed and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the service rendered to the passenger, shipper, or consignee." The question then is, does the limitation as to liability for baggage based upon the requirement to declare its value when more than $100 was to be recovered, come within that provision? The ordinary signification of the terms used in the act would cover such requirements as are here made for the amount of recovery for baggage lost by the carrier.[31]

An unreasonable contract limiting the carrier's liability on an interstate shipment of horses is invalid though the carrier had filed schedule of rates and contracts with the interstate commerce commission.[32]

§ 4146. Change of Rates.—It is not a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act for a railroad company to make a difference in its rates for the transportation of merchandise between different seasons of the year, carrying the same articles at a lower rate during the summer, or dull, months, than during the winter, or busy, months.[33]

26. Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 132 Fed. 829, reversed in 26 S. Ct. 330, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585.

27. As to privileges and facilities.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Hamburger, 155 Fed. 849.

28. Winn v. American Exp. Co., 149 Iowa 259, 128 N. W. 663.

29. As to stop-over privileges.—Interstate Commerce Act, June 29, 1906, § 6; Bergin v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 150 S. W. 1184.

30. As to contract for exemption from liability. — Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

31. Boston, etc., Railroad v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, 34 S. Ct. 526.

Where a carrier failed to comply with the Interstate Commerce Act, requiring the posting of a schedule of rates at all stations, etc., a limitation of liability in an interstate shipment, recited to be in consideration of reduced rates, was void for want of consideration, as the carrier had under the circumstances but one rate. Griffin v. Wabash R. Co., 115 Mo. App. 549, 91 S. W. 1015.

32. Blair v. Wells Fargo & Co., 155 Iowa 190, 135 N. W. 615.

33. Change of rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 409.

Notice.—The act forbids any advance or reduction in rates, fares, and charges, established and published, except upon public notice, of which changes the commission shall be notified.[34] It is provided that reduction in such published rates, fares or charges shall only be made after three days' public notice to be given in the same manner that notice of an advance in rates must be given.[35]

Presumptions.—There is no presumption of wrong arising from a change of rates by a carrier.[36] That a railroad company increased a rate from what it had previously been raises no presumption that the new rate is unjust or unreasonable.[37] Nor does it justify the commission in putting them back to what they had been, without regard to whether that could be properly said of them.[38]

Power of Commission.—The withdrawal by carriers' tariffs of shippers' precooling privileges for which a fixed charge was made and approved by order of the interstate commerce commission, affects a rate and the commission is acting within its powers in ordering the cancellation of the withdrawal and requiring the carriers to conform to the prior order.[39]

Awarding Reparation.—The interstate commerce commission has power to determine the reasonableness of rates, and likewise it is authorized to award reparation, and in both respects, where the reparation arises from a re-establishment of rates, its conclusions, being administrative, are final and conclusive, unless the commission has in some particular material to the controversy exceeded its prescribed functions.[40] Where the interstate commerce commission, in readjusting freight rates, awarded reparation in certain cases involving rates on the Pacific Coast, but omitted to award reparation in another case for the reason that it involved an initial adjustment of territory or a very material readjustment of territory from points within which it was deemed proper that differentials should be allowed on shipments eastward over the coast rates, such readjustment of territory constituted a sufficient reason for the commission's action, which was therefore conclusive.[41] Where an order of the interstate commerce commission, readjusting territory and providing for additional differentials, merely awarded that Pacific Coast rates with their differentials as fixed by the commission continue until the new schedule from the particular zones should become operative, and that the zone shippers were not entitled to the additional reparation on account of shipments made previous to the order establishing the new differentials, such order, in so far as it denied reparation, did not constitute real discrimination.[42]

34. Notice. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802.

35. Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. Ed. 910, 15 S. Ct. 802. See, also, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

36. Presumption upon change of rates. —Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

37. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 705, 28 S. Ct. 493.

There is no presumption of wrong arising from a change of rates by a carrier. Judgment, 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

38. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

39. Power of commission.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 34 S. Ct. 291.

40. Awarding reparation. — Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 193 Fed. 924, 113 C. C. A. 552, citing Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

41. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 193 Fed. 924; 113 C. C. A. 552.

42. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 193 Fed. 924, 113 C. C. A. 552.

§ 4147. Payment of Charges for Transportation.—Medium of Payment.—A carrier engaged in interstate commerce can not lawfully charge, collect, or receive anything but money for transportation on its road since the enactment of the Act of June 29, 1906, prohibiting any carrier from demanding, collecting, or receiving a greater or less or different compensation for the transportation of persons or property, or for any service in connection therewith, than that specified in its published schedule of rates.[43] It is expressly prohibited to any carrier, unless otherwise provided, to demand, collect, or receive "a greater or less or different compensation" for the transportation of persons or property, or for any service in connection therewith, than the rates, fares, and charges specified in the tariff filed and in effect at the time. It can not be supposed that this change was without a distinct purpose on the part of congress. The words "or different," looking at the context, can not be regarded as superfluous or meaningless. The words of the act, therefore, must be taken to mean that a carrier engaged in interstate commerce can not charge, collect, or receive for transportation on its road anything but money.[44] The legislative department intended that all who obtained transportation on interstate lines should be treated alike in the matter of rates, and that all who availed themselves of the services of the railway company with certain specified exceptions, should be on a plane of equality. Those ends can not be met otherwise than by requiring transportation to be paid for in money, which has a certain value, known to all, and not in commodities or services, or otherwise than in money.[45] A state statute authorizing a railway company incorporated under the laws of the state to issue transportation in payment for printing and advertising must give way, so far as interstate transportation is concerned, before the provisions of the act to regulate commerce under which a carrier can accept nothing but money in exchange for interstate transportation.[46] Where a carrier receives a shipper's note in payment of freight charges for shipments in interstate commerce, it receives a different compensation from that which the law authorizes, to wit, money, in violation of the act.[47]

Payment in Advertising.—The acceptance of advertising by a carrier in lieu of money in payment of interstate transportation furnished to the publisher, his employees, and the immediate members of his and their families, violates the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, the act prohibiting the furnishing of interstate transportation for a less or different compensation than that specified in the carrier's published rates.[48]

Payment of Existing Debt.—Where a carrier owes an ascertained sum of money, which is a legally enforceable debt, it is not a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act for it to pay such debt by carriage done for the creditor at its legally established rates.[49]

Release of Claim for Damages.—An interstate carrier can not make a valid contract to issue annual passes for life in consideration of a release of a claim for damages, since the enactment of the act, expressly prohibiting any carrier

43. Payment of charges.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671, reversing decree 118 S. W. 982, 133 Ky. 652; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. Ed. 305, 31 S. Ct. 272.

44. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 671.

45. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. Ed. 305, 31 S. Ct. 272.

46. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. Ed. 305, 31 S. Ct. 272, affirming judgment in 163 Fed. 114.

47. United States v. Sunday Creek Co., 194 Fed. 252.

48. Payment in advertising.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. Ed. 305, 31 S. Ct. 272, affirming judgment in 163 Fed. 114.

49. Payment of existing debt.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 128 Fed. 59, decree modified New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

from demanding, collecting, or receiving "a greater or less or different compensation" for the transportation of persons or property, or for any service in connection therewith, than that specified in its published schedule of rates.[50]

§ 4148. Enjoining Enforcement of Rates.—The interstate commerce commission having been given exclusive jurisdiction in the first instance to determine reasonableness of interstate rates by the Interstate Commerce Act, shippers can not maintain a suit in equity to prevent the filing of enforcement of a schedule of rates, or a change to unjust or unreasonable rates, pending determination of the reasonableness thereof by the commission.[51]

Under Provision for Recovery of Damages.—Section 9 of the act provides that persons claiming to be damaged may make their complaint either to the commission in the manner provided in the act, or by bringing suit on their own behalf for the recovery of damages for which such carrier may be liable under the provisions of the act in any district or circuit court of competent jurisdiction; and such persons shall not have the right to pursue both of these remedies, and must elect which of the two methods of procedure herein provided for they will adopt. This does not warrant the conclusion that it was the purpose of congress to confer power upon courts primarily to relieve from the duty of enforcing the established rate by finding that the same, as to particular persons, was so unreasonable as to be unlawful, and to prevent its enforcement by injunction.[52]

§ 4149. Charges of Connecting Carriers.—Where No Joint Rate Established.—Shipments over connecting lines must, under the Interstate Commerce Act take the lawfully established rate on each line where there is no established joint rate.[53] The defendants, connecting carriers, operated a through line from Kansas City to Spokane, and had filed a through rate on empty cars traveling on their own wheels of ninety dollars per car in addition to freight earned by the use thereof in transit. The defendants and the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company operating a line from St. Louis to Kansas City had never published a joint free rate on such cars from St. Louis to Spokane, nor was the Missouri Pacific a party to any contract to transport the plaintiffs cars from St. Louis to Spokane without charge other than the freight earned by such cars. The defendants had no line between St. Louis and Kansas City, but contracted to transport the cars from Kansas City to Spokane for a free rate. The fact that this rate was contrary to the rates filed with the interstate commerce commission having been discovered, the shippers were notified that the rate would not be adhered to before the cars were shipped, and the defendants refused to deliver the cars without payment of the schedule rate. The court held that there was no authority for any rate on such shipment less than the joint rate from Kansas City to Spokane plus the rate from St. Louis to Kansas City.[54]

Duty to Establish Joint Rates.—One carrier is not compelled to make a joint tariff rate with another carrier, but may insist upon charging its local rates for all transportation over its lines.[55] Where two carriers owning connecting 50. Release of claim for damages.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. Ed. 297, 31 S. Ct. 265, 34 L. R. A., N. S. 671, reversing 133 Ky. 652, 118 S. W. 982.

51. Enjoining enforcement of rates.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Macon Grocery Co., 166 Fed. 206, 92 C. C. A. 114.

52. Under provision for recovery of damages.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Macon Grocery Co., 166 Fed. 206, 92 C. C. A. 114, citing Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

53. Connecting carriers.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316, reversing judgment 79 Kan. 59, 99 Pac. 819.

54. Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

55. Duty to establish joint rates.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912; Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

lines unite in a joint through tariff, they form for the connecting lines practically a new and independent line.[56]

Competing Carriers.—The only principle by which it is possible to enforce the whole statute is the construction that competition which is real and substantial, and exercises a potential influence on rates to a particular point, brings into play the dissimilarity of circumstance and condition provided by the statute, and justifies the lesser charge to the more distant and competitive point than to the nearer and noncompetitive place, and that this right is not destroyed by the mere fact that incidentally the lesser charge to the competitive point may seemingly give a preference to that point, and the greater rate to the noncompetitive point may apparently engender a discrimination against it.[57]

§§ 4150-4154. Interstate Commerce Commission—§ 4150. In General.—The interstate commerce commission is a corporate body.[58]

Executive, Legislative or Judicial.—The interstate commerce commission is purely an administrative body.[59] It is true it may exercise and must exercise quasi judicial duties, but its functions are defined, and, in the main, explicitly directed, by the acts creating it, and it is not the final judge of its own jurisdiction.[60] The power given to the commission is the power to execute and enforce, not to legislate. The power given is partly judicial, partly executive and administrative, but not legislative.[61] But see elsewhere.[62]

Creation and Organization.—By the eleventh section a commission is created and established, to be known as the interstate commerce commission, and to be composed of five commissioners, appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate.[63] Whatever may be the power of congress, it did not attempt to do more than to regulate the interstate business of common carriers, and the primary purpose for which the commission was established was to enforce the regulations which congress had imposed.[64]

§ 4151. Salaries and Expenses.—The act to regulate commerce as amended March 2, 1889, provides that all of the expenses of the commission shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by

56. New line established.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 52 Fed. 912; Coeur D'Alene, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 49 Wash. 244, 95 Pac. 71.

57. Competing carriers.—"We say 'seemingly' on the one hand and 'apparently' on the other, because in the supposed cases the preference is not 'undue,' or the discrimination 'unjust.' This is clearly so when it is considered that the lesser charge, upon which both the assumption of preference and discrimination is predicated, is sanctioned by the statute, which causes the competition to give rise to the right to make such lesser charge." East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516, quoted in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 117 Fed. 741.

58. Interstate commerce commission.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

59. Executive, legislative or judicial.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

60. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

61. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

62. Under Amendment of 1906.—See ante, "Under Amendment of 1906," § 4062.

63. Creation and organization.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998. See, also, Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

64. Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

the chairman of the commission. The appropriation act of the same date provides that hereafter expenses of the interstate commerce commission shall be audited by the proper accounting officers of the treasury.[65] Money expended by the secretary of the interstate commerce commission for sending telegrams, if done at the request of the commission, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation to the proper accounting officers of the treasury of itemized vouchers therefor, approved by the chairman of the commission. The rules requiring copies of telegrams concerning business of the commission to accompany these vouchers for which credit is asked may be disregarded by the secretary, the commission holding that such messages are so far confidential as to justify refusal to disclose their contents, and that the requirement for the production is unreasonable.[66]

§ 4152. Rules.—If the commission does have the power, of its own motion, to promulgate general decrees or orders which thereby become rules of action to common carriers, such exercise of power must be confined to the obvious purposes and directions of the interstate commerce statute. Congress has not seen fit to grant legislative powers to the commission.[67] In an action for labor and material in constructing grain doors for box cars used in transporting grain, there being no allegation as to when a rule relied upon by defendant was adopted by the interstate commerce commission, it will not be presumed to have been adopted before the grain doors were furnished.[68]

§§ 4153-4154. Powers and Duties—§ 4153. In General.—The commission is charged with the general duty of inquiring as to the management of the business of railroad companies, and to keep itself informed as to the manner in which the same is conducted, and has the right to compel complete and full information as to the manner in which such carriers are transacting their business. And with this knowledge it is charged with the duty of seeing that there is no violation of the long and short haul clause; that there is no discrimination between individual shippers, and that nothing is done by rebate or any other device to give preference to one as against another; that no undue preferences are given to one place or places or individual or class of individuals, but that in all things that equality of right, which is the great purpose of the interstate commerce act, shall be secured to all shippers. It must also see that that publicity, which is required by § 6, is observed by the railroad companies. Holding the railroad companies to strict compliance with all these statutory provisions and enforce obedience to all these provisions tends to both reasonableness and equality of rate as contemplated by the interstate commerce act.[69] But its powers are not very clearly defined in the act, nor is its method of procedure very distinctly outlined.[70]

Conformity to Statute.—The acts of the interstate commerce commission in the exercise of its administrative functions must, in order to be effective, strictly conform to those provisions and requirements of the statute by which its authority is prescribed and defined.[71]

65. Salaries and expenses.—United States v. Moseley, 187 U. S. 322, 47 L. Ed. 198, 32 S. Ct. 90.

66. United States v. Moseley, 187 U. S. 322, 47 L. Ed. 198, 32 S. Ct. 90.

67. Rules.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

68. Hanks v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 92 Neb. 594, 138 N. W. 750.

69. Powers and duties in general.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896. See Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

70. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

71. Conformity to statute.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 207 Fed. 733, reversing judgment 200 Fed. 652.

§ 4154. Particular Powers.—To Enforce Act.—By § 12 it is provided that "the commission is hereby authorized and required to execute and enforce the provisions of this act."[72] Upon the request of the commission, it shall be the duty of any district attorney of the United States to whom the commission may apply, to institute in the proper court and to prosecute under the direction of the attorney general of the United States all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of this act and for the punishment of all violations thereof, and the costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States.[73] But under this section as it stood up to February 19, 1903, there was no authority or right in a district attorney of the United States, under the direction of the attorney general, to bring a suit upon a request made by the interstate commerce commission to do so, in order to compel compliance with the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, and to enjoin as a violation of the act to regulate commerce, complained of in the amended bill, an asserted discrimination between localities by a common carrier subject to the act, averred to operate an unjust preference or advantage to one locality over another.[74] But since power to prosecute a suit like the one now under consideration is expressly conferred by an act of congress adopted since this cause was argued at bar, that is, the act "To further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the states," approved February 19, 1903, the ends of justice will best be served by reversing the decrees below refusing to sustain the demurrer and remanding the cause to the circuit court for such further proceedings as may be consistent with the act to regulate commerce as originally enacted and as subsequently amended, especially with reference to the powers conferred and duties imposed by the act of congress approved February 19, 1903.[75]

To Prescribe Rates.—The act to regulate commerce endows the commission with plenary administrative power to supervise freight tariffs, and charges it with the duty to annul any tariffs in contravention of such act, and generally to enforce the provisions thereof. It also evinces a clear purpose to require shippers seeking reparation predicted upon the unreasonableness of a published rate to primarily invoke redress through the Commission, which alone is vested with power to entertain original proceedings for the alteration of such established schedule, notwithstanding that, §§ 9 and 22 of such act seemingly give the aggrieved party the option of bringing suit in the first instance in the district court to recover damages for violation of the provisions of said act.[76]

72. Particular powers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

73. Duty of district attorney.—Section 12, Interstate Commerce Act. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

74. Bearing in mind that, prior to the request of the commission upon which the suit was brought, no hearing was had before the commission concerning the matters of fact complained of, and therefore no finding of fact whatever was made by the commission, and it had issued no order to the carrier to desist from any violation of the law found to exist, after opportunity afforded to it to defend, under such circumstances, the law officers of the United States at the request of the commission were not authorized to institute this suit. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 274, 47 L. Ed. 811, 23 S. Ct. 507.

75. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 274, 47 L. Ed. 811, 23 S. Ct. 507.

76. To prescribe rates.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 652, citing Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164; Proc-

To Change Rates.—A shipper seeking reparation predicated upon the unreasonableness of the established rate must, under the act to regulate commerce, primarily invoke redress through the interstate commerce commission, which body alone is vested with power originally to entertain proceedings for the alteration of an established schedule, because the rates fixed therein are unreasonable.[77]

To Determine Reasonableness of Rates.—The commission has power to pass on the reasonableness of an existing rate.[78] Although an established schedule of rates may have been altered by a carrier voluntarily or as the enforcement of an order of the commission to desist from violating the law, rendered in accordance with the provisions of the statute, it may not be doubted that the power of the commission would nevertheless extend to hearing legal complaints of and awarding reparation to individuals for wrongs unlawfully suffered from the application of the unreasonable schedule during the period when such schedule was in force.[79]

To Determine Discrimination in Rates.—Section 2 contemplates that there shall be a tribunal capable of determining whether, in given cases, the services rendered are "like and contemporaneous," whether the respective traffic is of a "like kind," and whether the transportation is under "substantially similar circumstances and conditions."[80]

To Institute Suits.—The interstate commerce commission is a corporate body or person in whose name a suit can be instituted, and it is not necessary that the commission sue in the names of the persons composing it.[81]

To Obtain Information.—Section 12, as amended March 2, 1889, gives the commission authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of the act, to demand full and complete information from them, and adds, "and the commission is hereby authorized to execute and enforce the provisions of this act."[82] This is clearly constitutional.[83]

To Construe Act.—See elsewhere.[84]

ter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761; Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 176 Fed. 748, affirmed in 106 C. C. A. 269, 183 Fed. 929. See, also, Erie R. Co. v. Wanaque Lumber Co., 75 N. J. L. 878, 69 Atl. 168. See ante, "Established by Commission," §§ 4061-4065.

77. To change rates.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

78. To determine reasonableness of rates.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700. See ante, "Determination of Reasonableness of Rate," §§ 4067-4074.

79. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

80. To determine discrimination in rates.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666. See ante, "Determination of Discrimination and Preference," §§ 4078-4083.

81. To institute suits.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. Ed. 699, 12 S. Ct. 844; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 149 U. S. 264, 37 L. Ed. 727, 13 S. Ct. 837, which were suits instituted by the commission in the circuit courts of the United States, and in neither of which was any objection made to the right of the commission to sue by its statutory designation.

82. To obtain information.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

83. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

84. To construe act.—See ante, "Construction of Act," § 3984.

To Require Uniform System of Accounting.—Congress did not exceed its power under the commerce clause by enacting the Act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906, under which common carriers by water upon the Great Lakes, engaged in the transportation of passengers and property partly by water, under a joint arrangement for the continuous carriage or shipment, may be required by the interstate commerce commission to adopt a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping, and to make annual reports, which shall embrace not only the joint rail and water business, but the other business of the carriers as well, such as their port to port business, both intrastate and interstate, and the business of operating amusement parks.[85] Leaving to the interstate commerce commission the carrying out of details in the exercise of its discretion to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, does not render such section invalid as a delegation of legislative authority.[86] As to accounts, the statute permits the commission, in its discretion, for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purposes of the act, to prescribe a period of time within which such common carriers shall have a uniform system of accounts and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept. The commission may, the statute provides, in its discretion, prescribe the forms of all accounts, records, and memoranda to be kept by the common carriers, to which accounts the commission shall have access. And the act makes it unlawful for the carriers to keep any accounts, records, or memoranda other than those 85. To require uniform system of accounting.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

The authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission under the Act of June 29, 1906, prescribing a system of accounting for carriers, is not exceeded because it tends to control the conduct of the carrier as a public servant in interstate commerce. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

The regulations of the interstate commerce commission adopted under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 7, are not an abuse of power because they reject the theory that the cost of property abandoned on a permanent improvement should remain in the property account, rather than be charged to operating expenses. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

A carrier is not relieved from compliance with the regulations of interstate commerce adopted under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 7, because they reject the theory that the cost of property abandoned on permanent improvement should remain in property account because they were promulgated after the carrier had issued bonds to finance such improvement. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

The powers of the interstate commerce commission under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 7, were not abused by regulations under which a railroad can not carry into its property account the full cost of reducing grades but is required to deduct from such costs the replacement cost of portions of track less salvage, carrying the difference only into the property account and charging the replacement cost to operating expenses. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

Judicial belief that the cost of property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvements should be charged to accumulated surplus or to profit and loss, does not authorize a holding that the interstate commerce commission abused their powers given by Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 7, because under these regulations the cost must be charged to operating expenses. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

The interstate commerce commission, acting under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 7, did not abuse its powers because a railway company under its regulations erecting a new shop and permanent plant on a new location can not charge the value of the property thereupon abandoned against the accumulated surplus in the profit and loss account, but must charge the estimated replacement lost less salvage to operating expenses. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

There is here no unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

86. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

prescribed by the commission. This section contains ample authority for the commission to require a system of accounting and reports such as has been provided for in its orders. And it is immaterial that the accounts required to be kept are general in their nature, and embrace business other than such as is necessary to the discharge of the duties required in carrying passengers and freight in interstate commerce by joint arrangement between railroads and carriers by water, since the commission is charged under the law with the supervision of such rates as to their reasonableness, and with the general duty of making reports to congress which might require a knowledge of the business of the carrier beyond that which is strictly of the character mentioned. If, therefore, the commission is to successfully perform its duties in respect to reasonable rates, undue discriminations, and favoritism, it must be informed as to the business of the carriers by a system of accounting which will not permit the possible concealment of forbidden practices in accounts which it is not permitted to see, and concerning which it can require no information.[87] The requiring of information concerning the business methods of such corporations, as shown in its accounts, is not a regulation of business not within the jurisdiction of the commission. The object of requiring such account to be kept in a uniform way, and to be open to the inspection of the commission, is not to enable it to regulate the affairs of the corporations not within its jurisdiction, but to be informed concerning the business methods of the corporations subject to the act, that it may properly regulate such matters as are really within its jurisdiction. Further, the requiring of information concerning a business is not regulation of that business. The necessity of keeping such accounts has been developed in the reports of the commission, and had been the subject of great consideration. It has caused the employment of those skilled in such matters, and has resulted in the adoption of a general form of accounting which will enable the commission to examine in the affairs of the corporations, with a view to discharging its duties of regulation concerning them.[88] Corporations organized under state laws, engaged in interstate carriage, could validly be subjected to regulation and control by the interstate commerce commission, in the exercise of its power, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping and to require annual reports.[89]

Distinguishing Capital from Expense Accounts.—It is difficult to define and perhaps more difficult to consistently apply a precise distinction between capital and expense accounts; and while the propriety of distributing improvement costs over a series of years was recognized, the impossibility of scientific accuracy in that regard was acknowledged.[90]

87. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

The interstate commerce commission did not exceed its authority under the Act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 20, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), to prescribe a uniform system of bookkeeping and accounting for, and to call for annual reports from, common carriers by water upon the Great Lakes, which, being engaged in the transportation of passengers and property, partly by railroad and partly by water, under a joint arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, are, by § 1 of that act, brought within its terms, because such accounting system and reports are not limited to the joint rail and water business, but are required to embrace as well the other business of the carriers, such as their port to port business, both intrastate and interstate, and the business of operating amusement parks. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

88. Not a regulation of business of carriers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

89. As to corporations organized under state laws.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. Ed. 729, 32 S. Ct. 436.

90. Distinguishing capital from expense accounts.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

"In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700, the commission had held that while repairs were properly chargeable to current operating ex-§§ 4155-4219. Civil Proceedings against Carrier—§§ 4155-4190. Proceedings before Commission—§ 4155. In General.—Statutory Provision.—The provisions of § 16 of the act, which authorize the court to "proceed to hear and determine the matter speedily as a court of equity, and without the formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity, but in such manner as to do justice in the premises, and to this end, such court shall have power, if it think fit, to direct and prosecute in such mode and by such persons as it may appoint, all such inquiries as the court may think needful to enable it to form a just judgment in the matter of such petition," extend as well to an inquiry or proceeding under the fourth section (as to long and short haul charges) as to those arising under the other sections of the act.[91]

Prerequisites to Jurisdiction.—In a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission by a shipper to recover damages because of collection by a carrier at the lawfully established rate of an excessive amount because of the unreasonableness of the rate, the finding and prescription by the commission of a reasonable maximum rate to be observed in the future and an order forbidding the use of a rate in excess thereof are conditions precedent to its exercise of its power to order reparation.[92]

Judicial Power of Commission.—The acts of the interstate commerce commission are administrative and not judicial. It has no power to enter judgments and decrees, such as belong to courts of general jurisdiction.[93] It is not a court and cannot try actions for damages to interstate shipments, but can hear complaints in regard to rates and rebates.[94]

§ 4156. Exclusive Jurisdiction.—An action against a carrier for discrimination in rates and granting unlawful rebates to plaintiff's competitors, affecting not only the plaintiff, but other shippers in the same region, cannot be first instituted in a federal circuit court; the interstate commerce commission having exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether a regulation or a practice affecting rates or matters sought to be regulated by the Interstate Commerce Act is unjust or unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, preferential, or prejudicial, and this though the regulation or practice complained of had ceased.[95] The effect of the act is not merely to suspend the right of a shipper to maintain an action at law to recover damages resulting from an unreasonable rate or discriminating regulation or practice established by an interstate carrier while such rate or regulation remains in force, but to supersede such right entirely, and substitute therefor the remedy provided by the act itself; and the shipper's independent right of action penses, yet expenditures for improvements and equipment 'should not be taxed as part of the current or operating expenses of a single year, but should be, so far as practicable, and so far as rates exacted from the public are concerned, projected proportionately over the future.' And in this court it was said (p. 462): 'It would seem as if expenditures for additions to construction and equipment, as expenditures for original construction and equipment, should be reimbursed by all of the traffic they accommodate during the period of their duration, and that improvements that will last many years should not be charged wholly against the revenue of a single year.'" Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

91. Proceedings before commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45. See provisions of § 16, recited in Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

92. Prerequisites to jurisdiction.—Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Baer Bros. Mercantile Co., 109 C. C. A. 337, 187 Fed. 485.

93. Judicial power of commission.—United States v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 37 App. D. C. 266, judgment affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 32 S. Ct. 556, 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849.

94. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 133 Ky. 724, 118 S. W. 990, 19 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 392.

95. Exclusive jurisdiction.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 183 Fed. 908, dismissing for want of jurisdiction 181 Fed. 403.

in a court is not revived by the abolition of the unlawful rate or regulation.[96]

Action for Damages for Discrimination in Distribution of Cars.—Where an alleged unlawful discrimination in the distribution of coal cars in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act had been practiced by the defendant railroad company, resulting in injury to plaintiff, for which it was entitled to damages, such discrimination having been applicable to a class of shippers and not to complainant alone, the interstate commerce commission had exclusive original jurisdiction to afford complainant relief, it not being entitled to sue in the first instance in an action for alleged damages sustained thereby, authorized by section nine and this, though the acts constituting the alleged discrimination had ceased prior to the commencement of the suit.[97]

That demurrage charges fixed by the rate schedules of interstate railroad companies in a certain district were discriminatory as between a shipper located in such district and competitors placed in other districts and governed by different rates is no defense to a prosecution of a railroad company or the shipper for granting or receiving a concession by a cancellation of such charges, the only legal mode of correcting the discrimination being by a change in the schedules on proper notice or under authority from the interstate commerce commission.[98]

Relief against Unreasonable Charges.—Relief from excessive freight charges on interstate shipments, made according to established rates promulgated by the interstate commerce act, must be sought through the interstate commerce commission.[99]

§ 4157. Summons and Process.—The procedure prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Act, requiring a statement of charges against a carrier filed with the interstate commerce commission to be forwarded to such common carrier who shall be required to answer the same, which procedure is required to be followed in case of hearings for the prescribing of rates, is analogous to that in all legal controversies and sufficient, and it is no objection to the validity of an order of the commission prescribing rates to be charged by a carrier between certain localities that it will affect the rates of other carriers not before the commission who may be in the succession of all or any interstate transportation which includes that in question.[1] Proceedings were commenced before the interstate commerce commission against a railroad company, which was at the time in the hands of a receiver, to enforce compliance with the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act. Before the decision therein, the railroad was sold under foreclosure, and conveyed and delivered to the purchasers. An order was made by the commission requiring a reduction of rates. A few days after this order was made, the railroad was conveyed by the purchasers at the sale to a new company. The order was served on the former receiver of the road, but not on the new company. Such new company was not bound by the order, notwithstanding a provision in the order of sale of the road requiring the purchaser to pay and discharge all claims made against the receiver, and all obligations contracted or incurred by him and not paid by him before the delivery of possession.[2]

§ 4158. Parties.—Interest in Controversy.—A complaint against the carrier will not be dismissed because the complainant before the commission did not

96. Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 106 C. C. A. 269, 183 Fed. 929, affirming judgment, 176 Fed. 748.

97. Action for damages for discrimination in distribution of cars.—Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 176 Fed. 748.

98. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 513, 188 Fed. 879.

99. Relief against unreasonable charges.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Superior Refin. Co., 112 Pac. 604, 83 Kan. 732.

1. Summons and process.—Louisville, etc. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

2. Behlmer v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 71 Fed. 835.

show any real interest in the case brought.[3]

Persons Injured.—The right of recovery given by the interstate commerce act against a carrier for violation of its provisions, to any person or persons injured thereby, for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of such violation, is in the nature of a penalty, and only exists on proof, not only of the wrong, but that it has in fact operated to plaintiff's injury.[4] An allegation that a joint tariff rate established by a defendant railroad company and another was not filed with the commission as required by the law, nor published, but was concealed from the plaintiff and other shippers, does not authorize a recovery under such provision, where it is not alleged that plaintiff made any shipments to the points covered by such rate, or that he would or could have availed himself of the rate had he known of it.[5] Railway companies may complain of a reduction made by the commission so far as it affects their revenues, but they may not complain of it as it may affect shippers or trade centers. The courts will not listen to a party who complains of a grievance which is not his.[6]

Connecting Carrier.—The provision forbidding discrimination against any locality or description of traffic, is for the protection of the locality or traffic itself, and cannot be invoked by a carrier as against a connecting carrier which discriminates by requiring prepayment of freight and car mileage, between goods which come from different localities.[7]

Competing Carriers.—It is no objection to the enforcement by the court of an order made against a railway company by the interstate commerce commission that the complainants before the commission have no real grievance, but are instigated by a competing railroad, since § 13 of the Interstate Commerce Act expressly provides that no complaint shall be dismissed by the commission because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant, and since the commission has power, of its own motion, to institute investigations, make orders, and apply to the courts for their enforcement.[8]

Carrier Participating in Joint Rate.—In a proceeding against a railroad to enforce an order of the commission, the fact that the order involves rates participated in by another railroad, as owner of a portion of the line over which the through freight is carried, does not make the latter company a necessary party defendant, although it is a proper party.[9]

Successor to Original Party.—When an order against unjust discrimination made by the interstate commerce commission is binding on a railroad company, it is binding on the successor of such company.[10] A valid order of the interstate commerce commission, made in a proper proceeding against certain railroad companies, directing each of them to cease to make certain unlawful freight charges under a joint traffic arrangement, is binding on the successor of one of such companies, although the name of such successor does not appear in the order.[11]

Where a lessee railroad company operated a part of a through route over

3. Parties. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563.

4. Persons injured.—Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887.

5. Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 887, 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, affirming judgment, 63 Fed. 903, 11 C. C. A. 489.

6. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. Ed. 392, 20 S. Ct. 284; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. Ed. 546, 25 S. Ct. 289.

7. Connecting carrier.—Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 61 Fed. 158, 9 C. C. A. 409, affirming 51 Fed. 465.

8. Competing carriers.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 1005.

9. Carrier participating in joint rate.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

10. Successor to original party.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western New York, etc., R. Co., 82 Fed. 192.

11. Behlmer v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 28 C. C. A. 229, 83 Fed. 898, reversing on another point in 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

which oil was transported under an alleged discriminating rate, but was not a party to a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission to recover reparation, an order in favor of petitioners including discriminating freight charges by such lessee company was neither conclusive nor effective as to it.[12]

In Proceeding to Establish Switch.—The remedy, given by § 1 of the Act of June 29, 1906, on complaint by the shipper to the interstate commerce commission when an interstate railway carrier refuses to establish a switch connection with a lateral, branch line, is exclusive, and the general powers given by other sections of the statute can not be deemed to authorize a complaint to the commission by the lateral, branch railway company. If they were applicable to a branch road, they would have been equally applicable to shippers, and there was no more reason to mention complaints by shippers than by others. The argument that shippers were mentioned to insure their rights in case of a refusal to connect with a lateral line is excluded by the form of the statute, which obviously is providing the only remedy that congress had in mind. It may or may not be true that the distinction is not very effective, but it stands in the law, and must be accepted as the limit of the commission's power.[13]

§ 4159. Limitation and Laches.—The act provides that all complaints for the recovery of damages shall be filed with the commission within two years from the time the cause of action accrues and not after, provided that claims accrued prior to the passage of this act may be presented within one year.[14] A claim which accrued prior to the passage of the act may be presented at any time within two years after the date of its accrual, although complaint is not filed until more than a year after the passage of the act.[15] The limitation imposed on the time for filing a claim for damages, as applied to a claim for excessive charges made by a carrier, begins to run when such charges become due and payable and not when they are actually paid.[16]

§ 4160. Pleadings.—Necessity of.—There must be a complaint. Assuming that a valid complaint may be made before the commission, by such trade organizations as boards of trade, or chambers of commerce, based on a mode or manner of treating import traffic by a defendant company, without disclosing or containing charges of specific acts of discrimination or undue preference, resulting in loss or damage to individual persons, corporations, or associations, it would not be competent for the commission, without a complaint made before it, and without a hearing, to subject common carriers to penalties.[17]

Proceeding Instituted by Commission without Complaint.—The commission is not limited in its inquiry and action to cases in which a formal complaint has been made, but, under § 13—"may institute any inquiry on its own motion in the same manner and to the same effect as though complaint had been made." But there is nothing in the act requiring the commission to proceed singly against each railroad company for each supposed or alleged violation of the act.[18]

12. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

13. In proceeding to establish switch.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 216 U. S. 531, 54 L. Ed. 605, 30 S. Ct. 415.

14. Limitation and laches.—Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 16, 24 Stat. 384 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 5, 34 Stat. 590 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1159).

The limitation provisions of § 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 5, held not to authorize the filing with the Interstate Commerce Commission of a claim for damages which accrued more than two years before the passage of the amendatory act. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Meeker, 211 Fed. 785.

15. Dickerson v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 187 Fed. 874.

16. Arkansas Fertilizer Co. v. United States, 193 Fed. 667.

17. Pleadings.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

18. Proceeding instituted by commission without complaint.—Interstate Com-

Sufficiency.—No formal pleadings are required by the act.[19] Under the provision that all complaints for damages shall be filed with the interstate commerce commission within two years from the time the cause of action accrues, a letter to the commission setting out the facts and containing a substantial prayer for relief by way of damages is a sufficient complaint.[20] The Interstate Commerce Act, provides that every common carrier shall provide equal facilities for the interchange of traffic with connecting lines; and that there shall be no discrimination in rates and charges between such lines. A petition, presented by a line affected, averred that petitioner was deprived by respondent of equal facilities with a competing connecting line for interchange of traffic, a discrimination in rates, the withdrawal of a joint through traffic, and a threat to close a through route via petitioner's line. The petition was held to be a sufficient charge, not only of discrimination in rates, but of failure to provide equal facilities for interchange of traffic, and to bring before the commission the determination of both offenses.[21]

Bill in Equity.—In the absence of objection to the manner and form of invoking jurisdiction the commerce court may entertain and grant the relief sought by a bill to enjoin the performance of a contract which offends against the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act intended to prevent undue advantages or unlawful discrimination.[22]

§ 4161. Burden of Proof and Presumptions.—When it is shown that the carrier has not supplied the facilities demanded, the burden is upon the carrier, in order to exonerate itself from such charge of undue preference, to show that it is prorating its cars fairly and equally among all the operators who are similarly situated and engaged in transporting freight over its lines.[23] If a complaint be filed before the commission and no proof adduced to support it, the complaint will be dismissed. This is because of the principle that the party who asserts the affirmative in any controversy ought to prove the assertion, and that he who denies may rest on his denial until at least the probable truth of the matter asserted has been established.[24]

Violation of Schedule Rate.—Where, in an action by a carrier against a consignee for freight charges based on the schedule filed with the interstate commerce commission, the defendant counterclaims for prior charges exacted by defendant in excess of the rates fixed by an agreement between the parties, valid before the passage of the Interstate Commerce Act, the plaintiff has the burden of showing that the agreement was contrary to the provisions of the act.[25]

§§ 4162-4165. Evidence—§ 4162. In General.—The interstate commerce commission is an administrative tribunal leading with practical problems, and, so long as parties affected by its orders are fully heard, it can grant such relief as the facts shown call for, even though they may be presented by evidence technically outside the issues raised by the pleadings, but which were germane to the subject matter of the investigation.[26] The inquiry of a board of the character of the interstate commerce commission should not be too narrowly merce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998.

19. Sufficiency.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Dickerson, 191 Fed. 705, affirming 187 Fed. 874; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 195 Fed. 953.

20. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Dickerson, 191 Fed. 705, affirming judgment, 187 Fed. 874.

21. New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 867.

22. Bill in equity.—United States v. Union Stock Yards, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83.

23. Burden of proof and presumptions.—Pitcairn Coal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 165 Fed. 113.

24. Burden of proof.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

25. Violation of schedule rate.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614.

26. Evidence.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 168 Fed. 131.

constrained by technical rules as to the admissibility of proof. Its function is largely one of investigation and it should not be hampered in making inquiry pertaining to interstate commerce by those narrow rules which prevail in trials at common law where a strict correspondence is required between allegation and proof.[27]

Contracts with Third Persons.—The fact that contracts were made with third persons not parties to the proceeding does not render such contracts inadmissible in evidence in a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission charging certain railroads with violations of the act to regulate commerce.[28] And where contracts are made between railroad companies and coal companies for the purchase of the coal mines by the railroads in order to prevent the construction of a competing line of railroad by the mine owners, such contracts become relevant evidence in an inquiry by the interstate commerce commission touching the question of the reasonableness of transportation rates of coal, and the manner in which the rates are fixed.[29]

Pooling Agreements.—Contracts tending to show the pooling of freight and the charging of unreasonable rates are relevant evidence in a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission, charging railroads with violations of the Act of February 4, 1887, and the production of such contracts may be required.[30]

Order without Evidence to Support It.—An order of the interstate commerce commission reducing rates can not be said to have been made without substantial evidence to support it, where, although there is no direct testimony that the old rate was unreasonably high, there were facts in evidence from which experts could have named a rate.[31]

§ 4163. Incriminating Testimony.—A shield against successful prosecution, available to the accused as a defense, and not immunity from the prosecution itself, is what was secured by the Act of February 25, 1903, as amended by the Act of June 30, 1906, providing that no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence in any proceeding, suit, or prosecution under the Sherman Anti-Trust and Interstate Commerce Acts.[32] The Act of February 11, 1893, ch. 83, 27 Stat. 443, which enacts that "no person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements and documents before the interstate commerce commission, or in obedience to the subpœna of the commission, * * *

27. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563.

28. Contracts with third persons.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563, cited in Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. Ed. 652, 26 S. Ct. 370.

The refusal to produce contracts under which railroad companies engaged in carrying coal from the anthracite regions in Pennsylvania to tidewater, or coal companies owned by the railroads, purchase coal from independent operators engaged in mining in that district, for which payment is made on the basis of a fixed percentage of the average price at certain tide points of coal of the same quality and size, can not be justified on the ground of irrelevancy, in a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission on a complaint charging the railroad companies with violating Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154], to regulate commerce, by unfair discrimination and by charging unreasonable and unjust rates in carrying anthracite coal. Judgment, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 123 Fed. 969, reversed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 24 S. Ct. 563, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860.

29. And so as to contracts for the purchase and transportation of coal for the same purpose as alleged. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563.

30. Pooling agreements. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563.

31. Order without evidence to support it.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

32. Incriminating testimony.—Heike v. United States, 217 U. S. 423, 54 L. Ed. 821, 30 S. Ct. 539.

on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him, may tend to criminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing, concerning which he may testify, or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said commission, or in obedience to its subpœna, or the subpœna of either of them, or in any such case or proceeding," is not incompatible with the clause of the fifth amendment of the constitution of the United States, which declares that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." This statute affords absolute immunity against prosecution, penalties or forfeiture as to any transaction, matter or thing concerning which the witness testified, and the immunity is intended to be general, and to be applicable whenever and in whatever court, state or federal, such prosecution may be had. A witness is thereby deprived of his constitutional right to refuse to answer.[33]

Not Unconstitutional as Unreasonable Search.—The immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures as guaranteed by the fourth amendment to the federal constitution is not infringed upon by requiring the production of certain contracts as evidence in a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission, since the act of February 4, 1887, as amended February 11, 1893, expressly extends immunity from prosecution or forfeiture of estate because of testimony given in pursuance of the requirements of the law.[34]

Not Unconstitutional as Forfeiture.—The contention that to require the production of certain contracts would be to compel the witnesses to furnish evidence against themselves which might result in forfeiture of estate in violation of the fifth amendment to the constitution is not well founded, since the Act of February 4, 1887, as amended February 11, 1893, expressly extends immunity from prosecution or forfeiture of estate because of testimony given in pur-

33. Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. Ed. 819, 16 S. Ct. 644.

Provided, that no person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. 7 Stat. 443, ch. 83. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

"The act (of congress of February 11th, 1893, c. 83, 27 Stat. 443), is supposed to have been passed in view of the opinion of this court in Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. Ed. 1110, 12 S. Ct. 195, to the effect that § 860 of the Revised Statutes, providing that no evidence given by a witness shall be used against him, his property or estate, in any manner, in any court of the United States, in any criminal proceeding, did not afford that complete protection to the witness which the amendment (fifth) was intended to guarantee. The gist of that decision is contained in the following extracts from the opinion of Mr. Justice Blatchford (pp. 564, 585), referring to § 860: 'It could not, and would not, prevent the use of his testimony to search out other testimony to be used in evidence against him or his property, in a criminal proceeding in such court. It could not prevent the obtaining and the use of witnesses and evidence which should be attributable directly to the testimony he might give under compulsion, and on which he might be convicted, when otherwise, and if he had refused to answer, he could not possibly have been convicted.' And again: 'We are clearly of opinion that no statute which leaves the party or witness subject to prosecution, after he answers the criminating question put to him, can have the effect of supplanting the privilege conferred by the constitution of the United States. Section 860 of the Revised Statutes does not supply a complete protection from all the perils against which the constitutional prohibition was designed to guard, and is not a full substitute for that prohibition. In view of the constitutional provision, a statutory enactment, to be valid, must afford absolute immunity against future prosecutions for the offense to which the question relates.' The inference from this language is that, if the statute does afford such immunity against future prosecution, the witness will be compellable to testify." Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. Ed. 819, 16 S. Ct. 644. See, also, Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. Ed. 652, 26 S. Ct. 370; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

34. Not unconstitutional as unreasonable search.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563. See Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. Ed. 652, 26 S. Ct. 370.

suance of the requirements of the law.[35]

Immunity Extends to State Courts.—But the immunity extends to any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify, which clearly indicates that the immunity is intended to be general, and to be applicable whenever and in whatever court such prosecution may be had.[36]

§ 4164. Power to Compel Witnesses to Attend.—For the purposes of the act the commission shall have power to require, by subpœna, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents relating to any matter under investigation. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such documentary evidence, may be required from any place in the United States, at any designated place of hearing.[37] The commission is given power to require the testimony of witnesses "for the purposes of this act," and the purposes of the act for which the commission may exact evidence embrace only complaints for violation of the act, and investigations by the commission upon matters that might have been made the object of complaint.[38] The main purpose of the act was to regulate the interstate business of carriers, and the secondary purpose, that for which the commission was established, was to enforce the regulations enacted. These are the purposes here referred to; in other words, the power to require testimony is limited, as it usually is in English speaking countries at least, to the only cases where the sacrifice of privacy is necessary, namely, those where the investigation concerns a specific breach of the law.[39] Witnesses can not be required to testify before the interstate commerce commission except in connection with complaints for violation of the Interstate Commerce Act or with the investigation by the commission of subjects that might have been made the object of complaint, these being the only matters contemplated by the provision of § 12 of that act, giving the commission power to require testimony "for the purposes of this act," which power can not be exercised by the commission in performing its duty under that section to keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the business of common carriers is conducted, nor in connection with the enforcement of the requirement of § 20 respecting reports by carriers, nor to aid the commission in recommending, pursuant to § 21, additional legislation to congress.[40] The contention of the interstate commerce commission that it may make any investigation that it deems proper, not merely to discover any facts tending to defeat the purposes of the Act of February 4, 1887, but to aid in recommending any additional legislation relating to the regulation of commerce that it may conceive to be within the power of congress to enact; and that in such an investigation it has power, with the aid of the courts, to require any witness to answer any question that may have a bearing upon any part of what it has in mind is not warranted by the act itself.[41]

Power to Punish Disobedience.—Since 1893 the commission has had power to enforce obedience to its lawful demands for the eliciting of information from witnesses, or the production of testimony, by a criminal prosecution, disobedience thereto being made an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both.[42]

35. Not unconstitutional as forfeiture.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860, 24 S. Ct. 563.

36. Immunity extends to state courts.—Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. Ed. 819, 16 S. Ct. 644.

37. Power to compel witnesses to attend.—Interstate Commerce Act, § 12. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

38. Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

39. Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

40. Orders, 157 Fed. 432, affirmed in part and reversed in part. Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

41. Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. Ed. 253, 29 S. Ct. 115.

42. Power to punish disobedience.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125. See act of Feb. 11, 1893, which provides a punishment of fine or impris-

This power conferred upon the commission imposes upon any one, summoned by that body to appear and to testify, the duty of appearing and testifying, and upon any one required to produce such books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents, the duty of producing them, if the testimony sought, and the books, papers, etc., called for, relate to the matter under investigation, if such matter is one which the commission is legally entitled to investigate, and if the witness is not excused, on some personal ground, from doing what the commission requires at his hands. These propositions seem to be so clear and indisputable that any attempt to sustain them by argument would be of no value in the discussion. Whether the commission is entitled to the evidence it seeks, and whether the refusal of the witness to testify or to produce books, papers, etc., in his possession, is or is not in violation of his duty or in derogation of the rights of the United States, seeking to execute a power expressly granted to congress, are the distinct issues between that body and the witness. They are issues between the United States and those who dispute the validity of an act of congress and seek to obstruct its enforcement. And these issues, made in the form prescribed by the act of congress, are so presented that the judicial power is capable of acting on them.[43]

Aid of Courts.—The constitutionality of the Interstate Commerce Act, so far as it authorized the circuit courts to use their processes in aid of inquiries before the commission, has been sustained. It was clearly competent for congress, to that end, to invest the commission with authority to require the attendance and testimony of witnesses, and the production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements and documents relating to any matter legally committed to that body for investigation.[44] The twelfth section of the act is not unconstitutional and void, so far as it authorizes or requires the circuit courts of the United States to use their process in aid of inquiries before the commission. The constitution extends the judicial power of the United States to all cases in law and equity arising under the instrument or under the laws of the United States, as well as to all controversies to which the United States shall be a party (art. 3, § 2), and the circuit courts of the United States are capable, under the statutes defining and regulating their jurisdiction, of exerting such power in cases or controversies of that character, within the limits prescribed by congress.[45] Under the circumstances, the supreme court declined to go further than to adjudge, that that section in the particular named is constitutional, and to remand the cause that the court below may proceed with it upon the merits of the questions presented by the petition and the answers of the defendants and make such determination thereof as may be consistent with law. Any other course would, it might be apprehended, involve the exercise of original jurisdiction, and might possibly work injustice to one or the other of the parties.[46]

Punishment for Failure to Obey Order.—Any of the circuit courts of the United States within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpœna issued to any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, or other person, issue an order requiring such common carrier or other person to appear before said commission (and produce books and papers if so ordered) and give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by onment or both for disobedience of the lawful orders of the commission in this regard. See 27 Stat. 443, ch. 83.

43. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

44. Aid of courts.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. Ed. 652, 26 S. Ct. 370.

45. 25 Stat. 434, ch. 866. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

46. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

such court as a contempt thereof.[47]

Jury Trial.—The issue whether the defendants are under a duty to answer the questions propounded to them, and to produce the books, papers, etc., called for, is manifestly not one for the determination of a jury, being not one of fact but of law exclusively.[48] Of course, the question of punishing the defendants for contempt could not arise before the commission; for, in a judicial sense, there is no such thing as contempt of a subordinate administrative body. No question of contempt could arise until the issue of law, in the circuit court, is determined adversely to the defendants and they refuse to obey, not the order of the commission, but the final order of the court. And, in matters of contempt, a jury is not required by "due process of law."[49]

Constitutionality of Statute.—This provision is not invalid because in derogation of the fundamental guarantees of personal rights inhering in the freedom of citizens. The supreme court of the United States has spoken fully upon that general subject. Nothing need be added to what has been there said. Suffice it in the present case to say that as the interstate commerce commission, by petition in a circuit court of the United States, seeks, upon grounds distinctly set forth, an order to compel appellees to answer particular questions and to produce certain books, papers, etc., in their possession, it was open to each of them to contend before that court that he was protected by the constitution from making answer to the questions propounded to him; or that he was not legally bound to produce the books, papers, etc., ordered to be produced; or that neither the questions propounded nor the books, papers, etc., called for relate to the particular matter under investigation, nor to any matter which the commission is entitled under the constitution or laws to investigate. These issues being determined in their favor by the court below, the petition of the commission could have been dismissed upon its merits.[50]

Nature of Proceeding.—It is not merely an ancillary and advisory proceeding, but one for determining rights that concern both the general public and the individual defendants, in which an enforcible judgment may be obtained, that will be conclusive on the parties until reversed by the federal supreme court. The performance of the duty which, it is claimed, rests upon the defendants, can not be directly enforced except by judicial process.[51] It is none the less the judgment of a judicial tribunal dealing with questions judicial in their nature, and presented in the customary forms of judicial proceedings, because its effect may be to aid an administrative or executive body in the performance of duties legally imposed upon it by congress in execution of a power granted by the constitution.[52]

§ 4165. Production of Books and Papers.—The production of contracts under which railroad companies engaged in interstate carriage of anthracite coal, who had acquired certain collieries whose proprietors were about to build a competing line, guarantied the stock and bonds issued in payment therefor by a corporation whose charter they had purchased for that purpose, may be compelled in a proceeding before the interstate commerce commission on a complaint charging such railroad companies with violations of the act, by the pooling of freights and the charging of unreasonable rates in carrying anthracite coal.[53]

47. Punishment for failure to obey order.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

48. Jury trial.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

49. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

50. Constitutionality of statute.—Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. Ed. 1110, 12 S. Ct. 195; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

51. Nature of proceeding.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

52. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

53. Production of books and papers.—Judgment, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 123 Fed. 969, §§ 4166-4181. Hearing and Determination—§ 4166. Necessity.—In proceedings before the interstate commerce commission, there must be a hearing and determination.[54]

§ 4167. Extent of Hearing.—The commission in making an investigation on the complaint filed by a shipper against a change of classification of freight, increasing inequitably the rates on certain articles by changing them to a higher class, has the power, in the public interest, disembarrassed by any supposed admissions contained in the statement of complaint, to consider the whole subject and the operation of the new classification in the entire territory, as also how far its going into effect would be just and reasonable, would create preference or engender discriminations; in other words, its conformity to the requirements of the act to regulate commerce. And finding, as the commission did, that the classification by percentage of common soap in less than carload lots operating throughout official classification territory, brought about a general disturbance of the relations previously existing in that territory, and created discriminations and preferences among manufacturers and shippers of the commodity and between localities in such territory, the commission was clearly within the authority conferred by the act to regulate commerce in directing the carriers to cease and desist from further enforcing the classification operating such results.[55] Assent to this view of the power of the commission of course also conclusively disposes of the contention that the court was without authority to determine the validity of the order of the commission by the scope of the act to regulate commerce, because of an admission asserted to exist in the complaint originally filed before the commission.[56] "The discriminations and preferences which the commission and the court below found to exist were results arising from the application to the conditions prevailing in official classification territory of the modified percentage classification. In other words, the order forbidding the enforcement of the modified percentage classification was based on the finding that that classification disturbed the rate relations theretofore existing in official classification territory and created preferences and discriminations which would disappear if the further enforcement of the changed classification was prevented."[57]

All Circumstances and Interests.—In passing upon questions arising under the act, the tribunal appointed to enforce its provisions, whether the commission or the courts, is empowered to fully consider all the circumstances and conditions that reasonably apply to the situation, and that, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, the tribunal may and should consider the legitimate interests as well of the carrying companies as of the traders and shippers.[58] When the section says that no locality shall be subjected to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever, it does not mean that the commission is to regard only the welfare of the locality or community where the traffic originates, or where the goods are shipped on the cars. The welfare of the locality to which the goods are sent is also, under the terms and spirit of the act, to enter into the question.[59] reversed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baird, 24 S. Ct. 563, 194 U. S. 25, 46 L. Ed. 860.

54. Hearing and determination.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

55. Extent of hearing.—Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

56. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

57. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

58. All circumstances and interests.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

59. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

As to Combinations and Monopolies.—A resolution of the interstate commerce commission ordering an investigation and inquiry into consolidations and combinations of carriers subject to the interstate commerce act and the relations existing between them, including community of interests therein and the practices and methods of such carriers affecting the movement of interstate commerce, to ascertain whether the same result in violation of said act or tend to defeat its purposes, is broad enough to include an inquiry into a purchase by such carrier of stock in other connecting or competing carriers from its own officers or directors, the price paid for the same, and what, if any, profit such officers or directors made thereon; but it does not authorize an inquiry as to whether the action of the directors of a railroad company in withholding public announcement of the declaration by them of an increased dividend was for the purpose of private speculation in the stock.[60]

Matter Arising Pending Hearing.—An advanced rate of freight on certain articles, filed with the interstate commerce commission, and put into effect pending a hearing before the commission on the legality of the rate previously in force, is properly before the commission for consideration on such hearing.[61]

As to Property Acquired by Carrier.—One purpose of the interstate commerce legislation is to compel interstate carriers to perform their commercial functions adequately, and, under the power specifically given the interstate commerce commission, to ascertain the cost and value of the carrier's property, and, as affecting the ability of a carrier to perform such adequate service, the commission has authority to inquire into purchases of property made by it, the prices paid, and the lawfulness and propriety of its acquisition.[62]

§§ 4168-4181. Judgment or Order—§ 4168. Contents.—Finding of Facts on Which Judgment Based.—By § 14 it is made the duty of the commission, whenever an investigation is made by it, not only to make a report in writing, but to make a finding of facts upon which its conclusions are based, which findings shall be included in its report.[63]

Facts Showing Jurisdiction.—An order of the interstate commerce commission requiring a carrier to render certain services to a shipper must necessarily be based on a finding that such services are not only transportation services, but that in performing them the carrier acts in the capacity of an interstate carrier.[64]

Order for Reparation.—Where pending proceedings before the interstate commerce commission for reparation for excessive charges on a specified shipment due to the carrier's misrouting it, because no through rate had been provided over shorter routes, the carriers established a through rate by such shorter routes, it was not necessary that the commission in granting reparation should enter any order with reference to the through rate so adopted or prohibit the use thereafter of any rate in excess of the one adopted.[65] Where a reparation order was entered May 1, 1911, and defendant seasonably filed a motion for rehearing, which was not denied until October 9 following, suit not having been brought on the order until after the rehearing was denied, defendant was not prejudiced by the fact that the order required payment on or before January 15, 1911.[66]

60. As to combinations and monopolies.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Harriman, 157 Fed. 432.

61. Matter arising pending hearing.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

62. As to property acquired by carrier.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Harriman, 157 Fed. 432.

63. Contents.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

64. Facts showing jurisdiction.—Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

65. Order for reparation.—St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Samuels & Co., 211 Fed. 588.

66. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Samuels & Co., 211 Fed. 588.

Recommendation as to Reparation.—By § 14 the report required of the commission upon an investigation made by it, shall include, in addition to the finding of facts upon which its conclusions are based, a recommendation as to what reparation, if any, ought to be made to any party or parties who may be found to have been injured.[67]

Reparation and Rates in Same Order.—That the two subjects of reparation and rates may be dealt with in one order is undoubtedly true.[68] But awarding reparation for the past and fixing rates for the future involve the determination of matters essentially different. One is in is nature private and the other public. One is made by the commission in its quasi-judicial capacity to measure past injuries sustained by a private shipper; the other, in its quasi-legislative capacity, to prevent future injury to the public.[69]

§ 4169. Service on Carrier.—By §§ 15 and 16 of the act, if it appears to the satisfaction of the commission that anything has been done or omitted to be done, in violation of the provisions of the act, or of any law cognizable by the commission, it is made its duty to cause a copy of its report to be delivered to the carrier, with notice to desist, and failing that to apply to the courts for an order compelling obedience.[70]

§ 4170. Operation and Effect.—The Interstate Commerce Act provides that, whenever an investigation shall be made by the commission, it shall make a report in writing which shall include the findings of fact on which the commission's conclusions are based, and such findings shall thereafter be deemed prima facie evidence as to each and every fact found in all judicial proceedings.[71]

67. Recommendation as to reparation.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

68. Reparation and rates in same order.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 222 U. S. 506, 56 L. Ed. 288, 32 S. Ct. 114.

69. Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 233 U. S. 479, 34 S. Ct. 641.

"The order while condemning the rate for the past, should contain a provision validating it for the future. But while this consideration might show that it was erroneous not to name the new rate, it would not follow that the order awarding reparation was void. The Hepburn Act treats the two subjects as related, but independent. The grounds of complaint may be joint or separate, and the very fact that they may sometmes be separate shows that the presence of both is not jurisdictional and that the absence of a provision for one need not operate to invalidate an order as to the other." Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 233 U. S. 479, 34 S. Ct. 641.

70. Service.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

71. Operation and effect.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 14, 24 Stat. 384, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, c. 382, § 4, 25 Stat. 859 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165); Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

A finding by the interstate commerce commission that a just and reasonable charge for the privilege of reconsigning hay at East St. Louis was one cent per hundredweight was prima facie evidence of its own truth. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

"In the case of Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 102 Fed.

Finding of Questions of Law.—The decisions of the commission on questions of law are not conclusive upon the appellate court and may be reviewed.[72]

Finding of Fact.—The interstate commerce commission from the nature of its organization and the duties imposed upon it by the statute, is peculiarly competent to pass upon questions of fact.[73] Especially when the evidence is conflicting.[74]

Finding Concurred in by Court.—And when these findings are concurred in by the circuit court, they will not be interfered with, unless the record establishes that clear and unmistakable error has been committed.[75] And where the circuit court of appeals adopted the views of the circuit court, in respect to the reasonableness of the rate charged on first class freight carried on defendant's line from Cincinnati to Atlanta; and as both courts found the existing rates to have been reasonable, the supreme court will not review their finding on that matter of fact.[76]

Finding of Discrimination.—Because of the nature and extent of the authority conferred on the commission from the beginning concerning the prohibitions of the act as to rebates, favoritism, and discrimination of all kinds, an exertion of power by the commission concerning such matters is entitled to great weight, and not lightly to be interfered with.[77]

Wrong Reason Assigned.—Where the interstate commerce commission made an order and proceeded to have it enforced, it was held that the court was not confined to the grounds stated by the commission, and if the rule was found, in itself, for any reason illegal as a violation of the act, the order could be valid and be a lawful order, although the commission had given a wrong reason for making it.[78] However, the conclusions of the commission are subject to review if it excluded "facts and circumstances that ought to have been considered."[79] Thus, the commission's construction of the Interstate Commerce Act by which its duties are prescribed and from which its powers are derived, may be reviewed.[80]

709, the circuit court of the United States for the Southern district of Alabama declares: 'The findings of fact in the report of the commission are made by law prima facie evidence of the matters therein stated, and the conclusions of the commission, based upon such findings, are presumed to be well founded and correct.'" Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

72. Finding of questions of law.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

73. Findings of fact.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

74. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

75. Finding concurred in by court.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648; S. C., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

76. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700.

77. Finding of discrimination.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

78. Wrong reason assigned.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

79. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700.

80. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

Whether Proceeding Instituted by Commission or Individual.—The finding of facts in a report by the interstate commerce commission has no greater weight where the commission itself proceeds by petition to enforce obedience to its orders, than where an individual aggrieved so proceeds, and is not conclusive evidence of such facts.[81]

Pending Action by Court.—A decision of the interstate commerce commission that certain allowances in the tariff on sugar constituted rebates and should be eliminated operates to eliminate such allowances until the decision was reversed or suspended.[82]

Finding Reasonableness of Rates.—The interstate commerce commission may determine the reasonableness of rates and award reparation, and when it does so its conclusions are final unless it has exceeded its prescribed functions in some particular material to the controversy.[83]

Finding of Amount of Demurrage Charges.—A decision of the interstate commerce commission that demurrage charges assessed by a carrier were collectible, but that the commission had no means of determining their reasonableness, and that the consignee could file a formal complaint, was not res judicata as to the amount of demurrage and storage charges which the carrier might collect on a different shipment.[84]

§§ 4171-4181. Enforcing, Enjoining and Annulling—§ 4171. In General.—Interstate Commerce Act, § 16, provides that whenever any common carrier, as defined in such act, shall violate, refuse, or neglect to obey any lawful order or requirement of the commission, not founded on a controversy requiring a trial by jury, it shall be lawful for the commission or any person interested to apply in a summary way by a petition to the circuit court of the United States sitting in equity for the enforcement of such order; and, if the matters involved require a trial by jury, it shall be lawful for any person interested to apply to a court of the United States sitting as a court of law to fix a time for a trial of the case, etc The interstate commerce commission, though clothed with quasi-judicial functions, being an administrative body, no lawful order referred to is self-executing.[85] The interstate commerce commission is invested with only administrative powers of supervision and investigation, which fall far short of making it a court, or its action judicial, in the proper sense of the term. Its action or conclusion upon matters brought before it for investigation is neither final nor conclusive; nor is it invested with any authority to enforce its decision or award. It hears, investigates, and reports upon complaints made before it; but subsequent judicial proceedings are contemplated and provided for as the remedy for the enforcement of the order or report of the commission in all cases where the party against whom its decision is rendered does not yield voluntary obedience thereto.[86]

§ 4172. Necessity for Lawful Order.—If the order be not a lawful one, the court is without power to enforce it.[87] Under the decisions of the supreme

81. Whether proceeding instituted by commission or individual.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 49 Fed. 177.

82. Pending action court.—American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 652.

83. Finding reasonableness of rates.—Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 113 C. C. A. 552, 193 Fed. 924.

84. Finding of amount of demurrage charges.—Neustadt v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (App. Div.), 144 N. Y. S. 911.

85. Enforcing, enjoining and annulling.—Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

86. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

87. Necessity for lawful order.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585, 26 S. Ct. 330.

Unless a valid order has been made by the commission and violated by the company, no relief can be granted to the petitioners. Farmers', etc., Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 83 Fed. 249.

court prior to the amendment of the statute, which conclusively determined that the interstate commerce commission has no power to fix rates for the carriage of interstate freight, a decree of a court for the enforcement of a rate so fixed by the commission is without authority.[88]

Order Presumed Valid.—In a proceeding to enforce, enjoin or annul an order of the interstate commerce commission, the presumption is that the order is valid, and the burden is upon the party taking it to make a clear case showing its invalidity.[89] On demurrer to a bill filed by the interstate commerce commission for the enforcement of an order made by it, any substantial doubt as to the lawfulness of the order should be resolved in its favor.[90]

Order Supported by Finding.—A finding by the interstate commerce commission that the purpose and effect of a rule and practice adopted by railroad companies, by which, as initial carriers, they reserved the right to route through shipments beyond their own lines, were to assist in carrying into effect a pooling agreement between their connecting carriers, made in violation of the interstate commerce law, is pertinent to, and supports the lawfulness of, an order requiring the companies to desist from maintaining and enforcing such rule.[91]

Necessity for Identification of Cause of Action in Order.—An action may be maintained in a circuit court under the Interstate Commerce Act to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission awarding reparation to a shipper for an unlawful charge by a railroad company, where the complaint and the record show that the cause of action is the same as that acted on by the commission, which need not necessarily be set out in its order.[92]

Order Fixing Rates.—A court having no constitutional power to regulate commerce or to fix rates to be charged by a carrier can not suspend or vacate an order of the interstate commerce commission prescribing rates under the power conferred by the Interstate Commerce Act except on the ground that in making such order the commission transcended its power or exercised such power without due regard to law and in violation of some legal, constitutional or natural right of the carriers affected.[93]

Order Ignoring Facts.—An order of the interstate commerce commission prohibited railway carriers from charging greater compensation for the transportation of window shades of any description than the rate charged for the transportation of the materials used in making such shades. On petition to enforce compliance with the order, that the court would refuse to enforce such order, ignoring, as it did, the element of the value of the service in fixing the reasonable compensation of the carrier, and denying him any remuneration for additional risk.[94]

Indefinite and Uncertain.—An order by the interstate commerce commission, authorizing a railway company to make commodity rates on competitive traffic to terminal points less than rates on like traffic to intermediate points, but directing that such commodity rates must not be lower than necessary to meet competition, nor be applied to articles not actually subject thereto, is a mere general statement of legal duty too indefinite to be enforced.[95]

Order to Operate Indefinitely.—It is not an objection to an order of the interstate commerce commission, or to the rendition of a decree of the circuit court for its enforcement, that it is made in terms to operate indefinitely, without any

88. Southern Pac. Co. v. Colorado, etc., Iron Co., 101 Fed. 779, 42 C. C. A. 12.

89. Order presumed valid.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

90. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Fed. 597.

91. Order supported by finding.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Fed. 597.

92. Necessity for identification of cause of action in order.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feintuch, 191 Fed. 482.

93. Order fixing rates.—Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 174 Fed. 687.

94. Order ignoring facts.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 723.

95. Indefinite and uncertain.—Farmers', etc., Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 83 Fed. 249.

reservation of power to modify it in accordance with changes of conditions.[96]

Facts Not Conclusions to Be Stated.—It is not sufficient for the report of the interstate commerce commission, upon a complaint made to and investigated by it, to state merely conclusions, with respect either to law or facts; but it should show what the issues in the case are, and what facts it finds in regard to such issues, with suitable reference to the evidence, so as to give the parties and the court, in any judicial proceedings afterwards instituted, such definite and distinct information as to what was found, and the commission's opinion thereon, as would be necessary to make a judicial opinion sufficient and satisfactory for the purposes of ordinary litigation.[97]

Arbitrary Ruling.—An order of the commission, directing a railroad company to wholly discontinue a long-established custom of furnishing cartage to consignees and consignors in a particular city, is not a lawful order, such as the courts are required, by the act, to enforce, if it will operate to deprive the carrier of its business at that place. The method of redress by readjusting rates must always be left, in the first instance, at least, to the carrier itself; and an arbitrary and peremptory order to abandon a long-established accessorial cartage service at a particular place, without regard to any rates, or without any option to readjust them, is unlawful.[98]

Sufficiency of Evidence to Support Order.—The lawfulness of an order of reparation issued by the interstate commerce commission does not necessarily depend on a sufficiency of evidence adduced before the commission, but on the existence of facts, whether disclosed or not before that body, warranting the reparation ordered; and in an action to enforce such reparation it is sufficient that such facts be established by proper evidence.[99]

§ 4173. Nature of Proceeding.—The act does not make the circuit court the mere executioner of the commissioners' order or recommendation, so as to impose upon the court a nonjudicial power. The court is not restricted to the mere ministerial duty of enforcing an order of the commission. The suit in the federal court is, under the provisions of the act, an original and independent proceeding, in which the commissioners' report is made prima facie evidence of the matters or facts therein stated. The court is not confined to a mere re-examination of the case as heard and reported by the commission, but hears and determines the cause de novo, upon proper pleadings and proofs; the latter including not only the prima facie facts reported by the commission, but such further testimony as either party may introduce, bearing upon the matters in controversy.[1] A state statute requiring affidavits of defense, which is applicable only to actions founded on contract alone, does not apply to a statutory proceeding to enforce an order of reparation by the interstate commerce commission.[2]

§ 4174. Jurisdiction and Venue.—The circuit court is given authority to enforce any lawful order or requirement of the commission.[3] Congress has exer-

96. Order to operate indefinitely.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 409.

97. Facts not conclusions to be stated.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 409.

98. Arbitrary ruling.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803.

99. Sufficiency of evidence to support order.—Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin., Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

1. Nature of proceeding.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

A suit brought by one in whose favor the interstate commerce commission has made an award of damages by way of reparation, under the authority of Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 16, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, § 5, and Act June 29, 1906, § 5, is not a suit on the award qua award to recover the amount of the same, but a plenary suit for damages actually sustained by the plaintiff by reason of some violation of the act by defendant. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Clark, 207 Fed. 717.

2. Naylor & Co. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 188 Fed. 860.

3. Jurisdiction and venue.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 16.

cised this power, and the righteous orders of the great commission it has primarily entrusted with the tremendous duty should in all proper cases be respected and enforced by the courts of the country.[4]

Equity Jurisdiction.—Under the Interstate Commerce Act the circuit courts, sitting in equity, have jurisdiction to entertain, hear and determine suits to compel obedience to the orders of the commission, and also of suits to annul or enjoin the enforcement of such orders.[5]

One of Several Parties Not within District.—An order of the interstate commerce commission, made against two railroad companies in respect to a joint rate, in a proceeding to which both were parties, may be enforced by a circuit court against one of the companies which is within its jurisdiction, although the other is without its jurisdiction, and can not be made a party.[6]

Jurisdiction of State Court.—Jurisdiction of a claim for damages against an interstate carrier because of excessive rates charged and collected by it from the claimant is expressly limited by the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, to the interstate commerce commission or a district or circuit court of the United States, and the provision of the act, as amended by Act June 18, 1910, extending such jurisdiction to the state courts, applies, by its terms, only to claims which have been previously determined by the commission, and on which it has made awards which have not been complied with.[7]

Power to Modify or Change.—The power given to the courts to compel obedience to the "lawful order" of the commission, being special and statutory, is strictly limited to the power conferred; and consequently the courts can only grant or refuse compulsory obedience to the order, and have no authority to modify or change it.[8]

§ 4175. Parties.—Proper and Necessary Parties.—In proceeding against a carrier of interstate commerce to enforce an order of the commission, another carrier concerned with the defendant in jointly making the forbidden rate is a proper, but not a necessary, party defendant.[9] In a suit by the interstate commerce commission against a railroad company to enforce obedience to an order requiring it to desist from the enforcement of a rule reserving to itself, as initial carrier, the unqualified right of routing beyond its own terminal all shipments made under an established through joint rate, the connecting carriers joining in the making of such through rate, while proper, are not necessary, parties.[10]

Intervenors.—In suits against the interstate commerce commission to enjoin

4. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

5. Equity jurisdiction.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

6. One of several parties not within district.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 6 C. C. A. 653, 57 Fed. 948, affirming 52 Fed. 187.

Where a number of railroads, operated under a common control and management, establish a rate interdicted by an order of the interstate commerce commission, the act of one of the companies in charging freight at such rate in a particular judicial district, to be carried over the various lines, is a violation or disobedience of the order in such district, within the meaning of § 16 of the interstate commerce act, as amended in 1889 (24 Stat. 860), so as to give the circuit court of that district jurisdiction of a suit by the commission to enforce its order against all the companies. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 74 Fed. 42.

7. Jurisdiction of state court.—Darnell v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 190 Fed. 656.

8. Power to modify or change.—Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 C. C. A. 103, 74 Fed. 803, reversing 57 Fed. 1005.

9. Parties.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666, affirming 6 C. C. A. 653, 57 Fed. 948.

In proceedings under § 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act (24 Stat. 384) against a carrier to enforce an order of the commissioners, it is not necessary that another carrier, making the forbidden rate jointly with defendant, be made a party to the suit. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 187.

10. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Fed. 597.

orders issued by them, parties similarly situated may intervene.[11] In a suit by a railroad company against the interstate commerce commission to enjoin or annul an order of the commission, third parties interested in such order are not entitled to intervene as of right, but may be permitted to do so at the request of the commission, on condition that the hearing shall not thereby be delayed.[12] Under the broad provisions of the last proviso of § 5 of the Act of June 18, 1910, creating the commerce court, "that communities, associations, corporations, firms and individuals who are interested in the controversy or question before the interstate commerce commission, or in any suit which may be brought by any one under the terms of this act, relating to action of the interstate commerce commission, may intervene in said suit or proceeding at any time after the institution thereof," an incorporated grain exchange or a board of trade of a city, most or all of whose numbers are engaged in business which will be directly affected by an order of the commission, is interested in the question involved, and is entitled to intervene in a suit in the commerce court brought to enjoin the enforcement of such order.[13]

Enforcement against Receiver.—In an application to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission against railroad receivers, the same rules and principles must be applied as if the railroad were being operated by the railroad company itself.[14] Since execution can not issue against the property of a railroad company in the hands of a receiver appointed by a federal court to enforce a judgment for damages sustained by the charge of discriminating freight rates in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, the receiver as such should not be joined with other railroad companies constituting a through route, against which the judgment would constitute a personal liability, to be enforced by execution at law.[15]

Joinder of Parties.—Any party against whom an order fixing rates is made by the interstate commerce commission may petition the court for redress without joining other parties to the order, such suit being plenary, and the injury, if any, being several and not joint.[16]

Persons Affected by Order.—Parties injuriously affected by orders of the interstate commerce commission may sue in the circuit courts to enjoin, suspend, or annul such orders, though they were not parties to the proceedings before the commission on which the orders were based.[17]

Competing Carriers.—Interstate carriers who, although not parties to proceedings before the interstate commerce commission, nor named in an order made by the commission fixing rates on a commodity between certain points, are competitors of the carriers named therein in such traffic and therefore necessarily affected by the order, have such an interest therein as entitles them to maintain a suit to enjoin its enforcement, and, while they may properly apply to the commission for a rehearing, such action is not a necessary condition precedent to such a suit.[18]

§ 4176. Pleadings.—In a suit by carriers to annul an order of the interstate commerce commission fixing rates on the ground that such rates are confiscatory and unconstitutional, in that they are not reasonably compensatory, and would

11. Intervenors.—Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

12. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 169 Fed. 894.

13. Nashville Grain Exch. v. United States, 191 Fed. 37.

14. Enforcement against receiver. — Farmers', etc., Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 83 Fed. 249.

15. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

16. Joinder of parties.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449.

17. Persons affected by order.—Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.
Carriers necessarily affected by an order of the interstate commerce commission, although not parties thereto, may maintain a suit to enjoin its enforcement. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449.

18. Competing carriers.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449.

not produce enough revenue to pay the actual cost of the service and a reasonable profit, the bill should allege facts in support of such conclusions, such as the amount of revenue derived from the traffic affected, and so far as possible the cost of the service, or other facts from which the court can determine for itself whether the rates fixed are reasonably compensatory, and would produce a reasonable profit.[19]

Allegations of Law and Fact.—The allegation that there was no evidence offered, heard, or introduced is an allegation of fact so far as the question of pleading is concerned, but whether or not there is at the close of a final trial any evidence to sustain a finding of fact made by a judicial or quasi judicial tribunal is always a question of law, which in a case like the one at bar this court has jurisdiction to determine.[20] In a suit by carriers to annul an order of the interstate commerce commission declaring an existing rate unjust and unreasonable and establishing a lower rate, an allegation in the bill that there was no evidence before the commission to show the unreasonableness of the existing rate or the reasonableness of the one prescribed is an allegation of fact and sufficient as a matter of pleading, but whether or not there is at the close of a final trial any evidence to sustain the findings of the commission is a question of law, which the court has jurisdiction to determine.[21]

Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—The act to regulate commerce creates a rule of presumption in favor of the report of the interstate commerce commission which on its introduction in evidence changes the burden of proof and casts it upon the party against whom the report is made.[22] The conclusions of the interstate commerce commission, based upon its findings of fact that charges made by a railroad company are unjust and unreasonable or unlawfully discriminating, are presumed to be well founded and correct, and in a suit to enforce its orders the burden rests upon the company to show them to be erroneous.[23]

§§ 4177-4178. Evidence—§ 4177. Admissibility.—Evidence taken before the interstate commerce commission is not a part of the record, but either party, upon petition to enforce the order of the commission, may introduce any testimony taken before the commission, which is competent and relevant.[24] Under the charge of a denial of equal facilities for the interchange of traffic, the conduct of respondent in so arranging the running of its trains that greater facilities for interchanging, forwarding, and delivering freight were afforded to a competing connecting line than to petitioner, was proper to be shown to the court in a proceeding to enforce an order of the commission, though no question of the hours of running trains was presented to the commission in express terms.[25]

§ 4178. Weight and Sufficiency.—Explicit law, the settled policy of the government, and the practical principles of reason and justice, require that the national courts should not discredit the conclusions of the interstate commerce

19. Pleadings.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449.

20. Allegations of law and fact.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449, citing Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 147, 46 L. Ed. 1093, 22 S. Ct. 807; United States Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Board, 76 C. C. A. 114, 145 Fed. 144; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. Ed. 525, 16 S. Ct. 366; Southern Pac. Co. v. Pool, 160 U. S. 438, 40 L. Ed. 485, 16 S. Ct. 338; The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, 26 L. Ed. 1100; Clement v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 7 Blatchf. 51, Fed. Cas. No. 2,882; Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 35 L. Ed. 213, 11 S. Ct. 569; Howe v. Parker, 190 Fed. 738; Fisher v. Scharadin, 186 Pa. 565, 40 Atl. 1091.

21. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 194 Fed. 449.

22. Presumptions and burden of proof.—Tift v. Southern R. Co., 138 Fed. 753, decree affirmed in 148 Fed. 1021, 79 C. C. A. 536 and 27 S. Ct. 709, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124.

23. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 118 Fed. 613.

24. Evidence.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 981.

25. New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 867.

commission.[26] Evidence can not be weighed by the supreme court, as a matter of first impression, in a suit to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission, for the purpose of ascertaining whether it establishes such substantial and material competition as justified a carrier in concluding that dissimilarity of circumstance and condition was brought about.[27] It is in evidence that, regardless of competition, a cheap grade of lumber could not get to market from a certain place without a favoring rate and whether traffic will move at a given rate is always some evidence as to whether the rate responds to the value of the service performed. The commission had this and the other matters to which reference is made to guide in the conclusion reached. The rate was thus not fixed arbitrarily or without considerations which justified it, and, above all, not for the purpose of enforcing a policy inaugurated by the carrier, which it was held could not equitably be abandoned, but in the exercise of due judgment, after full consideration of the entire subject, as shown by the reasons given for it; and, this being so, the order was lawfully made.[28]

The mere opinions of the interstate commerce commission are inadmissible in an action brought for the enforcement of an order of pecuniary reparation.[29] But where a proceeding to enforce the commission's findings is tried by a federal court without a jury, it is not error for the court to receive the commission's report in evidence without excluding matters of opinion stated therein, as distinguished from the commission's findings of fact.[30] An action by one in whose favor the interstate commerce commission has made an award by way of reparation for excessive rates is governed by the same rules of evidence as other civil actions, except that the findings and order of the commission are admissible as prima facie evidence "of the facts therein stated;" but the award of the commission is not such a finding, and is not evidence of any liability of defendant to plaintiff.[31] If this case had been tried before a jury, it might have been the court's duty to separate the findings of fact from matters of opinion and to instruct the jury to disregard the latter,[32] but such a rule is inapplicable to a trial before the court alone.[33] The commerce court, in examining the report of the interstate commerce commission, to ascertain the particular provisions of the interstate commerce act relied on to sustain a particular order, is limited to the report of the majority of the commission, the views of the minority not being open to consideration.[34]

Facts Stated in Order.—The provision of the act that a report of the commission in writing in respect to investigations into the reasonableness of rates, and that in case damages are awarded such report shall include the findings of fact on which the award is made, does not authorize the commission on a determination that a party complaining is entitled to an award of damages against a carrier because of the charge and collection of excessive rates in the violation of the provision to make an order directing the payment of such damages on or before a day named, and that on a failure to comply with such order, the complainant may file a petition in a circuit court, set forth causes for which he

26. Weight and sufficiency.—Decree, Tift v. Southern R. Co., 138 Fed. 753, affirmed in 148 Fed. 1021, 79 C. C. A. 536.

27. Decree, Behlmer v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 83 Fed. 898, 28 C. C. A. 229, reversed in 20 S. Ct. 209, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309.

28. Southern Pac. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 167.

29. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

30. The findings and the conclusions of the commission were embraced in an opinion prepared by one of the members. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

31. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Clark, 207 Fed. 717.

32. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn. Refin. Co., 70 C. C. A. 23, 137 Fed. 343.

33. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

34. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 229; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 241.

claims damages and the order of the commission, and that such suit shall proceed in all respects like other suits for damages, except that on the trial of such suit the findings and order of the commission shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein named, do not make the order prima facie evidence in such suit of the liability of the carrier, but only of the facts stated in the order and findings, and it is the province of the court to determine whether such facts sustain the order.[35] An order of the interstate commerce commission awarding damages to a complainant against railroad companies is not sustained by findings that the carriers charged a rate on lumber shipped by the complainant which was excessive and unreasonable to the extent of the damages awarded, where it is also found that the complainant added the increased freight to the price of the lumber and the same was paid by the consumer, and it is not found that the freight was in fact paid by the complainant, or that it in any way suffered actual damage from the excessive rate.[36]

Orders as to Long and Short Haul.—On a proceeding in the circuit court, under Interstate Commerce Act, § 16, to enforce an order of the commissioners directing certain carriers to desist from charging a greater rate for a shorter than for a longer haul, the facts found by the commission are not conclusive, but are merely prima facie evidence, subject to be overcome by other evidence produced before the court.[37]

Order Awarding Reparation.—In an action against a railroad company brought under the Interstate Commerce Act to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission, awarding reparation to a shipper, which is tried to the court, the admission in evidence of the report of the commission is not error although it may contain irrelevant matter.[38]

Analogous to Report of Referee.—The commission is charged with the duty of investigating and reporting upon complaints, and the facts found or reported by it are only given the force and weight of prima facie evidence in such judicial proceedings as may thereafter be had for the enforcement of its recommendation or order. The functions of the commission are those of referees or special commissioners, appointed to make preliminary investigation of, and report upon, matters for subsequent judicial examination and determination. In respect to interstate commerce matters covered by the law, the commission may be regarded as the general referee of each and every circuit court of the United

35. Facts stated in order.—The Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, §§ 14, 16, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3164, 3165]), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, §§ 3, 5, 34 Stat. 589, 590 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, pp. 1157, 1159), provides that the interstate commerce commission shall make a report in writing in respect to its investigation into the reasonableness of rates, and that "in case damages are awarded such report shall include the findings of fact on which the award is made." They authorize the commission on a determination that a party complainant is entitled to an award of damages against a carrier because of the charge and collection of excessive rates in violation of the act to make an order directing the payment of such damages on or before a day named, and provide that, on a failure to comply with such order, the complainant for whose benefit it is made may file a petition in a circuit court "setting forth briefly the causes for which he claims damages and the order of the commission in the premises;" that "such suit shall proceed in all respects like other suits for damages, except that on the trial of such suit the findings and order of the commission shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated." Held, that such provisions do not make the order prima facie evidence in such suit of the liability of the carrier, but only of the facts stated in the order and findings, and that it was the province of the court to determine whether such facts sustained the order. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 190 Fed. 659.

36. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 190 Fed. 659.

37. Order as to long and short haul.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 295.

38. Order awarding reparation.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feintuch, 191 Fed. 482.

States upon which the jurisdiction is conferred or enforcing the rights, duties, and obligations recognized and enforced by said law.[39]

§§ 4179-4180. Hearing and Determination—§ 4179. In General.—Originally the duty of the courts to determine whether an order of the commission should or should not be enforced carried with it the obligation to consider both the facts and the law. But it had come to pass prior to the passage of the act creating the commerce court that in considering the subject of orders of the commission, for the purpose of enforcing or restraining their enforcement, the courts were confined by statutory operation to determining whether there had been violations of the constitution, a want of conformity to statutory authority or of ascertaining whether power had been so arbitrarily exercised as virtually to transcend the authority conferred although it may be not technically so.[40] It has also been determined in considering whether an affirmative order of the commerce court, that the commission should be enforced, on the one hand, or set aside and declared nonenforceable on the other was endowed only with the jurisdiction and power existing, at the time that act was passed in the circuit courts of the United States; and as, at that time, it was conclusively settled that the courts had authority to re-examine the findings of the commission in such cases only for the purpose of ascertaining whether the action of the commission was repugnant to the constitution, in excess of the statutory powers conferred upon it, or manifested such an abuse as to be equivalent to an excess of authority, it clearly results that the commerce court was likewise limited in passing upon the petition brought before it.[41] Explicit law, the settled policy of the government, and the practical principles of reason and justice, require that the national courts should not discredit the conclusions of the interstate commerce commission.[42] In an action by the commissioners, under § 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act, in the circuit court sitting as a court of equity, to restrain the defendant railroad companies from further continuing the violation and disobedience of an order of the commission, and to enjoin obedience to the same, where the order, besides requiring the several defendant companies to cease and desist from certain acts found by the commission to constitute unlawful discrimination between shippers, also required them to make reparation to the complaining shippers, the commissioners afterwards determining the amount to which each claimant was entitled, so far as the petition seeks the enforcement of these claims, the court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, but as to the other matters charged it has jurisdiction.[43] In a proceeding in a circuit court to enforce an order made by the commission, the court can not adjust differences between the litigants, or correct abuses in the conduct by a railroad company of its business.[44]

Confined to Order.—Though an action to recover pecuniary reparation ordered by the interstate commerce commission is triable de novo, the cause of action must have been included in the order of reparation, and have constituted the whole or part of the basis of such order, whether the proceeding to enforce the same is in equity or at law.[45]

39. Analogous to report of referee.—Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 567, 2 L. R. A. 289.

40. Hearing and determination.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

41. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761; United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

42. Tift v. Southern R. Co., 138 Fed. 753, decree affirmed in 148 Fed. 1021, 79 C. C. A. 536, and 27 S. Ct. 709, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124.

43. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Western New York, etc., R. Co., 82 Fed. 192.

44. Farmers', etc., Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. Co., 83 Fed. 249.

45. Confined to order.—Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

Reason for Finding.—Where the bill in a suit by the interstate commerce commission to enforce obedience to an order requiring a railroad company to desist from the enforcement of a rule promulgated by such company alleges generally that the rule is violative of the interstate commerce act, which allegation the defendant denies, the issue thus raised extends to every possible violation of the act, and the court is not confined to the grounds or reasons assigned by the commission for its conclusion, but may, without going beyond the issue, reach a like or different conclusion on the same or other grounds or reasons.[46] The enforcement of an order of the interstate commerce commission directing common carriers to desist from maintaining or enforcing a rule adopted by them may be decreed by a federal circuit court if it finds such rule is, for any reason, in violation of the act although such reason may not have been the one relied upon by the commission itself to invalidate the rule.[47]

Trial de Novo.—A suit brought by the interstate commerce commission in the United States circuit court to enforce an order of the commission is an original and independent proceeding, and the court may hear and determine the cause de novo upon proper pleadings and proof.[48] Both in suits to enforce and to annul or enjoin orders of the interstate commerce commission, the court is not confined to a consideration of the sufficiency of the facts as determined by the commission to sustain the order, but the hearing may be de novo, and may include the taking and consideration of evidence other than that before the commission.[49]

Trial by Jury.—In an action to enforce an interstate commerce reparation order based on a discriminating freight rate, whether such rate was just and reasonable or unreasonable and excessive is a question for the jury.[50]

Amendment and Modification of Order.—In a proceeding in a circuit court to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission, the court has no power to amend or modify such order, or to sever from the remainder a part which is illegal, but must enforce the same, if at all, in its entirety as made by the commission.[51]

Distinction between Proceeding to Enforce and Proceeding to Annul.—The scope of inquiry in a proceeding in equity to compel obedience to orders of the 46. Reason for finding.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 132 Fed. 829, reversed Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 26 S. Ct. 330, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585.

47. Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 132 Fed. 829, reversed in 26 S. Ct. 330, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. Ed. 585.

48. Trial de novo.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. 925.

The court will not be limited on the hearing to a review of the evidence before the interstate commerce commission, and a hearing de novo on the merits should be granted where the findings and petition of the commission are within the letter of the act. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 Fed. 272.

49. Sections 15 and 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 384 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165], as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, §§ 4, 5, 34 Stat. 589, 590 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, pp. 900, 902]) confer on the circuit courts, sitting in equity, jurisdiction to entertain, hear, and determine suits to compel obedience to orders of the commission prescribing rates, and also of suits to annul or enjoin the enforcement of such orders. The scope of the inquiry in both classes of suits is the same, and the court is not confined to a consideration of the sufficiency of the facts as determined by the commission to sustain the order, but the hearing may be de novo, and may include the taking and consideration of evidence other than that before the commission; but the presumption is that the order is valid, and the burden is upon the party attacking it to make a clear case showing its invalidity. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

50. Trial by jury.—Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

51. Amendment and modification of order. — Decree, Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 134 Fed. 942, affirmed in 26 S. Ct. 766, 202 U. S. 613, 50 L. Ed. 1171.

commission and in a suit to annul or enjoin the enforcement of such orders, is the same.[52]

Findings of Law.—Under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act the courts have jurisdiction to set aside or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission resulting from a misconception and misapplication of the law to conceded or undisputed facts.[53]

Findings of Fact.—The findings of fact set forth in the report of the interstate commerce commission are, in all judicial proceedings, deemed prima facie evidence as to each and every fact found.[54] The provision that the findings of fact of the interstate commerce commission shall be prima facie evidence of the facts found in a subsequent proceeding to enforce the commission's order, contemplated that the findings of fact should be so prepared and arranged in the commission's report that they could be offered in evidence unaccompanied by extraneous or incompetent legal arguments, opinions, or other conclusions.[55] Originally the duty of the courts to determine whether an order of the commission should or should not be enforced carried with it the obligation to consider both the facts and the law; but prior to the passage of the act creating the commerce court the statute had made the findings of the commission prima facie correct, so that in considering the subject of orders of the commission, for the purpose of enforcing or restraining their enforcement, the courts were confined by statutory operation to determining whether there had been violations of the constitution, a want of conformity to statutory authority, or of ascertaining whether power had been so arbitrarily exercised as virtually to transcend the authority conferred although it may be not technically doing so. In reviewing the findings of the commission, therefore, the courts will not examine the facts further than to determine whether there was substantial evidence to sustain the order; or whether the commission acted arbitrarily and unjustly and contrary to the evidence; or whether its authority was exercised in such an unreasonable and arbitrary manner as to cause it to be within the elementary rule that the substance, and not the shadow, determines the validity of the exercise of power.[56] In a proceeding to enforce the orders of the commission, the circuit court has jurisdiction to review the judgment of the commission upon questions of fact as to whether rates charged are unjust or unreasonable or constitute unjust discriminations or preferences, or whether circumstances and conditions are substantially similar, and the court is not limited to the inquiry whether or not the commission has misconstrued the statute and thereby exceeded its power, and there is general jurisdiction to take evidence upon the merits of the original controversy. This is apparent from those portions of the act which provide that, when the court is invoked by the commission to enforce its lawful orders or requirements, the court shall proceed, as a court of equity, to hear and determine the matter, and in 52. Distinction between proceeding to enforce and proceeding to annul.—Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 645.

53. Findings of law.—Stickney v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 164 Fed. 638.

54. Findings of fact by commission.—Tift v. Southern R. Co., 138 Fed. 753, decree affirmed in 148 Fed. 1021, 79 C. C. A. 536, and 27 S. Ct. 709, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124.

55. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

56. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; S. C., 218 U. S. 113, 54 L. Ed. 959, 30 S. Ct. 660, reversing 171 Fed. 680; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392, reversing 166 Fed. 499; Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

such manner as to do justice in the premises.[57] Having arrived at the conclusion that the order of the commission was not sustained by the facts upon which it was predicated, the court can not enter into an independent investigation of the facts, even if it be conceded the record is in a condition to enable it to do so, in order that new and substantive findings, of fact may be evolved, upon which the order of the commission may be sustained.[58] But the findings of fact made by the interstate commerce commission are only prima facie evidence. The court may direct further evidence to be taken, and, if it shall appear that the facts are otherwise than as reported by the commission, the court would be governed by the facts as found by itself.[59] If the particular matter in issue before the interstate commerce commission and inquired into was one of fact, and a full hearing was afforded, and the conclusion reached is supported by substantial evidence, it will not be nullified by the courts.[60] On application to the courts to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission which is based on an erroneous construction of the statute, by reason of which error it has declined adequately to find the facts, the courts will not proceed to an original investigation of the facts which should have been passed upon by the commission, but will correct the error of law committed by that body, and, after doing so, dismiss the application without prejudice to the right of the commission to make a further investigation of the facts.[61]

§ 4180. Particular Orders of Commission.—Denying Constitutional Rights.—The wisdom of the lawful discharge of the administrative duties of the interstate commerce commission is not reviewable by the courts; but they may relieve from orders of the commission which deprive complainants of their property without due process of law or without just compensation, or from those which show an unreasonable exercise of power.[62]

Fixing of Rates.—Since the fixing of a schedule of interstate rates by the interstate commerce commission is a legislative act, such schedule can not be disturbed by the commerce court on complaint of a shipper as unconstitutionally high unless it clearly appears that the rates so fixed are so high as to be violative of the shipper's constitutional rights, guaranteed by the fifth amendment to the federal constitution.[63] It is not ground for interference by the courts with an order of the interstate commerce commission reducing certain rates charged by a railroad company that competing companies in consequence of their failure to meet the reduction are losing traffic.[64]

Where Rate Confiscatory.—The action of the interstate commerce commission in fixing a rate to be charged by an interstate carrier under the legislative power conferred by the Interstate Commerce Act, can be reviewed by the courts only on the constitutional ground that it is confiscatory, and such claim should be clearly established to warrant their interference.[65] But it has been held that an order of the interstate commerce commission fixing rates to be charged by a

57. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

58. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182, 22 S. Ct. 824; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

59. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

60. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 195 Fed. 953.

61. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 21 S. Ct. 512, 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, modifying decree, 93 Fed. 83, 35 C. C. A. 217; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 21 S. Ct. 516, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, reversing decree, 99 Fed. 52, 39 C. C. A. 413.

62. Particular orders of commission.—Peavey & Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 176 Fed. 409.

63. Fixing of rates.—Hooker v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 242; Eagle White Lead Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 188 Fed. 256.

64. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 195 Fed. 953.

65. Where rate confiscatory.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 177 Fed. 963.

carrier is not conclusive and exempt from review by the courts merely because the rates fixed thereby are not confiscatory.[66]

Finding Just and Reasonable Rates.—With regard to the finding of the commission upon the character of a rate, whether it is unreasonable as decided, such decision, the court has said with tiresome repetition, is peculiarly the province of the commission to make, and that its findings are fortified by presumptions of truth, due to the judgments of a tribunal appointed by law and informed by experience.[67] The statute makes the finding of the interstate commerce commission prima facie correct, and the courts will not examine the facts on which the interstate commerce commission based its order reducing rates further than to determine whether there was substantial evidence to sustain the order.[68] A finding by the interstate commerce commission that a just and reasonable charge for the privilege of reconsigning hay at East St. Louis was one cent per hundredweight was prima facie evidence of its own truth.[69] A petition by the interstate commerce commission for an order of a federal court enjoining a carrier from making certain charges, which the commission has declared to be unreasonable and unjust, is authorized by the Interstate Commerce Act, and is not subject to objection as an attempt to fix maximum rates; the question of the reasonableness of the charges complained of being one which the court is required to determine in such proceeding.[70]

Finding Discrimination in Rates.—The circuit court should enforce an order of the interstate commission forbidding any discrimination in rates, even though some discrimination might be justifiable, when the rates actually charged are unlawful, and the carrier makes no showing as to what would be a lawful discrimination under the circumstances.[71]

Finding Discrimination in Long and Short Haul.—The determination of the commission upon questions of discrimination, under the third section, and on questions as to the similarity of circumstances and conditions, as affecting the right to charge a greater amount for a longer than for a shorter haul, under the fourth section, is not conclusive upon the courts; but, when the power of the courts is invoked to enforce the commission's orders, such courts are entitled to

66. Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

67. Finding just and reasonable rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

Findings of the interstate commerce commission that certain through rates are unreasonable in themselves carry with them a presumption of correctness. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; S. C., 218 U. S. 113, 54 L. Ed. 959, 30 S. Ct. 660, reversing decrees in 171 Fed. 680.

Where the commission exercises its authority to find existing rates unreasonable and undertakes to correct the same by prescribing reasonable rates, its finding is not subject to be reviewed by the court. In other words, an order of the commission is not open to attack in the courts so long as that body has kept within the powers conferred by the statute. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

68. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108. See, also, Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 142, 51 L. Ed. 995, 27 S. Ct. 648.

69. Judgment, St. Louis, etc., Grain Co. v. Southern R. Co., 149 Fed. 609, affirmed in 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

Findings and conclusions of the interstate commerce commission that the transportation of freight by the defendant railroads from New Orleans to Lagrange, and the transportation of like freight from New Orleans to other and more distant points, were under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, and that a higher rate charged to Lagrange than to the more distant points was discriminative, and also unreasonable and unjust in itself, and in violation of the interstate commerce law, affirmed, and an order based on such findings enforced by injunction. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 102 Fed. 709.

70. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 Fed. 272.

71. Finding discrimination in rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 6 C. C. A. 653, 57 Fed. 948.

determine these questions upon the pleadings and the evidence adduced before the commission, and to hear additional evidence, giving effect, however, to the commission's finding of facts as prima facie evidence of the matters therein stated.[72]

Finding Discrimination and Prejudice.—A finding by the interstate commerce commission that a rule promulgated by railroad companies, and the practice thereunder, with respect to a particular kind of traffic, subject shippers to an undue, unjust, and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, and give to the carriers an undue and unreasonable preference and advantage, is one of fact; and an order, based thereon, requiring the companies to desist from maintaining and enforcing such rule, as in violation of the interstate commerce law, is prima facie a lawful order, such as a court is required to enforce in a suit instituted for that purpose.[73]

Refusing to Annul Demurrage Rule.—Since capacity to sue in the commerce court depends on the general equity practice in force in the circuit courts, and prior to the creation of the commerce court a shipper claiming to be injured by a ruling of the interstate commerce commission refusing to annul a private car demurrage rule could have sued in the circuit court to set aside the commission's ruling, such ruling, though granting no affirmative relief, should be construed as an order of the commission which the commerce court had jurisdiction to review on petition of the person conceiving himself injured thereby.[74] Though it is proper, if not necessary, for a shipper objecting to a carrier's demurrage rule to apply first to the interstate commerce commission for relief, the fact that the commission merely dismissed the petition without granting any affirmative relief does not render its action conclusive, so as to deprive the shipper of the right thereafter to proceed to have the commission's ruling reviewed by the commerce court on the ground that the demurrage rule was confiscatory as to the shipper, and, if sustained, would deprive it of its property without due process of law.[75]

Findings in Report of Commission.—Findings of fact in a report of the interstate commerce commission are made by law prima facie evidence of the matters therein stated, and the conclusion of the commission, based upon such findings, that a rate charged by a railroad company between two points is unreasonable and unjust, is presumed to be well founded and correct, and will not be set aside unless error clearly appears.[76]

§ 4181. Injunction.—The granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite, suspending, until determination of the suit, an order of the interstate commerce commission, requiring carriers to desist from alleged discriminatory allowances, is not in excess of its power under Act June 18, 1910, § 3 unless plainly unnecessary.[77] The commerce court, in the exercise of the legal discretion vested in it, will grant a preliminary injunction suspending the operation of an order of the interstate commerce commission, where it is shown that its enforcement will result in the destruction of the business of a large class of shippers in a city and a large loss to them, while the damage which will result to others from its suspension will be small in comparison.[78] Only temporary restraining

72. Finding discrimination in long and short haul.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 45, 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, affirming decree, 74 Fed. 715, 21 C. C. A. 51.

73. Finding discrimination and prejudice.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Fed. 597.

74. Refusing to annul demurrage rule.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 221.

75. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 221.

76. Findings in report of commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 102 Fed. 709.

77. Injunction.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

78. The word "discretion," as used in § 3 of Act June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. 542, c. 309), creating the commerce court, means a legal discretion, a discretion controlled and limited by sound principles of law applied to the facts in each particular case. Nashville Grain Exch. v. United States, 191 Fed. 37.

orders of the commerce court, staying operation of order of the interstate commission, for not more than sixty days, are affected by requirement as to statement of fact as to irreparable damage, and do not apply to a preliminary injunction.[79] Orders made by the interstate commerce commission, which are beyond the power conferred on it by the statute, are subject to review by the courts, which may enjoin their enforcement.[80] A circuit court in a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a rate prescribed by the interstate commerce commission does not act as an appellate rate making commission, but its office is to see that the commission does not exceed its powers, and not to determine whether it erred in the exercise of them. While the court has power to determine whether a rate prescribed is reasonable or not, the power may be limited by circumstances which do not admit of its exercise until the proper conditions exist; and the rule by which it is exercise is that the court will not interfere with the action of the commission, unless it clearly appears that it is beyond its authority and injuriously affects some substantial right of the complainant—is confiscatory, to use that term in its broad sense. Whether it is so or not is the test of reasonableness in such a controversy.[81]

Necessity for Showing Cause.—On motion for a preliminary injunction to restrain certain carriers from violating an order of the interstate commerce commission, the complaint made the alternative suggestion that, if the defendants be allowed to charge and receive present rates, they be required to keep an account with every shipper, and to pay into the registry of the court the excess to be disposed of after the hearing as the court may order. This is an application for a rule nisi, which ought not to be granted unless there is a showing of right in favor of the complainant, which would authorize the granting of a preliminary injunction.[82]

Where Right to Preliminary Injunction Denied by Answer.—A preliminary injunction to compel a carrier to obey an order of the interstate commerce commission in reference to freight rates should be denied, where the answer denies that the rates defendant charges were unreasonable.[83]

§ 4182. Rehearing.—In proceedings to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission, the circuit court can not, on motion for rehearing, substitute the order made by the commission for an order which the commission certified it intended to make.[84]

§§ 4183-4189. Review—§ 4183. Right of Review.—By § 2 of act, the right to appeal to the United States supreme court from an order of the commerce court issuing a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of the affirmative order of the interstate commerce commission, is given in express terms.[85]

Branch Line to Review Order against Main Line.—A tap line railroad company which is directly affected by an order respecting allowances made for services by the trunk line company may have such order reviewed, although it is 79. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 817, 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100.

80. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 171 Fed. 680.

81. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

82. Necessity for showing cause.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 981.

83. Where right to preliminary injunction denied by answer.—Shinkle, etc., Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 62 Fed. 690; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 981.

A preliminary injunction to restrain a carrier from disobeying an order of the interstate commerce commission will not be granted in proceedings under 24 Stat. p. 384, § 16, as amended, when the answer denies the facts on which the order was based. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 49 Fed. 177.

84. Rehearing. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 723.

85. Appeal.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

not directed against the tap line company but against the trunk line company.[86]

§ 4184. Presumptions on Appeal.—Lack of formal proof to sustain an order of the interstate commerce commission reducing rates can not be supplied by a presumption that its findings were supported by the information which the commission is required by the Act of Feb. 10, 1891, § 12, to obtain in order to carry out the objects for which it was created.[87] The interstate commerce commission can not be said to have based its order reducing rates upon a mistake of law in regarding the long maintenance by the carriers of a lower rate while earning dividends as raising a presumption of reasonableness, where the reduced rate fixed by the commission was higher than such earlier rate.[88]

Reasonableness of Other Rates.—On review of an order of the interstate commerce commission requiring the reduction of a particular rate by a railroad company, there is no presumption in favor of the reasonableness of the many other rates in force, which were not under direct investigation, that will overthrow substantial evidence that the rate in question was unreasonable.[89]

§ 4185. Harmless Error.—To constitute prejudicial error when an action at law is tried by the court without a jury, the evidence improperly admitted must have entered into the result at which the trial court arrived.[90] Where on writ of error in a suit to enforce a finding of the interstate commerce commission, the record affirmatively showed that neither the commission nor the circuit court based any part of the judgment sought to be reviewed on certain evidence admitted over objection, the admission of such evidence was harmless.[91]

§ 4186. Scope of Review.—The primary jurisdiction is with the commission, the power of the courts being that of review, and is confined in that review to questions of constitutional power and all pertinent questions as whether the action of the commission is within the scope of the delegated authority under which it purports to have been made.[92] To quote the language of Mr. Justice Lamar in a late case: "There has been no attempt to make an exhaustive statement of the principle involved, but in cases thus far decided, it has been settled that the orders of the commission are final unless (1) beyond the power which it could constitutionally exercise; or (2) beyond its statutory power; or (3) based upon a mistake of law. But questions of fact may be involved in the determination of questions of law, so that an order, regular on its face, may be set aside if it appears that (4) the rate is so low as to be confiscatory and in violation of the constitutional prohibition against taking property without due process of law; or (5) if the commission acted so arbitrarily and unjustly as to fix rates contrary to evidence, or without evidence to support it; or (6) if the authority therein involved has been exercised in such an unreasonable manner as to cause it to be within the elementary rule that the substance and not the shadow, determines the validity of the exercise of the power."[93] "Beyond con-

86. Branch line to review order against main line.—Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

87. Presumptions on appeal.—Louisville, etc., Railroad v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 195 Fed. 541.

88. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

89. Reasonableness of other rates.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. United States, 204 Fed. 986.

90. Harmless error.—Streeter v. Sanitary Dist., 66 C. C. A. 190, 133 Fed. 124.

91. If it be conceded that this evidence was not within the issues, the ruling would not necessarily afford a ground for reversal. Here the record affirmatively shows that neither the commission nor the circuit court based any part of the judgment on the objectionable evidence. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Grain Co., 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614.

92. Scope of review.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155.

93. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108, citing Interstate troversy, in determining whether an order of the commission shall be suspended or set aside, we must consider (a) all relevant questions of constitutional power or right; (b) all pertinent questions as to whether the administrative order is within the scope of the delegated authority under which it purports to have been made; and (c) a proposition which we state independently, although in its essence it may be contained in the previous one, viz, whether, even though the order be in form within the delegated power, nevertheless it must be treated as not embraced therein, because the exertion of authority which is questioned has been manifested in such an unreasonable manner as to cause it, in truth, to be within the elementary rule that the substances, and not the shadow, determines the validity of the exercise of the power."[94]

Questions of Jurisdiction and Authority.—The interstate commerce commission is purely an administrative body. It is true it may exercise and must exercise quasi judicial duties, but its functions are defined, and, in the main, explicitly directed, by the acts creating it and it is not the final judge of its own jurisdiction. On the other hand, if it refused to take jurisdiction under a mistaken view of the law in a proper case, a mandamus will lie to compel it to take jurisdiction.[95]

Questions of Law and Fact.—In determining mixed questions of law and fact, the court confines itself to the ultimate question as to whether the commission acted within its power. It will not consider the expediency or wisdom of the order, or whether, on like testimony, it would have made a similar ruling. The findings of the commission are made by law prima facie true, and the federal supreme court has ascribed to them the strength due to the judgments of a tribunal appointed by law and informed by experience. Its conclusion, of course, is subject to review, but, when supported by evidence, is accepted as final, not that its decision, involving, as it does, so many and such vast public interest, can be supported by a mere scintilla of proof, but the courts will not examine the facts further than to determine whether there was substantial evidence to sustain the order.[96] An independent investigation of the facts can not be entered upon by the supreme court of the United States on appeal from a decree refusing to demand compliance with an order of the interstate commerce commission, in order to evolve new and substantive findings of fact upon which the order of the commission may be sustained, even if the record is in such condition as to permit such a course.[97]

Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

94. Justice White, delivering opinion in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155. See, also, Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. Ed. 311, 15 S. Ct. 268, 360.

95. Questions of jurisdiction and authority.—Mandamus lies to compel the interstate commerce commission to take jurisdiction of a petition alleging violations of the Interstate Commerce Act by a railway company operating in Alaska, where the commission refused to entertain the petition, upon the ground that Alaska was not a territory of the United States, and that the subject matter of the petition was therefore not within the scope of the commission's powers. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

96. Mixed questions of law and fact.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108, citing Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. Ed. 1128, 27 S. Ct. 700.

The commerce court is not authorized to review the determination of disputed questions of fact by the interstate commerce commission, made after a full and fair hearing, on proper notice, unless the commission, exercised its power in an arbitrary and unreasonable manner, or in violation of petitioner's constitutional rights. Florida, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 200 Fed. 797.

97. Decree 43 C. C. A. 209, 103 Fed. 249, affirmed in Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 22 S. Ct. 824, 186 U. S. 320, 46 L. Ed. 1182.

Matters of Record.—On review of an order made after a full hearing on the ground that it is not sustained by any substantial evidence and that the commission acted arbitrarily, such issues must be determined exclusively by the record made before the commission, and new evidence is not admissible.[98]

Matters Not Raised before Commission.—The contention that an arrangement between a terminal company and interstate carriers violates the commodity clause of the Act of June 29, 1906, will not be considered on appeal from the commerce court to review an order enjoining an order of the interstate commerce commission, where such contention is not shown to have been raised before the commission.[99] The contention that an arrangement between a terminal company and certain interstate railway carriers violates the commodity clause of the Act of June 29, 1906, will not be considered on appeal to the federal supreme court from the commerce court, to review an order enjoining the enforcement of an order of the interstate commerce commission, where there is nothing in the record showing that such a contention was pressed upon the commission or considered by that body, or that the order rendered was in any event based upon the commodity clause, especially where the assumption that the order was based upon that clause would necessitate the conclusion that the commission by its order gave sanction to and permitted the continuance of the wrong which its powers were exercised to suppress.[1]

Matters of Discretion.—The courts can not, under the guise of exerting judicial power, usurp merely administrative functions by setting aside an order of the interstate commerce commission within the scope of the power delegated to such commission, upon the ground that such power was unwisely or inexpediently exercised.[2] Arguments which point out and assail the imperfection which may appear in the result, assail, it is said, the wisdom of congress in conferring upon the commission the power which has been lodged in that body to consider, complaints as to violations of the statute, and to correct them if found to exist, or attack as crude or inexpedient the action of the commission in the performance of the administrative functions vested in it, and upon such assumption invoke the exercise of unwarranted judicial power to correct the assumed evils.[3] Although the order made by the commission may have been couched in a form which would cause it, superficially considered, to appear to be but the exercise of an authority to correct an unreasonable rate, yet if it plainly results from the record that the order of the commission was not the exercise of such an authority, but was based upon the assumption by that body of the possession of a power not conferred by law, the mere form given by the commission to its action does not relieve the courts from the duty of reviewing and correcting an abuse of power.[4] Where the order entered by the commission shows on its face that that body assumed that it had power not merely to prevent the charging of unjust and unreasonable rates, but also to regulate and control the general policy of the owners of railroads as to fixing rates, and consequently that there was authority to substitute for a just and reasonable rate one which, in and of itself, in a legal sense, might be unjust and unreasonable, if the commission was satisfied that it was a wise policy to do so, because a railroad had so conducted itself

98. Matters of record.—Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

99. Matters not raised before commission.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 231 U. S. 274, 34 S. Ct. 75.

1. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 231 U. S. 274, 34 S. Ct. 75.

2. Matters of discretion.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; decree, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 173 Fed. 930, reversed in 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. Ed. 291, 30 S. Ct. 163; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

3. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

4. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

as to be estopped in the future from being entitled to receive a just and reasonable compensation for the service rendered, it shows that the commission has been guilty of an abuse of power which the courts have jurisdiction to review and correct.[5]

Finding of Discrimination.—Findings of fact made by the interstate commerce commission in a proceeding for redress for unlawful discrimination in railway rates are not open to review in the courts.[6]

Finding of Establishment of Through Route.—The courts may review the determination of the interstate commerce commission upon the question whether a reasonable or satisfactory through route exists within the meaning of the Act of June 29, 1906, conditioning the authority of the commission to establish through routes and joint rates upon the nonexistence of such route.[7]

Finding That Railroad Is Industrial Track.—A finding of fact that a tap railroad, as to a proprietary company, is a mere plant facility, is reviewable only on an allegation that it is not supported by any substantial evidence or that it is arbitrary.[8]

§ 4187. Modification of Decree of Court.—Where an error was made in rates at a certain point by basing same on an error of fact, which was corrected by the companies on its being brought to their notice by the commission and at the hearing before the court, and a modified tariff was put into operation by the railroad companies at once, immediately after the argument of the case in the circuit court of appeals, and continued in force from that time, the decree below having been entered more than one year after the submission of the cause, and the relief sought by the complaint and that accorded by the commission was inconsistent with the theory that the rates should be based on either of these states of fact, as the altered tariff had been in force more than one year prior to the entry of the decree below, the court doubtless considered it unnecessary to provide for its continuance. The record does not disclose, nor was it suggested, that any application was made to the circuit court of appeals to modify its decree so as to direct the continuance of such new tariff, both parties evidently acting on the reasonable assumption that it was an accomplished fact. Under these circumstances, a formal modification of the decree of the circuit court of appeals is not required.[9]

5. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

Thus where a railroad company fixed a rate of $3.10 per ton upon lumber shipped from a certain locality and continued it in force for several years and until the industry had grown and reached considerable proportions in that locality, the commission had no power to abolish a new rate of $5.00 per ton where such rate was not shown to be unreasonable of itself, but merely upon the ground that the prosperity of the lumber business in that locality would be seriously impaired by the enforcement of the new rate, and that the railroad company, having established a rate under which the industry had grown up, was now estopped from fixing a rate which, while not unreasonable for the service rendered, would impair the prosperity of the business which had grown up under the old rate. Southern Pac. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. Ed. 283, 31 S. Ct. 288.

6. Finding of discrimination.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. Ed. 448, 31 S. Ct. 392, reversing decree 166 Fed. 499, citing Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. Ed. 946, 30 S. Ct. 651; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108.

7. Establishment of through route.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. Ed. 608, 30 S. Ct. 417.

8. Finding that railroad is industrial track.—Arbitrary action in such case can be predicated only on a disregard by the commission of the very criteria which it adopts to determine the ultimate question of fact or on the adoption in different cases of distinctions without real differences. Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244.

9. Modification.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687.

§ 4188. Remand to Commission.—Where, so far as the reasonableness per se of the rates was concerned, in the consideration of this question the commission had been in effect controlled by its finding, held to have been erroneous, that there had been violations of the third and fourth sections of the act, the controversy, in so far as the intrinsic reasonableness of the rates was concerned, should not be foreclosed, but should be left for further consideration and decision upon the evidence already introduced and such additional evidence as might be taken on a further hearing before the commission if such new hearing was desired. After deciding that the orders of the commission were not entitled to be enforced, because of errors of law committed by that body, this court declined to consider the question of the reasonableness per se of the rates as an original question; in other words, the correction of the established schedule without previous consideration of the subject by the commission. It was pointed out that by the effect of the act to regulate commerce it was peculiarly within the province of the commission to primarily consider and pass upon a controversy concerning the unreasonableness per se of the rates fixed in an established schedule. It was, therefore, declared to be the duty of the courts, where the commission had not considered such a disputed question, to remand the case to the commission to enable it to perform that duty, a conclusion wholly incompatible with the conception that courts, in independent proceedings, were empowered by the act to regulate commerce, equally with the commission, primarily to determine the reasonableness of rates in force through an established schedule.[10] "We do not, of course, mean to imply that the commission may not directly institute proceedings in a circuit court of the United States charging a common carrier with disregard of provisions of the act, and that thus it may become the duty of the court to try the case in the first instance. Nor can it be denied that, even when a petition is filed by the commission for the purpose of enforcing an order of its own, the court is authorized to 'hear and determine the matter as a court of equity,'

10. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075. The cases of Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209, and Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687, involved the enforcement against carriers of orders of the commission.

In the case of Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700, the findings of the commission were overruled by the circuit court, after additional evidence taken in the court, and the decision of the circuit court was reviewed in the light of the evidence and reversed by the circuit court of appeals, and this court, in reference to the argument that the commission had not given due weight to the facts that tended to show that the circumstances and conditions were so dissimilar as to justify the rates charged, held that as the question was one of fact, peculiarly within the province of the commission, and as its conclusions had been accepted and approved by the circuit court of appeals, and as this court found nothing in the record that made it our duty to draw a different conclusion, the decree of the circuit court of appeals should be affirmed. Such a holding clearly implies that there was power in the courts below to consider and apply the evidence and in this court to review their decisions. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

So in the case of Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666, the decision of the circuit court of appeals, which affirmed the validity of the order of the commission, upon the ground that, even if ocean competition should be regarded as creating a dissimilar condition, yet that, in the case under consideration, the disparity in rates was too great to be justified by that condition, was reversed by this court, not because the circuit court had no jurisdiction to consider the evidence and thereupon to affirm the validity of the order of the commission, but because that issue was not actually before the court, and that no testimony had been adduced by either party on such an issue; and it was said that the language of the act authorizing the court to hear and determine the matter as a case of equity, "necessarily implies that the court is not concluded by the findings of conclusions of the commission." Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45. See, also, Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

which necessarily implies that the court is not concluded by the findings or conclusions of the commission; yet as the act provides that, on such hearing, the findings of fact in the report of said commission shall be prima facie evidence of the matters therein stated, we think it plain that if, in such a case, the commission has failed in its proceedings to give notice to the alleged offender, or has unduly restricted its inquiries upon a mistaken view of the law, the court ought not to accept the findings of the commission as a legal basis for its own action, but should either inquire into the facts on its own account, or send the case back to the commission to be lawfully proceeded in."[11] Where the interstate commerce commission refuses to weigh the evidence in regard to competition, merely because the competition is wholly between carriers who are subject to the act, the proper practice in this court is to dismiss the petition filed to enforce the order of the commission, and remand the case to the commission, without prejudice to the right of any party in interest to apply to the commission to proceed, on the evidence already introduced before it, or on such evidence as it may allow to be introduced, to hear and determine the matter in controversy in conformity to law.[12]

Where Commission Misconceived Its Powers.—If the circuit court of appeals was of opinion that the commission in making its order had misconceived the extent of its powers, and if the circuit court had erred in affirming the validity of an order made under such misconception, the duty of the circuit court of appeals was to reverse the decree, set aside the order, and remand the cause to the commission, in order that it might, if it saw fit, proceed therein according to law. The defendant was entitled to have its defense considered, in the first instance, at least, by the commission upon a full consideration of all the circumstances and conditions upon which a legitimate order could be founded. The questions whether certain charges were reasonable or otherwise, whether certain discriminations were due or undue, were questions of fact, to be passed upon by the commission in the light of all facts duly alleged and supported by competent evidence, and it did not comport with the true scheme of the statute that the circuit court of appeals should undertake, of its own motion, to find and pass upon such questions of fact, in a case in the position in which the present one was.[13]

Where Commission Erroneously Declined to Find Facts.—Where the commission by reason of its erroneous construction of the statute has in a case to it presented declined to adequately find the facts, it is the duty of the courts, on application being made to them to enforce the erroneous order of the commission, not to proceed to an original investigation of the facts which should have been passed upon by the commission, but to correct the error of law committed by that body, and after doing so to remand the case to the commission so as to afford it the opportunity of examining the evidence and finding the facts as required by law.[14]

§ 4189. Supersedeas Pending Appeal.—The provision of the act, under which resort to the circuit court can be had for the enforcement of lawful orders or requirements of the interstate commerce commission, provides that, when the subject in dispute shall be of the value of two thousand dollars or more, either

11. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

12. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern R. Co., 105 Fed. 703.

13. Where commission misconceived its powers.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

14. Where commission erroneously declined to find facts.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. Ed. 729, 21 S. Ct. 512; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. Ed. 309, 20 S. Ct. 209.

party to such proceeding before said court may appeal to the supreme court of the United States, under the same regulations now provided by law in respect of security for such appeals; but such appeals shall not operate to stay or supersede the order of the court, or the execution of any writ or process thereon, Such provision of the act to regulate commerce relates only to the effect of an appeal, and it does not deprive the circuit courts of their right of control over their own decrees during the term at which they are rendered, and before an appeal is prayed.[15] The provision of § 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act providing that, in proceedings thereunder to enforce an order of the commission, an appeal shall not operate to stay or supersede the order of the court appealed from, is merely declaratory of the general rule in equity, and does not affect the power of the court, under equity rule 93, to grant a stay pending appeal, in its discretion.[16] The enforcement of an order of the interstate commerce commission will be suspended pending an appeal from the commerce court sustaining the order when it is proper from the facts of the case to maintain the status quo.[17] On an appeal to the circuit court of appeals from a decree in proceedings to enforce an order of the interstate commerce commission, the decree of the circuit court is not superseded; but, if an appeal be taken to the supreme court from the decree of the circuit court of appeals, the latter decree is superseded, so that the decree of the circuit court remains in force in any event.[18] A circuit court will not supersede a decree enjoining railroad companies from violating an order of the interstate commerce commission affecting rates, entered in a suit brought by the commission pursuant to § 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act pending an appeal from such decree, where it does not appear that the damage to defendants from the enforcement of the decree will be greater than that which would result to shippers from its suspension.[19] The federal supreme court will not disturb, on appeal, the granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite, until final determination of the suit, suspending an order of the interstate commerce commission requiring carriers to desist from alleged discriminatory allowances, unless an abuse of discretion appears.[20]

§ 4190. Effect of Repeal of Statute on Pending Proceedings.—The new remedies to compel compliance with the act to regulate commerce, given by the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, are so far made applicable to prior pending proceedings to enforce the former act by the provision that pending causes shall not be affected by the repeal of conflicting laws provided for therein, but shall be prosecuted to a conclusion in the manner theretofore provided, "and as modified by the provisions of this act" that a decree granting the relief prayed for in a suit brought on behalf of the United States by its law officers to enjoin discrimination between localities, which suit was unauthorized, because brought before the passage of the later act, must be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings consistent with the act to regulate commerce as originally enacted and subsequently amended.[21]

§§ 4191-4211. Proceedings in Federal Courts—§ 4191. In General.—It is the manifest purpose of the statutes regulating interstate commerce to strike through all pretense and all ingenious devices to the substance of the 15. Supersedeas pending appeal.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 101 Fed. 146.

16. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 137 Fed. 606.

17. Omaha, etc., St. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 222 U. S. 582, 56 L. Ed. 324, 32 S. Ct. 833.

18. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Behlmer, 169 U. S. 644, 42 L. Ed. 889, 18 S. Ct. 502.

19. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Southern Pac. Co., 137 Fed. 606.

20. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

21. Effect of repeal of statute on pending proceedings.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 274, 47 L. Ed. 811, 23 S. Ct. 507.

transaction, and it is the duty of the courts to recognize and carry into effect such purpose in suits for their enforcement.[22]

§ 4192. Statutory Provision.—Section 22 of the act to regulate commerce, provides that nothing in the act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies, can not in reason be construed as continuing in shippers a common-law right, the continued existence of which would be absolutely inconsistent with the provisions of the act. In other words, the act can not be held to destroy itself. The clause is concerned alone with rights recognized in or duties imposed by the act, and the manifest purpose of the provision in question was to make plain the intention that any specific remedy given by the act should be regarded as cumulative, when other appropriate common-law or statutory remedies existed for the redress of the particular grievance or wrong dealt with in the act.[23] The special remedies provided by the Interstate Commerce Act are cumulative, and not exclusive of the general remedies given by the federal judiciary act conferring jurisdiction of all suits and controversies arising under an act of congress, regardless of any diversity of citizenship between the parties.[24] The Hepburn amendment of June 29, 1906, to the Interstate Commerce Act materially restricted the jurisdiction of the courts, and the primary jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission, particularly under § 10 of Act March 2, 1889, has been considerably extended.[25]

§§ 4193-4200. Jurisdiction and Venue—§ 4193. In General.—A suit to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, and to prevent a threatened breach thereof, brought by a person or corporation concerned, is a case arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, and is within the jurisdiction of the federal circuit courts independently of the citizenship of the parties.[26]

No New Jurisdiction Conferred by Act.—Congress did not undertake by the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments to confer any new judicial power upon the courts, but assumed that their ordinary powers would continue and might be invoked by parties complaining of injuries, past or apprehended, from some abuse of its power by the commission resulting in a trespass upon vested rights.[27]

Under Provisions of General Law.—A shipper seeking relief because of the refusal of a carrier to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors consigned to local option or "dry" points, which the carrier seeks to justify under a state statute forbidding the transportation of such shipments, which is attacked as an unlawful regulation of commerce, may invoke the jurisdiction of the courts without first applying to the interstate commerce commission, since the question involved is one of general law, for a judicial tribunal and one not competent for the commission as a purely administrative body.[28]

Under Provision Preserving Common-Law Remedies.—Investigation by the interstate commerce commission and an appropriate finding and order are prerequisite to the right of a shipper to maintain an action to recover from a carrier the excess which he claims to have paid under a regularly established and published rate which is attacked as unjustly discriminatory, notwithstanding the 22. Proceedings before court.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 142 Fed. 247.

23. Statutory provision.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

24. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 771.

25. Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 186 Fed. 237.

26. Jurisdiction.—In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 41 L. Ed. 1110, 17 S. Ct. 658.

27. No new jurisdiction conferred by act.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 184 Fed. 118.

28. Under provisions of general law.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cook Brewing Co., 223 U. S. 70, 56 L. Ed. 355, 32 S. Ct. 189.

provisions of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, § 22, that nothing therein contained "shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies."[29]

Judicial Questions.—Where the questions involved are of a judicial character, not suitable to be determined by a purely administrative body, as in the case of matters involving questions of general law, or where the complaint relates to the performance of duties which are so plain and so independent of previous administrative action of the commission as not to require a prerequisite exertion of power by that body, resort may be had to the courts direct.[30]

§ 4194. Before Hearing by Commission.—Where the grievances complained of are primarily within the administrative competency of the interstate commerce commission they are not subject to be judicially enforced until that body has been afforded, by a complaint made to it, opportunity to exert its administrative functions.[31] When the purpose of the act and the means selected for the accomplishment of that purpose are understood, it is altogether plain that the act contemplated that such an investigation and order by the designated tribunal, the interstate commerce commission, should be a prerequisite to the right to seek reparation in the courts because of exactions under an established schedule alleged to be violative of the prescribed standards. And this is so, because the existence and exercise of a right to maintain an action of that character, in the absence of such an investigation and order, would be repugnant to the declared rule that a rate established in the mode prescribed should be deemed the legal rate, and obligatory alike upon carrier and shipper until changed in the manner provided, would be in derogation of the power expressly delegated to the commission, and would be destructive of the uniformity and equality which the act was designed to secure.[32] The Act of Feb. 4, 1887, while it created new rights in favor of shippers, in order to make those rights fruitful as to the subjects with which the statute dealt coming within the scope of the administrative unity which we have mentioned primarily made the judgment of the administrative body to whom the statute confided the enforcement of the act in the respects stated a prerequisite to a resort to the courts. In other words, as to the subjects stated, the act did give to the courts power to hear the complaint of a

29. Under provision preserving common law remedies.—Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 222 U. S. 506, 56 L. Ed. 288, 32 S. Ct. 114, affirming 64 W. Va. 406, 63 S. E. 323.

30. Judicial questions.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cook Brewing Co., 223 U. S. 70, 56 L. Ed. 355, 32 S. Ct. 189; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

31. Before hearing by commission.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761, citing, as illustrating and making clear the point, Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, 56 L. Ed. 863, 32 S. Ct. 535; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. Ed. 257, 32 S. Ct. 140; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164; Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846; Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 222 U. S. 506, 56 L. Ed. 288, 32 S. Ct. 114, affirming 64 W. Va. 406, 63 S. E. 323.

A person having a claim for overcharge by a carrier or damages from discrimination or attacking the reasonableness of rates, rules, etc., governing interstate commerce, can not sue in the courts until he has presented his claim to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Homer v. Oregon, etc., R. Co. (Utah), 128 Pac. 522.

32. Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 222 U. S. 506, 56 L. Ed. 288, 32 S. Ct. 114; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

The decision in Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846, does not qualify the ruling in the Abilene Case, and is not an authority supporting the right to resort to the courts in advance of action by the commission for relief against unreasonable rates or unjust discriminatory practices which, from their nature, primarily require action by the commission. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

party concerning a violation of the act, but only conferred power to give effect to such complainants, when by previous submission to the commission, they had been sanctioned by a command of that body.[33] In the long interval which intervened between 1887 when the act to regulate commerce was enacted, and June 18, 1910, when the Commerce Court Act was passed, there was no instance where it was held or even seriously asserted, that as to subjects which in their nature were administrative and within the competency of the commission to decide, there was power in a court, by an exercise of original action, to enforce its conceptions as to the meaning of the act to regulate commerce by dealing directly with the subject irrespective of any prior affirmative command or action by the interstate commerce commission. On the contrary, by a long line of decisions, whereby applications to enforce orders of the commission were considered and disposed of or where requests to restrain the enforcement of such orders were passed upon, it appears by the reasoning indulged in that it was never considered that there was power in the courts as an original question without previous affirmative action by the commission to deal with what might be termed in a broad sense the administrative features of the act to regulate commerce by a determining as an original question that there had been a compliance or noncompliance with the provisions of the act.[34] Prior to the Act of Congress Feb. 19, 1903, a United States circuit court had no jurisdiction in equity over a suit instituted by the attorney general of the United States to enjoin a railroad company from granting rebates under the interstate commerce law, especially where no order had been made by the interstate commerce commission on the railroad company to discontinue the forbidden act.[35]

Where Right to Hearing before Commission Barred.—The dismissal of a suit brought by a shipper to recover damages from a carrier for alleged violations of the Act of February 4, 1887, will not be stayed by the federal supreme court, where it concurs in the view of the two courts below that the circuit court had no jurisdiction because of lack of previous action by the interstate commerce commission, until plaintiff can apply to the commission and obtain a ruling upon the question, if the right to apply to the commission was barred by the Act of June 29, 1906, when the case was filed in the court below.[36]

Relief against Unreasonable Rates.—A shipper, seeking relief from unreasonable rates established for interstate commerce, is required by the Interstate Commerce Act to primarily invoke redress through the interstate commerce commission, which is vested with exclusive original jurisdiction to determine the reasonableness of rates fixed in an established schedule.[37] An action against a car-

33. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

34. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

35. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 142 Fed. 176.

36. Where right to hearing before commission barred.—Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 230 U. S. 304, 33 S. Ct. 938.

37. Relief against unreasonable rates.—Judgment, 108 N. Y. S. 659, 57 Misc. Rep. 614, reversed in Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. La Due, 112 N. Y. S. 964, 128 App. Div. 594.

A transportation company may at the outset establish its rates without previous application to the interstate commerce commission and the question as to the reasonableness of such rate can be heard in the first instance only before such commission. Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Coolidge (Ore.), 116 Pac. 93.

A United States circuit court is without jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of interstate railroad rates in advance of action thereon by the interstate commerce commission under the Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, as amended by Act June 29, 1906. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Foster Lumber Co., 122 Pac. 139, 31 Okla. 661.

Under the Interstate Commerce Act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]) a court has not the power, in the first instance, to inquire into the reasonableness of a rate regularly established by a carrier and filed with the interstate commerce commission and published, but whether or not a rate is reasonable is, in the first instance, for the commission. Great Northern R. Co.

rier for discrimination in rates and granting unlawful rebates to plaintiff's competitors, affecting not only the plaintiff, but other shippers in the same region, can not be first instituted in a federal circuit court, the interstate commerce commission having exclusive original jurisdiction to determine whether a regulation or a practice affecting rates or matters sought to be regulated by the Interstate Commerce Act is unjust or unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, preferential, or prejudicial, and this though the regulation or practice complained of had ceased.[38] An interstate railroad company published a tariff on poles providing that the poles might be dressed, sawed, concentrated in transit, and shipped from origin to concentration point and then to destination at through rates which were less than the sum of the local rates but only on condition that the shipping bill issued at the point of origin specified the ultimate destination. This condition, having been submitted to the interstate commerce commission on the complaint of other shippers, was declared void and an order passed that it should be disregarded. The complainant was entitled to sue in a federal court to recover the difference in rates paid on shipments of poles on which it was not accorded through rates because of the enforcement of such condition prior to its being declared void by the commission without itself presenting its cause of action to the commission and obtaining a reparation order on which to sue; such requirement imposed by § 16, Interstate Commerce Act, being intended only for the exercise of the commission's legislative powers to determine the reasonableness of the condition, and, the commission having once acted, it was not necessary that an injured shipper should again present the same question to the commission before electing to sue directly in the federal court as authorized by § 9.[39]

Relief against Discrimination in General.—The original jurisdiction of the federal courts under § 9 of the Interstate Commerce Act, has not been entirely destroyed, and they still may redress such wrongs as can consistently with the act be redressed without previous action by the interstate commerce commission, and, when one sues for discrimination by a carrier, it is necessary in the first in-

v. Loonan Lumbee Co., 25 S. Dak. 155, 125 N. W. 644.

Enjoining increase in rates.—Where a railroad company entered into a contract with complainant that, in consideration of complainant's establishment of a cement factory on its line with a capacity of not less than 600 barrels a day, the carrier's regular established tariff rates on cement during a specified period should not exceed those set out in a schedule, complainant, in a suit to restrain the railroad company from establishing and filling higher rates than those contained in the schedule, could not obtain such relief in the courts in advance of a finding by the interstate commerce commission on the issue whether the subsequent rates were reasonable or unreasonable, to be determined in the light of the railroad's operation as an entirety. Sandusky-Portland Cement Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 187 Fed. 583.

A shipper can not maintain an action against a common carrier to obtain relief from an alleged unreasonable freight rate exacted from him for an interstate shipment, without reference to any previous action by the interstate commerce commission, where such rate has been filed with that commission and promulgated as provided by the act to regulate commerce, and is the rate which it is the duty of the carrier, under that act, to enforce against shippers until changed in accordance with the provisions of that statute, since the independent right of an individual originally to maintain actions to obtain pecuniary redress for violations of the act, must be confined to such wrongs as can, consistently with the context of the act, be redressed without previous action by the Commission, and the provision that nothing therein "shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies," can not be construed as continuing in shippers a common-law right the continued existence of which would be absolutely inconsistent with the provisions of the statute. Judgment, Abilene Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 38 Tex. Civ. App. 366, 85 S. W. 1052, reversed in 27 S. Ct. 350, 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

38. Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 183 Fed. 908, dismissing for want of jurisdiction 181 Fed. 403.

39. National Pole Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 65.

stance to determine whether the wrong can be redressed by the courts.[40] Under the amendments[41] to the twelfth section of the Interstate Commerce Act, the district attorney, when requested, may, under the direction of the attorney general, prosecute suits in the name of the United States against railroad companies to enjoin them from discriminating against the city in favor of another, and a preliminary investigation by the commission is not necessary to jurisdiction.[42] The Act of Feb. 19, 1903,[43] provides a remedy in court, without going before the interstate commerce commission, for any discriminations forbidden by law, includind discriminations or preferences prohibited by Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887.[44] A party claiming to be injured by a discriminatory rule for the distribution of coal cars by an interstate railroad can not maintain in a court of law an action for the recovery of damages before the interstate commerce commission has investigated the case, and determined by its report that the rule is or was discriminatory.[45]

Relief against Discrimination in Joint Traffic Arrangements.—Discriminations practiced in the giving or refusing of joint traffic arrangements contrary to the act regulating commerce can not be redressed by the courts in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission.[46]

Relief against Discrimination in Distribution of Cars.—A suit by a shipper to recover damages from a carrier, alleged to have been occasioned by an unlawful distribution of cars to it and an undue allotment of cars to its competitors, contrary to the Act of February 4, 1887, § 3, can not be maintained in advance of a ruling by the interstate commerce commission that the method of distribution adopted by the carrier was unreasonable.[47]

Relief against Rebates.—A shipper of coal and coke can not maintain in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission a suit against a carrier for damages resulting from rebates, past or present, given to his competitors doing their own hauling from mine to station, in the form of trackage or lateral allowances from the published tariff, which, though naming the rate as from station to destination, has been uniformly construed to include the haul from the mine, since such lateral allowances would be unlawful only when unreasonable, and this was a question in the first instance for the commission, notwithstanding the provisions of the Act of February 4, 1887, § 9, giving an individual the right to maintain actions to obtain pecuniary redress for violations of the act, and of § 22, that nothing therein shall abridge or alter existing common-law or statutory remedies.[48] But allowing shippers of coal and coke as a rebate from the published tariff which named the rate as from station to destination, was uniformly construed to include the haul from the mine, a trackage or lateral allowance for the haul from mine to station, being absolutely forbidden by the Act of February 4, 1887, § 2, regardless of the amount, where the carrier itself does the hauling, previous action by the interstate commerce commission is not a condition precedent for the maintenance by another shipper, under §§ 8, 9, of an action against the carrier to recover the damages sustained by reason of such illegal allowances to his competitors.[49]

40. Relief against discrimination.—Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 186 Fed. 237.

41. Acts Mar. 2, 1889 and Feb. 10, 1891.

42. United States v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 65 Fed. 903.

43. Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, § 3, 32 Stat. 848 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 600.

44. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 141 Fed. 1003, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 493, 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. Ed. 705.

45. Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 106 C. C. A. 269, 183 Fed. 929.

46. Relief against discrimination in joint traffic arrangements.—United States v. Pacific, etc., Nav. Co., 33 S. Ct. 443, 228 U. S. 87.

47. Relief against discrimination in distribution of cars.—Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 230 U. S. 304, 33 S. Ct. 938.

48. Relief against rebates.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 230 U. S. 247, 57 L. Ed. 472, 33 S. Ct. 916.

49. Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 230 U. S. 247, 57 L. Ed. 472, 33 S. Ct. 916.

Previous action by the interstate com-

Action for Loss of Baggage.—An action for loss of baggage through negligence of an interstate carrier is maintainable without first presenting the claim to the interstate commerce commission, although the carrier had filed with that commission a rule limiting its liability for the loss of baggage.[50]

Action for Demurrage.—A circuit court of the United State has jurisdiction to determine in the first instance the indebtedness of a shipper to a railroad company for demurrage, under the rules adopted by the company and filed with the interstate commerce commission, where it depends on the construction, and not on the reasonableness or unreasonableness, of such rules, although the latter question is one primarily for the commission.[51]

Refusal of Carrier to Transport Goods.—A shipper seeking relief for refusal of carrier to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors to local option points may invoke the jurisdiction of the courts without first applying to the interstate commerce commission.[52] A suit against a railway company to recover for its refusal to accept shipments of cross ties for a point beyond its own line can not be maintained in the absence of previous action of the interstate commerce commission, when based on the want of any published rate; its position being that such cross ties were a distinct commodity, not embraced by its filed tariff fixing joint through lumber rates.[53] And the acceptance by a railway company of three interstate carload shipments of cross ties for a point beyond its own line under its joint through lumber rate does not dispense with previous action by the interstate commerce commission before the shipper may maintain a suit to recover damages for failure to accept further shipments, based on want of any applicable and published rate.[54]

Refusal to Afford Equal Facilities.—The obligation of a railroad company to afford equal facilities to all connecting lines of telegraph is not enforceable by bill in equity, the remedy before interstate commerce commission being exclusive.[55]

Averment of Resort to Commission.—Congress by Interstate Commerce Act having established the interstate commerce commission with plenary power to determine in the first instance what rates for the transportation of interstate commerce are legal and reasonable and what are illegal and excessive, it will be presumed, in the absence of averments to the contrary, that every interstate carrier merce commission is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action under the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 382, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3159), § 8, to recover from a carrier the damage sustained by a shipper who has been charged and who has paid the lawful published freight rates on interstate shipments of "free" coal, while lower rates resulting from rebates have been allowed to other shippers of "contract" coal during the same period, and between the same termini, the published tariffs making no distinctions between "contract" and "free" coal, but naming one rate for all alike. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., 230 U. S. 184, 33 S. Ct. 893.

50. Action for loss of baggage.—Homer v. Oregon, etc., R. Co. (Utah), 128 Pac. 522.

51. Action for demurrage.—Order, Central R. Co. v. Hite, 166 Fed. 976, reversed in 171 Fed. 370, 96 C. C. A. 326.

52. Refusal of carrier to transport goods.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cook Brewing Co., 32 S. Ct. 189, 223 U. S. 70, 56 L. Ed. 355, affirming judgment 172 Fed. 117, 96 C. C. A. 322.

A suit to compel an interstate carrier to receive and transport goods tendered to it for shipment, which it wholly refuses to do, is one to compel the performance of a duty imposed on it by law, and within the jurisdiction of the courts; and complainant is not required to resort in the first instance to the interstate commerce commission. Danciger v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 154 Fed. 379.

53. A carrier's insistence as a pretext to prevent an interstate shipment over its line on the absence of any published rate does not justify a resort by the shipper to the courts, in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission, to recover damages resulting from the carrier's refusal to furnish cars for such shipment. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. American, etc., Timber Co., 234 U. S. 138, 34 S. Ct. 885.

54. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. American, etc., Timber Co., 234 U. S. 138, 34 S. Ct. 885.

55. Refusal to afford equal facilities.—Act Aug. 7, 1888, § 3; Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 59 Fed. 813, 8 C. C. A. 282.

has complied with the law by establishing, printing, filing, publishing, and posting them; and hence no action can be maintained unless the complaint alleges that resort has been had to the interstate commerce commission and the rate charged and paid declared excessive or unreasonable.[56]

Action for Damages because of Allowance to Other Shippers.—Allowing shippers of coal a rebate from published tariff which named the rate as from station to destination, but which was uniformly construed to include the haul from the mine to the station, being forbidden by the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, where the carrier does the hauling, previous action by the commission is not a condition precedent for maintenance by another shipper to recover damages for such illegal allowances to his competitors.[57]

Enjoining Shipment of Intoxicating Liquor.—Where a bill to restrain intrastate shipments of liquor by express did not involve any question of regulation of rates, it was immaterial that the trial court had no jurisdiction to pass on the validity of a difference of rates applicable to such shipments and interstate shipments until the interstate commerce commission had passed on it.[58]

§ 4195. After Hearing by Commission.—The ultimate power of determining the right and justice in the matter of discriminating rates rests with the courts.[59] The Interstate Commerce Act provides that if, after hearing on a complaint by shippers, the commission shall determine that any party is entitled to an award of damages for a violation of the act, the commission shall direct payment thereof, and if the carrier does not pay within the time limited in the order the complainant may sue to recover such damages, and in such suit the findings and order of the commission shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. All complaints for the recovery of damages are also required to be filed with the commission within two years after the cause of action accrues, and a petition for the enforcement of an order within one year after the date of the order. An action by an interstate shipper to recover damages for a charge of illegal and excessive rates is not maintainable until after a hearing and award before the interstate commerce commission.[60]

What Amounts to Hearing by Commission.—Where an interstate rate on railroad ties duly filed, had never in itself been declared illegal or excessive by the interstate commerce commission, the fact that such rate was higher than the rate charged for rough lumber, and that the commission in another proceeding had determined that rough lumber and railroad ties should take the same classification, was insufficient to entitle a shipper having paid the tie rate to recover the excess over the rate fixed for lumber, without a hearing and an award before the commission.[61]

Discrimination and Preference.—Where there has been a preliminary inquiry and findings by the interstate commerce commission on the question of an unlawful discrimination, a suit against the carrier may be maintained by the government.[62]

Pleading Hearing by Commission.—Since, by the Interstate Commerce Act, the interstate commerce commission is charged with the duty of determining whether a carrier's charge for service rendered in interstate commerce is reasonable, a shipper seeking to recover for imposition of an alleged unreasonable charge

56. Averment of resort to commission.—Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 162 Fed. 354.

57. Action for damages because of allowance to other shippers.—Mitchell Coal, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 230 U. S. 247, 57 L. Ed. 472, 33 S. Ct. 916.

58. Enjoining shipment of intoxicating liquor.—Southern Exp. Co. v. Long, 202 Fed. 462, 120 C. C. A. 568, reversing decree, 201 Fed. 441.

59. After hearing by commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 85 Fed. 107.

60. Howard Supply Co. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 162 Fed. 188.

61. What amounts to hearing by commission.—Howard Supply Co. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 162 Fed. 188.

62. Discrimination and preference.—United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 122 Fed. 544.

must, as a condition to his right, allege and produce an order from the commission showing that the rate charged was unreasonable, and therefore illegal.[63] Congress having established the interstate commerce commission with plenary power to determine in the first instance what rates for the transportation of interstate commerce are legal and reasonable and what are illegal and excessive, it will be presumed, in the absence of averments to the contrary, that every interstate carrier has complied with the law by establishing, printing, filing, publishing, and posting them; and hence no action can be maintained unless the complaint alleges that resort has been had to the interstate commerce commission and the rate charged and paid declared excessive or unreasonable.[64]

§ 4196. Offenses Arising in Several Districts.—Where an objection to the jurisdiction of the circuit court for the southern district of New York was raised by plea in abatement denying that the railroad company had its principal office in the state of New York, or that the acts complained of took place within the judicial district of said court, it was held, upon affidavits submitted under stipulation, that the ruling of the circuit court against the plea, based on said affidavits, did not appear to be erroneous.[65]

§ 4197. Mandamus.—Statutory Provision.—The only authority for the issuance of mandamus by a federal court in a suit by a shipper to prevent unlawful discrimination by an interstate railroad is conferred by the Act of March 2, 1889, supplementary to the interstate commerce act and its amendments, providing that the federal circuit and district courts shall have jurisdiction, on relation of any person, firm, or corporation, alleging violation by a common carrier of any of the provisions of the act which prevents relator from having interstate traffic moved on terms or conditions as favorable as those given by the common carrier for like traffic under similar conditions to any other shipper, to issue mandamus to prevent such discrimination, etc.[66] The Interstate Commerce Act authorizes the court, in its discretion, to grant a mandamus, when any question of fact as to the proper compensation of the carrier is raised, notwithstanding such question of fact is undetermined pending the determination of such question. This does not authorize the court to grant relief where a case of unjust discrimination is not made out.[67] An arrangement between an interstate railroad company and coal shippers in a certain field, fixing a basis which should be considered equitable for the distribution of cars between such shippers, does not operate to relieve the railroad company from the obligations imposed on it by § 3 of the Act of February 4, 1887, to treat shippers without discrimination, nor does it deprive one of such shippers of the right to maintain a proceeding in a federal court for a writ of mandamus under the Amendatory Act of March 2, 1889, to compel the company to furnish to relator its equitable proportion of cars, upon allegations that the basis of distribution fixed by the agreement was equitable and that defendant has refused to observe it, but has discriminated in favor of other shippers; the agreement being in fact in aid of the act of fixing as between the parties what should be considered and accepted as a compliance with its requirements.[68]

63. Pleading hearing by commission.—Geraty v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 227.

64. In an action for injuries to complainant's property and business by an alleged combination and conspiracy between interstate railroads controlling the shipment of anthracite coal, an allegation that plaintiffs' loss resulted from their being obliged to pay "unlawful rates" for the transportation of coal due to such combination and conspiracy was not effective to allege that the rates charged had been declared unlawful by the interstate commerce commission. Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 162 Fed. 354.

65. Offenses arising in several districts.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666.

66. Statutory provision.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 138 Fed. 849, reversed in 74 C. C. A. 404, 143 Fed. 266, on another point.

67. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 40 Fed. 101.

68. United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 143 Fed. 266, 74 C. C. A. 404.

To Compel Carrier to Make Report.—It is not within the jurisdiction of a federal court to issue a writ of mandamus to compel a railroad company to make a report which the act to regulate commerce gives the interstate commerce commission the right to require, and such jurisdiction can not be inferred from any of the powers granted by congress as collateral to the enforcement of that act.[69] A suit for a mandamus to compel a common carrier to make annual reports to the interstate commerce commission, can be maintained only after such report has been demurred and refused.[70]

To Compel Carrier to Publish Schedule of Rates.—Section 6 provides that if any common carrier fails or neglects or refuses to file or publish its schedules as provided in the section, it may be subject to a writ of mandamus issued in the name of the people of the United States, at the relation of the commission, failure to comply with which is punishable as for a contempt.[71]

To Compel Equal Distribution of Cars.—The grievances produced by regulations adopted by a railway company for the distribution of coal cars in times of car shortage to the bituminous coal mines served by it, which are alleged to violate the provisions of the act to regulate commerce of February 4, 1887, prohibiting unjust preferences or undue discriminations, can not be redressed, in advance of the action of the interstate commerce commission, by mandamus to prohibit the acts complained of and prescribe a rule or regulation for the future, since the provisions of the Act of March 2, 1889 § 10, authorizing mandamus to compel the furnishing of cars and other facilities for transportation, must be limited either to the performance of duties which are so plain and so independent of previous administrative action of the commission as not to require a prerequisite exertion of power by that body, or to compelling the performance of duties which plainly arise from the obligatory force which the statute attaches to the orders of the commission, rendered within the lawful scope of its authority, until set aside by the commission or enjoined by the courts.[72]

In Aid of Investigation by Commission.—Section 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act does not confer on the court power to compel by mandamus, in aid of an investigation by the interstate commerce commission ordered by the senate, a railroad company to disclose the amount of securities of another railroad company it controls, and whether the two companies serve the same territory, and whether, under separate ownership, they would be competitors, and facts showing further relations between them.[73] Mandamus will not lie to compel a disclosure of privileged communications between an individual and his counsel. Where the petition for mandamus under the Hepburn Act calls for the production of papers which originated before the act, and the allegations thereof are vague, so that the court can not determine what papers are privileged communications between attorney and client, and what not, and what part of them may be within the act and what not, the court in its discretion will deny the writ.[74]

Necessity for Discrimination.—In mandamus under the Act of March 2, 1889, to compel a common carrier to move and transport interstate traffic, or to furnish cars or other facilities for such transportation, on the ground that there has been such a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, as prevents 69. To compel carrier to make report.—Knapp v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 197 U. S. 536, 49 L. Ed. 870, 25 S. Ct. 538.

70. Attorney General v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

71. To compel carrier to publish schedule of rates.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. Ed. 243, 17 S. Ct. 896, affirmed and followed in Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Florida Fruit Exch., 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. Ed. 257, 17 S. Ct. 998; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125. Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889.

72. To compel equal distribution of cars.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. Ed. 292, 30 S. Ct. 164.

73. In aid of investigation by commission.—Attorney General v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 212 Fed. 486.

74. Attorney General v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 212 Fed. 486.

the relator from having interstate traffic moved by said common carrier at the same rates as are charged, or upon terms or conditions as favorable as those given, by said common carrier for like traffic under similar conditions to any other shipper, the gist of the whole proceeding is an unjust discrimination in favor of one shipper over another similarly situated. It is for the remedy of such a wrong that congress, by the act in question, gave the federal courts the power of mandamus, and for such a wrong alone. There must not only be a discrimination, but it must be an unjust discrimination; and that character of discrimination must not only be pleaded, but it must be proved, by the relator, otherwise the writ of mandamus will be denied him.[75]

§ 4198. Injunction.—A bill in equity exhibits a case arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, where it appears to have been brought solely to enforce a compliance with the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887, and to compel the defendants to comply with such act, by offering proper and reasonable facilities for the interchange of traffic with complainant, and enjoining them from refusing to receive from complainant, for transportation over their lines, any cars which might be tendered them.[76] And it does not follow, because an action at law for damages to recover unreasonable rates which have been exacted in accordance with the schedule of rates as filed, is forbidden by the interstate commerce act, that a suit in equity is also forbidden to prevent a filing or enforcement of a schedule of unreasonable rates or a change to unjust or unreasonable rates.[77] When a carrier has violated the terms of the Interstate Commerce Act in any particular, the court may grant a perpetual injunction as to the act, commodity and means employed; but the injunction will not be granted in general terms, prohibiting the carrier from any violation of the act.[78] It is competent for the shipper to proceed in the circuit court to apply by petition to the circuit court, "sitting in equity," for the court to hear and determine the matter "as a court of equity," and issue an injunction "or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise," to enforce the order of the commission. Under the broad powers conferred upon the circuit court by § 16 of the act and the direction there given to the court to proceed with efficiency, but without the formality of equity proceedings, "but in such manner as to do justice in the premises," and in view of the stipulation of the parties, recited in the decree of the court, the carriers are precluded from making the objection that the court did not have jurisdiction to entertain the petition and grant the relief prayed for and decreed.[79]

Applicability of General Principles of Law.—"The requirement of the act to regulate commerce, that a court shall enforce an observance of the statute against a carrier who has been adjudged to have violated its provisions, in no way gives countenance to the assumption that congress intended that a court should issue an injunction of such a general character as would be violative of the most elementary principles of justice." [80]

75. United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

76. Injunction.—In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 41 L. Ed. 1110, 17 S. Ct. 658.

A case arising upon a bill to enjoin interstate carriers from putting into effect alleged unreasonable rates is a case arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, since the right to be exempt from such unlawful exactions is one protected by the Interstate Commerce Act as well as the Anti-Trust Act, and, of necessity, in determining the right to the relief prayed for, a construction of the act to regulate commerce is essentially involved. Macon Grocery Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 501, 54 L. Ed. 300, 30 S. Ct. 184.

77. Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846.

78. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

79. Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846.

80. Applicability of general principle of law.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515, 26 S. Ct. 272.

To Prevent Irreparable Injury.—The injury which will be caused to a common carrier against which a combination to induce the officers of a common carrier corporation subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, and its locomotive engineers, to refuse to receive, handle, and haul interstate freight from another like common carrier as directed will be irreparable; and in order to prevent this, and maintain the status quo until full relief can be granted, a preliminary mandatory injunction will issue against the company and its employees threatening the injury, restraining them from refusing to afford the proper interchange of interstate freight and traffic facilities to complainant.[81]

To Prevent Multiplicity of Suits.—Where, on a petition for an injunction to restrain a railroad company, a common carrier of freights, from practicing an unlawful discrimination, it appears that the plaintiffs' business is such as to make them frequent shippers, and that a continuous series of shipments was necessary in conducting their business, and that a remedy sought by actions at law would lead to a multiplicity of suits, the court will intervene by injunction to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and it is not a prerequisite that plaintiffs should have first established their rights by an action at law.[82]

Where Carrier Fails to File Report.—The interstate commerce commissioners are empowered, as complainants, to apply, in any proper circuit court of the United States, for a writ of injunction against any common carrier neglecting or refusing to file or publish such schedule or tariffs with rates, fares or charges as provided in § 6 to restrain such carrier from receiving or transporting property among the several states and territories of the United States, or between the United States and adjacent foreign countries or between ports of transshipment and of entry and the several states and territories of the United States, as mentioned in this section of the act, until such common carrier shall have complied with the provisions of § 6 relating to the filing and publishing of schedules or tariffs of rates, fares and charges.[83]

Enjoining Schedule Rates.—The interstate commerce commission having been given exclusive jurisdiction in the first instance to determine the reasonableness of interstate rates by the Interstate Commerce Act shippers can not maintain a suit in equity to prevent the filing or enforcement of a schedule of rates, or a change to unjust or unreasonable rates, pending determination of the reasonableness thereof by the commission.[84] Under Interstate Commerce Act of 81. To prevent irreparable injury.—Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 730, 19 L. R. A. 387.

82. To prevent multiplicity of suits.—Scofield v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 43 O. St. 571, 3 N. E. 907, 54 Am. Rep. 846.

83. Where carrier fails to file report.—Interstate Commerce Act, § 6, as amended March 2, 1889. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

84. Enjoining schedule rates.—Decree Macon Grocery Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 163 Fed. 738, reversed in 166 Fed. 206, 92 C. C. A. 114; Potlatch Lumber Co. v. Spokane Falls, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 588.

A circuit court of the United States is without jurisdiction to enjoin the establishment of an interstate freight rate by a carrier, or to enjoin the enforcement of a new rates which has been published and filed, before its reasonableness and validity have been passed on by the interstate commerce commission. Houston Coal, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 171 Fed. 723.

A circuit court of the United States possessed no jurisdiction, prior to the enactment by congress of legislation regulating the transportation of interstate commerce, to enjoin the promulgation and enforcement generally by a carrier of a particular rate or schedule of rates as unreasonable, its power being limited in any case to the protection of an individual shipper against the exaction from him of an unreasonable rate or charge, either local or interstate, when it had jurisdiction by reason of diverse citizenship; nor has it jurisdiction under Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154), as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892), to enjoin the filing, publication, or enforcement of a proposed rate alleged to be unreasonable, in advance of action thereon by the interstate commerce commission, which is by said acts vested with exclusive jurisdiction to determine with rea-

Feb. 4, 1887, § 6, requiring carriers to file freight rate schedules with the interstate commerce commission and to post them in railway stations, and providing that changes in rates shall not take effect until after thirty days' notice to the commission and to the public in the same way, a rate filed with the commission is put in force, though not so posted, as affecting the circuit court's jurisdiction to enjoin it.[85] A court of equity, however, may properly enjoin carriers from establishing, or increasing to, a rate believed to be unreasonable, at the same time leaving the matter in such shape that the commission may ultimately determine the question of the reasonableness of the proposed rate and prescribe what will be a just and reasonable rate.[86] Under § 22 of the Interstate Commerce Act, which expressly preserves all legal remedies, a circuit court of the United States has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin railroad companies from filing or enforcing a proposed new schedule of rates alleged to be unjust and unreasonable pending a determination of their reasonableness by the interstate commerce commission, where it is shown that their enforcement would result in irreparable injury to complainants.[87] The complainants having established a rate for lemons from California to points between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic coast of a certain amount in carload lots, the interstate commerce commission passed an order prescribing a rate of not to exceed a less amount. The complainants claiming that such rate had not been adjusted according to the cost and value of the service, and that the commission could not lawfully prescribe a single blanket rate to points so widely separated, also that the rate was unjust and unreasonable, and so low that the traffic was not compensatory, applied for an injunction restraining the enforcement thereof until its validity could be finally determined. The validity of such rate being subject to grave and serious doubt, an interlocutory injunction will be granted until the case can be determined by the commerce court.[88] "Without now stopping to enumerate the contentions on behalf of the commission, it will suffice, for present purposes, to say that, after considering those contentions and giving effect to the presumption of validity which should and does attend an order of the commission, we entertain such grave and serious doubts of the validity of the order in question that we think its enforcement should be suspended until the questions presented by the complainants' objections can be adequately considered and thoughtfully determined. Those objections turn chiefly upon questions of law which are new and have an importance far beyond their bearing upon the present application. The time sonableness of rates in the first instance. Columbus Iron, etc., Co. v. Kanawha, etc., R. Co., 171 Fed. 713.

For several years prior to November, 1904, an emergency freight rate of $1 per hundred on lemons from California to the New York market was in force to enable California growers to compete with lemons imported from Sicily. In November, 1904, after negotiation, the growers understood the rate made permanent, whereupon they enlarged their orchards and increased their business on the basis of that factor of expense. This rate was continued for five years and until after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Law increasing the duty on lemons from 1 to 1½ cents a pound, whereupon defendants increased the freight rate to $1.15 on the plea of greater cost of labor. There was evidence, however, that the cost of transportation was no greater than before, and that if a temporary injunction restraining the new rate which the growers claimed was unreasonable was not granted a determination of the reasonableness thereof by the interstate commerce commission, the growers would be compelled to destroy their lemon trees and put their land to other uses, while the rights of the railroad companies could be protected by bond. Held, that the equities were in favor of the growers, and that they were entitled to a temporary injunction on executing a bond conditioned to pay the difference in the rates in case the higher rate was sustained. Arlington Heights Fruit Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 175 Fed. 141.

85. Wickwire Steel Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 181 Fed. 316.

86. Kiser Co. v. Central, etc., R. Co., 158 Fed. 193.

87. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pacific Coast Lumber, etc., Ass'n, 165 Fed. 1, 91 C. C. A. 39; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Oregon, etc., Ass'n, 165 Fed. 13, 91 C. C. A. 51.

88. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 182 Fed. 189.

when the order will become effective is near by, and this case is one which soon will pass from our jurisdiction to that of the commerce court, which has been created especially to consider and determine controversies such as this. Act June 18, 1910, c. 309, 36 Stat. 539. Any order which we may make will be interlocutory, and the final hearing must be in the commerce court. The same questions will then arise again, and they may arise in that court before that time, either through a like application in some other case or through further interlocutory proceedings in this case." [89] But when a controversy between parties relative to transportation rates is pending before the interstate commerce commission, and no irreparable injuries seem threatened, equity, in advance of the action of the commission, will not ordinarily enjoin the enforcement of the rates.[90] On an application for a temporary injunction to restrain the enforcement of an increased interstate freight rate, pending determination of its reasonableness by the interstate commerce commission, it is the duty of the court to balance the equities between the parties, and ascertain which of them will suffer greater detriment by the court's action.[91]

Injunction Pending Hearing before Commission.—Under § 22 of the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887, which expressly preserves all legal remedies, a circuit court of the United States has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin railroad companies from filing or enforcing a proposed new schedule of rates alleged to be unjust and unreasonable pending a determination of their reasonableness by the interstate commerce commission, where it is shown that their enforcement would result in irreparable injury to complainants.[92]

Perpetual Injunction.—If a suit by the attorney general of the United States to enjoin a railroad from granting rebates could have been continued under the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, where the antecedent offense of the railroad company was being continued after such date, an action by the United States attorney in the summary method authorized by the latter act would have presented an issue of fact entitling defendant to a hearing thereon, and any injunction granted would be as to violations of law then being committed, but would not vitalize an antecedent injunctive order granted by the court when it had no injunction to make it.[93] A carrier which has been adjudged to have violated the act to regulate commerce in a specific particular may be restrained from further like violations of the act, but should not be enjoined in general terms from violating the act in the future in any particular.[94]

Enjoining Violation of Anti-Trust Law.—The Interstate Commerce Act and the Sherman anti-trust law are separate and independent acts, and jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of the United States over a bill in equity to enjoin a railroad company from granting rebates to favored shippers can not be maintained on the ground that such act of the railroad company is a monopoly within the meaning of the second section of the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890.[95]

Enjoining Increase in Rates.—Under Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, §§ 13, 15, authorizing complaints to the interstate commerce commission against unjust freight rates fixed by a carrier, and under § 16, authorizing awards of damages by the commission, and empowering the federal circuit court to enforce the commission's orders by injunction or other proper process, the

89. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 182 Fed. 189.

90. Tift v. Southern R. Co., 123 Fed. 789.

91. Arlington Heights Fruit Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 175 Fed. 141.

92. Injunction pending hearing before commission.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pacific Coast Lumber, etc., Ass'n, 165 Fed. 1, 91 C. C. A. 39; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Oregon, etc., Ass'n, 165 Fed. 13, 91 C. C. A. 51.

93. Perpetual injunction.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 142 Fed. 176.

94. Decree 128 Fed. 59, modified in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 26 S. Ct. 272, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. Ed. 515.

95. Enjoining violation of anti-trust law.—United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 142 Fed. 176.

circuit court has no jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin an advance in freight rates on a commodity pursuant to a conspiracy to discriminate against complaints, though § 9 provides that one claiming to be damaged by a carrier may elect to complain to the commission or sue in the federal courts, though § 22 provides that the act shall not alter existing remedies, and though § 23 gives the circuit and district courts jurisdiction in case of violations by carriers of certain provisions of the act to issue mandamus to compel conformity.[96] "Conceding this, it is argued that the circuit court may exercise its inherent powers to prevent threatened injury where the rates have not been actually fixed in accordance with the provisions of the statute. In other words, if the carrier simply threatens to fix a rate, or has not fixed the rate effectively, the court may restrain the carrier from so doing, if it regards the rate as unreasonable or likely to cause irreparable damage. The effect of this would be to prevent the carrier from ever fixing or changing its rates in accordance with the law. Be this as it may, we think the rate was fixed. Section 6 of the act requires the carrier to file with the commission and keep open to public inspection, by posting in every depot, station, or office where passengers or freight are received for transportation, schedules showing its rates between different points. Changes in rates are not to go into effect until after thirty days' notice to the commission and to the public has been given in the same way." [97]

Venue of Suit to Enjoin Increase of Rates.—A bill to obtain an injunction against various interstate carriers, who were nonresidents of the district, to restrain them from putting into effect an advance of rates for carriage of commodities in interstate commerce through a large area embracing parts of several different states, charging that the carriers were members of a freight association organized and maintained under agreements to constitute an illegal combination in restraint of trade and fostering a monopoly, presents for necessary consideration the proper construction of the Federal Interstate Commerce Act, so that the court's jurisdiction does not rest solely on diversity of citizenship of the parties, and hence the federal circuit court in the district of complainants' residence has no jurisdiction to compel the defendants to answer over their objection.[98]

Jurisdiction of Commerce Court.—The commerce court, under Act June 18, 1910, can enjoin an order of the commission requiring railroad companies to cease charging lower rates for coal intended for railway consumption than is 96. Enjoining increase in rates.—Wickwire Steel Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 181 Fed. 316.

"These broad provisions would apparently justify the exercise by the court of any of its inherent powers in behalf of persons complaining of any violations by carriers of the act; but the supreme court has held, in Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075, that they are to be construed with reference to and limited by the powers conferred by congress upon the interstate commerce commission, for the purpose of insuring and enforcing the establishment and maintenance of reasonable and uniform rates. In other words, they are to be construed as intended to redress wrongs that need not be complained of in the first instance to the interstate commerce commission. Mr. Justice White concluded his opinion with these words: 'Concluding, as we do, that a shipper seeking reparation predicated upon the unreasonableness of the established rate must, under the act to regulate commerce, primarily invoke redress through the Interstate Commerce Commission, which body alone is vested with power originally to entertain proceedings for the alteration of an established schedule, because the rates fixed therein are unreasonable, it is unnecessary for us to consider whether the court below would have had jurisdiction to afford relief, if the right asserted had not been repugnant to the provisions of the act to regulate commerce.'" Wickwire Steel Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 181 Fed. 316.

97. Wickwire Steel Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 181 Fed. 316.

98. Venue of suit to enjoin increase of rates.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Macon Grocery Co., 166 Fed. 206, 92 C. C. A. 114.

accorded to other shippers.[99]

Mandatory Injunction.—The duty imposed on railroad companies by the laws of a state and by the Interstate Commerce Act of receiving from connecting roads freight and passengers, is one which the federal courts in that state will enforce by mandatory injunction where the injury resulting from its nonperformance is continuing; and it is no defense to such relief that a strike of locomotive engineers and firemen has been ordered on plaintiff's road, and that, if defendant's road should accept cars from the boycotted road, its own men would be called out.[1] Where a labor organization has declared a boycott against a railroad, and connecting roads are therefore refusing, or seem about to refuse, to afford equal facilities to the boycotted road, in violation of § 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act, they may be compelled to do so by mandatory injunction, since the case is urgent, the rights of the parties free from reasonable doubt, and the duty sought to be enforced is imposed by law.[2]

Enjoining Receiver.—The petition of a railroad company, intervener, represented that the receiver appointed by the court had issued an order in violation of his duties as a common carrier, and of a custom between the two roads, instructing his agents to receive no more through freight cars of the petitioner, and that freight of that character offered by the petitioner had been refused, though the proper tender of expense bills had been made. It also alleged that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had commanded a strike on petitioner's road, and, in order to boycott it, had issued instructions to its members on other connecting systems not to handle any of petitioner's freight. The prayer was for a peremptory order on the receiver to take such freight, for an injunction on the brotherhood from interfering with the engineers on the receiver's road, and for a rule on the officers of the brotherhood to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt. The answer of the receiver admitted the issuance of the order complained of, but set out that it was intended to be temporary only, and was, as a matter of fact, rescinded two days after the petition was filed, and another order made establishing intercourse on the old basis, and that this order was meant to be permanent. It was denied that the receiver or any of his engineers had been interfered with in any manner by the brotherhood, or that the first order was promulgated under moral duress of that association. It was held, that the objectionable order having been permanently rescinded, and no interference by the brotherhood having been proven, neither the peremptory order, nor the injunction, nor the rule asked for should issue, but that the petition should remain on file for further action, should any occasion therefor arise.[3]

§ 4199. In Particular Instances.—Proceeding to Compel Carrier to Transport Goods.—A suit to compel an interstate carrier to receive and transport goods tendered to it for shipment, which it wholly refuses to do, is one to compel the performance of a duty imposed on it by law, and within the jurisdiction of the courts; and complainant is not required to resort in the first instance to the interstate commerce commission.[4]

Proceeding to Compel Publishing Schedules of Rates.—The Interstate Commerce Act provided that common carriers should publish schedules of reasonable and uniform rates, and, where such provision of the act had been complied with, and copies of the schedule of rates had been filed with the commerce

99. Jurisdiction of commerce court.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 742, 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, Ann Cas. 1914A, 504.

1. Mandatory injunction.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. 481.

2. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 746, 19 L. R. A. 395, following Coe v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 3 Fed. 775, 782.

3. Enjoining receiver.—Beers v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. 244.

4. Proceeding to compel carrier to transport goods.—Danciger v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 154 Fed. 379.

commission and not found unreasonable by that body, a shipper could not recover, at common law, unreasonable freight charges on interstate shipments.[5] Although, when the act to regulate commerce was enacted there was contrariety of opinion whether, when a rate charged by a carrier was in and of itself reasonable, the person from whom such a charge was exacted had at common law an action against the carrier because of damage asserted to have been suffered by a discrimination against such person or a preference given by the carrier to another. It inevitably follows from the context of the act that the independent right of an individual originally to maintain actions in courts to obtain pecuniary redress for violations of the act conferred by the ninth section must be confined to redress of such wrongs as can, consistently with the context of the act, be redressed by courts without previous action by the commission, and, therefore, does not imply the power in a court to primarily hear complaints concerning wrongs of the character of the one here complained of.[6]

Action to Recover Excess of Freight.—Until a schedule of rates, filed and published by a common carrier, pursuant to the act, has been declared excessive and unreasonable by the interstate commerce commission, a shipper can not maintain an action for the excess of freight exacted on interstate shipments, if the rates charged were those fixed by the schedule.[7] Where an interstate rate on railroad ties, duly filed, had never in itself been declared illegal or excessive by the interstate commerce commission, the fact that such rate was higher than the rate charged for rough lumber, and that the commission in another proceeding had determined that rough lumber and railroad ties should take the same classification, was insufficient to entitle a shipper having paid the tie rate to recover the excess over the rate fixed for lumber, without a hearing and an award before the commission.[8]

Action to Recover Damages.—The rule that an action at law to recover excessive interstate freight charges can not be maintained in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission will not prevent a federal circuit court which has suspended proceedings on a bill seeking relief from an advance in freight rates, pending action by the commission, from granting relief in the exercise of its powers under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 16, as a court of equity, on a

5. Proceeding to compel publishing schedules of rates.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846.

6. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

7. Action to recover excess of freight.—In an action by a shipper to recover the excess of freight on interstate shipments, the rates charged being according to the schedule filed and published by the carrier, pursuant to Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887 (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3153]), and the several acts amendatory thereof, nothing but a prior adjudication by the interstate commerce commission that such rates are excessive and unreasonable will justify a recovery. Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 63 S. E. 323, 64 W. Va. 406.

Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 16, 24 Stat. 384 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3165), as amended by Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 5, 34 Stat. 590 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 902), provides that if, after hearing on a complaint by shippers, the commission shall determine that any party is entitled to an award of damages for a violation of the act, the commission shall direct payment thereof, and if the carrier does not pay within the time limited in the order the complainant may sue to recover such damages, and in such suit the findings and order of the commission shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. All complaints for the recovery of damages are also required to be filed with the commission within two years after the cause of action accrues, and a petition for the enforcement of an order within one year after the date of the order. Held, that an action by an interstate shipper to recover damages for a charge of illegal and excessive rates is not maintainable until after a hearing and award before the interstate commerce commission. Howard Supply Co. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 162 Fed. 188.

8. Howard Supply Co. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 162 Fed. 188.

petition filed after the commission has acted, stating the substance of the findings of the commission, and containing a copy of its report and opinion, where defendants have stipulated in open court that, in case complainants prevailed, decree of restitution might be made.[9]

Action for Penalty for Failure to Feed and Water Stock.—Since an action against an interstate carrier for violation of the twenty-eight hour law is a civil action for a penalty, § 4, authorizing such action to be brought in the circuit or district court of the United States within the district where the violation may have been committed or the person or corporation resides or carries on business, is not unconstitutional, as a violation of the sixth amendment of the federal constitution, declaring that in criminal prosecutions the accused shall be entitled to a trial in the district where the crime has been committed.[10]

§ 4200. Equity Jurisdiction.—Under its general chancery jurisdiction, a court of equity has power to remedy wrongs consisting of the violation by a carrier of the provisions of the interstate commerce law prohibiting discrimination between shippers.[11]

Statutory Provision.—The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, providing that the equity jurisdiction of the United States shall extend to cover a suit by the government against a carrier for unlawful discrimination between shippers, applies not only to violations of the interstate commerce law subsequent to its enactment, but to every violation, whether previously or subsequently.[12] Prior to the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, a United States circuit court had no jurisdiction in equity over a suit instituted by the attorney general of the United States to enjoin a railroad company from granting rebates under the interstate commerce law, especially where no order had been made by the interstate commerce commission on the railroad company to discontinue the forbidden act.[13]

Adequate Remedy at Law.—The rule that equitable relief will not be granted until the complainant's right or title has been established in an action at law does not apply where the subject matter of the litigation is alleged discrimination in violation of the interstate commerce act; and where, in such case, the remedy at law is not adequate, equity will take jurisdiction.[14]

§ 4201. Proceedings at Law or in Equity.—When the court is invoked by the commission to enforce its lawful orders or requirements, the court shall proceed, as a court of equity, to hear and determine the matter, and in such manner as to do justice in the premises.[15]

Action for Reparation Distinguished from Suit to Enforce Order.—The Interstate Commerce Act makes a clear distinction between a suit brought to enforce an administrative order made by the interstate commerce commission, which is in equity, the only question in issue being the lawfulness of the order, and an action brought to recover damages for which reparation has been awarded by the commission. The latter is not a suit to enforce the order, nor based thereon, but is an independent plenary action at law, triable to a jury, and to proceed "like all other civil suits for damages," except that the findings and order of the commission are receivable as prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated, the commission being required by § 14, on making an order award-

9. Action to recover damages.—Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846, affirming 138 Fed. 753.

10. Action for penalty for failure to feed and water stock.—Judgment United States v. Southern Pac. Co., 162 Fed. 412, affirmed in 171 Fed. 364, 96 C. C. A. 256.

11. Equity jurisdiction.—United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 122 Fed. 544.

12. Statutory provision.—United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 122 Fed. 544.

13. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 142 Fed. 176.

14. Adequate remedy at law.—Interstate Stockyards Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 99 Fed. 472.

15. Proceedings at law or in equity.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

ing damages, but not otherwise, to make and report the findings of fact on which the award is made.[16]

§ 4202. Parties.—All parties in whose favor the interstate commerce commission has awarded damages by a single order may be joined as plaintiffs in a suit to recover those damages.[17] As in such a suit separate recoveries in favor of each plaintiff and against each defendant respectively may be secured by a single judgment, that judgment and every part of it may be challenged by a single writ of error to which all in interest are made parties.[18] Where the shipments under a schedule of rates were entirely without the district, and the other carrier, which was a party to such schedule, is not before the court, it has no jurisdiction over the schedule, or power to prevent a discrimination complained of.[19]

Proper and Necessary Parties.—A terminal or belt railroad company, which owns and leases tracks and switches in and around a city, and entirely within one state, and which has entered into a contract with the several roads entering the city, under which its property is entirely managed and operated by a board of managers composed of a member selected by each of such roads, who pay a fixed rental therefor, is a proper, but not a necessary, party to a suit against such roads for violating the Interstate Commerce Act by discriminating against a business establishment located on its lines, and its joinder in such suit does not deprive a federal court of jurisdiction.[20]

Action for Penalty.—An action under Interstate Commerce Act [21] against an interstate carrier to recover damages for a violation of the act, is not one strictly for the recovery of a penalty, and under a state statute [22] which provides that executors or administrators shall have power to commence and prosecute all personal actions which the decedent whom they represent might have commenced and prosecuted except actions for slander, for libels, and for wrongs done to the person, such an action against a carrier which has abated by the death of the plaintiff may be revived in the name of his executors.[23]

Where, in an action to recover damages against an interstate carrier for imposition of alleged unreasonable rates, it appeared that some of the shipments were made by plaintiff, an objection that plaintiff was not the real party in interest because the rights of other shippers had been illegally assigned to it was unsustainable.[24]

Mandamus or Injunction to Prevent Discrimination.—The grant of power to federal courts to issue mandamus against a common carrier corporation to prevent discrimination necessarily embraced power to act on the officers of such corporation in control thereof, independent of § 2 of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, providing that in any proceeding to enforce the statutes relating to interstate commerce it should be lawful to include as parties, in addition to the carrier, all persons interested in or affected by the practice under consideration, etc.[25] Where there has been a preliminary inquiry and finding by the interstate 16. Action for reparation distinguished from suit to enforce order.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Meeker, 211 Fed. 785.

17. Parties.—Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 16, par. 3, 34 Stat. 590 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1160).

18. "This case will therefore be considered upon the writ of error against all the defendants in error, and the writs against each of them respectively will be dismissed, without costs." Union Pac. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co., 178 Fed. 223. See Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125.

19. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

20. Proper and necessary parties.—Interstate Stockyards Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 99 Fed. 472.

21. Action for penalty.—Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 9, 24 Stat. 382 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3159).

22. Act Pennsylvania Feb. 24, 1834, § 28, Pa. Laws, 78.

23. Langdon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 194 Fed. 486.

24. National Pole Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 65.

25. Mandamus to prevent discrimination.—West Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Kingwood Coal Co., 134 Fed. 198.

commerce commission on the question of such unlawful discrimination, a suit against the carrier may be maintained by the government.[26] The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, § 3, authorizes a suit in equity by the United States to restrain a violation of the act by discrimination or the giving of rebates only against a common carrier, subject to its provisions.[27]

Injunction to Prevent Rebating.—The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, § 3, prohibiting rebates by carriers, provides for actions by the interstate commerce commission after investigation, and declares that it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, whenever the attorney general shall direct, either of his own motion or upon the request of the interstate commerce commission, to institute and prosecute such proceedings. The attorney general had authority to institute a proceeding to restrain rebating by interstate carriers of his own motion, without direction or investigation on the part of the interstate commerce commission.[28]

§ 4203. Limitation and Laches.—A state statute providing that actions to recover a forfeiture or penalty on a penal statute shall be brought within one year, has no application to an action in a federal court against a common carrier to recover damages for discrimination in violation of Act of Feb. 4, 1887, providing that for a violation of the terms of the act the carrier shall be liable to the persons injured for the full amount of damages sustained and for a reasonable counsel or attorney's fee to be taxed by the court. Such action is governed by Rev. St., § 1047, providing that no suit or prosecution for any penalty or forfeiture accruing under the laws of the United States shall be maintained, except as otherwise specially provided, unless commenced within five years from the time when the penalty or forfeiture accrued, etc.[29]

Under Act of June 29, 1906.—State laws declaring contracts invalid which require the bringing of an action against a carrier for loss of or damage to a shipment in less than the statutory period were superseded, so far as interstate shipments are concerned, by the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, which furnishes the exclusive rule on the subject of the liability of the carrier under contracts for shipment.[30]

§ 4204. Pleadings.—Allegations as to Parties.—In an action brought by a shipper against a common carrier subject to the Interstate Commerce Act to recover alleged excessive charges discriminating against him in favor of other shippers, where one of the grounds alleged was the nonpublication of the tariff applicable at the stations of shippers as required by law, and failure to file same with the commission, and that the existence of the same was concealed from the knowledge of the plaintiff and other shippers and the benefits of the rates therein specified denied them, it was held that the allegations did not show, as they must show, that plaintiff had been injured by facts alleged if true.[31] The complainant's bill alleged that it was a wholesale dealer in merchandise, located at Portland; that the defendants, owners of connecting railroad lines, had established a schedule of joint-freight tariffs between Portland and points in

26. Injunction to prevent discrimination.—United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 122 Fed. 544.

27. Attorney General v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

28. By whom instituted.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 145 Fed. 1007.

29. Limitation and laches.—Carter v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 74 C. C. A. 293, 143 Fed. 99.

30. Under Act of June 29, 1906.—The shipper and carrier of an interstate shipment are not forbidden to stipulate that an action against the carrier in case of damages to the shipment must be brought within ninety days after the damage was sustained, by the provisions of the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, to the Act of February 4, 1887, § 20, prohibiting exemptions from the liability imposed by that act. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 S. Ct. 397.

31. Pleadings.—Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887.

Idaho on the second line; that such second road, in connection with a third, had also established a schedule of joint rates on freight from San Francisco to the same points, under which the charge from San Francisco was the same as from Portland, although the distance was greater; and that, under the divisions made between the respective roads, the second road received a smaller rate, relative to the length of the haul over its line, under the latter than under the former schedule, in which the haul was from the opposite direction. The bill charged that such facts constitute an undue preference in favor of San Francisco and its merchants over Portland and its merchants, in violation of § 3 of the interstate commerce law, and that therefore the rates charged from Portland were unjust and unreasonable, under § 1 of such law. The bill stated no grounds for relief under either section, because the shipments under the second schedule being entirely without the district, and the other road, which was a party to such schedule, not being before the court, it had no jurisdiction over that schedule, or power to prevent the discrimination complained of.[32]

Allegations as to Discrimination.—Where a count in a complaint against an interstate carrier alleged a discrimination in rates against plaintiff, in that defendant charged plaintiff the full tariff rates and permitted plaintiff's competitors by a device to transport their similar products at a lower rate, it stated a cause of action for violating the Interstate Commerce Act, prohibiting discrimination, and was therefore not demurrable, though it also insufficiently attempted to allege a combination or conspiracy, on defendant's part, with certain other railroads to restrain trade, and to recover treble damages under the Anti-Trust Act, of Act of July 2, 1890.[33] The complainant's bill alleged that it was a wholesale dealer in merchandise, located at Portland; that the defendants, owners of connecting railroad lines, had established a schedule of joint-freight tariffs between Portland and points in Idaho on the second line; that such second road, in connection with a third, had also established a schedule of joint rates on freight from San Francisco to the same points, under which the charge from San Francisco was the same as from Portland, although the distance was greater; and that, under the divisions made between the respective roads, the second road received a smaller rate, relative to the length of the haul over its line, under the latter than under the former schedule, in which the haul was from the opposite direction. The bill charged that such facts constituted an undue preference in favor of San Francisco and its merchants over Portland and its merchants, in violation of § 3 of the interstate commerce law, and that therefore the rates charged from Portland were unjust and unreasonable, under § 1 of such law. The bill stated no grounds for relief under either section, because the rates from Portland, not being alleged to be unjust or unreasonable in themselves, could not become so by comparison with other joint rates from an opposite direction, and from a different and competing point on a different line of road.[34]

Allegations as to Rebates.—In a suit in equity by the United States against interstate carriers and others, brought, under the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, to enjoin the giving and receiving of unlawful rebates, in which the lawfulness of payments made by the carriers depends upon the intent with which they were made and received, the bill is sufficient on its face to show the unlawful intent and the illegality of the payments, where it alleges that a defendant brewing company, which was a large shipper of beer prior to the enactment of such statute, habitually received rebates from carriers; that shortly after such enactment its officers, who were also its controlling stockholders, organized a transit company (defendant) and became its officers and the owners of practically all of its stock, and

32. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

33. Allegations as to discrimination.—American Union Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 159 Fed. 278.

34. Allen v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 98 Fed. 16.

on behalf of the brewing company contracted with it to make all the shipments for the brewing company; that the transit company contracted for shipments with such interstate carriers as would pay it from one-tenth to one-eighth of the published rate for the transportation, ostensibly as a commission for obtaining the business, but in fact, as was well known to the carrier defendants, as a rebate for the benefit of the brewing company.[35]

Construing Allegations in Pleadings.—Where other shippers had brought actions for recovery on similar grounds as in this case, while, this being an action in behalf of a different plaintiff, he is not concluded by the evidence introduced on those trials, can state other and different facts, and recover on other and distinct grounds, yet the same acts on the part of the defendant are made in all the cases the basis of relief. Hence, allegations in this petition, which are doubtful in their meaning and susceptible of two constructions, may not unfairly be taken as intended to mean that which the testimony in the former cases showed were the facts. "The course of the litigation makes it apparent that the purpose was not simply to present a new case to the same court, but to obtain from a higher court a construction of the law applicable to the facts. The brief of counsel, while it points out what is alleged are differences between the case made in this petition and that established in the prior cases, also discloses that in his judgment the views expressed by the court of appeals in those cases were wrong, and that he is seeking the judgment of this court thereon. It was easy, if counsel intended to present an entirely different case, to make the averments so positive and distinct as to clearly distinguish it."[36] "It is urged as against the sufficiency of the statement of facts contained in the pleas that the rates fixed by the schedules are not so stated that the court may determine whether such rates are different from those fixed by the contract; that the times when the schedules were published is not shown; that the facts are not sufficiently stated to enable the court to determine that the rates provided by the contract are less than charged others for like and contemporaneous services under substantially the same conditions and circumstances. The contract in question is, however, set out in full in the plaintiff's declaration, and was thus properly before the court for consideration in connection with the pleas. Whatever may be said of the sufficiency of the first, second, and fourth pleas, it seems clear that the allegations of the third plea, taken in connection with the contract, definitely apprise the plaintiff of the defendant's contention that, at the time of the making of the contract and during its continuance defendant's rates, fares and charges were established and published in compliance with the provisions of § 6 of the act; and that by the agreement in question the defendant contracted to receive from the plaintiff a less compensation for the transportation of property than specified in the published schedules of rates, fares, and charges in force at the time and times in question. The third plea expressly asserts not only that defendant 'duly establishes, publishes and files its schedule of rates, fares, and charges for the transportation of passengers and property between the states aforesaid in the manner as therein provided,' but also that: 'It has at all times so established, published, and filed its schedules of rates and charges for the transportation of property between points in the state of Arkansas and the state of Tennessee, and other points in the several states through which its line runs, and particularly from Round Pond, Ark., to the city of Memphis.' It also asserts that: 'The terms of the agreement set forth in the plaintiff's declaration taken in connection with the statements and allegations in said declaration contained, and as construed by said statements and said declaration, particularly taken in connection with the allegation that said plaintiff is not a common carrier, require this defendant to divide its lawful, established, 35. Allegations as to rebates.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 142 Fed. 247.

36. Construing allegations in pleadings.—Parsins v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887.

published, and filed schedule of rates and charges for the transportation of the property in plaintiff's declaration described with the plaintiff not as a common carrier, but as a shipper.'[37] The declaration alleges, however, that the only reason assigned by defendant and its predecessor in interest for failing to furnish sufficient cars was that the defendant did not have sufficient and adequate cars, and the rule is invoked that, where a party gives a reason for his conduct touching anything involved in the controversy, he is estopped, after litigation is begun, from changing his ground and putting his conduct on another and different ground. The general rule referred to is well supported."[38]

§ 4205. Issues, Proof and Variance.—In mandamus under the Act of March 2, 1889, to compel a common carrier to move and transport interstate traffic, or to furnish cars or other facilities for such transportation, on the ground that there has been such a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, as prevents the relator from having interstate traffic moved by the common carrier at the same rates as are charged, or on terms as favorable as those given, by the carrier for like traffic under similar conditions to any other shipper, the gist of the whole proceeding is an unjust discrimination in favor of one shipper over another similarly situated, and that character of discrimination must not only be pleaded, but it must be proved, by the relator; otherwise, the writ will be denied.[39]

§ 4206. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—The cause of action of a shipper who has been charged a rate, not alleged to be unreasonable, to recover from a carrier what he claims is an excess over what was charged other shippers of similar goods to some point from the same or greater distance on its line or lines under a common control, is based entirely on a statute, and to enforce what is in its nature a penalty. He is only seeking to recover money which he alleges is due, not because of any unreasonable charge, but on account of the wrongful conduct of the defendant. Therefore, he is bound by the rule of strict proof. Before, therefore, the plaintiff can recover of this defendant for alleged violations of the Interstate Commerce Act, he must make a case showing not by way of inference but clearly and directly such violations. No violation of statute is to be presumed.[40] To support an action by a shipper against a carrier under § 8 of the Interstate Commerce Act, he must show either that there has been some unreasonable or excessive charge imposed or some unlawful discrimination practiced against him by which he has been pecuniarily damaged, and he can not recover, on a merely technical construction of the law, because, in addition to the ordinary scheduled rate, an extra charge for icing service, also shown by the schedules, but separately, has been collected from him, where such charge is not shown to be unreasonable and has not been so held by the interstate commerce commission.[41] In an action against a railroad company for damages from failure to make connections with a certain train so as to get plaintiff's baggage at destination at a certain time, the burden was on defendant to show that the contract of carriage was illegal, as violating the federal statutes.[42]

§ 4207. Evidence.—Report of Commission.—And it is competent for the circuit court, in dealing with the issues raised by a petition of the commis-

37. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543.

38. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 191 Fed. 543, citing Railway Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. Ed. 693; Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 39 L. Ed. 578, 15 S. Ct. 555; Oakland Sugar Mill Co. v. Wolf Co., 55 C. C. A. 93, 118 Fed. 239; Snyder v. Supreme Ruler, 122 Tenn. 248, 122 S. W. 981; Cheek v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 56 Tenn. (9 Heisk.) 490.

39. Issues, proof and variance.—United States v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 109 Fed. 831.

40. Presumptions and burden of proof.—Parsons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 U. S. 447, 42 L. Ed. 231, 17 S. Ct. 887.

41. Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 148 Fed. 968, 79 C. C. A. 46.

42. Altschuler v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 154 Wis. 146, 144 N. W. 294.

sion and the answers thereto, and for the circuit court of appeals on the appeal, to determine the case upon a consideration of the allegations of the parties and of the evidence adduced in their support, giving effect, however, to the findings of fact in the report of the commission as prima facie evidence of the matters therein stated.[43]

Evidence Introduced before Commission.—It has been uniformly held by the several circuit courts and the circuit courts of appeal, in cases involving issues of fact that they are not restricted to the evidence adduced before the commission, nor to a consideration merely of the power of the commission to make the particular order under question, but that additional evidence may be put in by either party, and that the duty of the court is to decide, as a court of equity, upon the entire body of evidence.[44] In one case the supreme court said: "We think this a proper occasion to express disapproval of such a method of procedure on the part of the railroad companies as should lead them to withhold the larger part of their evidence from the commission, and first adduce it in the circuit court. The commission is an administrative board, and the courts are only to be resorted to when the commission prefers to enforce the provisions of the statute by a direct proceeding in the court, or when the orders of the commission have been disregarded. The theory of the act evidently is, as shown by the provision that the findings of the commission shall be regarded as prima facie evidence, that the facts of the case are to be disclosed before the commission. We do not mean, of course, that either party, in a trial in the court, is to be restricted to the evidence that was before the commission, but that the purposes of the act call for a full inquiry by the commission into all the circumstances and conditions pertinent to the questions involved."[45]

§ 4208. Reference.—The final decree of a federal circuit court in the proceedings prosecuted under Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 16, after action by the interstate commerce commission declaring an increased freight rate to be unreasonable, may direct an order of reference to the standing master of the pleadings and evidence in the cause, with instructions to ascertain the sum of the increase in rates paid since the rate went into effect, where defendants stipulated in open court that, in case complainants prevailed, a decree of restitution might be made.[46]

§ 4209. Judgment and Orders.—On Finding of Commission.—The circuit court granted no relief prejudicial to the carrier on the original bill, but sent the parties to the interstate commerce commission, where, upon sufficient pleadings, identical with those before the court, and upon testimony adduced upon the issues made, the decision was adverse to the carrier, and this action of the commission, with its findings and conclusions, was presented to the circuit court, and it was upon these, in effect, the decree of the court was rendered. There was no demurrer to that petition, and the testimony taken before the commission was stipulated into the case, and the opinion of the court recites that, "with equal meritorious purpose, counsel for the respective parties, agreed that this would stand for and be the hearing for final decree in equity."[47]

Operation and Effect.—A decree which ordered the carrier to desist from charging a greater compensation for the lesser than for the longer haul, would 43. Evidence. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

44. Evidence introduced before commission.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Alabama Mid. R. Co., 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. Ed. 414, 18 S. Ct. 45.

45. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. Ed. 935, 16 S. Ct. 700.

46. Reference.—Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846, affirming 138 Fed. 753.

47. Judgment and orders.—Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846.

be in no way responsive to the conclusion that the rate for the lesser distance was unreasonable in and of itself. Such a decree would in effect authorize the carrier to continue to charge at its election a rate which was in itself unreasonable to the shorter point.[48]

Restraining Order.—A restraining order that neither forbids nor commands the doing of any specific act, but simply repeats the general admonitions of the Interstate Commerce Act, should not be granted, since such an injunction does not give any additional sanction to the statute, but leaves all vital questions concerning violations of the law to be tried by proceedings for contempt, instead of being tried in the usual manner before a court and jury.[49]

§ 4210. Costs.—Where a proceeding to restrain certain carriers and shippers from giving and receiving rebates on interstate shipments was instituted at the direction of the attorney general, who retained special counsel nominated by the informing witness, and defendants made no application for a stay of proceedings in order to object to the appearance of such special counsel, they were not entitled to a dismissal on the ground that prosecutor had agreed with the attorney general to bear a deficiency in the expense of the prosecution after applying the balance of the attorney general's appropriation applicable to that purpose.[50] The provision in § 8 allowing against an offending initial carrier, to a shipper reasonable attorney's fees in an action for loss of goods, shipped in interstate trade, constitutes a valid regulation of interstate commerce.[51]

§ 4211. Stipulation of Parties.—There is nothing in the act which precludes the parties, after action by the commission declaring rates unreasonable, from stipulating in the proceedings prosecuted under § 16 that the court adjudge the amount of reparation. By the action of the commission the foundation for reparation, as provided in the Interstate Commerce Act, was established, and the inquiry submitted to the court was but of its amount, and had the natural and justifiable inducement to end all the controversies between the parties without carrying part of them to another tribunal. The objection that the reference is too broad is not of substance. What the court may award upon the coming in of the report of the master can not be known. Presumably it will make the reparation adequate for the injury, and award only the advance on the old rate and to those who are parties to the cause.[52]

§§ 4212-4217. Proceedings in Commerce Court—§ 4212. Statutory Provision.—The act creating the commerce court was intended to be but a part of the existing system for the regulation of interstate commerce, which was established by virtue of the original adoption in 1887 of the act to regulate commerce, and which was expanded by the repeated amendments of that act which followed, developed in practical executions by the rulings of the interstate commerce commission, upon whom was cast the administrative enforcement of the act, the whole elucidated and sanctioned by a long line of decisions of the federal supreme court, and by adopting the provisions concerning the commerce court and making it part of the system, it was not intended to destroy the existing machinery or method of regulation, but to cause it to be more efficient by affording a more harmonious means for securing the judicial enforcement of the 48. Operation and effect.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. Ed. 1047, 23 S. Ct. 687; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 719, 21 S. Ct. 516.

49. Restraining order.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Colorado, etc., Iron Co., 42 C. C. A. 12, 101 Fed. 779.

50. Costs.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 145 Fed. 1007.

51. Riverside Mills v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 990.

52. Stipulation of parties.—Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 428, 51 L. Ed. 1124, 27 S. Ct. 709, 11 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 846.

act to regulate commerce.[53] The first section of the act creating the commerce court, wherein is recited the jurisdiction of the commerce court, makes clear that the purpose was not to create a court with new and strange powers destructive of the previous well-established administrative authority of the interstate commerce commission and in conflict with the general jurisdiction vested in the courts of the United States, but only to give to the new court the special jurisdiction then possessed by the courts of the United States for the enforcement of orders made by the commission, and thus to unify the exertion of judicial power with reference to the enforcement of the orders of the commission. The opening words of the section which make this result clear are as follows: It (the commerce court) shall "have the jurisdiction now possessed by the circuit courts of the United States and the judges thereof, over all cases of the following kinds," etc.[54] The declaration in the act that nothing in the fact that the existing power of the circuit courts as to the subjects of jurisdiction transferred to the new court should be deemed as an enlarging of those powers, and that nothing in the transfer of the enumerated powers to the commerce court should be considered as limiting or abridging the existing jurisdiction possessed by the circuit courts as to things and subject matters not embraced in the powers transferred, serve to make clear the legislative intent that the creation of a new body to exercise a portion of the existing judicial power should not in any way enlarge the power as existing or be implied as destroying or minimizing the general scope of the judicial power possessed by the circuit courts where such power was not embraced within the authority transferred to the new body.[55]

§ 4213. Jurisdiction in General.—If the claim of constitutional right concerned a subject which, from its very nature and effect, dominated the act to regulate commerce and therefore was wholly independent of all questions of right or remedy created by or depending upon that statute, then the issue presented a controversy not cognizable in the commerce court, as it could not so be without violating the express reservation and restriction as to the general power of the circuit courts contained in the act. If, on the other hand, the constitutional question was involved in or depended upon the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, that question in the nature of things was subject to the precedent action of the commission on the subjects committed to it by the act to regulate commerce and as to which the court had jurisdiction alone to act in virtue of a prior affirmative order of the commission.[56] The commerce court has no jurisdiction to consider a question of car distribution in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission, on complaint of a shipper who claims that connecting carriers discriminate against him in refusing freight.[57]

§ 4214. Power to Enforce or Enjoin Orders of Commission.—The Act of June 18, 1910, confers on the commerce court jurisdiction previously pos-

53. Proceedings before commerce court.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

"The authority conferred by congress upon the commerce court (act of June 18, 1910; 36 Stat. 539, c. 309; Judicial Code, § 207) with respect to enjoining or setting aside the orders of the commission, like the authority previously exercised by the federal circuit courts, was confined to determining whether there had been violations of the constitution, or of the power conferred by statute, or an exercise of power so arbitrary as virtually to transcend the authority conferred." Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 34 S. Ct. 125, citing Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 280, 30 S. Ct. 155; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. Ed. 308, 32 S. Ct. 108; Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

54. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

55. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

56. Jurisdiction in general.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

57. Stony Fork Coal Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 195 Fed. 88.

sessed by the circuit courts of the United States of cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission, also authorizing the commerce court to exercise any and all powers of the circuit court of the United States so far as may be appropriate to the effective exercise of the jurisdiction conferred, and that nothing contained in the act shall be construed as enlarging the jurisdiction previously possessed by the courts thereby transferred to and vested in the commerce court; the jurisdiction so far as conferred, however, being exclusive, and so far as not conferred being reserved.[58] The words in this second subdivision are: "Second. Cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend in whole or in part any order of the interstate commerce commission." Giving to these words their natural significance, it follows that they confer jurisdiction only to entertain complaints as to affirmative orders of the commission; that is, they give the court the right to take cognizance when properly made of complaints concerning the legality of orders, rendered by the commission and confer power to relieve parties in whole or in part from the duty of obedience to orders which are found to be illegal. They do not invest that court with jurisdiction to redress complaints based exclusively upon the conception that the interstate commerce commission, in a matter submitted to is judgment, and within its competency to consider, has mistakenly refused, upon the ground that no right to the relief claimed was given by the act to regulate commerce, to award the relief which was claimed at its hands. In other words, the authority of the commerce court under the provision of the statute is confined to enforcing or restraining, as the case may require, affirmative orders of the commission, and it has no power to exert its own judgment by originally interpreting the administrative features of the act to regulate commerce and upon that assumption treat a refusal of the commission to grant relief as an affirmative order and accordingly pass on its correctness. That this is the proper construction of the act is further made to appear by reading this second subdivision of § 207 in connection with the first. The first subdivision provides for the enforcement of orders, that is, the compelling of the doing or abstaining from doing of acts embraced by a previous affirmative command of the commission, and the second dealing with the same subject from a reverse point of view, provides for the contingency of a complaint made to the court by one seeking to prevent the enforcement of orders of the commission such as are contemplated by the first paragraph. In other words, by the co-operation of the two paragraphs, authority is given on the one hand to enforce compliance with the orders of the commission if lawful, and, on the other hand, power is conferred to stay the enforcement of an illegal order, which must, in the nature of things, mean an affirmative order as in the other case.[59]

Temporary Injunction.—The granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite suspending, until final determination of the suit, an order of the interstate commerce commission, requiring certain carriers to desist from making further alleged discriminatory allowances, is not in excess of its power, under the Act of June 18, 1910, § 3, unless it was plainly unnecessary because of the obvious nature and character of the legal questions as to which the judgment of the court was invoked.[60]

Construction of Order.—The findings of the interstate commerce commission on which it bases an order requiring carriers to cease and desist from making certain charges as unreasonable and unjust, which are made prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated on the hearing of a petition by the commission asking a court to enjoin obedience to such order, will not, in view of the terms of the statute and its remedial character, be given a narrow construction on the hearing of a demurrer to the petition on the ground that such findings do not sustain the order made.[61]

58. Power to enforce or enjoin orders of commission.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 221.

59. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

60. Temporary injunction. — United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

§ 4215. Power to Enforce or Enjoin Particular Orders of Commission. —Grant of Relief against Demurrage Charge.—The jurisdiction of the commerce court under the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911, of cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, in whole or in part, any order of the interstate commerce commission, embraces only complaints of affirmative action by the commission, and does not confer the power to redress a complaint based solely upon the refusal of the commission to award the relief asked by a shipper against demurrage regulations, upon the ground that the federal statutes gave no right to the relief claimed. The commerce court has no right in such case to treat the order denying relief as an affirmative order and take jurisdiction of a petition filed in that court, making the United States, the interstate commerce commission, and the railroad parties defendant and praying the same relief which had been denied by the commission.[62] To give to this section of the statute a meaning contrary to that above stated and to recognize in the commerce court the existence of the power to interpret originally the administrative features of the act to regulate commerce, and to treat the refusal of the commission to grant relief prayed for as an affirmative order and renew it accordingly would result in frustrating the legislative public policy which led to the adoption of the act to regulate commerce, would render impossible a resort to the remedies which the statute was enacted to afford, would multiply the evils which the act to regulate commerce was adopted to prevent, and thus bring about disaster by creating confusion and conflict where clearness and unity of action was contemplated.[63]

Reduction of Rates.—The commerce court has no jurisdiction of a complaint by shippers of the refusal of the interstate commerce commission to reduce maximum rates to the full extent asked.[64]

Discrimination.—The commerce court may enjoin the performance of a contract offending the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, intended to prevent undue advantage or unlawful discrimination.[65]

Allowances to Shipper.—The commerce court has the right to entertain jurisdiction of a petition filed by an interstate carrier seeking to enjoin the enforcement of an affirmative order of the interstate commerce commission ordering said carrier to desist from making certain allowances to one shipper without making the same allowances to others for floatage, lighterage and terminal services rendered by such shippers to the carriers.[66]

61. Construction of order. — Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 Fed. 272.

62. Power to enforce or enjoin particular orders of commission.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

In determining whether the commerce court has jurisdiction of a petition to annul a ruling of the interstate commerce commission sustaining a carrier's demurrage rule, it is not material that suits in that court to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the commission are required to be brought against the United States, nor that under the law as it previously stood the venue of suits in the circuit courts of the United States against the commission to vacate its orders was fixed in each case in the district where the carrier against which the order was made had its principal operating office. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 221.

63. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761.

64. Reduction of rates.—Hooker v. Knapp, 225 U. S. 302, 56 L. Ed. 1099, 32 S. Ct. 769.

65. Discrimination.—United States v. Union Stockyards, etc., Co., 226 U. S. 286, 33 S. Ct. 83, modifying judgment Attorney General v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., 192 Fed. 330.

66. Allowances to shipper.—The commerce court, in the exercise of its power under the Act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 542, ch. 309), § 3, to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission, has jurisdiction to entertain a petition to enjoin an order of the commission requiring railway

Terminal Charges.—The commerce court also has power to allow a preliminary injunction against an affirmative order of the interstate commerce commission ordering a carrier to desist from discriminating in the matter of allowances for floatage, lighterage, and terminal services.[67]

Distribution of Cars.—The commerce court, in the exercise of its power, under the Act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 542, chap. 309), § 3, to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission, has jurisdiction to entertain a petition to enjoin an order of the commission requiring railway companies to cease charging lower rates for coal intended for railway consumption than is accorded to other shippers, and may enjoin such order if it considers that it will work irreparable injury, where the question presented by the petition is that the order of the commission was not merely administrative, but proceeded from a construction of certain sections of the act to regulate commerce as applicable to the conditions which affected the traffic in the different kinds of coal, and that the different charges for transportation constituted violations of those sections.[68]

Order Granting Reparation.—The commerce court has jurisdiction of a suit to annul an order of the interstate commerce commission which either awards or denies reparation to a complainant under the Interstate Commerce Act.[69] The jurisdiction of the commerce court, of cases to enjoin or set aside any order of the interstate commerce commission, does not confer jurisdiction to redress a complaint based on refusal of commission to award relief to a shipper against demurrage regulations.[70]

§ 4216. Power to Review Order of Commission.—Where the facts upon which an order of the interstate commerce commission is based are either admitted or undisputed, whether or not such facts show a violation of law by a carrier is a question of law, and a finding by the commission thereon is reviewable by the commerce court.[71] An order of the interstate commerce commission dismissing a complaint which is supported by substantial evidence and without errors of law can not be annulled by the commerce court.[72]

Order for Relief from Long and Short Haul Clause.—The limitation of the jurisdiction of the commerce court to that "now possessed" by the Circuit companies to cease charging lower rates for coal intended for railway consumption than is accorded to other shippers. Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

67. Terminal charges.—That authority is conferred in express terms by § 3 (§ 208), 36 Stat. at L. 1149, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 217, 36 Stat. at L. 542, chap. 209), of the act. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

68. Distribution of cars.—Interstate Cemmerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

"The question presented by the petition is that the order of the commission was not merely administrative, but proceeded from a construction of §§ 2 and 3 as applicable to the conditions which affected the traffic in the different kinds of coal, and that the different charges for transportation constituted violations of those sections. The commerce court, therefore, had jurisdiction of the petition and jurisdiction to enjoin the order of the commission if the court considered that the order would cause irreparable injury. Section 3 of the act creating the commerce court gives that court the power to 'enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission, in a suit brought in the court against the United States.'" Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

69. Order granting reparation.—Arkansas Fertilizer Co. v. United States, 193 Fed. 667.

Under Act June 18, 1910, § 1, the commerce court has jurisdiction of a suit to annul an order of the interstate commerce commission awarding reparation in damages to a complainant made under Interstate Commerce Act, § 16, as amended by Act June 29, 1906. Southern R. Co. v. United States, 193 Fed. 664.

70. Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 761, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, reversing judgment 188 Fed. 221.

71. Power to review order of commission.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 58.

72. Chamber of Commerce v. United States, 197 Fed. 66.

Courts, did not prevent that court from reviewing an order of the interstate commerce commission on an application for relief from the short and long haul clause of that section.[73]

§ 4217. Procedure.—Mandamus.—An appeal will not lie to the commerce court to review the action of the interstate commerce commission in refusing to entertain a petition, on the ground that the subject matter was not within the scope of the commission's powers. The proper procedure is by mandamus to compel the commission to take jurisdiction and proceed according to law.[74]

Injunction.—Section 3 (208), provides that the mere pendency of a suit to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend an order of the commission "shall not stay or suspend the operation of such order" but confers upon the court the power, under circumstances stated, to restrain or suspend in whole or in part the operation of an order; that is, of course, an affirmative order, of the commission. The same section makes a finding that irreparable injury will result from the operation of an order sought to be enforced, essential to the granting of an order restraining or suspending its enforcement.[75] In this case it was urged on behalf of the United States and the interstate commerce commission that, wholly irrespective of the merits of the petition, the order granting the interlocutory injunction should be reversed because of what was insisted to be the express requirements of the act imposing the duty on the commerce court or a judge of that court, if a restraining order was granted under the conditions in the statute, to state the facts from which it was found that irreparable injury would arise if a restraining order were not allowed. Answering this contention, the court said: "Without ambiguity we think the statute contemplates three classes of orders: First, a temporary restraining order staying in whole or in part the operation of the order of the interstate commerce commission for not more than sixty days from the date of the suspensive order, to be allowed by the court or a judge thereof; second, a preliminary injunction, that is, an injunction pendente lite, which, to quote the words of the statute, may be granted by the court to 'restrain or suspend, in whole or in part, the operation of the commission's order pending the final hearing and determination of the suit;' third, in the nature of things a perpetual injunction upon the entry of the final decree."[76]

Statement of Facts.—Only temporary restraining orders of the commerce court, issued conformably to the Act of June 18, 1910, staying in whole or in part the operation of an order of the interstate commerce commission for not more than sixty days, are affected by the requirements of that section respecting a statement of fact as to irreparable damage; they have no application to a preliminary injunction or injunction pendente lite.[77] The order in this case, made after notice and hearing, suspending the force and effect of the order of the commission until further order of the court, was obviously an exercise of the power conferred to grant a preliminary injunction or injunction pendente lite, and not of the power to allow a temporary restraining order embraced in the first of the classes stated. As we think it clear that the requirements of the statute relied upon

73. Order for relief from long and short haul clause.—An order of the interstate commerce commission refusing an application made by carriers under Act June 18, 1910, § 8, amending Act Feb. 4, 1887, § 4, for relief against the long and short haul clause of that section, is not excluded from the revisory power of the commerce court. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 234 U. S. 476, 34 S. Ct. 986; United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 234 U. S. 495, 34 S. Ct. 995.

74. Procedure.—Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Humboldt Steamship Co., 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. Ed. 849, 32 S. Ct. 556.

75. Injunction.—Procter, etc., Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. Ed. 1091, 32 S. Ct. 761; United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. Ed. 1107, 32 S. Ct. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504.

76. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

77. Statement of facts.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

respecting the statement of facts as to irreparable damages relate only to the first class of cases, that is, the power to issue a temporary restraining order, we hold the objection to be without merit.[78]

General Equity Rules.—Inasmuch as it appears from the act creating the commerce court and defining its powers and jurisdiction that the power of said court to issue a preliminary injunction was recognized and preserved so as to afford the court proper time for deliberation and consideration of the questions to be decided by the commission, instead of compelling said court, upon presentation of a petition, to reach a final conclusion eo instante, the general equity principle requiring courts of equity called upon to allow preliminary pendente lite injunctions, to determine whether on the face of the papers presented there is such an equitable cause of action presented as justifies the issue of the preliminary injunction prayed for, will not be applied.[79] "Under the general principles of equity, where a court is called upon to decide whether it will allow a preliminary or pendente lite injunction, the duty arising requires it to be determined whether, on the face of the papers presented, there is such an equitable cause of action presented as justifies the issue of a preliminary injunction to preserve the status pending the suit; that is, to afford an opportunity for a trial of the issues presented. Necessarily it is true that where an appeal is allowed from an order granting a preliminary injunction the reviewing court is put to the duty of determining whether, on the face of the papers, the court below erred as a matter of law in granting the preliminary injunctions. Do these principles apply to the case before us is then the first consideration. The result of holding that they do, will inevitably cause the expunging from the act of the express authority conferred to issue a preliminary injunction, since, viewed under the general principles of equity, the criteria by which to determine the rightfulness of such an order in view of the nature and character of the jurisdiction of the commerce court is exactly and exclusively the same criteria by which the rightfulness of a final degree of that court, issuing a perpetual injunction in conformity to such decree, would require to be tested. Our duty, however, is not to destroy the law, but to enforce it; and in doing so to seek to discover the intention of the lawmaker, the wrong intended to be prevented, and the remedy designed to be afforded by the enactment of the statute. Coming to consider the statute for this purpose, we have pointed out in the Procter & Gamble Case that the great remedy intended to be accomplished was the concentration in a single court of the power to consider the rightfulness of enforcing or setting aside orders of the commission; that, to prevent unnecessary delays, the limitations as to restraining orders and their duration, and the hearing which is commanded as to irreparable injury, were enacted. It must therefore in reason be that the power to issue a preliminary injunction was recognized and preserved so as to afford the court the proper time for deliberation and consideration of the questions to be decided by the commission, instead of compelling that body virtually eo instante upon the presentation of a petition to reach a final conclusion. And it would seem also to be the case that the right to appeal from such an order was given as a safeguard against a possible abuse of discretion by an unwarranted, arbitrary, and unreasonable exercise of the power conferred. In other words, we think that the enlightened purpose of congress was that the court which it created, in the exercise of the important trusts confined to its authority, and where occasion required it as a consequence of the gravity and complexity of the legal questions which might arise, should be afforded ample opportunity for due consideration and ripe judgment, and that it was not intended to compel precipitate, and perhaps ill-considered, action."[80]

78. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

79. General equity rules.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

80. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

Appeal.—The commerce court was created for the purpose, among other things, of interposing between the interstate commerce commission and the federal supreme court an intermediate tribunal having powers which the statute delegates to it, and it is the duty of the federal supreme court to uphold the lawful authority of the commerce court. Therefore, the federal supreme court will not reverse an order of the commerce court granting a preliminary injunction against an affirmative order of the interstate commerce commission, except in the case of a clear abuse of power, but will remand the case so that there may be an opportunity to dispose of it on the merits in the form selected by congress for that purpose.[81]

Order Granting Injunction.—The federal supreme court will not disturb on appeal the granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite suspending, until final determination of the suit, an order of the interstate commerce commission, requiring certain carriers to desist from making further alleged discriminatory allowances, unless it was so unwarranted, arbitrary, and unreasonable as to amount to an abuse of discretion.[82] It is not disputable that although the right to appeal to this court from an order like the one here in question is conferred, yet obviously the purpose which must have caused the creation of the commerce court must have been the desire to interpose between the action of the commission and this court an intermediate tribunal, having the powers which the statute delegates to it. Our duty is to give that purpose effect and to uphold the lawful authority of the court without deviation, and yet without hesitancy, where there has been an abuse of discretion, to correct it in the completest way. But as this case manifests no such abuse, our duty is not to reverse the action of the court, but to remand the case, so that there may be an apportunity to dispose of it on the merits in the forum selected by congress for that purpose. Of course, in saying this, we must not be understood as deciding or in any way implying that the duty would not exist to examine the merits of a preliminary order of the general character of the one before us in a case where it plainly, in our judgment, appeared that the granting of the preliminary order was in effect a decision by the court of the whole controversy on the merits, or where it was demonstrable that grave detriment to the public interest would result from not considering and finally disposing of the controversy without remanding to enable the court to do so.[83]

§ 4218. Proceedings in State Courts.—The interstate commerce law provides in § 9 that any person claiming to be damaged by any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, may either make complaint to the commission, or may bring suit, in his own behalf, for the recovery of damages for which such carrier may be liable under the provisions of the act, in any district or circuit court of the United States of competent jurisdiction; but such person shall not have the right to pursue both remedies, and must in each case elect which one of the two methods of procedure he will adopt. The state courts have no jurisdiction of such a claim for damages.[84] But it has been expressly held in many of the states that the provisions of § 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act are

81. Appeal.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

82. Order granting injunction.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

83. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. Ed. 1100, 32 S. Ct. 817.

84. Proceedings in state courts.—Copp v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 43 La. Ann. 511, 9 So. 441, 12 L. R. A. 725, 26 Am. St. Rep. 198.

Under Interstate Commerce Act, § 9, (Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 382, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3159), conferring jurisdiction of an action for violation of the provision of the act on the federal circuit and district courts alone, and putting the party complaining to his election between that remedy and proceedings before the interstate commerce commission, also provided for by the act, a state court has no jurisdiction of such an action. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 98 Tex. 302, 83 S. W. 362, reversing 80 S. W. 426.

the subject of cognizance and enforcement by the state courts.[85] Except as to those things which the interstate commerce commission has defined and denounced as undue discrimination, a discrimination complained of may be dealt with by the state courts according to their own statute or the common law.[86] A shipper sued a carrier in the courts of a state to recover the excess of what it alleged to be an unjust and unreasonable charge on shipments of carloads of cotton seed. The defense was that the rates were charged according to the schedule of rates filed under the interstate commerce act, and that the court had no jurisdiction to grant relief upon the basis that the established rate was unreasonable, when it had not been found to be so by the interstate commerce commission. It was held that the state courts had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit based on the unreasonableness of a rate as published in advance of the action of the interstate commerce commission adjudging the rate unreasonable. And it was in effect held that reparation after such action for the excess above a reasonable rate must be by a proceeding before the commission, "because of a wrong endured during the period when the unreasonable schedule was enforced by the carrier and before its change and the establishment of a new one."[87]

Enjoining Filing of Rates.—A state court has no jurisdiction to enjoin a railroad engaged in interstate transportation from filing with the interstate commerce commission a schedule of its rates for transportation of coal from a point in the state to a point in another state on the ground that the rates are unfair and discriminatory.[88]

Review.—Where the defendant specially sets up a defense under the Interstate Commerce Act, which, if denied to him, is an adverse ruling of federal right which will warrant the bringing of the case to the supreme court of the United States from the highest court of a state.[89]

§ 4219. Election of Remedies.—Section 9 of the act provides that persons claiming to be damaged may make their complaint either to the commission in the manner provided in the act, or by bringing suit on their own behalf for the recovery of damages for which such carrier may be liable under the provisions of the act in any district or circuit court of competent jurisdiction; and such persons shall not have the right to pursue both of these remedies, and must elect which of the two methods of procedure herein provided for they will adopt.[90] Persons damaged may complain to commission or sue personally. But

85. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Mitchell, 175 Ind. 196, 91 N. E. 735, 93 N. E. 996, citing Murray v. Chicago, etc., Co., 62 Fed. 24; Midland Valley Co. v. Hoffman Co., 91 Ark. 180, 120 S. W. 380; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Grayson, 89 Ark. 154, 115 S. W. 933; Southern Pac. Co. v. Crenshaw, 5 Ga. App. 675, 63 S. E. 865; Georgia Railroad v. Creety, 5 Ga. App. 424, 63 S. E. 528; Brantley Co. v. Ocean Steamship Co., 5 Ga. App. 844, 63 S. E. 1129; Pittsburgh, etc., Co. v. Wood (Ind. App.), 84 N. E. 1009; Galveston, etc., Co. v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.), 117 S. W. 170; Chicago, etc., Co. v. Clements, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 143, 115 S. W. 664; Galveston, etc., Co. v. Piper, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 568, 115 S. W. 107.

86. Puritan Coal Min. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 237 Pa. 420, 85 Atl. 426.

87. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075.

88. Enjoining filing of rates.—Thacker, etc., Coke Co. v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 67 W. Va. 448, 68 S. E. 107, 28 L. R. A., N. S., 108.

89. Review.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, 34 S. Ct. 556.

90. Election of remedies.—Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Macon Grocery Co., 166 Fed. 206, 92 C. C. A. 114.

Under Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 9, 24 Stat. 382 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3159], providing that any person claiming to be damaged by violation of the act may make complaint to the commission thereby created, or bring suit to recover damages sustained, where plaintiff elected to proceed by a complaint to the commission, he was thereafter confined to the remedy provided by the act. Western New York, etc., R. Co. v. Penn Refin. Co., 137 Fed. 343, 70 C. C. A. 23, affirmed in 28 S. Ct. 268, 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. Ed. 456.

Where plaintiff sued an interstate carrier in a federal court to recover damages for alleged unreasonable charges, without having first presented its griev-they can not have both remedies, and must elect between them.[91] Where a shipper claimed a right to recover aggregate excess freights alleged to have been paid on various interstate shipments, alleging that the rate charged consisted of the sum of local rates through a point of concentration, and that the rule that a shipper should only be entitled to the benefit of a lower through rate when the original bill did not state the ultimate destination, was unreasonable, a complaint charging that such condition had been previously submitted to the interstate commerce commission in another proceeding by different shippers against the defendant carrier, and had been found unreasonable and invalid, was insufficient to relieve plaintiff from the duty of submitting its claim to the commission before beginning suit in a federal court thereon.[92]

Cumulative Remedies.—The special remedies afforded by the Interstate Commerce Act to prevent the imposition of unjust or unreasonable rates were intended to supplement, and not to supplant, the existing remedies furnished by the common law.[93]

Proceeding by Mandamus.—An action in a federal court for a mandamus, under § 10 of the Act of March 2, 1889, amendatory of the interstate commerce act, which authorizes such action by a shipper against an interstate carrier to compel a compliance with the act, and further provides that "the remedy hereby given by writ of mandamus shall be cumulative, and shall not be held to exclude or interfere with other remedies provided by this act or the act to which it is a supplement," does not preclude the relator or others from proceeding in respect to the same matter by petition to the interstate commerce commission under § 13 of the original Act of Feb. 4, 1887, and the court in the mandamus suit is without power on an ancillary bill to enjoin such proceeding.[94] If congress had intended that the remedy afforded by § 23 was to be exclusive, it would have added a proviso similar to the one incorporated as a part of § 9, and not having done so it is manifest that it was the intention of Congress that the remedy provided by § 23 was not to be treated as exclusive, and especially inasmuch as it is expressly provided that the remedy granted therein shall be cumulative, and shall not be held to exclude or to interfere with other remedies granted by the act. Any other construction of this proviso would be in direct conflict with the plain provisions of the law, and, in view of this provision, we are of opinion that the court below was without power to restrain the appellant from proceeding before the interstate commerce commission under the provisions of § 13, and that the court did not have jurisdictions of the subject matter sought to be litigated in this proceeding.[95]

§§ 4220-4237. Criminal Liability of Carrier—§ 4220. In General.—Effect must be given, in construing a repealing act, to the general saving clause

ance to the interstate commerce commission, the complaint constituted an election to sue in a federal court, which had jurisdiction to determine whether it stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action under Interstate Commerce Act, §§ 1, 6, 8, 9, and 15. National Pole Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 211 Fed. 65.

91. Section 9 of the Interstate Commerce Act; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Comm., 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. Ed. 940, 16 S. Ct. 666; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. Ed. 553, 27 S. Ct. 350, 9 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Comm. v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. Ed. 1047, 14 S. Ct. 1125.

92. National Pole Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 200 Fed. 185.

93. Cumulative remedies. — Tift v. Southern R. Co., 123 Fed. 789.

The special remedies provided by the Interstate Commerce Act are cumulative, and not exclusive, of the general remedies given by the Judiciary Act conferring jurisdiction of all suits and controversies arising under an act of congress, regardless of any diversity of citizenship between the parties. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 771.

94. Proceeding by mandamus.—Merchants' Coal Co. v. Fairmont Coal Co., 160 Fed. 769.

95. Merchants' Coal Co. v. Fairmont Coal Co., 160 Fed. 769.

in the Revised Statutes of the United States [96] prescribing the effect of repealing acts on existing penalties, forfeitures, and liabilities, unless, either by express declaration or necessary implication arising from the terms of the repealing law as a whole, it results that the legislative mind will be set at naught by giving effect to such saving clause. The exception from the operation of the provision repealing conflicting laws, which is made by the Act of June 29, 1906, in favor of causes pending in the federal courts, which shall be prosecuted to conclusion in the manner heretofore provided by law, was addressed solely to the procedure to be followed in pending cases, and such section, therefore, does not supersede the general provision of the Revised Statutes saving existing forfeitures, penalties, or liabilities from repeal, so as to prevent future criminal prosecutions for offenses against the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, committed prior to the adoption of the later statute.[97]

§ 4221. Discrimination and Undue Preference.—Statutory Provisions.—In so far as the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, provided for punishment of corporate carriers in granting, and corporate shippers in knowingly accepting, rebates or discrimination from legal rates and tariffs, it was not abrogated or repealed by the Act of June 29, 1906, but was preserved, and so far as it provided for the punishment of such acts when not knowingly done, it was repealed.[98] Therefore, intentionally accepting transportation of goods in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, which is forbidden by the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, is sufficient to sustain a conviction under that act, although such action may have been taken in good faith, under a claim of legal right.[99] The "undue preferences" clause of the Interstate Commerce Act is indefinite and uncertain, a conviction for its violation can not be sustained where the criminality of the act is made to depend on whether the jury think a preference reasonable or unreasonable.[1] The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, is not restricted in its provisions to departures from an establishment tariff rate, but is violated if any other advantage is given to a shipper whereby a discrimination is practiced.[2]

Where Rate Not Published by Carrier.—A carrier which gives rebates from a joint rate on file with the interstate commerce commission may, although it did not itself publish and file the rate, be convicted of violating the act which, inter alia, provides that the published rate shall be conclusively deemed, in any prosecution under the act, to be the legal rate as against the carrier who files the same or "participates in any rates so filed or published," and that any departure from such rate shall be deemed to be an offense under the act.[3] An interstate carrier may be prosecuted under the Elkins Act for the offense of rebating where it is a party to the joint rate although it has not filed and published the same itself. While it is usual for the initial carrier to file such joint tariffs, the fact that it was filed by another carrier participating therein is immaterial, since § 1 of the Elkins Law brings all the carriers who have participated in any rate filed or published within the terms of the act, as much so as if the tariff had been actually published and filed by such participating carrier, for the statute specifically provides that the published rate shall be conclusively deemed in any 96. Criminal liability of carrier.—U. S. Rev. Stat., § 13, U. S. Com. Stat. 1901, p. 6.

97. Great Northern R. Co. v. United States, 84 C. C. A. 93, 155 Fed. 945, judgment affirmed in 208 U. S. 452, 52 L. Ed. 567, 28 S. Ct. 313.

98. Discrimination and undue preference.—Great Northern R. Co. v. United States, 155 Fed. 945, 84 C. C. A. 93, judgment affirmed in 208 U. S. 452, 52 L. Ed. 567, 28 S. Ct. 313.

99. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

1. Tozer v. United States, 52 Fed. 917.

2. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

3. Where rate not published by carrier.—United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 212 U. S. 509, 53 L. Ed. 629, 29 S. Ct. 313, reversing 157 Fed. 293.

prosecution under the act to be the legal rate as against the carrier who files the same, or "participates in any rates so filed and published."[4]

As to Connecting Carriers.—The provisions of Interstate Commerce Act making it unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce to give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular shipper, or to subject any particular shipper to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatever, if construed to apply to the affording of facilities for shipments, do not subject a railroad company to indictment under the act for its failure or refusal to furnish switch connections to a shipper tendering interstate traffic for transportation, although such connections are furnished to other shippers, where the indictment does not charge that those demanded are reasonably practicable and could be put in with safety and would furnish sufficient business to justify the expense of their construction and maintenance, nor that the person or company asking for the same offered to pay such portion of their cost as is usual and reasonable.[5]

§ 4222. Rebates.—Statutory Provision.—The giving or receiving of a rebate or concession whereby property in interstate or foreign commerce is transported at less than the established rate is the essence of the offense denounced by the Act of Feb. 19, 1903.[6] Section 10 of the Act of June 29, 1906, relating to rates of interstate carriers, which provides that "all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, but the amendments herein provided for shall not affect causes now pending in courts of the United States, but such causes shall be prosecuted to a conclusion in the manner heretofore provided by law," when construed in accordance with the rule prescribed by Rev. St., § 13, does not relieve offenders under § 1 of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, from subsequent indictment and prosecution for such offenses, but merely relates to the mode of procedure to be followed in pending causes.[7] Under the clause of the interstate commerce act making it unlawful for a carrier, by means of false billing, classification, weighing, or by any other device or means, knowingly to assist or suffer any person to obtain transportation at less that the regular rate, an indictment will not lie for paying or receiving rebates.[8]

Separate and Continuing Offenses.—Where pursuant to a previous agreement, preceding transportation, a number of separate shipments are made and the full legal rate paid thereon, and afterwards claims of the shipper for the rebates stipulated in such agreement are presented at short intervals and paid by checks to the shipper, the offense is not a single and continuing one, but there is a complete and separate offense upon the making of each payment by the railroad company of the stipulated rebate.[9] Where defendant shipped oil at concession rates on prepaid shipping orders, making settlements with the carrier periodically, there were as many offenses committed on a settlement being made as there were separate transactions or transportations covered by such settlement.[10]

4. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 212 U. S. 509, 53 L. Ed. 629, 29 S. Ct. 313.

5. As to connecting carriers.—United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 997.

6. Rebates.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

A departure from an established and published interstate freight rate by a carrier in order to constitute a crime denounced by Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880), must be willful. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 163 Fed. 111.

7. United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 84.

8. United States v. Hanley, 71 Fed. 672.

9. Separate and continuing offenses.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

10. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 192 Fed. 438.

Intent.—In a prosecution of an interstate carrier for giving a rebate on an interstate shipment of lime, constituting a departure from the established and published rate, the intent of the carrier is of the essence of the offense.[11] But the use of the word "willful" in the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, to characterize offenses thereunder, conceding it to apply to the granting of rebates from the published schedule rates, does not require that there should have been an evil intent to constitute the offense, but it is sufficient if the act was done knowingly and purposely.[12]

Knowingly and Wilfully.—Where, in a prosecution of an interstate carrier for rebating, the defendant claimed that as soon as it discovered the error it collected from all but one of the shippers the full tariff rates, an instruction that the jury should regard the offense as consummated or not according as the defendant acted with or without knowledge of the facts held sufficiently favorable to it.[13]

Knowledge of Agent.—Where an interstate railroad company applied lower transit rates to shipments of lumber which were only entitled to local rates, the shipper's agents would be presumed to have knowledge of the rate applicable, which knowledge was imputable to the shipper.[14] But the fact that the agents who executed such outbound transactions did not know that the lumber was not entitled to the transit rate did not show that the defendant carrier did not knowingly make the rebates.[15]

Printing and Publishing Rates as Prerequisite.—The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, makes it unlawful for a carrier to grant a rebate from a joint tariff rate which it has filed with the interstate commerce commission or published, or in which it participates when filed or published by another carrier, but it does not make it a criminal offense to receive a rebate from a joint rate unless such rate has been both filed and published.[16] The act sets forth two entirely separate offenses, the first being the failure of a carrier, subject to the provisions of the interstate commerce act, to file and publish the tariffs required by said act or strictly to observe the same, and the second the soliciting, accepting, or receiving by such a carrier of any rebate whereby any property shall be transported at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by such carrier. In order to constitute an offense under the second provision, the tariff charged to have been violated must be one published or filed by the defendant charged, and it is not sufficient that in the case involved such defendant participated in a through rate published and filed by another carrier, where it had not itself published or filed it.[17]

Posting Schedule of Rates as Prerequisite.—But compliance with the provision of the act as to posting copies of schedules and tariffs is not essential to bring a tariff within the provision of the act making it a misdemeanor for a shipper to accept rebates.[18]

Justification of Rebate.—It is no defense to a prosecution for receiving a rebate that competing roads granted a like concession, and that the defendant

11. Intent.—Judgment, United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 163 Fed. 111, reversed in 170 Fed. 250, 95 C. C. A. 446.

12. Judgment, United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 84, affirmed in 162 Fed. 835.

13. Knowingly and wilfully.—Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

14. Knowledge of agent.—Where a railroad company unlawfully applied transit rates to certain shipments of lumber, and certain of the defendant's agents knew that the lumber was not entitled to such rates, the defendant was chargeable with the agents' knowledge, and was guilty of knowingly accepting at rebate. Nichols, etc., Lumber Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 588.

15. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

16. Printing and publishing rates as prerequisite.—United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

17. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 157 Fed. 293.

18. Posting schedule of rates as prerequisite.—United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323, reversing judgment, 187 Fed. 375.

was compelled to do the same in order to secure its fair share of the business, or that it treated all shippers alike, or that the concession was made by its officers in good faith and in the honest belief that it was lawful.[19] A contract between a carrier and the shipper to transport the latter's goods in interstate or foreign commerce, at the then established rates, for a definite time, constitutes no defense to the charge of giving or receiving a rebate from the filed and published rates.[20]

Refunded to Person Other than Shipper.—The mere fact that a rebate is not paid to the shipper, but is paid to somebody else, is quite immaterial. If it is in fact a rebate, concession, or discrimination whereby the property is transported at a less rate than that named in the tariff, the unlawful act is committed.[21]

Refunded to Agent of Carrier.—The carrier has a right to employ persons to solicit business, just as it has a right to employ clerks and employees of all kinds to do the business, and any payments for such a purpose can not constitute a rebate, concession, or discrimination within the meaning of the act.[22]

§ 4223. Failure to File and Publish Rates.—By the Interstate Commerce Act transportation of interstate commerce by a carrier which has not filed its rates for such service is a misdemeanor.[23]

§ 4224. Departure from Publishing Rates.—Section 6 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906, makes it a misdemeanor for a carrier to charge a different rate from that fixed by its schedule.[24] The

19. Justification of rebate.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 162 Fed. 835.

20. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

21. Refunded to person other than shipper.—United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 Fed. 269.

An indictment against a carrier, alleging that P. was the duly authorized agent of the S. Company and vested by it with the sole and exclusive power and authority to determine over which line any shipment by it should be made; that defendant entered into an unlawful agreement with P. whereby it was agreed that P., as such agent should cause S. to make large shipments over defendant's road, and S. should pay defendant the lawful rate for such shipments, and thereafter P. should present claims to defendant for a rebate on such shipments, under the guise of claims for services; and that such scheme was carried out, and defendant made payments to P. by way of rebate—charges a payment of rebates in violation of the Elkins law (Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 599]); the fact that the rebate is paid to another than the shipper being immaterial, though a payment which is but a commission for obtaining business for the carrier is not within the statute. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 Fed. 269.

22. Refunded to agent of carrier.—United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 Fed. 269.

23. Failure to file and publish rates.—United States v. Illinois Terminal R. Co., 168 Fed. 546.

24. Departure from publishing rates.—A count under section 6 of the act, charging that on a day named defendant, as agent, etc., charged and collected of another railroad company a less rate of compensation for carrying goods between Hannibal and Helper than 46 cents per 100 pounds, which rate had been "established and published" between those points prior to the day named, and that said rate was "in force on that day," negatives a reduction by defendant's company prior to or on the day in question. United States v. Tozer, 37 Fed. 635, 2 L. R. A. 444.

Where a railroad company which has fixed a rate of 20 cents per hundred for freight from Chicago to New York, and 22 cents per hundred for freight from points west of Chicago to New York, of which latter rate said company receives 18 cents, making an arrangement with a Chicago firm to ship its freight from Chicago to New York at 22 cents under bills of lading purporting to come from Western points, and to return to them 4 cents under pretense of paying it to the road bringing the freight into Chicago, it is guilty of violation of the provision of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, which makes it a misdemeanor for a common carrier to charge different rates from those fixed in its schedule. United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 43 Fed. 26.

An indictment against a railroad com-acceptance by a railroad company in settlements with a coal company for interstate shipments of coal of notes of the shipper for a part of its freight charges, in accordance with an agreement and understanding between them, constitutes a willful failure to strictly observe its tariffs.[25] An arrangement between a railway company and a construction company for reduced-rate transportation of men and materials required by the company in grading an extension, when entered into in good faith, is not obnoxious to the provisions of laws prohibiting departure from published tariffs.[26]

Necessity for Actual Acceptance of Rate.—Under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act that no carrier shall charge, demand, collect, or receive a greater or less compensation for service than the rates, fares, and charges specified in the tariff filed and in effect at the time, a willful demand of more than the tariff rates by a carrier is of equal criminality with an actual collection thereof.[27]

§ 4225. False Billing of Goods.—The fixing of the value of property in a bill of lading at less than its actual value for the purpose of limiting the amount of the carrier's liability in case of loss is not a false billing in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act.[28]

§ 4226. Liability for Act of Agent.—It is true that there are some crimes, which in their nature can not be committed by corporations. But there is a large class of offenses, of which rebating under the federal statutes is one, wherein the crime consists in purposely doing the things prohibited by statute. In that class of crimes corporations may be held responsible for and charged with the knowledge and purposes of their agents, acting within the authority conferred upon them.[29]

Constitutionality of Provision.—There can be no question as to the power of congress to control those who are conducting interstate commerce by holding them responsible for the intent and purposes of the agents to whom they have delegated the power to act in the premises, and such provision of the statute is not unconstitutional upon the theory that it attributes the act of the agent to his principal, thereby making one person responsible for the crime of another, and thus depriving him of due process of law and of the presumption of innocence which the law raises in his favor.[30] Even if this section of the act were pany for violation of the interstate commerce act (Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, 24 Stat. 379 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3154]), as supplemented by the Elkins act (Act Cong. Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 599]), alleged that defendant published a sugar schedule for the transportation of sugar from New York to Cleveland at the rate of 21 cents per 100 pounds; that on a specified day the American Sugar Refining Company induced defendant to make an unlawful agreement to allow a rebate of 6 cents on sugar shipped by it to Cleveland for reconsignment, and 4 cents on sugar shipped to Cleveland as its ultimate destination; that the sugar company thereafter shipped various consignments, paid the schedule rate, and afterwards made claims on the railroad company, and was paid a rebate. Held, that such facts sufficiently showed a violation of the provisions of the act prohibiting deviations from the published rates. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 298.

Not in terms declared offense.—While carrying goods at a less or different rate than the tariff rate is not in terms declared an offense or penalized, it is punishable as a failure strictly to observe such tariff. Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 735; Sunday Creek Co. v. United States, 210 Fed. 747.

25. United States v. Hocking Valley R. Co., 194 Fed. 234.

26. Santa Fé, etc., R. Co. v. Grant Bros. Constr. Co., 33 S. Ct. 474, 228 U. S. 177, 46 L. R. A., N. S., 148, reversing judgment, 108 Pac. 467, 13 Ariz. 186.

27. Necessity for actual acceptance of rate.—United States v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 185 Fed. 820.

28. False billing of goods.—Pierce Co. v. Wells Fargo & Co., 189 Fed. 561, 110 C. C. A. 645.

29. Liability for act of agent.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

30. Constitutionality of provision.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

Due process of law is not denied by the provisions of the Elkins Act of Feb-unconstitutional as applied to individuals engaged in the business of interstate carriage, it must still be sustained as to corporate carriers, since every act is to be construed so as to maintain its constitutionality if possible, and the valid provisions thereof upheld unless they are so interblended with the invalid ones that the whole must stand or fall together, and in this case there can be no question that congress would have applied these provisions to corporation carriers, whether individuals were included or not. In this view the act is valid as to corporations.[31]

Act of Agent in Making Rates.—The act of the agent of a corporation engaged in interstate commerce while exercising the authority delegated to him to make rates for transportation, may be controlled, in the interest of public policy, by imputing his act to his employer and imposing penalties upon the corporation for which he is acting in the premises.[32]

§§ 4227-4237. Criminal Proceedings against Carrier—§ 4227. Jurisdiction and Venue.—The offense of obtaining transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, created by the Elkins Act of February 19, 1903, is made triable in any federal district through which such transportation is had, by the provision of that act that violations shall be prosecuted in any court of the United States having jurisdiction of crimes within the district in which such violation was committed, or through which the transportation may have been conducted.[33] The requirement that the prosecution of crimes against the United States be had in the state or district where the offense was committed, which is made by U. S. Const., Sixth Amendment, is not violated by the provision of the Elkins Act of February 19, 1903, under which the offense of obtaining transportation of goods at less than the carrier's published rates may be tried in any federal district through which such transportation was conducted.[34]

§ 4228. Initiation of Proceedings.—See elsewhere.[35]

§ 4229. Parties.—Both the corporation and its agents may be joined in an indictment for violating the provisions of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, against rebates, under which the commission by corporate officers or agents, acting within the scope of their employment, of criminal violations of the provisions of that act, is imputed to the corporation, and the corporation subjected to criminal prosecution therefor.[36]

§§ 4230-4234. Indictment—§ 4230. For Failure to File Rates.—An indictment of a carrier for failure to file its tariff of rates for petroleum, esruary 19, 1903 (32 Stat at L. 847, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 880), under which the commission by corporate officers, acting within the scope of their employment, of criminal violations of the prohibitions of that act against giving rebates, is imputed to the corporation, and the corporation is subjected to criminal prosecution therefor. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

31. New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304, citing Berea College v. Commonwealth, 211 U. S. 45, 53 L. Ed. 81, 29 S. Ct. 33, and The Employers' Liability Cases, 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. Ed. 297, 28 S. Ct. 141.

32. Act of agent in making rates.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304.

33. Jurisdiction and venue.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428.

The giving or receiving of a rebate whereby property in interstate or foreign commerce is transported at a less rate than that legally published, denounced by Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 599], is a continuous crime within the jurisdiction of any United States court having jurisdiction of crimes through whose district the transportation is conducted. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400.

34. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428.

35. Initiation of proceedings.—See ante, "Particular Powers," § 4154.

36. Parties.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304, affirming 146 Fed. 298.

tablished under a common arrangement for interstate shipment, alleged the establishment of a rate for carrying petroleum between intrastate terminals under a common arrangement for a continuous interstate shipment, and that each of the shipments under such rate were under shipping orders, transfer slips, and waybills, showing that the commodity was to be transported from the point of shipment to destination by a continuous route without unloading or transshipment. The indictment sufficiently charged a common arrangement between the various carriers for a through interstate shipment under a joint tariff.[37]

§ 4231. For Departure from Published Rate.—An indictment charging a shipper with securing transportation of goods in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, in violation of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, is sufficient where it charges each and all of the elements of the offense, with allegations of time, place, kind of goods, and name of carrier, averring the fixing of the published rate, the changing of the rate, and the new publication, the shipper's knowledge of this change, and the carriage of the goods over a described route at a concession of the difference between the two rates.[38] An indictment against a railroad company for a failure to observe its published tariffs by extending credit to a shipper under joint rates for a part of the freight due is not insufficient because it does not exclude the possibility that it received in cash its own share of such freights.[39]

§ 4232. For Discrimination and Preference.—The offense of the unjust discrimination, under § 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act, is not confined to discrimination by means of some device, as by a special rate, rebate, or drawback, but is committed by directly giving different rates to different persons; and an indictment under that section need not aver by what particular device the discrimination was accomplished.[40] An indictment under § 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act, which fully and amply alleges all the details of time, place, distance, amount, and kind of freight transported for one shipper and then charges that the service was for a less compensation than was received from another shipper for doing for him a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, sufficiently describes the services rendered for the other shipper.[41] Under § 3 of the act, making it unlawful for a carrier to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation, or locality in any respect whatever or to subject any particular person or company to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage, a count in an indictment is sufficient if it shows with requisite certainty that the defendant has committed an act giving one shipper or class of shippers an advantage, or subjecting others to a disadvantage; and it need not allege that the discrimination was committed under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, as required under § 4, containing the long and short haul clause.[42]

Establishment of Joint Rate.—An indictment against an interstate carrier for discrimination alleging that, under a common arrangement between the connecting carriers, the commodity which was contained in tank cars was transported without stoppage or interruption and was accompanied by written shipping orders, waybills, and transfer slips indicating a through transportation, the 37. Indictment.—United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 153 Fed. 630.

38. For departure from published rate.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

39. United States v. Hocking Valley R. Co., 194 Fed. 234.

40. For discrimination and preference.—United States v. Tozer, 37 Fed. 635, 2 L. R. A. 444.

41. United States v. De Coursey, 82 Fed. 302.

42. United States v. Tozer, 37 Fed. 635, 2 L. R. A. 444.

rate and place of destination, sufficiently alleged prima facie a common arrangement between the carriers for a through shipment.[43] Where in a prosecution against a carrier for discrimination, the indictment alleges that a common arrangement existed between the defendant and three other connecting carriers named for a continuous forwarding of property, in interstate commerce, between two specified points, and that the defendant kept open for public inspection its printed tariff of rates, and filed the same as required by law, with the allegation that the shipment in question was accompanied by written shipping orders, waybills, and transfer slips showing a continuous shipment between such points, it sufficiently charges the establishment of a joint tariff of rates for the commodity in question, without alleging that all the connecting carriers concurred in such joint rate, or that it was filed with the interstate commerce commission by their joint action.[44]

§ 4233. For Granting Rebate or Concession.—In view of the provisions § 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which provides that no judgment upon an indictment shall be affected by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form which shall not tend to the prejudice of the defendant, and, unless the substantial rights of the accused were prejudiced by the refusal to require a more specific statement of the manner in which the offense was committed, there can be no reversal. An indictment under the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, which specifically states the elements of the offense charged with sufficient particularity to fully advise the defendant of the crime charged to enable a conviction, if had, to be pleaded in bar of any subsequent prosecution of the same offense is sufficient. It is only substantial defects that are available to reverse a judgment of conviction.[45] An indictment which states that a carrier gave a rebate to one shipper without stating any instance in which the carrier refused a like rebate to any other shipper is defective, as not showing discrimination.[46] The indictment need not use the word "concession" in describing the offense.[47]

Time Shipment Made.—Under that clause of the Interstate Commerce Act which forbids carriers collecting greater or less compensation than is specified in their published schedules, an indictment which charges that defendants were officers of a railroad company which was a common carrier between designated points in different states; that a certain rate was in force between such points; that defendants, during a certain period of time, received such rate from a certain shipper; and that, at a certain time, they unlawfully and willfully paid such shipper a certain rebate, is good, even though it does not state the day or days where the shipments were made.[48]

43. Establishment of joint rate.—United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

44. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

Where an interstate carrier was indicted for charging a lower rate than that established by a filed joint tariff over a specified route for transportation of petroleum between the same termini over a different route, the indictment was not defective for failure to allege that the lower rate over the latter route was not scheduled and filed as required by Interstate Commerce Law, Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 6, 24 Stat. 380 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3158]. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

45. For granting rebate or concession.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304; S. C., 212 U. S. 500, 53 L. Ed. 624, 29 S. Ct. 309; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 39 L. Ed. 1033, 15 S. Ct. 951.

46. United States v. Hanley, 71 Fed. 672.

47. Need not use word "concession."—Under Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880), making the willful giving of concessions by interstate carriers from the established and published tariff rates an offense, an indictment alleging that the established and punished rate per car for bulk lime between two points was $70 per car of 40,000 pounds minimum, and that defendant charged and received for a specified car the sum of $64.75 and no more, sufficiently charged that defendant granted a "concession" prohibited by the statute, though the count did not use the word "concession" to describe the alleged rebate. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 163 Fed. 111.

48. Time shipment made. — United States v. Hanley, 71 Fed. 672.

Matters of Defense.—In an indictment charging an interstate carrier with the giving of rebates, where it is averred that defendant received the legal rate, and granted and paid to the shipper a certain rebate or concession, whereby it transported the property shipped at less than the legal rate, it is not necessary to allege a prior agreement for such rebate, nor need the indictment negative the existence of conditions or circumstances which might render the payment legal; that being a matter of defense.[49]

Device by Which Obtained.—The device by which a rebate is brought about is not an essential element of the crime, and it is unnecessary to plead it in the indictment.[50]

Reasonableness of Published Rate.—An indictment for giving or receiving rebates, need not allege that the carrier's published rate was a reasonable rate, nor set out its tariffs in full, it being sufficient to aver that a certain named rate was in force between designated points as shown by the published tariffs.[51]

Establishment of Joint Through Rate.—An indictment charging an interstate carrier with giving a concession whereby a shipper secured through transportation of property between two points at less than the lawful rate is not insufficient because it does not aver the through rate, where it states the amount of the concession and that it was given from the lawful rate over a certain part of the route, which rate is also given.[52] An indictment which charges that there was an arrangement between several carriers having connecting lines for the continuous transportation of property over such lines between certain points, and that the lowest total rate as shown by the published tariffs of said several carriers was a certain sum per hundred pounds on a particular product, but that such product was transported for defendant at a lower rate, is bad, in that it does not negative the existence of a joint through rate lower than the total of the local rate.[53]

Knowledge and Intent.—An indictment against a carrier for receiving a rebate is sufficient, although it does not allege that the carrier, when the shipment was made, intended to charge less than the schedule rate.[54] An indictment against a railroad company and the agent of certain shippers, alleging that full schedule rates were first paid by the railroad company for the transportation of certain freight, and that thereafter a certain sum was paid to the shipper's agent by way of rebates and concessions in respect to the transportation of freight under a previously made unlawful agreement, sufficiently charged that the payment of the rebate was a willful failure to observe the published tariff, and therefore stated a violation of the interstate commerce act.[55]

Shipments in Carload Lots.—Because an indictment for receiving a concession from the published rate on an interstate shipment of property alleges that such shipment was made in car load lots, or in cars not owned by the carrier, it does not follow as matter of law that such fact justified the departure from the published rate so as to render the indictment demurrable.[56]

49. Matters of defense.—United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 84.

50. Device by which obtained.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400. An indictment against a railroad company for granting rebates in violation of Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, § 1, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880), need not set out a particular description of the device resorted to, but is sufficient where it avers the kind of property shipped, the time and place when and where shipped, the consignee, the existing legal tariff for such shipment, the payment thereof by the shipper, the subsequent payment of the rebate by the carrier to the shipper, and the time and amount of such payment. Judgment, United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 Fed. 84, affirmed in 162 Fed. 835.

51. Reasonableness of published rate.—United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

52. Establishment of joint through rate.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 157 Fed. 830, judgment affirmed in 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439.

53. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

54. Knowledge and intent.—United States v. Hanley, 71 Fed. 672.

55. United States v. New York, etc., R. Co., 146 Fed. 298.

56. Shipments in car load lots.—United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

Variance between Allegations and Proof.—In a prosecution for rebating in the application of transit rates to certain local shipments of lumber, evidence that one of the cars was sold to a railroad company and transported over its own line for a part of the outgoing distance, and the charges for such portion of the distance absorbed by it, did not constitute a fatal variance.[57] Where a carrier was charged with rebating in applying a transit tariff to local shipments, the fact that the indictment charged the giving of a rebate on the outbound shipment while the proof showed that it was given on the inbound shipment if at all, and that the indictment averred violations of the local tariffs while the proof showed violations of the transit tariffs, was not a fatal variance.[58]

Number of Offenses Charged.—In a prosecution of an interstate carrier for rebating in applying transit rates to fourteen separate local shipments of lumber, the court properly held that there were fourteen separate offenses, though there were only ten separate refunds.[59]

Setting Out Method or Device.—An indictment against an interstate carrier for rebating need not set out the method or device resorted to to avoid the law.[60]

§ 4234. Indictment against Express Company.—An indictment which charges that an express company is a corporation and common carrier engaged in the transportation of property by railroad from one state to other states, but which does not show that such company is a mere adjunct or bureau of a railroad company or combination of railroad companies, does not bring such express company within the purview of said act.[61]

§ 4235. Burden of Proof.—In a prosecution of an interstate carrier for charging a less rate for the transportation of petroleum between two specified termini in different states than that scheduled in a filed joint tariff, in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act the burden is on the government to show a common arrangement for a continuous carriage between the points mentioned in the filed joint tariff.[62]

§ 4236. Evidence.—Where a carrier was charged with rebating in applying transit rates to certain so-called outbound local shipments, evidence of the carrier's acts concerning inbound shipments, disclosing a scheme calculated to conceal and carry out the offense charged in the indictment, is admissible.[63] Where an interstate carrier was indicted for rebating in applying lower transit rates to certain local shipments of lumber, evidence concerning all other transit shipments made by the shippers during the months in which such shipments were made is properly excluded.[64]

§ 4237. Instructions.—Submitting to the jury on a prosecution against a shipper for accepting rebates in violation of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, the question whether or not there was a device to avoid the operation of the act and to obtain the transportation at less than the carrier's published rates, did not prejudice the accused, where, under that act, no device or contrivance, secret or fraudulent in its nature, is requisite to the commission of the offense, any means by which transportation by a concession from the established rate was had being sufficient to work a conviction.[65]

57. Variance between allegations and proof. — Nichols, etc., Lumber Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 588.

58. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

59. Number of offenses charged.—Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

60. Setting out method or device.—Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

61. Indictment against express company.—United States v. Morsman, 42 Fed. 448.

62. Burden of proof.—United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 Fed. 625.

63. Evidence.—Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

64. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577.

65. Instructions.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed.

Province of Court and Jury.—Instructing on trial of a carrier for giving rebates to take into consideration the absence of a certain witness and the nonproduction of books in which entries were made concerning the transactions in question is not prejudicial error, where the jurors are left to attach such weight to these circumstances as they see fit, and are further instructed that there is no evidence that the defendant or those who controlled its corporate action destroyed or failed to produce any paper for which the government asked.[66] In considering the sufficiency of an indictment for receiving an unjust discrimination in rates from a carrier on an interstate shipment of property any doubts as to the correct construction of the statute should be resolved in favor of the evident intention of Congress that equality among shippers should be maintained, and unjust discrimination and favoritism of all kinds condemned, leaving the question whether the existing conditions justified the difference in rates charged to be determined as one of fact on the trial.[67]

§ 4238. Criminal Liability of Officers and Agents.—Where a carrier is a corporation, not only the carrier itself, but the officers individually, are subject to indictment for violation of the Interstate Commerce Act.[68] Where an unlawful arrangement was made by the assistant general freight agent, the fact that the local freight agent, and the agent who made out the bills of lading, knew that there was something unusual and out of the ordinary course of business in such shipments, is not sufficient notice to them that the company was violating said act to make them criminally liable therefor.[69]

A receiver, not being bound to continue contracts made before his appointment, is not criminally liable, under § 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act, for the violation of a joint tariff previously established by the railroad company of which he is receiver and another company, and which he has not ratified, adopted, or recognized in any way.[70]

Violation of Long and Short Haul Clause.—An agent of a railroad, who merely collects freights, and has nothing to do with fixing them, is not indictable for a violation of the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act.[71]

Indictment.—Under § 10 of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, making any agent of a railroad company subject to the provisions of the act amenable to its penalties, who willfully does any of the prohibited acts, an allegation that defendant, at the time the offense was committed, was agent of a certain railway company, and had general charge of its freight office at Hannibal, sufficiently shows that the offense was committed under color of his office or agency; and it is not necessary to allege or prove that the particular act complained of was done under the direction or authority of the principal.[72]

§§ 4239-4244. Criminal Liability of Shipper—§ 4239. Inducing Carrier to Discriminate.—The interstate commerce law makes it unlawful for a carrier to issue bills of lading at rates different from those established and filed with the commission, or to demand or receive freight charges variant from such established rates. The act makes it penal for any person to knowingly obtain transportation at less than the regular rates in force at the time. It is not in the 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

66. Province of court and jury.—New York, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. Ed. 613, 29 S. Ct. 304, affirming 146 Fed. 298.

67. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

68. Criminal liability of officers and agents.—In re Pooling Freights, 115 Fed. 588.

69. United States v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 43 Fed. 26.

70. United States v. De Coursey, 82 Fed. 302.

71. Violation of long and short haul clause.—United States v. Mellen, 53 Fed. 229.

72. Indictment.—United States v. Tozer, 37 Fed. 635, 2 L. R. A. 444.

contemplation of the act that persons dealing with common carriers should be held to know their published schedules of rates. The consignee can recover the value of goods held by the carrier for the collection of the joint schedule rate instead of the contract rate, where it does not appear that he or the consignor knew of such rate.[73] A shipper is guilty of accepting transportation at less than the carrier's published rates, in violation of the act, after the carrier has duly established a higher rate, he secures such transportation at the rate agreed upon in a prior contract with the carrier, which was the legal, published, and filed rate when the contract was made, since the statute, being then in force, is read into such contract, and becomes a part of it.[74] A shipper is not responsible for the act of the carrier in fixing the rate at less than that required by the interstate commerce commission, in the absence of knowledge that the rate fixed is illegal.[75]

Necessity for Posting Schedule of Rates.—Compliance with the requirements of the Act of June 29, 1906, that copies of schedules and tariffs for the use of the public shall be "posted" in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, so as to be readily accessible to the public, is not essential to bring a tariff within the provision of such act making it a misdemeanor for any shipper knowingly to solicit, accept, or receive a rebate or concession whereby property is transported in interstate commerce at a less rate than that named in the tariffs "published and filed" by such carrier, as publication is a step in establishing rates, while posting is a duty arising from the fact that they have been established.[76]

Necessity for Device or Contrivance.—A device or contrivance, secret or fraudulent in its nature, is not essential to sustain the conviction of a shipper for violating the Elkins Act of February 19, 1903, making it a criminal offense for any person or corporation to offer, grant, solicit, give, or to accept or receive, any rebate, concession, or discrimination in respect to transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce, whereby any such property shall, by any device whatever, be transported at less than the carrier's published rates, or whereby any other advantage is given or discrimination practiced.[77]

Shipment to Foreign Country.—Shipments under a through bill of lading from an interior point in the United States to a foreign port are embraced in the provisions of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, making it an offense against the United States to obtain the transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates.[78]

73. Inducing carrier to discriminate.—Defendant agreed to carry goods from C., Ill., and deliver them to plaintiff at a point in Alabama on the line of the M. & B. R. R., with which road defendant had a joint tariff. The bill of lading called for $5.44 freight charges, but the M. & B. road refused to deliver the goods except on payment of $29.30, the schedule rate. Held, that plaintiff could recover the value of the goods, since it did not appear that he or the consignor knew of the schedule rate. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Dismukes, 94 Ala. 131, 10 So. 289, 17 L. R. A. 113.

74. Elkins Act February 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880); Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

75. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Burgess Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 90 S. W. 189.

76. Necessity for posting schedule of rates.—United States v. Miller, 223 U. S. 599, 56 L. Ed. 568, 32 S. Ct. 323. See, also, Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 562, 27 S. Ct. 358; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. Ed. 556, 32 S. Ct. 316.

77. Necessity for device or contrivance.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, 28 S. Ct. 428, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, 28 S. Ct. 439, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

78. Shipment to foreign country.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 428, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 439, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

Shipments under Prior Contract.—A shipper is guilty of accepting transportation at less than the carrier's published rates, where, after the carrier has duly established a higher rate, he secures such transportation at the rate agreed upon in a prior contract with the carrier, which was the legal, published, and filed rate when the contract was made, since the statute, being then in force, is read into such contract, and becomes a part of it.[79]

Liability for Acts of Servants.—The shippers of the lumber may be convicted of procuring an illegal rate, if their servants procured an unlawful discrimination in rates, provided they knew of such unlawful acts, permitted them to continue, and received, directly or indirectly, the benefit of them; for it was their duty to see that the law was not violated by their subordinates by reason of their own negligence.[80]

Conspiracy to Induce Discrimination.—Where an indictment, charges a conspiracy between lumber merchants and their servants and an employee of a railroad company to procure less than the established rates by falsely weighing the lumber shipped, such weighing being done by the railroad employee, the jury, in order to convict, must find an agreement between two or more of defendants for the purpose named, and also, as an overt act, the actual false weighing of lumber by such employee.[81]

§ 4240. Receiving Rebates.—The Act of Feb. 19, 1903, prohibits any person or corporation from receiving any rebate, concession, or discrimination in respect to the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce, etc., and declares that every person or corporation who shall accept or receive any such rebates or concession shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction be fined. The gist of the offense was the receipt of a concession, irrespective of whether the property involved was train loads, car loads, or pounds, and consisted of the "transaction," which was not completed until the shipper received a rate different from the established rate, without reference to the size of the shipment.[82]

Necessity for Established Rate.—The defendant as shipper made an agreement with a transit company, which was a carrier by water only on the Great Lakes, by which the transit company agreed to protect a rate on a shipment of iron pipe from Philadelphia to Winnipeg. The transit company routed the shipment over a railroad to a port on Lake Erie, thence over its own water line to West Superior, and from there over two railroads to Winnipeg. The shipment was made on through bills of lading issued by the receiving railroad carrier, in which a certain rate was charged, being the sum of its own published through rate to West Superior and the published rates of the other two railroad companies from there to Winnipeg, and such rate was paid by defendant. From the portion of such rate received by the transit company it refunded a certain part to the defendant. The transit company had not published nor filed any schedule of rates under the interstate commerce law. The transit company's participation in the transportation of the property under the through bills of lading and in the rate charged therein was not under a common arrangement between the carriers

79. Shipment under prior contract.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 428, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 439, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

80. Liability for acts of servants.—United States v. Howell, 56 Fed. 21.

81. Conspiracy to induce discrimination. — United States v. Howell, 56 Fed. 21.

82. Receiving rebates. — Judgment, United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305, reversed in 164 Fed. 376.

A suit by a railroad shipper for loss of goods, on a policy of insurance issued to the carrier, after receipt of the limited value fixed on such goods by the carrier's schedules and bills of lading, held in violation of section 6 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, § 2, as soliciting a rebate or concession, and not maintainable. Duplan Silk Co. v. American, etc., Marine Ins. Co., 205 Fed. 724, 124 C. C. A. 18.

with respect to such shipment within the meaning of the act so as to make such rate the lawful rate as against the shipper, nor to render the latter subject to criminal prosecution for receiving a rebate.[83]

Necessity for Posting Schedule.—In a prosecution of a shipper for rebating in knowingly accepting a transit rate applied to certain shipments, which were only entitled to higher local rates, it was no defense that the carrier did not keep two printed copies of its rate sheet posted in two public and conspicuous places in its depot, as required by the interstate commerce law.[84]

Necessity for Device or Contrivance.—A device or contrivance, secret or fraudulent in its nature, is not essential to sustain the conviction of a shipper for violating the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, making it a criminal offense for any person or corporation to offer, grant, solicit, give or to accept or receive any rebate, concession, or discrimination in respect to transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce, whereby any such property shall, by any device whatever, be transported at less than the carrier's published rates, or whereby any other advantage is given or discrimination practiced.[85]

Knowledge and Intent.—A shipper can not be convicted of accepting a concession from the lawfully published rate without proof of knowledge of what such rate in fact was: and hence evidence that the shipper had no knowledge of the published rate, and could only have ascertained the same by construction of several tariff sheets, the application of which was questionable, was admissible.[86]

Persons Liable.—The act provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, persons, or corporations to solicit, accept, or receive any rebate, concession or discrimination in respect of the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce, whereby such property shall by any device whatever be transported at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by the carrier, and that it shall be lawful to include as parties, in addition to the carrier, all persons interested in or affected by the rate, regulation, or practice under consideration. A refrigerator company organized for the purpose of controlling the interstate transportation of a brewing company, having entered into a contract for rebates with certain railroads, was a "party interested in the traffic," and was therefore subject to the provisions of such act.[87] The fact alone that a defendant is a stockholder in a corporation which has accepted rebates in violation of law does not render him subject to the penalty imposed by the statute therefor.[88] The fact that a shipper who contracts for and receives a rebate in violation of the statute personally receives no benefit therefrom, but turns the same over without consideration to another, does not relieve him from criminal liability.[89] A consignee, no less than the consignor, is chargeable with a violation of § 1 of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, by receiving rebates or concessions from the published tariffs of an interstate carrier through the cancellation of terminal charges at the point of destination which form a part of the tariffs as so published.[90]

Excuses for Receiving Rebate.—On the trial of a shipper charged with having obtained a concession from the lawful published rate on interstate shipments in violation of the federal statute, the facts that another railroad may have

83. Necessity for established rate. — Judgment, United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 Fed. 214, reversed in 158 Fed. 561, 85 C. C. A. 585.

84. Necessity for posting schedule.— Nichols, etc., Lumber Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 588. But see United States v. Standard Oil Co., 170 Fed. 988.

85. Necessity for device or contrivance. —Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 428, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 439, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

86. Knowledge and intent.—Judgment, United States v. Standard Oil Co., 153 Fed. 305, reversed in 164 Fed. 376.

87. Persons liable.—United States v. Milwaukee, etc., Trans. Co., 145 Fed. 1007.

88. United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

89. United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 405.

90. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 Fed. 719.

had a published rate approximately as low as that received is immaterial.[91]

Number of Offenses Committed.—It has been held that where a shipper has been continuously receiving concessions from the lawful rate from a railroad company, the government is not limited to a prosecution for a single offense,[92] nor will the obtaining of a concession to remain in force for a year render all shipments made thereunder one offense nor the rendering of monthly freight bills reduce the number of offenses to the number of such bills, but each shipment made at the illegal rate constitutes a separate offense, and where the published rate is on car lots, and the reduced rate is granted on the same basis and a separate charge made for each car, in the absence of evidence showing to the contrary, each car constitutes a separate shipment.[93] The circuit court of appeals, however, reversed the case on the ground that the fine was excessive.[94] In a prosecution against a shipper for receiving concessions from the published rates of a railroad company in violation of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, which involves continuous shipments covering a number of years, there can be no greater number of offenses than there were payments of freight, in which concessions were granted and received, such receipt being the completion of the transaction which constitutes the offense.[95] To warrant a conviction of a shipper for receiving rebates, the fact of the payment of such rebate by or on behalf of the carrier, and its receipt by or on behalf of defendant, must be proved, and each payment constitutes but one offense, although it may cover more than one shipment.[96]

§ 4241. False Billing of Goods.—Where a shipping order describing the contents of a car was so worded as to intentionally conceal its true character, and induce the carrier to apply a less rate than was legally applicable, the shippers were guilty of a false representation, for which they were subject to prosecution under Interstate Commerce Act.[97] A contention that a shipper, innocent at the time, and ignorant of any classification or difference in rate, who shipped a race horse and paid the freight charged by the agent without being informed of the valuation made, is guilty of an offense under the statute, because he sues for injuries to the horse and seeks to recover the true value of the horse regardless of the rating, is self-refutatory.[98]

91. Excuses for receiving rebate. — United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305.

92. Number of offenses committed.— United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305.

93. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305.

94. Defendant, Standard Oil Company of Indiana, was found guilty on 1,462 counts of an indictment for receiving concessions from a railroad company on shipments of oil, in violation of Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847, § 1 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 880). Defendant's capital stock was $1,000,000, and there was no evidence that its assets were in excess of that sum, nor did it appear that defendant had ever been guilty of a similar offense. A majority of defendant's capital stock was owned by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which was no party to the prosecution, whose capital stock was $100,000,000. This corporation was a holding company, and its net earnings for the period during which the concessions were received the court investigated before passing sentence. Held, that the assessment of fine of $29,240,000, which was the maximum punishment on each count, based on a finding that such amount was less than one-third of the net revenues of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey during the period of violation, the effect of which would be to bankrupt the defendant, was excessive, and an abuse of discretion. Judgment, United States v. Standard Oil Co., 155 Fed. 305, reversed in 164 Fed. 376.

95. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 170 Fed. 988.

Where defendant was indicted for receiving a concession, rebate, and discrimination on twenty shipments of lumber, but it appeared that there were only six rebate settlements with the carrier, defendant was guilty of but six offenses. United States v. Stearns, etc., Lumber Co., 165 Fed. 735.

96. United States v. Bunch, 165 Fed. 736.

97. False billing of goods.—United States v. Sterling Salt Co., 200 Fed. 593.

98. Kessenger v. Fitzgerald, 67 S. E. 588, 152 N. C. 247.

§ 4242. Indictment.—An indictment charging a shipper with securing transportation of goods in interstate or foreign commerce at less than the carrier's published rates, in violation of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, is sufficient where it charges each and all of the elements of the offense, with allegations of time, place, kind of goods, and name of carrier, averring the fixing of the published rate, the changing of the rate, and the new publication, the shipper's knowledge of this change, and the carriage of the goods over a described route at a concession of the difference between the two rates.[99] An indictment under the Act of Feb. 8, 1897, charging the defendant with having deposited with an express company, for carriage to another state, "an article designed and intended for the prevention of conception," which charges that such article was contained in a package deposited with an express company named, at a place and on a date named, addressed to a particular person at a designated place in another state, is sufficiently specific, and need not more specifically describe the article.[1]

Alleging Publication of Rate.—An indictment charging a shipper with having received a rebate or concession from the joint rate published and filed by a carrier for the transportation of property between points in different states, is not defective because it does not specifically charge that such rate was required to be filed by the statute, where it alleges that it was published and filed as required by law.[2]

Alleging Soliciting of Rebate.—An indictment charging a shipper with having received a rebate or concession from the joint rate published and filed by a carrier for the transportation of property between points in different states, is not defective because it does not specifically charge that the defendant solicited the concession.[3]

Alleging That Other Shipper Charged Published Rate.—An indictment charging a shipper with having received a rebate or concession from the joint rate published and filed by the carrier for the transportation of property between points in different states, is not defective because it does not specifically name any other shipper who has been charged and paid the higher rate as is required where a discrimination is charged or that any shipment was actually made by the published rate.[4]

Alleging Common Control or Arrangement.—An information for receiving rebates on an interstate or foreign shipment made partly by railroad and partly by water, need not expressly aver that the connecting carriers are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous service, so as to bring them within the terms of the interstate commerce law where it sets out facts which show that such was the case in respect to the shipment in question.[5]

§ 4243. Issues, Proof and Variance.—In an indictment charging a shipper with having received a concession whereby oil was transported for it in interstate commerce at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by the railroad company, an averment that such company established, published, and filed a rate on oil between Chicago and St. Louis is not sustained by proof that its schedules named only the rate over its own line from Chicago to East St. Louis, and that the tariff on connecting lines between East St. Louis and St. Louis was a certain amount.[6]

99. Indictment.—Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 428, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. Ed. 681, affirming judgment, 153 Fed. 1, 82 C. C. A. 135, 14 L. R. A., N. S., 400; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 439, 209 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 698, affirming judgment, 157 Fed. 830.

1. United States v. Popper, 98 Fed. 423.

2. Alleging publication of rate.—United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

3. Alleging soliciting of rebate. — United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

4. Alleging that other shipper charged published rate.—United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598.

5. Alleging common control or arrangement.—United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 Fed. 214.

6. Issues, proof and variance.—United States v. Standard Oil Co., 170 Fed. 988.

Variance.—In a prosecution for receiving rebates on a shipment of property alleged to have been made from Philadelphia, as the initial point, to Winnipeg, it is immaterial that the shipment in fact originated in Camden, where the property was lightered across the river to Philadelphia and there delivered to the carriers named in the information.[7]

§ 4244. Evidence.—Published Schedule of Rates.—The provision of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, that in a prosecution of a carrier thereunder for giving a rebate any rate filed by it with the interstate commerce commission, or in which it participates, "shall be conclusively deemed to be the legal rate" as against such carrier, its officers, or agents, merely prescribes the effect to be given such rate as evidence against the carrier, and does not affect its admissibility against a shipper who is being tried for receiving a rebate, and in such case it may properly be received as evidence that the carrier giving, the alleged rebate was subject to the provisions of the act.[8]

Of Common Control or Management.—In a prosecution for receiving rebates from carriers on an interstate or foreign shipment of property over the lines of more than one carrier, any evidence tending to show that the shipment was made under a through bill of lading or upon a contract for continuous carriage by the several carriers is admissible for the purpose of proving that such carriers were used for the purpose of the shipment under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage, and the schedules of rates filed with the interstate commerce commission by the several carriers are admissible for the purpose of showing the lawful rate on such shipment.[9]

7. Variance.—United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 Fed. 214.

8. Evidence.—United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 Fed. 214.

9. Of common control or management. —United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 Fed. 214.

PART VII.

CARRIERS BY WATER.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Carriage of Property.

I. General Considerations, § 4245.
II. Contracts of Affreightment, §§ 4246-4265.
A. Defined, Classified and Distinguished, § 4246.
B. Persons Who May Make, § 4247.
C. Contents, Form and Requisites, §§ 4248-4249.
a. In General, § 4248.
b. Requisites of Contract, § 4249.
D. Interpretation, Operation and Effect, §§ 4250-4260.
a. Rules of Construction, §§ 4250-4256.
(1) General Rules, § 4250.
(2) What Law Governs, § 4251.
(3) Qualifications Imposed by Law, § 4252.
(4) Knowledge of Course of Trade, § 4253.
(5) Aids to Construction, §§ 4254-4255.
(a) Admissibility of Parol Evidence, § 4254.
(b) Opinion Evidence, § 4255.
(6) Construction of Particular Words, Phrases, etc., § 4256.
b. Conditions Precedent and Independent Covenants, Representations and Warranties, §§ 4257-4260.
(1) In General, § 4257.
(2) Stipulations as to Time and Place of Shipment, § 4258.
(3) Stipulations as to Tonnage or Measurement, § 4259.
(4) Warranty of Seaworthiness, § 4260.
E. Cancellation, Modification and Release, § 4261.
F. Performance, Discharge or Breach, §§ 4262-4263.
a. In General, § 4262.
b. Who Liable on Contract, § 4263.
G. Abandonment of Contract, § 4264.
H. Assignment of Contract, § 4265.
III. Bill of Lading, §§ 4266-4275.
A. Definition, § 4266.
B. Form and Contents, § 4267.
C. Issuance and Acceptance, § 4268.
D. Validity of Bills of Lading, § 4269.
E. Construction, Operation and Effect, § 4270.
F. Transfer, § 4271.
G. Effect on Connecting Carrier, § 4272.
H. Modification or Rescission, § 4273.
I. Surrender, Discharge or Release, § 4274.
J. Actions on Bills of Lading, § 4275.
IV. Transportation and Delivery, §§ 4276-4337.
A. General Consideration, §§ 4276-4277.

a. Title, Custody and Control of Goods, § 4276.
b. Liability as Warehouseman, § 4277.
B. Duties and Liabilities as to Transportation and Delivery, §§ 4278-4288.
a. In General, § 4278.
b. Loading Goods, § 4279.
c. Deviation and Delay, §§ 4280-4281.
(1) Deviation, § 4280.
(2) Delay, § 4281.
d. Failure or Refusal to Deliver, §§ 4282-4283.
(1) In General, § 4282.
(2) Short Delivery, § 4283.
e. Notice of Arrival of Goods, § 4284.
f. Mode and Sufficiency of Delivery, § 4285.
g. To Whom Delivery May Be Made—Misdelivery, § 4286.
h. Failure or Refusal of Consignee to Receive Goods, § 4287.
i. Transshipping and Forwarding, § 4288.
C. Loss or Injury, §§ 4289-4311.
a. Liability as Insurer, §§ 4289-4296.
(1) In General, § 4289.
(2) Exceptions and Excuses, §§ 4290-4296.
(a) Act of God or Public Enemy, § 4290.
(b) Jettison, § 4291.
(c) Humidity and Dampness of Ship, § 4292.
(d) Seizure under Legal Process, § 4293.
(e) Fault of Shipper or Owner, § 4294.
(f) Inherent Infirmities of Property, § 4295.
(3) Commencement and Termination of Liability, § 4296.
b. Losses during Deviation or Delay, § 4297.
c. Losses during Loading of Goods, § 4298.
d. Stowage of Goods, §§ 4299-4301.
(1) In General, § 4299.
(2) Stowage on Deck, § 4300.
(3) Dunnage, § 4301.
e. Unseaworthiness or Unfitness of Vessel, §§ 4302-4304.
(1) In General, § 4302.
(2) Improper Stowage or Overloading, § 4303.
(3) Incompetency or Insufficiency of Crew, § 4304.
f. Navigation of Vessel, § 4305.
g. Negligence in Discharging or in Caring for Goods after Discharge, § 4306.
h. Acts of Employees or Third Persons, § 4307.
i. Duties after Injury or Disaster, § 4308.
j. Effect of Insurance, § 4309.
k. Estoppel to Deny Liability to Deliver in Good Order, § 4310.
l. Persons and Vessels Liable, § 4311.
D. Actions, §§ 4312-4327.
a. By Carrier, § 4312.
b. Against Carrier, §§ 4313-4327.
(1) In General, § 4313.
(2) Pleading, § 4314.
(3) Issues, Proof and Variance, § 4315.
(4) Evidence, §§ 4316-4326.
(a) Presumptions and Burden of Proof, §§ 4316-4319.
aa. In General, § 4316.
bb. Cause of Loss or Injury to Goods, § 4317.
cc. Stowage of Goods, § 4318.
dd. Seaworthiness or Fitness of Vessel, § 4319.

(b) Necessity of Producing Bill of Lading, § 4320.
(c) Admissibility of Evidence, § 4321.
(d) Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence, §§ 4322-4326.
aa. In General, § 4322.
bb. Delivery to Carrier, § 4323.
cc. Condition of Vessel, § 4324.
dd. Evidence as to Sea Perils, § 4325.
ee. Short Delivery, § 4326.
(5) Trial, § 4327.
E. Damages, §§ 4328-4336.
a. Failure to Receive and Carry According to Contract, § 4328.
b. Failure to Deliver or Misdelivery, § 4329.
c. Delay in Transportation or Delivery, § 4330.
d. Loss or Injury, §§ 4331-4336.
(1) In General, § 4331.
(2) Measure and Elements of Damage, § 4332.
(3) Determination of Damages, § 4333.
(4) Apportionment of Damages, § 4334.
(5) Deductions, § 4335.
(6) Evidence as to Value or Damage, § 4336.
F. Lien of Shipper against Vessel, § 4337.
V. Freight, Lighterage and Demurrage, §§ 4338-4378.
A. Freight, §§ 4338-4354.
a. In General, § 4338.
b. Persons Entitled to Collect Freight, § 4339.
c. Persons Liable for Payment of Freight, § 4340.
d. When Freight Earned, §§ 4341-4343.
(1) In General, § 4341.
(2) Freight Pro Rata Itineris, § 4342.
(3) Goods Lost or Abandoned, § 4343.
e. Amount Recoverable, § 4344.
f. Deductions and Offsets, § 4345.
g. Change of Rates, § 4346.
h. Lien for Freight, §§ 4347-4352.
(1) In General, § 4347.
(2) Time Lien Attaches, § 4348.
(3) Property Subject to Lien, § 4349.
(4) Displacement and Waiver of Lien, § 4350.
(5) Preserving and Enforcing Lien, § 4351.
(6) Subrogation to Lien, § 4352.
i. Actions to Recover Freight, § 4353.
j. Recovery Back of Freight, § 4354.
B. Lighterage, § 4355.
C. Demurrage, §§ 4356-4378.
a. In General, § 4356.
b. Charter Party Provisions, § 4357.
c. Right of Vessel to Charge in General, § 4358.
d. Delay Fault of Vessel or Owner, § 4359.
e. Delay Caused by Act of God, § 4360.
f. Negligence or Wrongful Acts of Third Persons, § 4361.
g. Liability of Charterer of Ship, § 4362.
h. Liability of Consignee, § 4363.
i. Liability of Purchaser of Cargo, § 4364.
j. Delay in Loading or Sailing, § 4365.
k. Delay during Voyage, § 4366.

l. Delay in Unloading, § 4367.
m. Effect of Custom and Usage, § 4368.
n. Demand for Demurrage, § 4369.
o. Rate and Amount, § 4370.
p. Lay Days, § 4371.
q. Indemnity, § 4372.
r. Waiver and Release of Demurrage, § 4373.
s. Lien, § 4374.
t. Actions, §§ 4375-4378.
(1) Libel, § 4375.
(2) Defenses, § 4376.
(3) Presumptions and Burden of Proof, § 4377.
(4) Limitations and Laches, § 4378.

§ 4245. General Considerations.—Carriers by Water Common Carriers.—A carrier by water, whether by inland navigation or coastwise, from port to port, or to and from foreign countries, is a common carrier.[1] If the shipowner directly and publicly offers to carry for all persons indiscriminately, or by his conduct and manner of business holds himself out as ready to carry for all on such trips as the boat makes, he is a common carrier.[2] If he has not offered to carry for all persons indiscriminately, etc., but merely carries in pursuance of special employment, he is not a common carrier.[3] The law is that a ship chartered for a special cargo or to a special person, is merely an ordinary bailee for hire, and not a common carrier.[4] Under the rule of the American courts of admiralty a lighter hired exclusively to convey the goods of one person to a particular place for an agreed compensation is not a "common carrier" with respect to such goods, but a "private carrier," and liable only as a bailee for hire.[5]

Control and Regulation.—As to control and regulation of common carriers, see ante, "Control and Regulation," Chapter 2.

Rules and Regulations of Carriers.—For a general treatment of the rules and regulations of carriers, see ante, "Rules and Regulations of Carriers," Chapter 3.

Duty to Receive and Carry—Duty in General.—Generally as to the duty of a common carrier to receive and carry for all alike, see ante, "Duty to Receive and Carry," Chapter 4. The common-law obligation of a carrier by sea is to receive goods which it is able and accustomed to carry, in the order of their tender, without preference to any shipper.[6] And the carrier is liable for any loss or injury resulting from the wrongful refusal to receive and carry goods properly offered for shipment.[7] A navigation company, whose charter confers no power of eminent domain, nor imposes any public duties, is not a public or quasi public corporation, and is not bound to provide sufficient facilities to carry all goods offered, but may decline to receive goods in excess of its transportation facilities.[8]

1. Common carriers.—Hastings v. Pepper (Mass.), 11 Pick. 41.
As to who are common carriers, see ante, "Who Are Common Carriers," Chapter 1.

2. Holding out to public alike.—Bassett v. Aberdeen Coal, etc., Co., 120 Ky. 728, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1122, 88 S. W. 318.

3. Special employment.—Bassett v. Aberdeen Coal, etc., Co., 120 Ky. 728, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1122, 88 S. W. 318.

4. Ordinary bailee.—Sumner v. Caswell, 20 Fed. 249; The Dan, 40 Fed. 691; The Fri, 154 Fed. 333, 83 C. C. A. 205; The Wildenfels, 161 Fed. 864.

5. Lighter hired exclusively.—The Wildenfels, 161 Fed. 864.

6. Failure to receive and carry.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc., Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 S. E. 577, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

7. Liability for loss, etc., resulting.—A steamboat carrier is liable for the loss by theft of goods temporarily stored in its warehouse, upon its wrongful refusal to receive them for shipment; the shipper having had no reasonable opportunity to make a safer disposition of the goods. Seasongood v. Tennessee, etc., Transp. Co., 54 S. W. 193, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1142, 49 L. R. A. 270.

8. Duty as to providing facilities.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc.,

But a carrier by sea can not reject goods which it professes to carry and thereafter receive other goods where at the time of tender there is room in the vessel for the goods, and the vessel's safety will in no wise be imperiled.[9]

Privilege of Booking Ahead.—The common-law obligation of a common carrier by sea to serve the public impartially in the receipt and transportation of goods does not inhibit a carrier from making "bookings" of freight—that is, from making specific arrangements for the transportation of goods by a particular vessel in advance of its sailing day, provided this privilege is extended to all, or if the grant of this privilege to shippers of one commodity does not interfere with the carrier's duty to shippers of other commodities.[10] But where a carrier by sea, by "booking" cotton going foreign, contracts away its space in advance and declines to receive lumber tendered for shipment before arrival of the booked cotton for transportation, because of its prior booking contracts, and refuses lumber dealers the privilege of booking their commodity solely because it is a domestic shipment, this is an unjust discrimination, for the reason that the booking of cotton going foreign prevents the carrier from discharging its common-law obligation of impartially serving the public.[11]

As Dependent on Quality of Goods.—Cotton does not possess such inherent qualities as to permit a preference to be given to that commodity over all other articles which a steamship customarily carries.[12]

Commodity for Foreign Shipment.—The fact that a commodity is destined to a foreign port can not justify a carrier by sea in giving a preference to it over another commodity because the latter may be a domestic shipment.[13]

Authority of Agent.—Where one, whom a steamboat carrier had permitted to act as its agent in receiving freight for such a length of time as to justify the belief that he was an authorized agent, wrongfully refused to receive freight offered, the carrier can not escape liability on the ground that he had no authority to receive freight for shipment.[14]

Stipulation as to Amount or Value of Cargo Shipped.—The owner of a line of lake steamers can lawfully make a special contract with the shipper not to place more than a specified number of dollars worth of goods on any one of the vessels at one time, and having made such contract, he is bound to perform the same, notwithstanding his common-law duty as a carrier to forward all goods as received.[15]

When Liability Commences.—As to the commencement of the carrier's liability for goods shipped, see ante, "When Liability Commences," Chapter 5.

Special Contracts.—As to special contracts made by carriers for the transportation of goods, see ante, "Special Contracts," Chapter 8.

§§ 4246-4265. Contracts of Affreightment—§ 4246. Defined, Classified and Distinguished.—The object of this treatment is to consider contracts of affreightment as distinguished from contracts chartering a vessel for a voyage, a certain period of time, or a particular purpose, in which the liability is shifted Supply Co., 63 S. E. 577, 131 Ga. 831, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

9. Must carry for all alike.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc., Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 S. E. 577, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

10. Privilege of booking ahead.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc., Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 S. E. 577, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

11. Prevention of impartial service.—Merchants', etc., Transp. Co. v. Granger, 63 S. E. 700, 132 Ga. 167.

12. As dependent on quality of goods.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc., Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 S. E. 577, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

13. Commodity for foreign shipment.—Ocean Steamship Co. v. Savannah, etc., Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 S. E. 577, 20 L. R. A., N. S., 867, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1044.

14. Authority of agent.—Seasongood v. Tennessee, etc., Transp. Co., 54 S. W. 193, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1142, 49 L. R. A. 270.

15. Amount or value of cargo.—Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Trans. Co., 161 Fed. 790.

to the charterer. And in order that this distinction may be more thoroughly understood at the outset, it may be well to consider the two classes together for a while. A charter party is defined to be a contract by which an entire ship, or some principal part thereof, is let to a merchant for the conveyance of goods on a determined voyage to one or more places.[16] A contract of affreightment is a contract with a shipowner to hire his ship, or part of it, for the carriage of goods or other property.[17] And such contracts are distinguished from towage contracts, in that towage service is aid rendered in the propulsion of a vessel. It is the employment of one vessel to expedite the voyage of another vessel.[18]

Classification of Charter Parties.—Charter may be divided into two general classes, a demise of the vessel or a simple contract of affreightment.[19] Shipping agreements are also classified according to their difference in the objects and purposes for which they are made. Thus, there is a class of shipping agreements which amount to a demise of the vessel, the charterer being deemed the owner for the time being even so far as third persons are concerned.[20] Where the possession, command and navigation of the vessel is retained by the general owner, contracting to convey the cargo for the voyage, the charterer has not the legal responsibility or the character of ownership. Such an agreement is a mere contract of affreightment.[21] And in the absence of a plainly manifested intention 16. Definition.—Vandewater v. Mills (U. S.), 19 How. 82, 15 L. Ed. 554; Ward v. Thompson (U. S.), 22 How. 330, 16 L. Ed. 249. See Spring v. Gray (U. S.), 6 Pet. 151, 8 L. Ed. 352.

Partnership contract.—A contract whereby certain parties joined together to carry on and advertise in trade for their mutual benefit—one contributing a vessel, and the other his skill, labor, experience, etc.—and there was to be a community of profits on a fixed ratio, is not a charter party but a partnership contract of which a court of admiralty has no jurisdiction. Ward v. Thompson (U. S.), 22 How. 330, 16 L. Ed. 249.

An agreement between owners of vessels to form a line for carrying passengers and freight between New York and San Francisco, is but a contract for a limited partnership, and the remedy for a breach of it is in the common-law courts. Vandewater v. Mills (U. S.), 19 How. 82, 15 L. Ed. 554.

17. Contract of affreightment.—The Nettie Quill, 124 Fed. 667.

The owner and master of a steamer engaged in making regular trips between river ports contracted to transport from one of such ports to another, for a stated charge, a locomotive engine. The barge owned and used by him on such trips not being suitable, it was agreed that the owner of the engine should furnish a barge on which to load the same, which was to be returned by the steamer. The steamer issued a bill of lading in the usual form for the barge and engine, and lashed the barge to her side for the voyage. Held, that the contract was one of affreightment, and not of towage. The Nettie Quill, 124 Fed. 667.

18. Towage service.—The Nettie Quill, 124 Fed. 667; McConnochie v. Kerr, 9 Fed. 50.

19. Classification of charter parties.—United States v. Shea, 152 U. S. 178, 38 L. Ed. 403, 14 S. Ct. 519; McIntyre v. Bowne (N. Y.), 1 John's 229.

20. Agreement amounting to demise.—English.—Frazer v. Marsh, 13 East. 238.

United States.—Marcardier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch 39, 3 L. Ed. 481.

California.—Oakland Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Jennings, 46 Cal. 175, 13 Am. Rep. 209.

Massachusetts.—Taggard v. Loring, 16 Mass. 336, 8 Am. Dec. 140.

Michigan.—First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 26 Mich. 83.

New York.—Hagar v. Clark, 78 N. Y. 45.

North Carolina.—White v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 115 N. C. 631, 20 S. E. 191, 44 Am. St. Rep. 489.

South Carolina.—Ross v. Charleston, etc., Transp. Co., 42 S. C. 447, 20 S. E. 285.

Wisconsin.—Sheriffs v. Pugh, 22 Wis. 273, 94 Am. Dec. 600.

Miscellaneous cases testing nature of agreement.—Baunwall, etc., Co. v. Furness (Eng.), 1 Q. B. 253, affirmed in Appeals 8 ; The Erie, Fed. Cas. No. 4512, 3 Ware 225; Certain Logs of Mahogany, Fed. Cas. No. 2559, 2 Sumn. 589; Urann v. Fletcher (Mass.), 1 Gray 125; The India, 14 Fed. 476.

21. Mere contract of affreightment.—United States.—Leary v. United States, 14 Wall. 607, 20 L. Ed. 756; Shaw v. United States, 93 U. S. 235, 23 L. Ed. 880.

Louisiana.—Slark v. Broom, 7 La. Ann. 337.

Missouri.—Adams v. Homeyer, 45 Mo. 545, 100 Am. Dec. 391.

New York.—Hagar v. Clark, 78 N. Y. 45.

Where space reserved by owner.—Swift v. Tatner, 80 Ga. 660, 15 S. E. 842, 32 Am. St. Rep. 101.

to transfer the possession and ownership to the charterer, such an agreement will not be treated as a demise of the vessel, but will be considered as a mere contract of affreightment.[22] Again, there are cases where a master hiring a vessel on shares may become the owner pro hac vice during the period which the contract exists; as where he agrees to man the vessel and employ her at his own discretion, having the possession and command of the vessel, and not being subject to the orders or directions of the owner of the vessel.[23] However, this rule is not applied in some jurisdictions and the master in such cases is not considered as the owner pro hac vice.[24] But where a part owner of a vessel takes it under such a contract he should be deemed the owner pro hac vice, he being in no sense the agent of his co-owners.[25] There is another class of charter parties known as time charter. They are made for a certain length of time,[26] or, as is usually the case, to cover such period as may be required for a certain voyage or number of voyages.[27] In a time charter a month will be held to mean a calendar month unless it is otherwise stipulated,[28] and where a charter is made without any time limit it will be held to be an hiring for all voyages undertaken prior to notice by the owner of his intention to end the contract.[29] Where vessels are chartered by the government, the government has the same rights, and is subject to the same rules and liabilities as other charterers.[30]

Releting Vessels by Charterer.—Where it is so provided by the charter party, the charterer may relet the vessel and such subcontracts made by him are binding upon the vessel.[31]

§ 4247. Persons Who May Make.—A contract of affreightment may be executed by the parties themselves or by duly authorized agents acting for and in their behalf, provided there is a sufficient meeting of the minds.[32] Thus, it may be executed by the managing owners,[33] the ship's husband, whether he be a part owner of the vessel or not,[34] or the master of the vessel in a foreign part,

22. Presumption against demise.—Urann v. Fletcher (Mass.), 1 Gray 125; Ross v. Charleston, etc., Transp. Co., 42 S. C. 447, 20 S. E. 285; Reed v. United States (U. S.), 11 Wall. 591, 20 L. Ed. 220; Hagar v. Clark, 78 N. Y. 45.

23. When master owner pro hac vice.—Thomas v. Osborn (U. S.), 19 How. 22, 15 L. Ed. 534; Thorp v. Hammond (U. S.), 12 Wall. 408, 20 L. Ed. 419; Marshall v. Boardman, 89 Me. 87, 35 Atl. 1024, 56 Am. St. Rep. 392; Tucker v. Stimson (Mass.), 12 Gray 487.

24. Rule not applied.—Steel v. Lester (Eng.), C. P. Div. 121; McCready v. Thorn (N. Y.), 49 Barb. 438.

25. Rule applied to part owner.—Williams v. Hays, 143 N. Y. 442, 38 N. E. 449, 26 L. R. A. 153, 42 Am. St. Rep. 743. See the case of Fox v. Holt, Fed. Cas. No. 5012, 36 Conn. 558, 4 Ben. 278.

26. Time charters.—Reeve v. Davis (Eng.), 1 Ab. & El. 312, 28 E. C. L. 95; Winter v. Simonton, 3 Cranch C. C. 104, Fed. Cas. No. 17,894; Swift v. Tatner, 80 Ga. 660, 15 S. E. 842, 32 Am. St. Rep. 101; Hunt v. Metcalf, 47 Fed. 73.

27. Voyage charters.—Leary v. United States (U. S.), 14 Wall. 607, 20 L. Ed. 756; Mactier v. Wirgman (Md.), 4 Har. & J. 568; Cutler v. Lennox, 137 Mass 506.

28. Month defined.—Jolly v. Young (Eng.), 1 Esp. N. P. 186.

29. No limit specified.—Sproat v. Donnell, 26 Me. 185, 45 Am. Dec. 103, citing Cutler v. Winsor (Mass.), 6 Pick. 335, 17 Am. Dec. 385.

30. Government charters.—White v. United States, 154 U. S. 661, 26 L. Ed. 178, 14 S. Ct. 1192; Reed v. United States (U. S.), 11 Wall. 591, 20 L. Ed. 220.

31. Releting vessels by charter.—The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. 174.

32. Who may execute.—Prentice v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 58 Fed. 702; Terry v. Brightman, 132 Mass. 318.

Authority given an agent by a shipowner, who was a nonresident, to "look after" certain barges employed in the general carrying trade, to make contracts for their services, collect freight, etc., is not to be so narrowly construed as to render invalid a charter for the carrying of five cargoes by two of the barges, to be performed within two months, which was accepted and acted upon by the charterer in good faith. The S. L. Watson, 118 Fed. 945, 55 C. C. A. 439.

Where minds meet and agree.—Compania, etc., Navegacion v. Spanish-American Light, etc., Co., 146 U. S. 483, 36 L. Ed. 1054, 13 S. Ct. 142; Starr & Co. v. Galgate Ship Co., 68 Fed. 234.

33. By managing owners.—Bangs v. Lowber, 2 Cliff. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 840.

34. Ships husband.—Darby v. Baines (Eng.), 21 L. J., N. S., Ch. 801.

unless there is an authorized agent of the owner at that point.[35] But neither a part owner of a vessel nor the master of the vessel in the home port can make a binding charter party without authority for that purpose.[36] Contracts of affreightment entered into by the master, within the scope of his apparent authority as master, bind the vessel to the merchandise for the performance of such contracts, wholly irrespective of the ownership of the vessel; and whether the master be the agent of the general or special owner—and this upon the principle that the general owner must be presumed to consent when he lets the vessel that the master may make such contracts, which operate as a tacit hypothecation of the vessel.[37]

Owner Pro Hac Vice.—If the general owner has allowed a third person to have the entire control, management and employment of the vessel, and thus become owner pro hac vice, the general owner must be deemed to consent that the special owner or his master may create liens binding on the interest of the general owner in the vessel, as security for the performance of such contracts of affreightment.[38] Though in such a case the special owner would be estopped, in favor of a bona fide holder of the bill of lading, from proving that no property was shipped, yet the general owner is not estopped.[39] But no such implication arises in reference to bills of lading for property not shipped, designed to be instruments of fraud; and they create no lien on the interest of the general owner, although the special owner was the perpetrator of the fraud.[40]

Agent Changing Contract without Authority.—Where the terms and conditions upon which horses were to be carried on a vessel had been fully agreed upon by the shipper and vessel owner, a subsequent contract signed when the horses were loaded, at the instance of the carrier, by the shipper's head teamster without authority from the shipper, and differing materially in its terms from the previous agreements, was void.[41]

§§ 4248-4249. Contents, Form and Requisites—§ 4248. In General.—A contract of affreightment generally takes the form of a charter party or of a bill of lading.[42]

§ 4249. Requisites of Contract.—No Particular Form Required.—No technical form is essential to create a demise or contract of affreightment.[43] As no particular form or solemnity of execution is required for a contract of a common carrier to transport goods, it may be by parol, or it may be in writing; in either case it is equally binding.[44] A charter party may be made by parol.[45]

35. Master of vessel in foreign port.—Hurry v. Hurry, Fed. Cas. No. 6922, 2 Wash. C. C. 145; Ward v. Green (N. Y.), 6 Cow. 173.

36. Part owners.—Broadie v. Howard (Eng.), 17 C. B. 109; The A. M. Bliss, 2 Lowell 103, Fed. Cas. No. 274; Kimball v. Tucker, 10 Mass. 192.

Master in home court.—The Tribune, 3 Sumn. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 14,171.

37. Master owner pro hac vice.—Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; Thomas v. Osborn (U. S.), 19 How. 22, 15 L. Ed. 534.

38. Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341.

39. Estoppel to deny shipment of goods.—Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341. See, also, post, "Delivery to Carrier," § 4323.

40. Bills of lading designed as implement of fraud.—Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341.

41. Power of agent to make new contract.—The Olympia, 156 Fed. 252.

42. The Nettie Quill, 124 Fed. 667; Mande & P. Merc. Shipp. 227; Smith's Merc. Law, 295; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

43. Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 634, 5 L. Ed. 696; Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47; United States v. Shea, 152 U. S. 178, 38 L. Ed. 403, 14 S. Ct. 519.

"The contract of affreightment, like any other contract, is the creature of the will of the parties. It may be varied to infinity, and easily adapted to the exigencies of either party or of any trade. It is only where the express contract is silent, that the implied contract can arise." Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47; Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 634, 5 L. Ed. 696.

44. Form—Necessity of writing.—Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584, 28 L. Ed. 527, 4 S. Ct. 566.

45. Charter party.—Thomas v. Osborn

In Form of Bill of Lading.—Where it takes the form of a bill of lading it is evidenced by a receipt for the property shipped, and a promise or undertaking to transport and deliver the same as therein stipulated.[46] The bill of lading usually sets forth the time of the contract, and shows the duty assumed by the vessel.[47]

Marginal Notes.—A marginal note placed on a bill of lading by the shipper is no part of the bill.[48]

Ship Bill—Memorandum by Carrier.—A memorandum found at the foot of the ship bill which is not upon those delivered to the shipper, is no part of the contract.[49]

Acceptance—Meeting of Minds.—The minds of the parties must meet as to its terms before a charter party or an affreightment contract can become a binding agreement. If there is any part of it in regard to which the minds of the parties have not met, the entire instrument is a nullity, as to all its clauses.[50] If

(U. S.), 19 How. 22, 15 L. Ed. 534. So held where the master in command of a barque contracted with the owners to take her on what is termed "a lay," there not appearing to be any written contract of affreightment between them.

46. The Nettie Quill, 124 Fed. 667.

47. Vandewater v. Mills (U. S.), 19 How. 82, 15 L. Ed. 554.

48. Marginal note placed on bill by shipper.—A marginal note put by the quartermaster's department on bills of lading of vessels chartered by them, "that if on the arrival of the vessel at the port of destination the consignee should order her to another place to discharge, such order in all cases to be in writing on the bill of lading," does not make a part of the contract entered into by the vessel; and if her port of destination be plainly expressed in the body of the bill, the consignee can not, in virtue of the marginal memorandum, order her to go forward to another port. United States v. Kimbal (U. S.), 13 Wall. 636, 20 L. Ed. 503, 7 Ct. Cl. 234.

49. The Thames (U. S.), 14 Wall. 98, 20 L. Ed. 804.

50. Compania, etc., Navegacion v. Spanish-American Light, etc., Co., 146 U. S. 483, 36 L. Ed. 1054, 13 S. Ct. 142, citing Eliason v. Henshaw (U. S.), 4 Wheat. 225, 4 L. Ed. 556; Insurance Co. v. Young (U. S.), 23 Wall. 85, 23 L. Ed. 152; Tilley v. Cook, 103 U. S. 155, 26 L. Ed. 374; and Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Columbus Rolling-Mill, 119 U. S. 149, 30 L. Ed. 376, 7 S. Ct. 168.

A contract is void for want of mutuality. Dorsey v. Packwood (U. S.), 12 How. 126, 13 L. Ed. 921; American Cotton Oil Co. v. Kirk, 15 C. C. A. 540, 68 Fed. 791; Richardson v. Hardwick, 106 U. S. 252, 1 S. Ct. 213, 27 L. Ed. 145; Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474.

Where the charterer never promised to make or pay for alterations required to fit up the tanks of a vessel to carry petroleum in bulk. The owner of the vessel is not entitled to recover from the charterer any part of the expense of such alterations. Compania, etc., Navegacion v. Spanish-American Light, etc., Co., 146 U. S. 483, 36 L. Ed. 1054, 13 S. Ct. 142.

Receipt for post of consignment by person in charge of deck.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

A writing, delivered by defendant steamship company to plaintiff, reciting: "New York, 2/28/1907. Per steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Engaged from W. N. White & Co. Delivery March 4th. Goods: 6 cars Fr. Apples. Destination, Hamburg. North German Lloyd S. S. Company. * * * Receiving Clerk, North German Lloyd Piers, Hoboken: Receive for shipment per German steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, on March 4th, the following goods for account of W. N. White & Co.: 1 car Fr. Apples. * * * Notice. Ship's receipt must be surrendered and bills of lading procured at the company's office"—did not amount to a contract creating the relation of carrier and shipper, but was no more than a mere offer to receive the apples on board the vessel, and lacked the requisite mutuality; and hence, where plaintiffs delayed delivery to the vessel, they could not recover damages for refusal of defendant to receive the apples on account of the vessel having been loaded to its full capacity. White v. North German Lloyd Steamship Co., 113 N. Y. S. 805, 61 Misc. Rep. 268.

The agent of the owner made a conditional sale of a raft of timber, retaining title until payment of the price, and with his consent the purchaser towed it alongside a vessel and obtained from the mate in charge an "alongside receipt" in the agent's name. Being refused to draw a draft on a proposed consignee with bill of lading attached, with the consent of the agent he returned the receipt to the mate, who accepted it and removed the timber to a wharf at some distance, where its return was accepted by the agent of the owner. Later, without the knowledge of either, the vessel loaded the timber on board. No contract of affreightment a shipowner seeks to enforce part of a charter party, he must rely on the instrument as a whole; he can not affirm it for one purpose and repudiate it for another.[51]

Unilateral Contract.—It is only when the contract has been executed, and the defendant thereby benefited, that he can be held bound by such a unilateral contract.[52]

Shipping Permits.—Permits, which are mere instrumentalities of convenience, employed by a steamship company to facilitate the classification, distribution, and loading of the cargo, obligate the carrier in no way. They can be revoked at any time before the offer of goods for shipment. Until that time there can be no certainty on the part of the steamship company as to whether the goods will arrive or not, and it has no assurance that, if it should reserve space for them to the exclusion of other freight and thus be obliged to leave port without a full cargo, it would be reimbursed for its loss.[53] At most the permit constitutes an offer by the steamship company to receive the goods on board its steamer, but does not bind the shipper to deliver them. It therefore lacks the element of mutuality and can not bind the carrier.[54]

§§ 4250-4260. Interpretation, Operation and Effect—§§ 4250-4256. Rules of Construction—§ 4250. General Rules—Charter Parties.—The general rule adopted, in the construction of charter parties and contracts of affreightment, is that the construction should be liberal, agreeable to the intention of the parties, and conformable to the usage of trade in general, and of the particular trade to which the contract relates.[55] In construing shipping contracts therefor was made by any one with the ship. Held, that under such facts the taking of the timber was wrongful, and that the vessel was liable for its conversion. The Norman Prince, 185 Fed. 169.

Delivery of vessel to charterer.—Where the owner refuses to agree to certain clauses in the charter party, a delivery of the vessel to the charterer and her acceptance of the latter is a waiver of the former's objection to the charter party. The legal effect of the transaction is the adoption by the owner of the existing charter party, and not in acceptance or hiring of the vessel, by the charterer, with the omission of the clauses without which he had always and consistently refused to accept. Compania, etc., Navegacion v. Spanish-American Light, etc., Co., 146 U. S. 483, 36 L. Ed. 1054, 13 S. Ct. 142.

51. Compania, etc., Navegacion v. Spanish-American Light, etc., Co., 146 U. S. 483, 36 L. Ed. 1054, 13 S. Ct. 142.

Provisions deliberately omitted.—The court is bound to give effect to the stipulation of a charter party, but not to provisions which the parties deliberately omitted to insert after attention had been directed to them, e. g., provisions as to time and as to cancellation. Culliford v. Gomila, 128 U. S. 135, 32 L. Ed. 381, 9 S. Ct. 50.

52. Unilateral contracts.—Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474.

53. Permits.—Zambetti v. Garton, 113 N. Y. S. 804.

The fact that defendant received one car load of the apples did not render it liable for its refusal to receive the balance of the shipment. White v. North German Lloyd Steamship Co., 113 N. Y. S. 805, 61 Misc. Rep. 268.

54. Permit a mere offer.—Zambetti v. Garton, 113 N. Y. S. 804.

To this effect are Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240, and a long line of decisions in which that case is cited with approval. Zambetti v. Garton, 113 N. Y. S. 804.

The appellate division of the second department, in Pomeroy v. Newell, 117 App. Div. 800, 102 N. Y. S. 1098, holds that such an offer, being without consideration, may be withdrawn at any time. In that case it was held that an option, unsupported by a consideration, to sell real estate, would be withdrawn by a sale of the property to another purchaser during the period of the option. It cites as authority, among other cases, that of Dickinson v. Dodds (Eng.), L. R. 2 Ch. Div. 463, a leading English case. Zambetti v. Garton, 113 N. Y. S. 804.

55. Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47. See, also, Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768.

The charter party, like many mercantile instruments in common use, is drawn up in brief and disjointed sentences; and must be construed according to the intent of the parties as manifested by the whole instrument, rather than by the literal meaning of any particular clause, taken by itself. Crossman v. Burrill, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 106, 21 S. Ct. 38.

Such "contracts ought to be construed according to their plain meaning, to men the whole contract should be taken together and given a reasonable construction, carrying out as nearly as possible the intention of the parties.[56] Every clause, as every word of a contract, must be given effect, if possible, and, where the meaning is not clear, it is necessary that regard shall be had to the nature of the instrument itself, the condition of the parties executing it, and the object and purposes they had in view. Furthermore, the words of the contract will be given a reasonable construction where that is possible, rather than an unreasonable one.[57]

§ 4251. What Law Governs.—Contracts of Carriers in General.—The general rule, that the nature, the obligation and the interpretation of a contract are to be governed by the law of the place where it is made, unless the parties, at the time of making it, have some other law in view, requires a contract of affreightment, made in one country between citizens or residents thereof, and the performance of which begins there, to be governed by the law of that country, unless the parties, when entering into the contract, clearly manifest a mutual intention that it shall be governed by the law of some other country.[58] A contract made in one of the United States for the carriage of goods from there to a of sense and understanding, and not according to forced and refined constructions, which are intelligible only to lawyers, and scarcely to them." Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768.

Where a charter party stipulated that a vessel should receive "a full cargo," the opinions of experts are the best criteria of how deeply she can be loaded with safety to the lives of the passengers. Ogden v. Parsons (U. S.), 23 How. 167, 16 L. Ed. 410.

Liberal construction.—It is said that charter parties (and contract even less formal than a charter party) should have a liberal construction, such as mercantile instruments usually receive, in furtherance of the real intention of the parties and the usage of trade. Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

The contract of affreightment is governed by the same principles as the other special contracts. There are none to which the principles are more stringently applied. The Harriman (U. S.), 9 Wall. 161, 19 L. Ed. 629.

As to lading included.—There were three points along a river course, the highest A, the next B, the last C. Held, that a contract to transport goods from B to C and to and from all points between them, when the transportation was to be by water, was not a contract to transport from A to C, although such transportation necessarily involved (as a greater includes a less) a transportation between B and C. And the carrier was not entitled to recover damage from the shipper for freight for goods transported from A to C by vessels belonging to a third party. Scott v. United States (U. S.), 12 Wall. 443, 20 L. Ed. 438.

56. Whole contract taken together.—Defendant had contracted with certain millmen for the sawing and delivery, by a specified time, of a quantity of lumber, said lumber to be delivered on board of scows to be furnished by defendant. He thereon entered into a written contract with plaintiffs for the removal of said lumber; the substance of said two contracts being recited therein. Plaintiffs were to furnish men, lighters, and everything necessary for the work, at a specified price, to be paid by defendant for every 1,000 feet so removed, and to convey said lumber upon their scows from the point of delivery to defendant's docks as fast as it should be received, "provided it should be sawed so fast, by said millowners." Held that, taking the whole contract together, it was clearly implied that the stipulations were subject to the implied condition that millowners should first saw and deliver the lumber under their contracts. Hunter v. New York, etc., Salt Co., 14 Mich. 98.

57. Balfour, etc., Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 167 Fed. 1010.

58. Contracts of carriers in general.—Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; London Assur. v. Companhia De Moagens Do Barreiro, 167 U. S. 149, 42 L. Ed. 113, 17 S. Ct. 785; Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91; Manchester Liners v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., 194 Fed. 463; Adler v. Galbraith, etc., Co., 156 Fed. 259.

Illustrations.—A contract of affreightment made in the United States between citizens or residents thereof, the performance of which begins here, will be governed by the laws of the United States unless the parties when contracting clearly manifest an intention that the contract be governed by the laws of some other country. Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

A contract of charter party and affreightment made in Louisiana is not governed necessarily by the Louisiana law as to the question of construction of the point in another state is governed by the laws of the former unless a different intention clearly appears.[59]

Stipulation as to Law Controlling.—A stipulation in a bill of lading that all questions arising thereunder against the ship or her owners should be determined by the laws of the country to which the ship belongs is valid and such laws govern a libel in admiralty for the loss of property under such bill of lading by the shipper, who is a resident of another country.[60]

Stipulations Limiting Liability.—See post, "Limitation of Liability," Chapter 40.

What Constitutes Delivery.—What would be an effectual delivery, so as to terminate the liability of the carrier, in the absense of express stipulation on that subject, is ordinarily governed by the law or usage of the port of discharge.[61]

Interpretation of Contract.—A contract of charter party and affreightment is not necessarily construed by the law of the place where made.[62] Where different portions of a contract of affreightment and shipment are performable in different countries, some portions at the home port, some at the foreign port, and some at the return port, the law of the place where each portion is performable, governs its interpretation.[63]

Contracts of Agents.—Every authority given to an agent or attorney to transact business for his principal must, in the absence of any counter proof, be construed to be, to transact it according to the laws of the place where it is to be done.[64]

Extent of Authority of Master of Vessel.—What extent the owners of a schooner are liable to the shippers for a nonfulfillment of a contract of shipment of the master—whether they incur an absolute or a limited liability, must depend upon the nature and extent of the authority which the owners gave him, and this is to be measured by the law where the ship and her owners belong.[65]

§ 4252. Qualifications Imposed by Law.—Where the contract was the foundation of the claim, and though not fulfilled according to its letter, either as contract or as a question of judicial remedy. Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91.

Presumption.—American and Englishmen, entering into a charter party of an English ship for an ocean voyage, must be presumed to look to the general maritime law of the two countries, and not to the local law of the state in which the contract is signed. Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

Delivery in foreign country—Payment of freight in foreign currency.—That the goods in a contract of affreightment made in the United States were to be delivered in Liverpool, and the freight and primage were payable there in sterling currency, does not make the contract an English contract, but it is governed by the American law—the place of making. Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

Place of stranding immaterial.—A contract of affreightment made in the United States to carry freight to Liverpool between an American and an English steamboat companies, is an American contract and not an English contract, and the obligation to carry goods is to be governed by the American law and not the municipal or maritime law of any other country, and the fact of the stranding on the English coast does not change the result. Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

59. Contract for interstate shipment.—The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 681, affirming 90 Fed. 114, 32 C. C. A. 534.

60. Stipulation as to law controlling.—Decree 24 Fed. 922, affirmed in The Oranmore, 92 Fed. 396.

61. What constitutes a delivery.—Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

62. Interpretation of contracts of carriers.—Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91.

A contract of charter party and affreightment made in Louisiana is not necessarily construed by the law of Louisiana. Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91.

63. Contracts performable partly in one country and partly in another.—Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

64. Power of agent to contract.—Owings v. Hull (U. S.), 9 Pet. 607, 9 L. Ed. 246.

65. Master's authority.—Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469.

to the time or place of delivery, yet, with the qualifications which the law under such circumstances imposes, it determined the respective liabilities of the parties, and the plaintiffs could not recover more than the contract price, and the recoupment of the defendants was governed by its requirements on the part of the plaintiffs.[66]

§ 4253. Knowledge of Course of Trade.—The master of a vessel must be held to have made his contract with a full knowledge of the course of trade, and be governed by it.[67] In construing a contract for the carriage of goods by steamer, the usual course of business in such transportation must be considered.[68]

§§ 4254-4255. Aids to Construction—§ 4254. Admissibility of Parol Evidence.—The general rule as to the admissibility of parol evidence to explain, contradict or vary the terms of a written contract apply to charter parties.[69] The contract if unconditional and unambiguous can not be destroyed by parol evidence.[70] Hence evidence of an oral agreement made at the time the contract was made, to vary and contradict it, is incompetent.[71] It is true though that the contract may be read in the light of surrounding circumstances for the purpose of arriving at the meaning and intent of the writing. It is as an aid to interpretation that the surrounding circumstances may be looked to but never for the purpose of adding a new term, or contradicting or varying the writing.[72] And parol evidence is admissible to show that the contract never went into effect and hence that there was no contract at all.[73] But a contract by

66. Railroad Co. v. Lindsay (U. S.), 4 Wall. 650, 18 L. Ed. 328.

67. The Convoy's Wheat (U. S.), 3 Wall. 225, 18 L. Ed. 194.

68. Usual course of business considered.—Blitz v. Union Steamboat Co., 51 Mich. 558, 17 N. W. 55.

69. Parol evidence.—The John H. Pearson, 121 U. S. 469, 30 L. Ed. 979, 7 S. Ct. 1008; The E. A. Packer, 140 U. S. 360, 35 L. Ed. 453, 11 S. Ct. 794.

Meaning of "northern passage" may be shown by parol. The E. A. Packer, 140 U. S. 360, 35 L. Ed. 453, 11 S. Ct. 794.

70. Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 125 Fed. 62; Bast v. Bank, 101 U. S. 93, 25 L. Ed. 794; DeWitt v. Berry, 134 U. S. 306, 10 S. Ct. 536, 33 L. Ed. 896; Seitz v. Brewers', etc., Mach. Co., 141 U. S. 510, 12 S. Ct. 46, 35 L. Ed. 837; Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 13 S. Ct. 18, 36 L. Ed. 880; Corse v. Peck, 102 N. Y. 513, 7 N. E. 810; Thomas v. Scutt, 127 N. Y. 133, 27 N. E. 961.

71. Oral agreement incompetent to vary contract.—Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474; Willard v. Tayloe (U. S.), 8 Wall. 557, 19 L. Ed. 501; Forsythe v. Kimball, 91 U. S. 291, 23 L. Ed. 352; Maryland v. Railroad Co. (U. S.), 22 Wall. 105, 22 L. Ed. 713; Thompson v. Insurance Co., 104 U. S. 252, 26 L. Ed. 765; Union Stock Yards, etc., Co. v. Western Land, etc., Co., 7 C. C. A. 660, 59 Fed. 49.

A contract reciting that the parties of the second part "were desirous to ship by vessel certain lots of hardwood lumber," and by which the party of the first part agreed to carry on his vessels "any and all of this lumber as may be desired" by the parties of the second part, can not be construed as a proposition by the first party which might become a binding contract on its subsequent acceptance by the second parties, since it was executed by both parties, and purported to be a completed agreement, the terms of which would be varied by a subsequent agreement by the second parties to ship all their lumber by the vessels of the party of the first part. Dennis v. Slyfield, 117 Fed. 474, 54 C. C. A. 520.

Light of surrounding circumstances.—Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474; Railroad Co. v. Maryland (U. S.), 20 Wall. 643, 22 L. Ed. 446; Willard v. Tayloe (U. S.), 8 Wall. 557, 19 L. Ed. 501; Greenfield, Ev. § 277; Union Stock Yards, etc., Co. v. Western Land, etc., Co., 7 C. C. A. 660, 59 Fed. 49.

In the case last cited, Judge Jenkins, speaking for the seventh circuit court of appeals, said: "But resort to surrounding circumstances is not allowed for the purpose of adding a new and distinct undertaking. Maryland v. Railroad Co. (U. S.), 22 Wall. 105, 22 L. Ed. 713. The circumstances surrounding the making of a contract is one thing. The parol negotiations leading up to the written agreement is another and different thing. Parol evidence may be received of the existence of an independent oral agreement, not inconsistent with the stipulations of the written contract, in respect to a matter to which the writing does not speak, but not to contradict the contract." Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474.

73. To show that contract never went into effect.—Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 148 Fed. 11, 78 C. C. A. 179.

which a steamship company agreed to furnish to a shipper space for a shipment of cattle on each of a number of named ships sailing in different months is an entire contract, and not a separate one for each vessel, and therefore not subject to modification by parol evidence to except one vessel on the ground that as to such vessel it never went into effect, because of the nonfulfillment of an unexpressed condition precedent.[74]

Contract Partly Oral.—There may be instances in which a contract is partly in writing and partly oral, and the two together constitute the contract; so there may be a question of fact as to whether the written agreement is or is not the entire agreement.[75]

§ 4255. Opinion Evidence.—See ante, "General Rules," § 4250.

§ 4256. Construction of Particular Words, Phrases, etc.—When the word "ton" is used alone, in a contract of affreightment, a dead weight ton is meant and in foreign trade long tons of 2,240 pounds.[76]

§§ 4257-4260. Conditions Precedent and Independent Covenants, Representations and Warranties—§ 4257. In General.—Whether particular stipulations are to be considered conditions precedent or not, must, in all cases, solely depend upon that intention, as it is gathered from the instrument itself.[77]

Stipulation as to Vessel to Be Used.—The contract of affreightment obliges the carrier, in the absence of a legal excuse, to carry the freight to the destined port in the very vessel stipulated in the bill of lading. It is a right resulting from the contract that the transportation shall be in the chosen vessel. It is not permissible to speculate as to the reasonableness of the choice. The owner of the freight can not be questioned as to his reasons.[78]

§ 4258. Stipulations as to Time and Place of Shipment.—A statement descriptive of the subject matter, or of some material incident, such as the time or place of shipment, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty, or condition precedent, upon the failure or nonperformance of which the party aggrieved may repudiate the whole contract.[79] A contract by a steamship company for the car-

74. Rule not applicable to part of entire contract.—Decree 125 Fed. 62, affirmed in Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 148 Fed. 11, 78 C. C. A. 179.

75. Contract party oral.—Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474.

Illustrations of such cases are afforded by the cases of Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584, 4 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 527, and Bank v. Cooper, 137 U. S. 473, 11 S. Ct. 160, 34 L. Ed. 759, where the question was whether a bill of lading constituted the entire contract. Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474.

A shipment of a number of horses from Nome to Seattle held to have been made under a contract made by the parties partly by correspondence and partly by oral conversations, all of which must be taken into account to ascertain its terms, and, as so construed, to have required the shipowner to construct stalls for the horses between decks, and slings for use in rough weather, the failure to provide which rendered the vessel liable for injury to the horses during the voyage. The Olympia, 156 Fed. 252.

76. Construction of particular words, phrases, etc.—Where a freight contract engaged steamship room between New York and Rio de Janeiro for "approximately 1500/2000 tons," electrical machinery and apparatus, and also contained the schedule fixing dead weight and space rates at the steamer's option, the word "ton" should be construed to mean a dead weight long ton, notwithstanding an option authorizing the ship to charge freight at space rates. Herr v. Tweedie Trading Co., 181 Fed. 483.

77. Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768; Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 40, 28 L. Ed. 885, 5 S. Ct. 346.

78. Effect of stipulation as to vessel to be used.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

79. Filley v. Pope, 115 U. S. 213, 29 L. Ed. 372, 6 S. Ct. 19; Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 29 L. Ed. 366, 6 S. Ct. 12, citing Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768, and Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 40, 28 L. Ed. 885, 5 S. Ct. 346.

Stipulation in charter party, that vessel is "now sailed" or about to sail.—See Dav-riage of cattle on certain specified vessels, "all sailing" during certain months, imports a warranty that all the vessels named will sail during such months.[80]

Charterers Knowing Recital to Be False.—A recital in the charter that the vessel is at a designated place is not a warranty or contract, where the charterers knew certainly that the vessel was not there; of course they were not deceived or misled by the recital, which was probably part of a printed form that attracted no attention.[81]

§ 4259. Stipulations as to Tonnage or Measurement.—Statements as to registered tonnage or measurement, unless clearly intended as such a statement as to the registered tonnage of a ship, is not a warranty or condition precedent.[82]

§ 4260. Warranty of Seaworthiness.—A warranty in a charter party that a vessel is seaworthy is satisfied if the vessel was accounted seaworthy when delivered into possession of the charters under the charter.[83] The owner is liable for the breach of his contract, but the stipulation of seaworthiness is not so far a condition precedent that the hirer is not liable in such case for any of the charter money. If he uses her, he must pay for the use to the extent to which it goes.[84]

§ 4261. Cancellation, Modification and Release.—Canceling Date of Charter Party.—Where the canceling date of the charter party was not filled in but its insertion waived by the charterers, as the ship was in port and they had confidence in the ability and willingness of the master to get the ship ready in time, the charterer by waiving the insertion of such date, abandoned all claims to insist upon the right to cancel the charter party if the vessel should not be ready to load by a day specified so as to enable them to comply with the requirements in this contract with a third party for the shipment of the cargo.[85]

By Master or Agent.—A charter party can not be modified or canceled even in a foreign port, by the master of the vessel or any agent either of the owner or the charterer.[86]

Under Clause Limiting Liability.—A clause exempting a carrier from liability for loss or damage occasioned "by arrest or restraint of princes, rulers, or people" in a contract of affreightment by a neutral to carry contraband of war, made when conditions of war exist and are known to both parties, must be construed as intended to apply only to actual arrest or seizure and confiscation and affords no ground for repudiation of the contract by the carrier because of the danger of seizure.[87] ison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 40, 28 L. Ed. 885, 5 S. Ct. 346; Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768.

Will proceed "with all possible dispatch."—See Lowber v. Bangs (U. S.), 2 Wall. 728, 17 L. Ed. 768.

80. Time of sailing.—Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 125 Fed. 62, decree affirmed in 148 Fed. 11, 78 C. C. A. 179.

81. Lovell v. Davis, 101 U. S. 541, 25 L. Ed. 944.

82. Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 29 L. Ed. 406, 6 S. Ct. 91; Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 289, 46 L. Ed. 1164, 22 S. Ct. 920. See, also, Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 24 L. Ed. 622, 13 Ct. Cl. 521; Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 29 L. Ed. 366, 6 S. Ct. 12.

83. The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, 26 L. Ed. 1100.

84. Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012.

85. Culliford v. Gomila, 128 U. S. 135, 32 L. Ed. 381, 9 S. Ct. 50. So held where the owner of the vessel guaranteed that the vessel would carry a specified quantity but did not have her ready to load by a day which would enable the charterers to comply with their contract with a third party.

86. Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 634, 5 L. Ed. 696.

In Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 5 L. Ed. 696, the question came before the federal supreme court, whether the charterer and the master could, by a contract made with a shipper who acted in good faith, destroy the lien of the owner on the goods shipped, for the freight due under the charter party. It was held they could not; and the decision is placed upon the ground of want of authority to do the act. Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341.

87. Under cause limiting liability.—Balfour, etc., Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 167 Fed. 1010.

Existence of War—Contraband.—Where the charter party has been entered into prior to the prevalence of war conditions affecting the port of delivery, there can be but little question that the carrier can legitimately decline to carry out the contract.[88] However, a citizen of a neutral may lawfully contract to carry contraband of war, and his undertaking will be enforced by the courts of the neutral state. While, by international law, trade by neutrals in contraband of war with belligerents is inhibited, and subjects the unlawful commerce to seizure and condemnation by a belligerent, and while neutral states recognize the right of imposing this restriction upon the action of its subjects, yet it has been judicially determined that this law is not inconsistent with the right of neutrals to trade in contraband with citizens of belligerent states, and to make contracts to that end, and to have the same enforced.[89] The conditions must, from the very nature of things, be different where the owner, notwithstanding his discretion to refuse to carry contraband where, in the interest of the ship and of the cargo, it would be dangerous to do so under conditions of war subsequently arising, deliberately enters into a contract to carry that class of cargo when the war conditions are actually present.[90]

Right of Shipper to Cancel—Branch of Implied Representations.—In a contract to transport cattle, it is implied that there shall be sufficient ventilation; and if there is not, so that insurance can not be procured upon the cattle, the shipper may refuse to ship, and recover for breach of the contract.[91] But the fact that a single underwriter refused to insure cattle for the voyage because of alleged insufficiency of ventilation does not, of itself, prove a breach of contract on the vessel's part, warranting refusal to ship the cattle.[92]

Readiness for Shipment.—Where the contract stipulates that the ship be, in her equipment and condition, reasonably ready for a grain cargo, if the shipper so require, the readiness required is a reasonable readiness, and not a special readiness to gratify particular requirements established by the shipper.[93] And the lack of specific preparations, which are not usually required or desirable, and, if used at all, are better put in while the cargo is being loaded, is not, in the absence of a specified notice that they are required, a defect in readiness, authorizing the canceling of the contract.[94] Obviously, a practice peculiar to the port, requiring battening when not needed, and merely out of abundant caution, could not, without previous notice, give ground for canceling the contract.[95] A provision giving the shippers the right to cancel the contract for shipment of a cargo of grain if the ship be not ready on a given date requires a practical and substantial readiness to receive the cargo such as would insure the underwriters' in-

88. Balfour, etc., Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 167 Fed. 1010.

The case of The Styria, 101 Fed. 728, 41 C. C. A. 639, and again decided on appeal in The Styria v. Morgan, 186 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 731, 46 L. Ed. 1027, is one which upon the facts, save that the contract was entered into before war conditions arose, bears a strong analogy to the present. The case of Nobel's Explosives Co. v. Jenkins (Eng.), L. R. 1896, 2 Q. B. 326, cited by the supreme court, is also quite analogous.

89. Balfour, etc., Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 167 Fed. 1010. So it has been held by the supreme court, in The Santissima Trinidad (U. S.), 7 Wheat. 283, 5 L. Ed. 454.

90. Balfour, etc., Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 167 Fed. 1010.

91. Branch of implied representations.—The Alvah, 77 Fed. 315, 23 C. C. A 181.

92. Refusal of insurance by single underwriter.—The Alvah, 77 Fed. 315, 23 C. C. A. 181.

93. Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

94. Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

Failure of the ship to have up the top board of the shifting boards, where the board and the slots for receiving it are fitted and prepared, is not a want of readiness to receive grain cargo, such as would authorize the cancellation of the contract of affreightment. Nor is cancellation authorized by failure to have up the shifting boards in the hatch combings, as these, if used at all, are better put in when the cargo is partly loaded. Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

95. Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

spector's approval, and obtain his pass, and would gratify the usual and reasonable requirements for avoiding injury to the commercial value of the grain.[96]

The failure of the shipowner to perform his obligation, under the charter party to keep the vessel in proper condition and fit for use, discharges the charterer or gives him the option to rescind his contract.[97]

Waiver of Right to Rescind.—A shipper who contracted with a steamship company for the transportation from New York to London of 100 tons of hay on each of the company's weekly steamers for a year, and who was entitled to rescind the contract because of the frequent failure of the company to take the required quantity which was tendered, waived such right by electing to treat the contract as still in force, and making subsequent shipments thereunder, and could not thereafter rescind because of such past defaults.[98]

§§ 4262-4263. Performance, Discharge or Breach—§ 4262. In General.—If what is agreed to be done is possible and lawful, it must be done. Difficulty or improbability of accomplishing the undertaking will not release the parties from the obligations of the contract. It must be shown that the thing can not by any means be affected.[99] But where the circumstances are such that the contract can not be carried out, and through no fault or negligence of the parties, they are absolved from liability for the failure to perform.[1] Where the owner of a vessel plying between two ports agreed to carry freight for plaintiff during the season ensuing, and within the time the owner offered on two or three occasions to take freight, but plaintiff did not furnish it, the owner's refusal on one trip to go a few miles up the river to take on freight was not a breach of the contract, the vessel being then deeply laden, and it not being safe and proper to make the attempt.[2]

Failure to Receive All Freight for Shipment.—Where the carrier refuses to receive all of the goods, according to the contract of affreightment, he is liable for a breach of the contract, unless the performance of the contract has been rendered impossible through no fault of his own or unless the terms of the contract have been changed.[3] A shipper of corn agreed to deliver it on board a ves-

96. Readiness contemplated.—Disney v. Furness, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 810.

97. Strong v. United States, 154 U. S. 632, 24 L. Ed. 664, 14 S. Ct. 1182.

98. Waiver of right to rescind.—Bloomingdale v. Wilsons, etc., Line, 105 Fed. 384, citing McNaughter v. Cassally, Fed. Cas. No. 8911, 4 McLean 530.

99. The Harriman (U. S.), 9 Wall. 161, 19 L. Ed. 629.

Where libelant contracted to transport a pile of lumber, which his agent had inspected, from Cheboygan to Chicago, by a steamer and certain barges, under an entire contract, and carried only a proportion of the amount, and the amount carried was less than the carrying capacity of the steamer and any one of the barges owned by libelant, it was no defense to libelant's breach of contract that one of the barges was disabled by the loss of a mast, and that the lumber consisted partly of strips and partly of boards, instead of being all boards. Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Chamberlain, 118 Fed. 716, 55 C. C. A. 236.

1. Parties absolved.—Plaintiff contracted to transport certain merchandise for defendant, water permitting, and insure safe delivery of the same to defendant or his consignees at a particular place. The contract provided for deductions to be made from the compensation for merchandise lost in transportation by reason of the sinking of the boats used in the transportation. Held that, if the condition of the navigation was such that the merchandise could not be transported, plaintiff was absolved from the obligation to transport, and defendant was absolved from the obligation to deliver the goods for transportation. White v. Toncray, 46 Va. (5 Gratt.) 179.

2. Refusal to go after freight—Dangers of the river.—Thurston v. Foster, 11 Me. 74.

3. Failure to receive all freight for shipment.—Libelant and respondent entered into a verbal contract that one of respondent's steamers should load and transport a quantity of marble from Spezia, Italy, to New York. The marble was delivered, as agreed, alongside the steamer, which made the voyage with only a part of the cargo, insisting subsequently that libelant's agent should sign a bill of lading for the whole, describing the omitted portion as "short shipped," which bill the agent signed under protest. Held, that libelant was ensel with no unreasonable delay. The captain of the vessel applied for it on a Sunday, and, no person being ready to deliver it, would not wait till Monday, but went to sea without it. The shipowner was not entitled to dead freight on the quantity not shipped, but, on the contrary, was bound to make compensation to the other party for the loss sustained in consequence of the captain's not taking the full quantity on board.[4]

Boat Other than That Stipulated.—Where a shipper of goods delivered them to the clerk of the steamer "C," with a bill of lading filled out in which was inserted the name of the steamer "S," belonging to the same carrier, it did not amount to a rescission of that clause of the contract providing for carriage by the "S."; it not appearing that the agent to whom the goods were delivered was not the agent of the carrier to receive goods for the "S." [5] Where a shipper of goods delivered to the steamer "C.," with a bill of lading, conditioned for the shipment on the steamer "S.," belonging to the same carrier, it did not amount to a waiver of the condition for carriage by the "S." [6]

Carrying Contrary to Provision of Contract.—The owner of a line of lake steamers can lawfully make a special contract with the shipper not to place more than a specified number of dollars worth of goods on any one of the vessels at one time, and having made such contract, he is bound to perform the same, and liable for any damages incurred by the shipping through his breach of the provision of the contract.[7]

Abandonment of Vessel by Shipowner.—The justifiable abandonment of a vessel in consequence of the damages of the seas is such a renunciation of the contract of affreightment as entitles the cargo owners to refuse to go on with the voyage, at least, where the master has not rejoined the ship before anyone else has taken possession, or has not obtained the vessel and cargo from the salvors before the cargo owners have announced their decision.[8]

Failure of Shipper to Tender Goods for Shipment.—In an action for damages against a steamship company for failure to carry shipments of lumber and machinery which it had contracted to carry on or about two dates specified, the fact that plaintiff did not tender shipment on one of the dates specified is not ground for granting a nonsuit, where defendant was not ready to receive the material if tendered,[9] or where other fault of the defendant caused the delay of tender of the goods by the plaintiff.[10]

Plaintiff Shipping Part of Goods by Other Ship.—In an action against a steamship company for breach of a contract to carry shipments of freight on its ships sailing on or about two dates specified, the fact that plaintiff shipped part of the material which defendant had agreed to carry upon another ship could not titled to recover from the steamer the damages suffered by reason of the refusal to take the remainder of the cargo. The Citta Di Palermo, 153 Fed. 378.

4. Failure to wait for entire shipment.—Dunbar v. Buck, 20 Va. (6 Munf.) 34.

5. Boat other than that stipulated.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 49 N. E. 970, 20 Ind. App. 594.

6. Waiver of terms of contract.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

7. Carrying contrary to contract.—Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Trans. Co., 161 Fed. 790.

Defendant having contracted not to place more than $100,000 worth of plaintiff's goods on any one of its vessels for transportation at one time, and with knowledge that plaintiff's insurance was limited to $100,000 worth of goods on any one steamer at any time in violation of the contract loaded an assembled shipment valued at $349,426.70 without plaintiff's knowledge on a single vessel, which shipment sustained a damage of $85,996.70. Held that, since the insurance company was only liable for such a proportion of the loss as $100,000 bore to the whole value of the goods shipped, defendant was responsible for breach of contract for the balance of the loss. Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Trans. Co., 161 Fed. 790.

8. Right of cargo to refuse to go on with voyage.—The Eliza Lines, 199 U. S. 119, 26 S. Ct. 8, 50 L. Ed. 115, 4 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 406.

9. Failure of shipper to tender goods for shipment.—Revett v. Globe Nav. Co., 56 Wash. 550, 106 Pac. 176.

10. Failure of defendant to direct switching cars.—Revett v. Globe Nav. Co., 56 Wash. 550, 106 Pac. 176.

be pleaded in bar of a recovery of general damages, the contract not having been rescinded: but the freight money lost, if allowable at all, would only be an offset to plaintiff's damages.[11]

§ 4263. Who Liable on Contract.—An engagement of cargo space from a steamship line for a shipment at an agreed rate of freight, made by a company operating a connecting line, constitutes a contract, which binds the latter to furnish the cargo, or respond in damages, although it was in fact made in behalf of a third party intending to make a through shipment over both lines, where such fact was not disclosed.[12]

§ 4264. Abandonment of Contract.—Neither party is at liberty to abandon the contract without the consent of the other, or without legal cause.[13]

Effect of Abandonment.—Where a contract of affreightment is abandoned, the carrier in such contract can not be held liable for damages to the shipper for losses arising out of a shipment of the same freight under another contract with another carrier.[14]

§ 4265. Assignment of Contract.—A contract for the carriage of cattle on certain vessels is assignable by the shipper, and the assignment vests the assignee with the right to sue thereon in his own name, notwithstanding a provision therein that no part of the space contracted for shall be sublet without the consent of the shipowner.[15] The difference between subletting and assigning is material. In the one case, the lessee claims the whole or a part of the premises he is entitled to occupy. In the other, he transfers all his right in a contract and the assignee acquires all the rights and assumes all the liability of the assignor.[16]

§§ 4266-4275. Bill of Lading—§ 4266. Definition.—In commercial law, a bill of lading is legal evidence of title to property in transit, and the rights of the parties may be governed by its terms.[17] As restricted to transportation by water, a bill of lading may be said to be a written acknowledgment, signed by the master of a vessel, that he has received the goods therein described from the shipper,

11. Plaintiff shipping part of goods by other ship.—Revett v. Globe Nav. Co., 56 Wash. 550, 106 Pac. 176.

Breach of contract not shown.—In an action against a steamship company for breach of contract to carry shipments of freight on two dates specified, evidence held not to show a breach of the contract by the shipper by shipping a part of the freight which he had contracted to send over defendant's line by another ship. Revett v. Globe Nav. Co., 56 Wash. 550, 106 Pac. 176.

12. Who liable on contract.—Baltimore Steam-Packet Co. v. Patterson, 106 Fed. 736, 45 C. C. A. 575, 66 L. R. A. 193, affirming decree, 101 Fed. 296.

13. Reed v. United States (U. S.), 11 Wall. 591, 606, 20 L. Ed. 220.

14. Effect of abandonment.—Plaintiff made an oral contract with defendants to ship his sawmill and laborers on the steamer Monarch from Eagle to Fairbanks. When the Monarch reached Eagle she was loaded, and refused to take them. Defendants telegraphed to the Oil City, another steamer, and she took them, but was delayed on the way. Plaintiff paid the Oil City the usual rate for both freight and passengers and defendants nothing. Held, that the contract with defendants for the services of the Monarch was abandoned, and that there was no consideration to support plaintiffs claim for damages against defendant caused by the delay of the Oil City. Johanson v. Sondheim, 2 Alaska 556.

15. Assignment of contract.—Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 125 Fed. 62, decree affirmed in 148 Fed. 11, 78 C. C. A. 179.

16. Morris v. Chesapeake, etc., Steamship Co., 125 Fed. 62; Lynde v. Hough (N. Y.), 27 Barb. 415; Bedford v. Terhune, 30 N. Y. 453, 86 Am. Dec. 394, 27 How. Prac. 422; Field v. Mills, 33 N. J. L. 254.

17. Definition, etc.—The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484; Shaw v. Railroad Co., 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. Ed. 892. See ante, "Definition and Nature Generally," § 413.

A bill of lading is a commercial document of title, which represents the goods, and which the master by the general maritime law and expressly by § 3 of the Harter act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946]), in the case of vessels in the foreign trade, is bound to give to the shipper. Equi Valley Marble Co. v. Becker, 91 C. C. A. 592, 165 Fed. 437.

to be transported, on the terms therein expressed, to a described place or destination, and there to be delivered to the consignee or the parties therein designated.[18]

What Constitutes.—A document purporting on its face to be a bill of purchase by a vessel of certain stone, and signed by her master, the stone being delivered to her as cargo, has none of the elements of a bill of lading and can not be interpreted as such. Nor is the vessel holden for stone purchased by her master as cargo.[19]

§ 4267. Form and Contents.—For a treatment of the form and contents of a bill of lading, see ante, "Form and Contents," §§ 414-424.

Stipulations Stamped on Face.—Stipulations stamped on the face of a bill of lading before its delivery to the shipper, and by express terms included therein, become a part of the contract.[20]

§ 4268. Issuance and Acceptance.—Although a bill of lading is the proper and customary shipping document, and should be made out according to every requirement, yet there is no rule of the common law requiring the carrier to issue it to the consignor.[21] But in some instances common carriers are required by statute to issue bills of lading, memoranda in writing, etc., to the consingor of freight received.[22] And it has been held that a shipper of goods is entitled to a bill of lading therefor as a matter of right.[23] And in this connection it was said that where the master claims, demurrage for delay in loading, he has the right to give notice of the claim in, or by indorsement upon, such bill, so as to charge a transferee with such notice.[24]

Duty of Consignor to Require Bill of Lading.—It has been held that a shipper should in all cases require a bill of lading.[25] Where there is no evidence that the contract of shipment was out of the usual course, or that the plaintiffs could have made any better one, at the "lowest rate of freight," according to the terms of the order, it was correct to instruct the jury that it was the duty of the plaintiffs to have taken a bill of lading in a proper and usual form.[26] But there is a rule of law requiring a consignor to take out a bill of lading and forward it to the consignee.[27]

Time of Issuance.—A bill of lading should be signed and issued when the goods noted therein for shipment have been received.[28] When different parcels, packages, etc., going to make up the consignment are received at different times, receipts for them are or should be given, upon the return of which, when the entire consignment is received, a bill of lading will be issued.[29]

18. Restricted to water transportation.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

19. What constitutes.—The Skylark, Fed. Cas. No. 12,930.

20. Stipulations stamped on face.—The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 681, decree affirmed in 90 Fed. 114, 32 C. C. A. 534. See ante, "Form and Contents," §§ 414-424.

21. No rule requiring carrier to give bill of lading.—The Peytona, 2 Curt. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 11,058; Johnson v. Stoddard, 100 Mass. 306. Generally, as to the necessity for issuing bills of lading, see ante, "Necessity for Issuance," § 425.

22. Necessity for issuance under statute.—Tex. Civ. Stat. 1895, art. 322. As to duty to issue bills of lading, see ante, "Duty to Issue," § 443.

23. Duty to issue.—Watt v. Cargo, 161 Fed. 104.

24. Right to give notice of claim in bill.—Watt v. Cargo, 161 Fed. 104.

25. Shipper should require bill of lading.—Johnson v. Stoddard, 100 Mass. 306; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

26. Duty to take bill of lading.—Field v. Banker (N. Y.), 9 Bosw. 467. See ante, "Necessity for Issuance," § 425.

27. No rule of law requiring it.—Johnson v. Stoddard, 100 Mass. 306.

28. Time of issuance.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Rowley v. Bigelow (Mass.), 12 Pick. 307, 23 Am. Dec. 607.

Statutes forbidding issuance prior to receipt.—1 Rev. Stat. Mo. 1889, ch. 18, § 739; 3 N. Y. Rev. Stat., p. 2259 (17 Ed.); Act of Pa. 1866, § 2, P. L. 1363; Louisiana Statute construed, see The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575, 23 L. Ed. 978.

29. Shipping receipts.—The Delaware

Authority to Issue.—As to authority of particular agents, employees, etc., to issue bills of lading, see ante, "Agents and Employees," §§ 426-428. The general rule, under the decisions in the federal courts, and some of the state courts, is that the master of a vessel has no power to bind the owners of the ship by a false bill of lading.[30] Some of the cases, though, limit the rule to cases where there is no intent to defraud.[31] Various state courts hold that common carriers are estopped from denying their liability upon a false bill of lading given by the master or agent.[32] But this is not the rule in the federal courts. Most of the cases in which the rule has been applied have been cases in which either no goods were shipped, or a less amount was shipped than that stated in the bill of lading; but the rule is based on the principle that a master has no implied authority to give a false bill of lading of any kind.[33] And it seems that the principle would have the same application to a bill of lading which is false in the date as to one which is false in the amount.[34]

Receipt of Goods as Prerequisite to Issuance.—As to receipt of goods as prerequisite to issuance of bills of lading, see ante, "Receipt of Goods as Prerequisite to Issuance," §§ 429-442. Under the rule of the federal courts a master has no power to bind the owners or the ship by a false bill of lading, whether the falsity is in relation to the amount of goods shipped on the date of the shipment, except where the rule is changed by statute. The act of congress known as the Harter Act subjects a person guilty of a violation of its provisions respecting bills of lading to a fine, which is made a lien on the vessel, but does not make the vessel liable for the damages occasioned thereby.[35]

The true construction of the provisions of the Harter Act in regard to bills of lading is that the rule previously established in the federal courts that a false bill of lading is not binding on the owner or the ship still remains the law; but, if a false bill of lading is given, the person giving it is liable to a fine not exceeding $2,000, and the amount of that fine is made a lien on the vessel. But any damage caused by the falsehood does not create any lien on the ship. The true remedy of the party injured in such a case is an action against the person who actually issued the false bill of lading.[36]

(U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Mercantile, etc., Co. v. Chase (N. Y.), 1 E. D. Smith 115; Keyser v. Harbeck (N. Y.), 3 Duer. 373.

30. False bill of lading.—The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599; Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 26 L. Ed. 998; The Loon, 7 Blatchf. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 8,499; Robinson, etc., Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 9 Fed. 129; S. C., 16 Fed. 57; American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Maddock, 93 Fed. 980, 36 C. C. A. 42; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. McFadden, 154 U. S. 155, 14 S. Ct. 990, 38 L. Ed. 944.

31. Intent to defraud.—When the cargo specified in a bill of lading was never received by the carrier, the original consignee cannot hold the carrier liable for the loss of the cargo, unless it appears that the bill of lading was issued with intent to defraud. McIntyre Bros. & Co. v. South Atlantic Steamship Line, 12 Ga. App. 399, 78 S. E. 347.

32. State courts.—The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942; Armour v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 65 N. Y. 111, 22 Am. Rep. 603; Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 106 N. Y. 195, 12 N. E. 433, 60 Am. Rep. 440; Brooke v. New York, etc., R. Co., 108 Pa. 529, 1 Atl. 206, 56 Am. Rep. 235; Wichita Sav. Bank v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 20 Kan. 519; Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Neb. 556, 7 N. W. 311, 35 Am. Rep. 488.

33. Rule in federal court.—The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942.

A steamship carrier can not be held liable for nondelivery of goods not actually received for shipment, although it issued bills of lading therefor upon receipts purporting to have been signed by its shipping clerks at the wharf, but which were in fact forged. Clark v. Clyde Steamship Co., 148 Fed. 243.

34. The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942.

35. Power of master—False bill of lading.—The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942.

The rule is not changed by the Harter Act of Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946].

36. The Isola Di Procida, 124 Fed. 942; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; Stumore v. Breen, 12 App. Cas. 698; Relyea v. New Haven Rolling-Mill Co., 42 Conn. 579, 75 Fed. 420.

Issuance in Duplicate.—As to issuance of bills of lading in duplicate, see ante, "Issuance in Duplicate," § 444.

Acceptance and Assent to Provisions.—The general rule is that when goods are delivered to a carrier for transportation, and a bill of lading or receipt is delivered to the shipper, he is bound to examine it and ascertain its contents; and if he accepts it without objection, he is bound by the terms, and resort can not be had to parol negotiations to vary them.[37] In speaking of the legal effect of a bill of lading, and why, upon transportation, such an instrument is binding upon the shipper it has been said[38] that "it is the rule, rather than the exception, for carriers to stipulate for a release from the stringent liability of an insurer, and which otherwise the law would impose upon them; and according to the customary course of business such stipulations are contained in the bill of lading issued by the carrier. This custom is so general that all persons receiving such bills of lading must be presumed to know such custom, * * * and for this reason the acceptance of such a paper by the shipper, without dissent, at the time of the delivery of his goods for shipment, when no fraud or imposition has been practiced upon him, is to be regarded as conclusive evidence that he agrees to be bound by all lawful stipulation contained in such bill of lading." However, it may be laid down as a general proposition that, when goods have been received by a carrier under a prior contract such contract is not merged in a bill of lading subsequently issued, unless it is shown that the shipper assented to the terms contained therein.[39] And it is said that where a bill of lading presented by the carrier to the shipper for signature, after the shipment has been made, does not conform to the original contract, but includes cargo not taken by the vessel as agreed, it is a proper course for the shipper to sign the same un-

37. Acceptance and assent to purchasers.—The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167; Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 72 N. Y. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 113; Long v. New York Cent. R. Co., 50 N. Y. 76; Bank v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174, 23 L. Ed. 872; Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505, 97 Am. Dec. 117, 1 Am. Rep. 131; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., Railroad, 16 Mich. 79, 93 Am. Dec. 208.

The shipper of a cargo of fruit took a bill of lading containing permission to the vessel to call at any port or ports. One port, at which the ship was accustomed to call, was known to all parties to be quarantined. Evidence was given that the agent of the ship let the shipper understand that the vessel would not call at the quarantined port. The shipper thereafter accepted the bill of lading without objection. The ship did so call, and was detained in quarantine, and the fruit was damaged. Held, that the bill of lading governed, and that the shipper could not recover. The Sidonian, 34 Fed. 805.

As to acceptance and assent to provisions as requisite to making a binding contract by way of the bill of lading or in substitution of an original parol oral contract, see ante, "Acceptance and Assent to Provisions," §§ 445-450.

38. The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 681, quoted in The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167.

39. Goods received under prior contract.—The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167; Gaines v. Union Transp., etc., Ins. Co., 28 O. St. 418; Park v. Preston, 108 N. Y. 343, 15 N. E. 705; King v. Woodridge, 30 Vt. 565.

Where goods were delivered to and laden upon a vessel for shipment, and a receipt given therefor, under a written contract for their carriage between the shipper and carrier, the terms of such contract can not be changed, and new conditions and limitations favorable to the carrier added, by a bill of lading subsequently delivered by it to the shipper, and accepted by him without reading, unless it is shown that his attention was called to such changes, so that he may be presumed to have assented thereto. The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167.

Where a bill of lading does not conform to the original contract of shipment, it must yield, in the absence of proof that the parties intended thereby to create a new agreement. The Citta Di Palermo, 153 Fed. 378.

A parol contract for the shipment of goods, pursuant to which they were laden on board, may be shown to affect the construction of bills of lading signed and delivered after the goods were loaded and when the vessel was about to sail, and, in order that provisions of such bills shall override the prior agreement, the burden rests on the carrier to show that they were called to the attention of the shipper and assented to by him. Pacific Coast Co. v. Yukon Independent Transp. Co., 155 Fed. 29, 83 C. C. A. 625.

der protest, and such protest will preserve its rights.[40] Of course it is competent for the parties to modify the prior contract by the introduction of additional terms, or by the substitution of the contract contained in the bill of lading, but the circumstances under which the bill of lading is delivered must show that it was the intention of the parties that the prior contract was to be merged in, and the freight carried subject to the conditions and exceptions named in the bill of lading.[41] In some later cases in New York it seems to be held that the doctrine just stated is applicable only to the cases where the evidence shows that at the time of the delivery of the bill of lading the goods were actually in transit to their place of destination, and for that reason could not have been reclaimed by the shipper.[42] But the Federal District Court, in holding that the rule could not be so limited, said that when the claim is made that a contract under which goods were accepted has been superseded by a bill of lading subsequently delivered, it is reasonable to require, in support of such claim, proof of the actual assent of the shipper to the terms contained in the bill of lading.[43] And it is also held by that court that proof of the delivery of the bill of lading, and its acceptance by the shipper without dissent, will not be sufficient to show his actual assent, but that it must be shown in addition thereto, that he had notice that such bill of lading was delivered to him by the carrier as the contract under which his goods were to be carried.[44] And there are many cases which so hold.[45] A contract for the carriage of goods by sea may doubtless exist without a bill of lading, and when the parties have made such a contract the ship owner can not, without the shipper's consent vary its terms for inserting new provisions in a bill of lading, and the shipper may decline to assent to the modifications, and insist upon his right to have the goods carried under the original contract.[46]

No Previous Contract.—Of course, if no previous contract has been made between the parties, the bill of lading will be conclusive evidence as to the character of the contract.[47] The bill of lading is often given by the shipowner, and accepted by the shipper, as expressing the terms of the agreement between them, and when this is the case both parties are bound by its provisions.[48]

§ 4269. Validity of Bills of Lading.—As to the validity of bills of lading as affected by fraud, mistake, forgery, no delivery of goods, and partial invalidity, see ante, "Validity," §§ 451-454.

Validity of Particular Stipulations.—A stipulation in a bill of lading that "the ship is warranted seaworthy only to the extent that the owners shall exer-

40. Proper to receive bill under protest.—The Citta Di Palermo, 153 Fed. 378.

41. Merger of original contract.—The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167, in this case it was held that the prior contract was not superseded by the bill of lading. And the case of Bostwick v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 45 N. Y. 712 is a similar case.

42. New York cases.—Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 72 N. Y. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 113; Long v. New York Cent. R. Co., 50 N. Y. 76.

43. Actual assent required.—The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167.

44. The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167.

45. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Beeson, 30 Kan. 289, 2 Pac. 496; Strohn v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 21 Wis. 554, 94 Am. Dec. 564.

In The Caledonia, 43 Fed. 681, 50 Fed. 567, affirmed in 157 U. S. 124, 15 S. Ct. 537, 39 L. Ed. 644, the court held upon the particular facts before it that a prior written memorandum was merged in a subsequent bill of lading, but the rule was recognized that a prior contract for the carriage of goods could not be changed, by a subsequent bill of lading, without the assent of the shipper.

46. The Caledonia, 43 Fed. 681, 50 Fed. 567; Jones v. Hough (Eng.), 5 Exch. Div. 115; Crooks v. Allen (Eng.), 5 Q. B. Div. 38, 40, 41; Sewell v. Burdick, 10 App. Cas. 79, 105.

47. No previous contract.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Beeson, 30 Kan. 289, 2 Pac. 496.

48. The Caledonia, 43 Fed. 681, 50 Fed. 567.

cise due diligence to make it so," being ambiguous and uncertain in its meaning, can have no effect.[49]

§ 4270. Construction, Operation and Effect.—General Rules of Construction.—The constructions of bills of lading must be governed by the law and by all the circumstances by which the parties intended to be bound.[50] In the construction of a bill of lading, as in construing other instruments, the obvious and plain meaning should be accepted rather than the obscure and hidden.[51] A bill of lading is a contract of great importance in commerce, and is to be construed according to its terms, the subject matter, the nature of the business to which it relates, and the usages under which such business is generally conducted.[52]

Evidence of the usage and custom of trade is admissible in mercantile contracts to prove that the words in which they are expressed in a particular trade to which the contract refers are used in a particular sense, and different from the sense that they ordinarily import, and in certain cases for the purpose of annexing incidents to the contract in matters upon which the contract is silent; but it is never admitted to make a contract or to add a new element to the terms of the contract previously made by the parties.[53] Usage may be admitted to explain what is ambiguous, but not to vary a contract which is plain. It can not control or vary the positive stipulations of the bill of lading.[54]

Dual Character as Contract and as Receipt.—As to dual character as a contract and as a receipt of bills of lading, see ante, "Dual Character as Contract and as Receipt," §§ 466-479.

As Contract Generally.—A bill of lading, when signed by the carrier, and delivered to and accepted by the shipper without objection, in the absence of fraud, constitutes the contract of carriage, and binds the shipper, though not signed by him.[55]

Substitution of Bill of Lading for Original Contract.—The bill of lading can not be said to have taken the place of the original contract of affreightment, where the bill as it is made out was signed and accepted by the shipper, under protest, in order to obtain this usual document of title.[56]

49. Validity of particular stipulations.—Insurance Co. v. North German Lloyd Co., 106 Fed. 973, affirmed in 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1.

50. Construction governed by law and circumstances.—Lind v. United States, 44 Ct. Cl. 558.

In construing and giving effect to the provisions of a bill of lading, the conditions and circumstances which the evidence proves were known to the parties and contemplated by them in making it are to be taken into consideration. Pacific Coast Co. v. Yukon Independent Transp. Co., 155 Fed. 29, 83 C. C. A. 625. Generally as to construction, operation and effect of bills of lading, see ante, "Construction, Operation and Effect," §§ 455-513.

51. Obvious meaning accepted.—A provision in a bill of lading for a cargo of coal to be delivered at Portland, Me., which required the consignee "to tow vessel in and out of Back Bay free," is not a contract to pay for the towage merely, but to provide the same. Winslow v. Thompson, 134 Fed. 546, 67 C. C. A. 470, affirming decree, 130 Fed. 1001; S. C., 128 Fed. 73. See ante, "General Rules of Construction," § 455.

52. Rules of construction.—Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591.

53. Evidence of usage or custom.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

54. To explain ambiguous.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Belfast, 40 Ala. 184, 88 Am. Dec. 761, and authorities there cited; Benson v. Gray, 154 Mass. 391, 28 N. E. 275, 13 L. R. A. 262.

55. As contract generally.—The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 681, decree affirmed in 90 Fed. 114, 32 C. C. A. 534. As to operation and effect of bills of lading as contract for carriage, see ante, "As Contract of Carriage," §§ 480-481.

56. Substitution of bill for contract of affreightment.—See ante, "Issuance and Acceptance," § 4268.

Where, after a vessel had sailed with part only of the cargo, the shipper signed, under a verbal protest, a bill of lading covering the entire quantity, as the only means of obtaining any bill of lading, such bill did not supersede the original contract, and the shipper is entitled to recover back the freight paid on the cargo

Effect on Charter Party.—When the charterer of a vessel is the shipper of a cargo, a bill of lading given by the master operates merely as a receipt for the goods and a document of title, and never, as between the shipowner and charterer, affects the terms of the charter party.[57]

As Evidence of Contract.—In the absence of a charter party, the bills of lading delivered to the shipper are taken as the best evidence of the contract of carriage.[58]

Operation as Evidence of Receipt and Acceptance of Goods.—See ante, "As Evidence of Fact and Time of Receipt and Acceptance of Shipment," §§ 482-483.

Evidence of Receipt on Board.—A bill of lading issued by the master of a ship is prima facie evidence of, and, in the absence of proof to the contrary, establishes, the receipt on board of the goods therein described.[59]

Destination or Place of Delivery.—See ante, "Destination or Place of Delivery," § 484.

Person to Whom Delivery Authorized.—If the document specifies that the merchandise is to be delivered at the place of destination to a consignee named, it will be the duty of the carrier to deliver to the person named as consignee.[60]

Delivery to Holder.—If the document specifies that delivery is to be made to the holder, a mere delivery of the bill of lading will be effective to transfer the title, and the carrier will be bound to require production of the bill of lading, and to deliver the merchandise to the holder, and to no one else.[61]

Operation of Bill of Lading as Vesting Property in Consignee.—As to the operation and effect of bills of lading as vesting the property in the consignee, see ante, "Effect as Vesting Property in Consignee," §§ 499-510. If the bill of lading contain the names of the consignor, and specifies that the property is to be delivered to order, and is sent forward attached to a draft, the carrier will not be authorized to deliver the property, if the drawee refuses to accept the draft.[62] Where, in receiving and transporting, the carrier is the agent of the consignor, and the only contract for which the ship becomes liable is the contract contained in the bill of lading, to which the consignee is not a party, the consignee does not have any right to enforce it, or to collect damages for its violation, where the document does not come into possession. If the contract by the consignor for sale and delivery of the goods shipped is violated, the remedy of the purchaser is in a personal action for damages against the vendor.[63] not taken, as well as damages resulting from the failure to take it. Decree, The Citta Di Palermo, 153 Fed. 378, affirmed in Equi Valley Marble Co. v. Becker, 165 Fed. 437, 91 C. C. A. 592.

57. Effect on charter party.—Decree, 140 Fed. 123, reversed in The Fri, 154 Fed. 333, 83 C. C. A. 205.

58. As evidence of contract.—The Eva D. Rose, 151 Fed. 704, decree modified on rehearing, 153 Fed. 912.

59. Evidence of receipt on board.—Decree, 124 Fed. 975, affirmed in The Titania, 131 Fed. 229, 65 C. C. A. 215.

60. Person to whom delivery authorized.—The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484.

Persons to whom delivery authorized.—See ante, "Persons to Whom Delivery Authorized," §§ 485-487.

61. Delivery to holder.—The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484.

62. Effect as vesting property in consignee.—The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484; Grove v. Brien (U. S.), 8 How. 429, 12 L. Ed. 1142, and note; National Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 92, 23 L. Ed. 208.

63. The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484.

Where, by a contract for the sale of lumber to be delivered at a distant port, a part of the price was to be paid on delivery, and on shipment of the lumber a bill of lading was issued, by the terms of which delivery was to be made to the consignor or order, and such bill was forwarded, with a draft for the price attached, which was not paid by the purchaser, and the lumber was therefore not delivered to him, he never became the owner of the consignment, so as to sustain any contract relation with the carrier which would support a suit in rem against the vessel for a breach of the contract of affreightment contained in the bill of lading. The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484.

Effect as Warranty of Quality, Quantity, Condition, etc.—In general, the interior condition of goods, packed as usual, and necessarily so, for shipping, can not be known to the shipmaster receiving them for carriage, and therefore the words "in good order and condition" must be limited to their apparently good order and external condition. It is not unusual to insert in the bill of lading "contents unknown," or some saving clause of like effect.[64]

Effect of Warrant of Quantity—In General.—Where a master, who is also owner of a vessel, gives a shipper a bill of lading, reciting receipt of a certain amount of iron, and agreement to deliver it to the consignees, he is liable for damages to the consignees, who, relying on the correctness of the recital, pay the shipper for more iron than was actually on board.[65]

Operation as Evidence of Quantity, Quality, etc.—As to operation of bill of lading as evidence of quantity, quality, conditions, etc., see ante, "As Evidence of Quantity, Quality or Condition of Goods," §§ 492-494. A bill of lading for a specified number of tons of scrap iron, "marked and numbered as per margin," and concluding "weight unknown to" the master, binds the shipowner to deliver only so much as is actually shipped.[66] The ambiguity, if there be any, is a patent one, and must be removed by taking every clause and word in

64. Effect as warranty of quality, condition, etc.—Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591. As to operation and effect of bill of lading as warranty, quantity, etc., see ante, "Effect as Warranty or Quantity, etc.," §§ 488-491.

But in Barrett v. Rogers, 7 Mass. 297, 5 Am. Dec. 45, the court held that such must be the reasonable construction, where no such words were used, and therefore held that the receipt and undertaking expressed in a bill of lading are prima facie evidence of the quantity, quality and condition of goods received for carriage, but are not conclusive. See, also, Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Haddow v. Perry (Eng.), 3 Taunt. 303; Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591.

65. Effect as warrant of quantity.—Relyea v. New Haven Rolling-Mill Co., 42 Conn. 579, 75 Fed. 420.

66. As evidence of quantity or weight.—Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591. See Sears v. Wingate (Mass.), 3 Allen 108; Hall v. Mayo (Mass.), 7 Allen 455.

In Law v. Botsford, 26 Fed. 651, the vessel took on board at Port Huron a cargo of wheat for Buffalo, and the measurement at the port of delivery was less than that called for by the bills of lading. The court said: "It can not be too well understood that a vessel has discharged her entire duty when she has delivered all she has received. This is not only the dictate of common sense, but is also the law, as laid down in Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591, and Kelley v. Bowker (Mass.), 11 Gray 428, 71 Am. Dec. 725. So that, while the fact that the vessel did not tally as much at Buffalo as Port Huron cast upon the master the burden of proving that she delivered all that she received, he fully satisfied this requirement, and hence, I think, is exonerated from liability in that particular. In this view, it is not necessary for me to solve the question which in its nature is insoluble, viz, whether the cargo was correctly weighed at Port Huron or at Buffalo. It is impossible for us to tell at this time where the mistake occurred. There was a mistake in measuring this cargo, either inboard or outboard. If the mistake occurred at Buffalo, then the vessel is entitled to her freight upon the amount of the bill of lading. If the mistake occurred at Port Huron, she is entitled to her freight upon the Buffalo weight." Waydell v. Adams, 46 N. Y. S. 240.

Rhodes v. Newhall, 126 N. Y. 574, 27 N. E. 947, 22 Am. St. Rep. 859, was an action against the consignee of a cargo of wheat, under the bills of lading providing: "All deficiency in cargo to be paid by the carrier and deducted from the freight, and any excess in the cargo to be paid for to the carrier by the consignee." The court, without questioning the rule laid down in Ellis v. Willard, 9 N. Y. 529, Seld. Notes 242; Abbe v. Eaton, 51 N. Y. 410; Meyer v. Peck, 28 N. Y. 590; and similar cases—that "an ordinary bill of lading is not conclusive as between the original parties, either as to the shipment of the goods or the quantity," and that, "as to those matters, it operates merely as a receipt, and is open to explanation on the trial by parol evidence"—said: "This case is distinguishable in its facts from those considered in the cases referred to. Here the parties have provided by express language for the particular contingency under this contract. * * * The provisions fixing the quantity of grain received, and providing a mode by which any deficiency or excess in quantity shall be dealt with, do not seem susceptible of any other effect than to prescribe a rule by which the

the contract, as they apply to the subject matter; they are to be construed together, and reconciled as far as possible, so as to extract from them the true meaning and intent of the parties.[67] Bills of lading, which, although containing formal recitals of the weight of a commodity received, also contain a clause, "Weight, measure and contents unknown," are not conclusive against the vessel as to the exact weight; and the uncontradicted testimony of the master and mate that the commodity was not weighed when taken on board, and that all that was actually received was delivered, is sufficient to exonerate the ship from liability for a prima facie shortage.[68]

In Actions for Freight.—The estimated weight of a cargo stated in bills of lading prepared by the shipper and signed by the master constitutes an agreement binding on the parties for the purpose of computing freight, unless impeached by proof of a difference in the actual weight.[69] In an action by the charterers of a vessel against the shippers of the cargo for freight, a bill of lading, given by the charterers to parties from whom the shippers purchased the cargo, and who placed it on board, is not conclusive as to the amount of goods carried.[70]

Freight—Refunding Unearned Freight.—Bills of lading in the ordinary form, which show prepayment of the freight, in connection with the established rules of law, constitute a completed contract, binding the carrier to refund the freight, if not earned; and, in the absence of fraud or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to change the conditions of such contract.[71]

Operative as Evidence or Warranty of Title or Ownership.—See ante, "As Evidence or Warranty of Title or Ownership," §§ 496-498.

Effect of Understating Quantity.—See ante, "Effect of Understating Quantity," § 495.

Stipulations as to Value.—As to stipulations and bills of lading as to value, see ante, "Stipulations as to Value," § 511.

Freight and Demurrage.—See ante, "Freight and Demurrage," § 512.

Operation as Evidence of Carrier's Liability as Warehouseman.—As to operation and effect of bills of lading for evidence of liability of carriers as warehousemen, see ante, "As Evidence of Caarrier's Liability as Warehouseman," § 513.

§ 4271. Transfer.—Negotiability.—As to negotiability of bills of lading, see ante, "Negotiability," §§ 514-518.

Transferability and Assignability.—See ante, "Transferability and Assignability," § 519.

Mode of Transfer.—As to the mode of transferring bills of lading, see ante, "Mode of Transfer," §§ 520-536.

Person Who May Make Transfer.—As to who may transfer bills of lading, see ante, "Persons Who May Make Transfer," §§ 537-539.

Consideration.—See ante, "Consideration," § 540.

consignee can determine the amount of freight and charges payable by him to the carrier." Waydell v. Adams, 46 N. Y. S. 240.

67. Shepherd v. Naylor (Mass.), 5 Gray 591.

68. Conflicting recitals.—The Seefahrer, 133 Fed. 793.

69. Statements as to weight—Computing freight.—Symons v. 10,466 Barrels of Cement, 195 Fed. 1017.

70. Conclusiveness in action for freight.—Waydell v. Adams, 46 N. Y. S. 240. See ante, "In General," § 493.

When the cargo of a vessel has been put on board by persons from whom the shippers have purchased it, and who are accordingly, for this purpose, the shipper's agents, and the charterers of the vessels have given a bill of lading for a certain quantity of merchandise, but specially stamped on its face, "Weights and measurement unknown," such charterers are not estopped from disputing the statement of the bill of lading as to the amount of merchandise, though the shippers have settled with the vendors thereof on the basis of the quantity so stated. Waydell v. Adams, 46 N. Y. S. 240.

71. Freight — Refunding unearned freight.—De Sola v. Pomares, 119 Fed. 373.

Effect of Transfer.—As to operation and effect of transfer of bills of lading, see ante, "Effect of Transfer," §§ 541-576.

Effect of Statutes.—The Pennsylvania Act of Septemer 24, 1866, declaring bills of lading negotiable, is not limited merely to bills representing goods in transit to warehousemen or persons in like business.[72] But aside altogether from statute, bills of lading may be so far negotiable that, by the indorsement thereof by the consignees, the title to the goods is transferable to a bona fide purchaser or pledgee for value.[73] By the well-settled principles of commercial law, the consignee is thus constituted the authorized agent of the owner, whoever he may be, to receive the goods; and by his indorsement of the bill of lading to a bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration, without notice of any adverse interest, the latter becomes, as against all the world, the owner of the goods. This is the result of the principle that bills of lading are transferable by indorsement, and thus may pass the property. It matters not whether the consignee in such case be the buyer of the goods, or the factor or agent of the owner. His transfer in such a case is equally capable of divesting the property of the owner, and vesting it in the indorsee of the bill of lading.[74] The principle that, where one of two persons equally innocent of actual fraud must suffer from the tortious act of a third, he who gave the wrongdoer the means of perpetrating the wrong must bear the consequences of the act, has often been enforced by the courts against a party who, by documentary evidence of title or otherwise, has clothed his agent or any other person with the apparant absolute ownership of personal property, and thus enable him to deal with it as if he were the owner.[75]

Breach, Mortgage or Collateral Security.—See ante, "Pledge, Mortgage or Collateral Security," § 577.

Purchase or Discount of Draft with Bill of Lading Attached.—As to purchasing or discounting drafts with bill of lading attached, see ante, "Purchase or Discount of Draft with Bill of Lading Attached," §§ 578-587.

Deposit of Draft with Bill of Lading Attached for Collection.—As to depositing draft with bill of lading attached for collection, see ante, "Deposit of Draft with Bill of Lading Attached for Collection," § 588.

Duplicate and Triplicate Bills.—As to duplicate and triplicate bills of lading, see ante, "Duplicate and Triplicate Bills," § 589.

§ 4272. Effect on Connecting Carrier.—As to operation and effect, a bill of lading as binding intermediate and terminal carriers, see ante, "Effect as Binding Intermediate and Terminal Carrier," § 590.

72. Effect of statutes.—Munroe v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 75 Fed. 545. See Shaw v. Railroad Co., 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. Ed. 892.

73. Munroe v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 75 Fed. 545.

Plaintiffs, in Paris, advanced money upon goods in transit to this country, taking a trust receipt, whereby the consignees agreed to hold the merchandise on storage as plaintiffs' property until the loan was repaid or otherwise provided for. Plaintiffs thereafter voluntarily put the bills of lading, indorsed in blank, into the hands of persons who obtained advances on them from defendants, in Philadelphia, who were ignorant of plaintiffs' claim. Held that, independently of statute, the bill of lading were so far negotiable that defendants were entitled to hold the goods as against the claim of plaintiffs. Munroe v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 75 Fed. 545, writ of error dismissed by stipulation 79 Fed. 999, 24 C. C. A. 685.

74. Munroe v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 75 Fed. 545.

75. Munroe v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 75 Fed. 545; Calais Steamboat Co. v. Scudder (U. S.), 2 Black 372, 17 L. Ed. 282; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. 80; Robertson v. Hay, 91 Pa. 242; Miller v. Browarsky, 130 Pa. 372, 18 Atl. 643.

In the case of Pollard v. Reardon, 13 C. C. A. 171, 65 Fed. 848, it was said by Judge Putman: "There is every reason found in the law of equitable estoppel and in sound public policy for holding and no injustice is involved in holding, that, if one of two must suffer, it should be he who voluntarily puts out of his hands an assignable bill of lading, rather than he who innocently advances value thereon."

§ 4273. Modification or Rescission.—As to modifying or rescinding bills of lading, see ante, "Modification or Rescission," § 591.

§ 4274. Surrender, Discharge or Release.—As to surrendering, discharging or releasing bills of lading, see ante, "Surrender, Discharge or Release," § 592.

§ 4275. Actions on Bills of Lading.—As to actions to enforce rights arising under bills of lading, see ante, "Actions," §§ 593-602.

§§ 4276-4337. Transportation and Delivery—§§ 4276-4277. General Consideration—§ 4276. Title, Custody and Control of Goods.—Title and Rights of Consignor, Consignee or Third Person—Right to Maintain Action against Carrier.—See ante, "Title, Custody and Control of Goods," chapter 9; post, "In General," § 4313.

Title and Rights of Carrier—Right to Maintain Action Respecting Property Transported.—See ante, "Title, Custody and Control of Goods," chapter 9; post, "By Carrier," § 4312.

§ 4277. Liability as Warehouseman.[76]—In the case of a carrier by water, where the time of the arrival of the goods is uncertain the ship remains liable as a carrier until the consignee has had a reasonable time after notice to remove the goods.[77] A steamship company, which, on the arrival of its vessel, placed the cargo of a shipper in a warehouse on the wharf, which it had the right to use, and from there made delivery to the shipper, the goods not having been stored for the account and risk of the shipper, remained responsible therefor until delivery and is liable for a shortage due to some of the goods having been stolen from the warehouse.[78] Where freight had been landed on the wharf, and the consignees were notified of its arrival, paid the freight, and removed part of the goods, the carrier's responsibility was terminated, and any obligation that remained with reference to goods not removed was that of a warehouseman or wharfinger.[79] And where a vessel is detained, after the expiration of time for unloading, by the act of the consignee, she is liable as a warehouseman only.[80] Where, by the provision of a bill of lading, merchandise is to be delivered "from the ship's tackles where the ship's responsibility shall cease," her liability, after the goods are discharged, is that of a bailee, charged with the duty to take ordinary care of the property for a reasonable length of time, and not to abandon it, or negligently expose it to injury.[81] Where a bill of lading provided that, on arriving at destination, the master should hold the cargo for a specified number of days or less and to receive therefor a specified sum, it was held that the carrier's liability as a carrier ceased on the arrival of the boat with its cargo in good order and ready for delivery on notice of arrival to the consignee and his election not to remove the cargo.[82]

76. Liability as warehouseman.—See ante, "Carrier as Warehouseman," Chapter, 13; post, "Negligence in Discharging or in Caring for Goods after Discharge," § 4306.

77. Reasonable time after notice.—See ante, "Express Companies and General Carriers by Water," § 1093.

Where a carrier did not give proper notice to the consignee to appear and take charge of the freight, and allow reasonable time thereafter for him to do so, but unloaded the freight upon a pier, which collapsed, so as to injure the goods, the carrier was liable, irrespective of the question whether it was guilty of negligence in failing to exercise reasonable care in selecting a safe place to unload. Rosenstein v. Vogemann, 184 N. Y. 325, 77 N. E. 625, affirming 92 N. Y. S. 86, 102 App. Div. 39.

78. Evans v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., 163 Fed. 405.

79. Payment of freight and removal of part of goods.—Stone v. Clyde Steamship Co., 139 N. C. 193, 51 S. E. 894.

80. Vessel detained by consignee.—The M. C. Currie, 132 Fed. 125.

81. Smith v. Britain Steamship Co., 123 Fed. 176.

82. Putnam v. Furnam, 71 N. Y. 590.

§§ 4278-4288. Duties and Liabilities as to Transportation and Delivery—§ 4278. In General.—See ante, "Duties as to Transportation in General," § 812.

Duty to Carry in Vessel Specified in Contract.—The contract of affreightment obliges the carrier, in the absence of a legal excuse, to carry the freight to the destined port in the very vessel stipulated in the bill of lading;[83] and it is no defense, in an action for breach of the contract, that the shipowners offered to carry the goods on another vessel at no additional risk or cost.[84]

§ 4279. Loading Goods.—Time for Loading.—Where a charter party fixes no time for the loading by the shipper to begin or end, the law will presume that a reasonable time under all the circumstances known to the parties or presumed to have been within their contemplation was intended, and a provision for such reasonable time will be considered as agreed to by the parties.[85]

Consignment of Vessel to Third Person for Loading.—In the absence of some agreement to the contrary between owner and charterer or some evidence showing a contrary intent, the party who is to load the vessel will be deemed the agent of the charterer, and, when the charterer consigns the vessel to another for loading, it makes itself responsible for the acts or omissions of such consignee the same as though it had directed the vessel consigned to itself at the same place.[86]

Liability for Overestimating Amount Loaded.—Vessel owners can not be held liable to a shipper for the amount of an overpayment made by him to miners for a cargo of stone furnished him for loading the vessel because the master overestimated the amount loaded and the shipper accepted his estimate as the basis for making such payment, where it does not appear that the master acted fraudulently.[87]

§§ 4280-4281. Deviation and Delay—§ 4280. Deviation.—It is the duty of the owner of a vessel receiving a cargo for transportation to proceed without unnecessary deviation in the course, agreed upon in the contract,[88] or if none be designated, in the customary and usual route to the port of delivery.[89] In every contract of affreightment, unless otherwise expressly provided, the carrier's undertaking is that he will diligently carry the goods on the agreed voyage without any unnecessary deviation.[90] So, if a carrier would secure the right to deviate from the usual course he should stipulate for it in the bill of lading.[91] The words "with liberty * * * to make deviation," in a bill of lading, give the carrier the right to make only such departures from the voyage as are necessary and reasonable.[92] Where the vessel is destined for several ports and places, the master should proceed to them in the order in which

83. Duty to carry in vessel specified in contract.—Harrison v. Steward, Fed. Cas. No. 6,145, Taney 485; Cox v. Foscue, 37 Ala. 505, 79 Am. Dec. 69; Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970. See ante, "Duties as to Transportation in General," § 812; post, "Transshipping and Forwarding," § 4288.

84. Harrison v. Steward, Fed. Cas. No. 6,145, Taney 485.

85. Time for loading.—Peck v. United States, 152 Fed. 524.

86. Consignment of vessel to third person for unloading.—Peck v. United States, 152 Fed. 524.

87. Overestimating amount loaded.—Barber v. Vlasto, 104 Fed. 101.

88. Deviation—Duty to proceed upon agreed course.—The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929.

Receipt for goods designating route.—A receipt for goods "for Baltimore, via Chesapeake & Delaware Canal," is a contract to carry the goods through that canal to Baltimore. Hand v. Baynes (Pa.), 4 Whart. 204, 33 Am. Dec. 54.

89. Customary and usual route.—Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472; The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929; Powers v. Davenport (Ind.), 7 Blackf. 497, 43 Am. Dec. 100.

90. Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber, etc., Co., 167 Fed. 228.

91. Lawrence v. McGregor (O.), Wright 193.

92. Swift & Co. v. Furness, etc., Co., 87 Fed. 345.

they are usually visited, or that designed by the contract, or, in certain cases, by the advertisement relating to the particular voyage.[93]

What Constitutes Deviation.—"Deviation" is defined, generally speaking, to be a voluntary departure without necessity or reasonable cause from the regular and usual course of the voyage.[94] It means a departure from the usual course of the voyage, or from the usual manner of prosecuting it.[95] Whether there has been a deviation is, upon conceded facts, a question for the court.[96] For a vessel after arriving at the port of delivery to return to the port of shipment, and thence make a second voyage to the port of delivery, is not a deviation.[97] An alteration of a voyage requiring the vessel to proceed by sea instead of through a canal,[98] the placing of a vessel in dry dock after she had received cargo on board for the voyage, for the purpose of painting her bottom when that was not a maritime necessity,[99] or for a steamer to take in tow a four-masted schooner belonging to the same owners,[1] constitutes a deviation. Where it appeared that the usual route of vessels from between two points was through Long Island Sound in summer and winter, that in a certain winter the navigation of the sound was obstructed by ice for a longer period than usual, and that in February, during that period, a vessel departed from such usual route, and performed her voyage in the open sea, on the south side of Long Island, it was held, that this was a deviation, without reasonable necessity.[2] Where goods were consigned from Savannah to a port of Spain, under bill of lading reciting that the vessel was bound for that port, and the vessel went first, without necessity or reasonable cause, to a port in Italy not in the usual course of vessels bound from Savannah to the Spanish port, thus subjecting the goods, when delivered at that port, to an extra duty under the law of Spain, this was such a deviation as would authorize the consignors to recover in an action against the owner of the ship for loss thus occasioned.[3]

93. Vessel destined for several ports.—Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

94. What constitutes deviation.—Pacific Coast Co. v. Yukon Independent Transp. Co., 83 C. C. A. 625, 155 Fed. 29; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. Ed. 568, 11 S. Ct. 1.

95. Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber, etc., Co., 167 Fed. 228.

96. Question for court.—Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410, 31 Am. Dec. 745.

97. Pacific Coast Co. v. Yukon Independent Transp. Co., 83 C. C. A. 625, 155 Fed. 29.

Breach of contract of affreightment—Provision for deviation.—Libelant contracted with respondent for the carriage of goods from Seattle to St. Michaels, Alaska. It was fully understood that libelant intended to market the goods along the Yukon river as soon as the ice went out, and that it had a vessel awaiting at St. Michaels for the purpose. It was agreed that the goods should be taken on the first trip of respondent's vessel north, and should be delivered as soon as the ice was out of the harbor at St. Michaels, which was known to be usually about the 1st of July. Libelant refused to ship without such agreement. The bills of lading, which were issued after the cargo was on board, provided that in case the vessel should be prevented by stress of weather or otherwise from entering the port of delivery, the carrier might convey the property to the nearest or other port, and thence return it to the port of delivery by the same or other vessel, subject to the contract for the original voyage and at the risk of the owner. The vessel reached St. Michaels June 20th, and, finding the harbor filled with ice, returned to Nome, and there tendered delivery at ship's tackle, which being refused she returned to Seattle, and delivered the goods at St. Michaels on her next trip on July 19th. The ice went out of the harbor about July 1st. Held, that the vessel was bound by the contract of affreightment to wait until the ice went out or to transship the goods at Nome to be delivered at St. Michaels as soon as the harbor was free, at her own expense, and that she was liable for the damages caused by her breach of contract. Pacific Coast Co. v. Yukon Independent Transp. Co., 155 Fed. 29, 83 C. C. A. 625.

98. Going by sea instead of canal.—Hand v. Baynes (Pa.), 4 Whart. 204, 33 Am. Dec. 54.

99. Placing vessel in dry dock.—The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929.

1. Taking vessel in tow.—Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber, etc., Co., 167 Fed. 228.

2. Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410, 31 Am. Dec. 745.

3. Robinson v. Holst, 96 Ga. 19, 23 S. E. 76.

Excuses for Deviation.—A deviation from the direct route may be excusable if rendered necessary to execute repairs for the preservation of the ship, or the prosecution of the voyage, or to avoid a storm, or an enemy, or pirates, for the purpose of obtaining necessary supplies, or for the purpose of assisting another vessel in distress.[4] But an ordinary or temporary obstruction of the prescribed route will not justify a deviation therefrom.[5]

Deviation Usual or Customary.—See ante, "Necessity and Justification," § 833.

Delay as Deviation.—Delay of a vessel, even upon the route prescribed by a policy or bill of lading, may amount to deviation.[6]

§ 4281. Delay.[7]—It is the duty of the carrier by water receiving a cargo for transportation, in the absence of any stipulation as to the period of sailing, to commence the voyage within a reasonable time, without delay, and as soon as the wind, weather, and tide will permit,[8] proceed without unnecessary delay,[9] and transport the goods within a reasonable time to the point of destination.[10] And where shipowners fail to deliver cargo within the time reasonably necessary to make the voyage, and the delay is not due to stress of weather or any of the causes for which they do not assume liability, they are liable to the shipper for losses resulting to him from such delay, although no time for delivery was fixed by the bill of lading.[11] A steamship line is liable for damages suffered by the owner of goods through a fall in price while delivery was delayed, owing to a failure of the company to forward the goods on the vessel to which they were constructively delivered and which issued bills of lading.[12]

Excuses for Delay.—The carrier is not responsible for delay in the voyage on account of boisterous weather or adverse winds, low tides, or the like, un-

4. Excuses for deviation. — Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

5. Ordinary or temporary obstruction. —Hand v. Baynes (Pa.), 4 Whart. 204, 33 Am. Dec. 54.

6. Delay as deviation.—The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472.

Delay not constituting deviation.—Under bills of lading which recited that the vessel was bound for New York, "but with liberty to the steamer either before or after proceeding towards that port to proceed to and stay at any port or places whatsoever, although in a contrary direction to or out of or beyond the route to the said port of discharge once or oftener in any order, backwards or forwards for loading or discharging cargo or passengers or for any purpose whatsoever," the stopping of the vessel at the next port of call for 13 days awaiting cargo of which she obtained but a small part did not constitute a deviation. The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472.

7. Delay in transportation or delivery. —See ante, "Delay in Transportation or Delivery," Chapter 11.

8. Time of sailing.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41. See Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Peale, 135 Fed. 606.

9. The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929.

10. Transportation to destination within reasonable time.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Commander-in-Chief (U. S.), 1 Wall. 43, 17 L. Ed. 609; The Gordon Campbell, 141 Fed. 435.

11. Where no time agreed upon.—The Prussia, 100 Fed. 484.

Proper estimate of delay.—On a libel for damages for unreasonable delay in transporting horses to Alaska during the Klondike rush of 1898, the evidence showed that a horse was worth $20 a day during the period of delay. It further showed that the horses were put on board the vessel on February 22d, that the vessel did not sail until February 24th, that it stopped two days on the way, that it arrived at its destination on March 6th, that the horses were not discharged until March 9th, and that, owing to a further delay in unloading their equipment, they were not available for service until March 14th. This delay was caused by using a lighter which was used, notwithstanding the payment of wharfage by the shipper in advance in order that there should be no such delay. Held, that an estimate of damages on the basis of 10 days' delay was reasonable, and an award of damages on such basis was not excessive. La Conner, etc., Transp. Co. v. Widmer, 136 Fed. 177, 69 C. C. A. 193.

12. Failure to forward goods on vessel to which they were delivered.—The Gutenfels, 166 Fed. 989, decree affirmed in 170 Fed. 937.

less it could be avoided by the use of proper precautionary measures.[13] The carrier is liable for failure to promptly deliver a cargo unless prevented by stress of weather, endangering the safety of the cargo, or preventing further progress. Exposure to inclement weather, or fear of encountering ice or cold, constitutes no excuse.[14] While it may be the duty of a common carrier receiving freight for transportation by rail and beyond the seas ordinarily to provide for the clearance of the vessel in which the goods are to be shipped, the shipper can not complain of failure to obtain such clearance when it is prevented by the nature of the shipment.[15]

Delay in discharging through default of the vessel does not entitle the charterer or consignee to damages, in the absence of a contract for delivery by a particular day, but simply extends the time within which the discharge may be made without liability of the charterer or consignee for demurrage.[16] Of course, if a vessel having agreed to load or discharge a cargo on a certain day, fails to do so, the usual consequences of a breach of contract may be recovered.[17]

Waiver of Right to Damages.—Where the owner of a cargo has means of information that the ship has become unfit for navigation, and of the opportunities for repairs, and of the probable delay, he may be estopped by his acts or acquiescence from claiming damages to the market value of the goods arising from such delay.[18] Where the carrier after agreeing to furnish a vessel to transport a cargo of lumber, but without any definite contract as to time, was delayed in procuring a vessel, but the owner, having failed to secure one elsewhere, accepted the carrier's when tendered, the carrier can not be held liable for expenses incurred in consequence of the delay.[19]

Failure to Show Contract of Carriage.—Where it is not shown that a vessel undertook the carriage of goods, an action in rem will not lie against her for delay in their transportation caused by being sent on another vessel.[20] A com-

13. Excuses for delay.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985.

14. Holland v. 725 Tons of Coal, 36 Fed. 784; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Peale, 135 Fed. 606.

A barge laden with coal started on a voyage from Philadelphia to Boston in tow of a powerful steamship at a time when there was floating ice in the Delaware river. Two or three miles down the river, heavier ice was encountered; and in the first, unsuccessful, attempt of the steamship to force her way through, the barge was injured, making it necessary for her to stop for repairs. The steamship then successfully passed through the ice, and proceeded alone. Held, under the evidence, that the condition of the river was not such as to render the barge negligent in starting, in view of the size and strength of the vessels; it being her duty to make every reasonable effort to deliver the cargo promptly. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Peale, 135 Fed. 606.

15. Nature of shipment.—Farmers,' etc., Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 112 Fed. 829, reversed in 120 Fed. 873, 57 C. C. A. 533, which is affirmed in Northern Pac. R. Co. v. American Trading Co., 25 S. Ct. 84, 195 U. S. 439, 49 L. Ed. 269, on the ground that the carrier was negligent.

16. Delay in discharging.—Milburn v. Federal Sugar Refin. Co., 161 Fed. 717, reversing The Heathdene, 155 Fed. 368.

17. Milburn v. Federal Sugar Refin. Co., 161 Fed. 717, citing Petrie v. Heller, 35 Fed. 310.

18. Waiver of right to damages.—The Strathdon, 89 Fed. 374.

The ship was delayed necessarily for six months for repairs, during which time the cargo owners and underwriters, to whom abandonment was made, although fully apprised of the condition of the ship, made no demand for the transshipment and forwarding of the sound portion of the cargo, and the cargo owners apparently acquiesced in the delivery of the goods by the ship, while the underwriters simply stated that they should hold the ship responsible for the delay, but declined all propositions of the carrier for expediting the delivery. Held, that the cargo owners, or their successors in title, were not entitled to recover damages for decline in the market value of such cargo on account of the alleged unreasonable delay in delivery. The Strathdon, 89 Fed. 374.

19. Murray v. Jump Co., 148 Fed. 123.

20. Failure to show contract of carriage.—The agent at Barcelona of the owners of the B. contracted to carry goods from there to New York via Marseilles. The bill of lading provided for the carriage of the goods by the B., or, at the carrier's plaint alleging that after a breach by defendant of a contract to transport plaintiff's property on defendant's vessel "it was then and there agreed" that defendant would transport the property on the same terms on a following vessel, not alleged to have been owned or controlled by defendant, and that such vessel would reach the port of destination "at substantially the same time" as defendant's; but that by reason of delays it did not arrive until several days later than defendant's vessel whereby plaintiff was damaged, does not state a cause of action, there being no contract nor consideration alleged which would render defendant responsible for the delay complained of.[21]

§§ 4232-4283. Failure or Refusal to Deliver—§ 4282. In General.—The duty of the carrier is not merely to safely carry the goods intrusted to it, but also to deliver them, or do what is equivalent thereto.[22] Where a vessel stranded on a voyage near her port of delivery, and on being released some days later started back with the intention of delivering the cargo back to the consignors, in violation of the contract of carriage, the consignees were entitled to sue the vessel in admiralty to recover the cargo and damages for its nondelivery.[23]

Excuse for Nondelivery in General.[24]—Though generally a bailee may not set up title in a third party in an action by the bailor, in an action against a master of a vessel for failing to deliver goods, he may show that the goods belong to a third party who has forbidden delivery.[25] And a shipper can not demand the delivery of his goods, if the landing of them would expose the vessel to seizure.[26] Where a suit against a common carrier by water for nondelivery of certain goods was not brought until two years after the defendant had received them, it was no defense that the river on which the goods were to be carried was for four months after they were received too low for the navigation of defendant's boat.[27]

Requiring Proof of Right to Goods.—See ante, "Requiring Proof of Right to Goods," § 839.

Detention for Debt or Charges.—See ante, "Detention for Debt or Charges," § 841. A carrier, refusing to deliver freight without payment of demurrage not due, is liable for a conversion.[28]

§ 4283. Short Delivery.—Where a certain number of cases of goods are laden on board of a vessel in good order, they are thereafter until delivery, at the ship's risk with respect to contents, and she is liable for a deficiency, in the absence of a valid exception in the bill of lading.[29] But the carrier is not liable for the shrinkage of the cargo owing to the inherent nature and quality of the goods.[30] The receipt of a specified number of packages by the master makes option, by another ship. It recited the name of the captain of the B., but the signature thereto was illegible, and bore no satisfactory resemblance to his name. The B. was not at Barcelona at that time nor thereafter. The goods were carried by another vessel, which sailed from Marseilles 19 days after the B. sailed from that port. Held, that a libel in rem for damages from the delay would not lie against the B., even in favor of a bona fide purchaser of the bill of lading, as there was nothing on its face to indicate, to one exercising care, that it was signed by her captain. The Britannia, 87 Fed. 495.

21. Johanson v. Sondheim, 145 Fed. 620, 76 C. C. A. 310.

22. Liability for failure or refusal to deliver.—See ante, "Duty and Necessity of Delivery," § 835; "Liability for Failure or Refusal to Deliver," §§ 836-841.

23. The Eva D. Rose, 153 Fed. 912, modifying decree, 151 Fed. 704.

24. Excuse for nondelivery in general.—See ante, "Excuse for Nondelivery in General," § 837.

25. That goods belonged to another.—Hayden v. Davis, 9 Cal. 573.

26. Vessel exposed to seizure.—Montegudo v. Silva, 1 La. 279.

27. Wallace v. Vigus (Ind.), 4 Blackf. 260.

28. Detention for demurrage not due.—Barker-Bond Lumber Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 131 N. Y. S. 624, 74 Misc. Rep. 63.

29. Short delivery.—The Seneca, 163 Fed. 591.

30. Shrinkage due to inherent nature of goods.—Janney v. Tudor Co., 3 Fed. 814. See Glasgow Steam Shipping Co. v. Tweedle Trading Co., 154 Fed. 84.

a prima facie case against the ship where a smaller number is delivered;[31] but the ship will be discharged if he is able to show that he delivered all that he actually received.[32] Under a bill of lading providing that it should, in the absence of fraud or obvious error, be conclusive evidence against the carrier of the quantity of cargo received, where the cargo was carefully tallied when received on board, but the ship delivered less than the stated quantity, there was no "obvious error" which will relieve her from liability for the shortage.[33] Where bills of lading for cargoes of phosphate specified the quantity, but contained the further statements, "Weight and quantity unknown," or "Weight unknown," the burden rests upon the shipowners to account for any discrepancy between the quantity delivered and that specified; but this is met by proof that the full quantity loaded was delivered, and this may be shown as against a consignee who has paid drafts drawn by the shippers for the full quantity specified, where the bills of lading were attached to the drafts.[34] The rule that a vessel is liable for cargo received, but not delivered, does not apply to a case where all the cargo received was carried to the port of delivery, but a portion of it had been so damaged on the voyage that it could not be identified.[35]

§ 4284. Notice of Arrival of Goods.—It is indispensable that a consignee should have notice of the arrival of the goods.[36] So the carrier is liable for the destruction of goods from nonexempted causes after delivery upon its wharf at destination, but before notice of arrival to the consignee.[37] It is held that if the

31. Effect of receipt.—Bolton Steam Shipping Co. v. Crossman, 206 Fed. 183; James v. Standard Oil Co., 189 Fed. 719, decree affirmed in 191 Fed. 827.

32. Liable only for goods actually received.—Dean v. King, 22 O. St. 118; Bolton Steam Shipping Co. v. Crossman, 206 Fed. 183. See Planters' Fertilizer Mfg. Co. v. Elder, 101 Fed. 1001, 42 C. C. A. 130; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; James v. Standard Oil Co., 189 Fed. 719, affirmed in 191 Fed. 827. See Glasgow Steam Shipping Co. v. Tweedle Trading Co., 154 Fed. 84.

The rule that the master of a vessel has no authority by virtue of his position, either actual or apparent, to sign a bill of lading for cargo not actually received on board, applies when there is only a deficiency in part through mistake, and the owner can not be held liable, either by the original consignee or an indorsee of the bill of lading, for such a shortage, where the quantity actually received is delivered. American Sugar Refin. Co. v. Maddock, 93 Fed. 980, 36 C. C. A. 42, affirming decree, 91 Fed. 166.

Evidence showing delivery of entire cargo.—A ship received 151,886 cases of petroleum to be transported to Japan. The consignee only acknowledged receipt of 151,661. The cargo was tallied out of the steamer by her second and third officers and three of her sailors, whose tally showed a shortage of 753 cases, which was manifestly incorrect. When the discrepancy was discovered, the master requested a recount from the consignee, which was declined, on the ground that it could not be conveniently had, and in the meantime part of the cargo was reshipped. It was shown that no part of the cargo was used on the steamer, and there was no opportunity for abstraction or loss during the voyage, and that all of the cargo received was delivered except six cases, purchased for the steamer's use. Held, in the absence of other evidence, such facts established a prima facie case of delivery of the entire cargo. McLaren v. Standard Oil Co., 124 Fed. 958.

33. The Sikh, 175 Fed. 869, decree affirmed in 184 Fed. 990, 107 C. C. A. 566.

34. Planters' Fertilizer Mfg. Co. v. Elder, 101 Fed. 1001, 42 C. C. A. 130.

35. The Good Hope, 190 Fed. 597.

36. Notice of arrival of goods.—Morgan v. Dibble, 29 Tex. 107, 94 Am. Dec. 264. See ante, "Carrier by Water," § 844; "Express Companies and General Carriers by Water," § 1093; "Necessity for Notice of Arrival of Goods," § 1095.

A bill of lading provided that the goods were to be taken from the ship by the consignee immediately upon their coming to hand in discharging the ship, and that the carrier's responsibility should cease package by package immediately upon the goods leaving the ship's deck or tackle, and that, if not taken from alongside by the consignee, the goods would be landed at his risk of fire, loss, or injury on the dock or in the warehouse or in craft. The bill contained no provision as to notice to the consignee of the arrival of the goods. Held, that it was the duty of the carrier to give notice of the time and place of the arrival of the vessel and a reasonable time thereafter for the removal of the goods. Judgment, 92 N. Y. S. 86, 102 App. Div. 39, affirmed in Rosenstein v. Vogemann, 77 N. E. 625, 184 N. Y. 325.

37. Jennings v. Clyde Steamship Co., 133 N. Y. S. 298, 148 App. Div. 615; Sea Coast Lumber Co. v. Clyde Steamship Co., 133 N. Y. S. 303, 148 App. Div. 622.

consignee has actual notice of the arrival of the vessel containing the consignment, the master is not bound to give him further notice thereof;[38a] but there are cases holding the contrary.[38b]

Sufficiency of Notice.—See ante, "Duties in Making Delivery," § 845.

§ 4285. Mode and Sufficiency of Delivery.[39]—Must Be Attended with No Fact to Impair Title.—The delivery contemplated by the contract is a transfer of the property into the power and possession of the consignee. The surrender of possession by the master must be attended with no fact to impair the title or affect the peaceful enjoyment of the property.[40]

Necessity for Personal Delivery.—See ante, "Necessity for Personal Delivery," § 848.

Time of Delivery.—A delivery by the carrier, to be effectual, should not only be at the proper place, which is usually the wharf, but at a proper time.[41]

Place of Delivery.[42]—A carrier by water must deliver goods at the destination,[43] at the customary wharf for the discharge of a vessel in the absence of a contract or established usage to the contrary.[44] Any right of the carrier under the contract to compel consignees to take goods shipped "from alongside" is waived by the carrier unloading the goods onto the dock.[45] Where a vessel went aground not far from a port of delivery, consignees who received cargo where she lay, thereby waived a delivery in strict compliance with the contract.[46] Although provisions in a bill of lading permit the discharge of cargo at other ports than that to which it is consigned in case of circumstances of war, which, in the opinion of the master, render it unsafe to enter or discharge there, the master, as agent of all concerned, is bound to exercise prudence to protect the interests of the cargo as well as the vessel, and the discharge of cargo by him at another port, as being contraband of war, is not justified unless the facts show that there was reasonable necessity therefor.[47]

38a. Where consignee has actual notice of arrival of ship.—The Ravensdale, 75 Fed. 413.

38b. The Middlesex, Fed. Cas. No. 9,533; Unnevehr v. Hindoo, 1 Fed. 627.

39. Mode and sufficiency of delivery.—See ante, "In General," § 842; "What Constitutes Delivery," § 843.

40. Must be attended with no fact to impair title.—Howland v. Greenway (U. S.), 22 How. 491, 16 L. Ed. 391; O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469, 18 S. Ct. 140.

"Delivering the cargo charged with a lien for an indebtedness of the shipowner is not different in principle or effect from the nondelivery of a portion or the whole in a damaged condition. It is also analogous in principle to a jettison of a portion of the cargo for the benefit of the ship and the remainder of the cargo, when a clear right to contribution would exist, enforceable in admiralty. Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584." O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469, 18 S. Ct. 140.

41. Time of delivery.—Richardson v. Goddard (U. S.), 23 How. 28, 16 L. Ed. 412. See ante, "Carrier by Water," § 844; "Time of Delivery," § 847.

42. Place of delivery.—See ante, "Carrier by Water," § 844; "Place of Delivery," §§ 849-853.

43. Adams & Co. v. Haught, 14 Tex. 243.

44. Morgan v. Dibble, 29 Tex. 107, 94 Am. Dec. 264.

Where a consignee of goods did not inform a transportation company of his intention not to be bound by the established custom at a certain port to make wharfage charges against consignees and not against the carrier, the carrier was entitled to unload the goods at the wharf, which was the usual place of deposit, instead of delivering them out of the ship or at its side. Riddick v. Dunn, 145 N. C. 31, 58 S. E. 439, 13 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 382.

45. The Titania, 131 Fed. 229, 65 C. C. A. 215, affirming 124 Fed. 975.

46. Accepting cargo at intermediate point.—The Eva D. Rose, 151 Fed. 704, decree modified on rehearing, 153 Fed. 912.

47. The Styria, 93 Fed. 474.

The Austrian steamship Styria was loaded at an Italian port with a cargo of sulphur consigned to New York, and cleared on April 24, 1898. On the day before, a Spanish proclamation was issued, declaring the existence of a state of war between Spain and the United States, and in which sulphur was declared contraband. On April 27th, the master, who had not sailed, commenced the discharge of the cargo, which was completed May 7th. Almost immediately after the declaration of war the public prints contained statements of negotiations for the Effect of Custom or Usage.—See ante, "Effect of Custom or Usage," § 846; "In General," § 849. A custom having been established to deliver cargoes of tea within a particular part of the water front in a certain port, a vessel having a cargo consisting principally of tea is bound to make delivery there if required by the consignees, and it is no defense to a suit for damages for the refusal to discharge there that in one or two instances other vessels have also refused, nor is it material that other piers afforded better facilities for discharging.[48] Evidence that, on the arrival of a vessel in port, the master, by direction of the consignees, who were to pay the wharfage, engaged a berth for the vessel at a particular wharf, is not sufficient to charge him with their knowledge of a rule of that wharf concerning the mode of discharging cargoes different from the usage at similar wharves in the same port.[49]

Opportunity to Inspect and Remove Goods.—See ante, "Carrier by Water," § 844; "Duties in Making Delivery," § 845.

Insufficient Delivery.—A carrier who would deposit goods on a wharf at night or on Sunday, and abandon them without a proper custodian, before the consignee had proper time and opportunity to take them into his possession and care, would not fulfill the obligation of his contract.[50] Where a carrier contracted to deliver wheat to the consignee, who had an office on the pier within the port of delivery but on the arrival of the vessel, the consignee directed the master to proceed with his vessel across the channel of the river to a railroad elevator within the port, and the cargo was destroyed by fire while waiting to be discharged, there was not sufficient delivery before the fire to discharge the carrier from liability.[51]

§ 4286. To Whom Delivery May Be Made—Misdelivery.—See ante, "To Whom Delivery May Be Made," §§ 854-857. It is not enough if the carrier by water carry the goods in safety, but he must, in due time, and without demand upon him, deliver them to the consignee or do that which in contemplation of law is tantamount thereto, before he is discharged from his responsibility as carrier.[52] A ship's delivery of a consignment of dutiable goods to the customs authorities, being required by the law and usage of the place—delivery to the proper party thereafter devolving on such authorities—is a good delivery as between the shipper and carrier.[53] By issuing bills of lading for merchandise, stipulating for a delivery to order, the ship becomes bound to deliver it to no one who has not the order of the shipper.[54]

Misdelivery.—A carrier is bound to deliver the goods entrusted to it for transportation to the person entitled to receive them and it is liable for delivery to the wrong person.[55] purpose of having sulphur exempted from contraband goods, and repeatedly stated that such efforts would be successful, of which statements the master was aware, and also of the announcement of their success, and he was also notified of such result by one of the shippers before the discharge of the cargo was completed. At the next Italian port, to which he went for a new cargo, on May 10th, he heard read an official announcement to the same effect, though it had not been publicly proclaimed. Other vessels sailed at about the same time he cleared with cargoes of sulphur, and were not molested. Held that, under the circumstances, it was his duty to wait a reasonable time before discharging the cargo, and, as he had reasonable assurance of safety by May 10th, he was not justified in such discharge. The Styria, 93 Fed. 474.

48. Custom as to place of delivery.—Hewlett v. Burrell, 105 Fed. 80, 44 C. C. A. 362.

49. Croucher v. Wilder, 98 Mass. 322.

50. Insufficient delivery.—Richardson v. Goddard (U. S.), 23 How. 28, 16 L. Ed. 412.

51. Gibbs v. Van Buren, 48 N. Y. 661.

52. To whom delivery may be made.—Morgan v. Dibble, 29 Tex. 107, 94 Am. Dec. 264.

53. Delivery to custom authorities.—Herbst v. The Asiatic Prince, 97 Fed. 343, affirmed in The Asiatic Prince, 108 Fed. 287, 47 C. C. A. 325.

54. Stipulation for delivery to order.—The Thames (U. S.), 14 Wall. 98, 20 L. Ed. 804.

55. Misdelivery.—See ante, "Misdelivery," §§ 858-866.

Carrier not liable.—B. and C. took goods to a boat and accepted a receipt § 4287. Failure or Refusal of Consignee to Receive Goods.—See ante, "Failure or Refusal of Consignee to Receive Goods," § 868.

Sale of Goods.—Where goods arrive in a perishing condition from causes for which the carrier is not responsible, and the consignee refuses to receive them, the carrier is justified in selling the goods for their value in such condition.[56]

§ 4288. Transshipping and Forwarding.—When the vessel is wrecked or otherwise disabled in the course of the voyage, and can not be repaired without too great delay and expense, the master is at liberty to transship the goods and send them forward; and if another vessel can be had in the same or a contiguous port, or at one within a reasonable distance, it becomes his duty under such circumstances to procure it and transport the goods to their place of destination.[57] The rule, however, is not obligatory in cases where the goods are not perishable, provided the ship can be repaired in a reasonable time. In that state of the case he may, if he deems it best, retain the goods until the repairs are made, and forward them in his own vessel; and upon the same principle and for the same end, if he have no means to transship the goods, it is his duty to repair his own vessel, when capable of being repaired, provided it can be done within a reasonable time, and he has the means at his command.[58]

Where Voyage but Part of Transit.—Where a bill of lading, signed by a master, shows that a voyage to a particular place named on it is but part of a longer transit which it is understood is to be made by the cargo shipped, and that the cargo is to be carried forward in a continuous way on its further voyage, the master must be presumed to have contracted in reference to the course of trade connected with getting the cargo forward.[59] In such a case, if any obstacle should intervene, which by the regular course of the trade is liable to occur and for a short time retard the forwarding, the master can not, from a mere inability to find storage at the intrepot, turn about, and taking the cargo to some near port, store it there, and inform the consignee; but he should wait.[60] The general course of business in forwarding when the ship of the signer of a through bill of lading does not go all the way to the port of ultimate destination, of which fact the shipper has knowledge, or is given notice by the through bill of lading, and the manifest necessity of transshipment by the through undertaker under such contract as it can reasonably make, justifies the presumption of its authority to make such contract, and to bind the shipper thereby, although the terms of the new contract may not be in all respects the same as its own; but, in any event, the undertaking and liability of the second carrier are measured by its own contract, provided its terms are reasonable, and from the second clerk in the name of A., to whom C. was indebted. B. held himself out as owner to the captain, accompanied the goods on the trip, and when the boat reached its destination received the goods and paid the freight. Held, that A. could not recover the value of the goods from the owner of the boat, since the receipt was taken merely as a security, and B. was by the consent of A. and C. made apparent owner, and put in a position to impose on the officers of the boat. De Baun v. Atchison, 14 Mo. 543.

56. Sale of goods.—The Bobolink, Fed. Cas. No. 1,588, 6 Sawy. 146. See Astsrup v. Lewy, 19 Fed. 536.

57. Transshipment and forwarding when vessel wrecked or disabled.—Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Strathdon, 89 Fed. 374; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Rich v. Lambert (U. S.), 12 How. 347, 13 L. Ed. 1017; Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 40 L. Ed. 616, 16 S. Ct. 488.

58. Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41. See The Strathdon, 89 Fed. 374.

59. Where voyage but part of transit.—The Convoy's Wheat (U. S.), 3 Wall. 225, 18 L. Ed. 194.

60. Inability to find storage at entrepot.—The Convoy's Wheat (U. S.), 3 Wall. 225, 18 L. Ed. 194.

If there is easy telegraphic communication with the consignees, the master should notify them of his difficulty, that they may send him, if they please, instructions. The Convoy's Wheat (U. S.), 3 Wall. 225, 18 L. Ed. 194.

not in contravention of the maritime law.[61] The foreign agents of an owner of merchandise, authorized to ship the goods, also have implied authority, generally speaking, to agree upon the terms of the contract of carriage; and where they know that transshipment is necessary they may lawfully empower the first carrier to deliver the goods to a connecting carrier upon terms that are not the same as those of the first bill of lading.[62]

Transshipment without Legal Excuse.—As agent of the owner the master of a vessel is bound to carry the goods shipped on her to their place of destination in his own ship, unless he is prevented from so doing by the act of God, the public enemy, the act of the shipper, or by some one of the perils excepted in the contract of shipment.[63] A transshipment of the freight without a legal excuse, however competent and safe the vessel into which the transfer is made, is a violation of the contract, an infringement of the rights of the freighter, and subjects the carrier to liability if the freight be lost.[64]

§§ 4289-4311. Loss or Injury—§§ 4289-4296. Liability as Insurer —§ 4289. In General.—A carrier of merchandise by water for hire is to be regarded as a common carrier, and like common carriers by land, in the absence of any legislative provision prescribing a different rule, is in general to be held responsible as an insurer,[65] and as such is liable for the safe custody, due transportation, and right delivery of the goods or merchandise which it receives and undertakes to transport;[66] and consequently is liable in all events and for every loss or damage to the merchandise, unless it happen by the act of God, or the public enemy, the fault of the shipper or owner of the goods, the inherent nature of the goods,[67] the law of the country,[68] or some other cause or accident, without any fault or negligence on its part, as is expressly excepted in the bill of lading or contract of shipment.[69] The carrier must show that the loss or injury was from some cause for which he is not responsible.[70] So a vessel is

61. Transshipment by through carrier —Liability of second carrier.—The St. Hubert, 107 Fed. 727, 46 C. C. A. 603.

62. Authority of shipper's agent to make contract.—The St. Hubert, 102 Fed. 362, holding that where in such case, the goods are shipped on through bills of lading which authorize the initial carrier to transship and forward by steamer, "subject to the terms and conditions of local bills of lading issued by the agents of such steamer," or contain other equivalent provisions, the owner of the goods are bound by the provisions of bills of lading issued by the connecting carrier to the first carrier therefor on their transshipment, so far as such provisions are lawful and enforceable.

63. Transshipment without legal excuse.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

64. Cox v. Foscue, 37 Ala. 505, 79 Am. Dec. 69; Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

65. Liability as insurer.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499. See, also, Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; The Folmina, 212 U. S. 354, 53 L. Ed. 546, 29 S. Ct. 363, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 748. See ante, "General Rule," § 989.

66. Commander-in-Chief (U. S.), 1 Wall. 43, 17 L. Ed. 609; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; The Propeller Commerce (U. S.), 1 Black 574, 17 L. Ed. 107.

67. See post, "Exceptions and Excuses," §§ 4290-4296.

68. Law of country.—Howland v. Greenway (U. S.), 22 How. 491, 16 L. Ed. 391. See post, "Seizure, under Legal Process," § 4293.

69. Excepted causes.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499. See post, "Limitation of Liability," Chapter 40.

70. See post, "Cause of Loss or Injury to Goods," § 4317.

liable for damage to a cargo of cement which was received in good condition, but was lumpy and set when delivered, due to its having been wet, in the absence of explanation of the manner in which it became wet.[71] The rule as to the carrier's liability applies whether he is employed in internal, in coasting or in foreign commerce.[72] The liability of the carrier for the loss of a package of money intrusted to him to be transported is to be determined by an inquiry into the nature and extent of the employment and business in which he holds himself out to the public as engaged.[73]

Liability as Forwarder.—Where a vessel has only contracted to carry the goods from one point to another, from which latter place they were to be reshipped, the vessel is only liable as a forwarder of merchandise, and is only bound to exercise ordinary care in procuring a proper conveyance for the goods.[74]

§§ 4290-4296. Exceptions and Excuses—§ 4290. Act of God or Public Enemy.—Act of God.—The carrier is not an insurer against loss or injury to goods caused by an act of God.[75] Unless the carrier assumes the risk of all contingencies, he is not liable because he fails to perform what is rendered impossible by the perils of the sea. Such events as are known as the accidents of major force, or fortuitous events, or the acts of God, always constitute an implied condition in every such engagement.[76] If proper care could have avoided a loss it was not a peril incident to the navigation; if such care could not, it was.[77] So damage to goods from sea water, which came through a broken port hole, is not the result of inevitable accident or act of God if the accident was one which could have been prevented by human effort, sagacity and care.[78] If a damage to cargo is due to any fault or breach of contract on the part of the owner or master of the vessel, the loss must be attributed to that cause, rather than to the sea peril, although that may enter into the case.[79] And where a carrier is negligent in stowing goods it can not claim that the damage was caused by an act of God or peril of the sea.[80] An injury caused by an explosion

71. The D. Harvey, 139 Fed. 755.

72. Carriers to which rule applicable.—Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; The Folmina, 212 U. S. 354, 53 L. Ed. 546, 29 S. Ct. 363, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 748; Elliott v. Rossell (N. Y.), 10 Johns. 1, 6 Am. Dec. 306. See ante, "Carriers to Which Rule Applicable," §§ 1005-1009.

73. Carriage of money.—Cincinnati, etc., Mail Line Co. v. Boal, 15 Ind. 345. See ante, "Carriers of Money," § 1007.

74. Liability as forwarder.—Devillers v. Schooner John Bell, 6 La. Ann. 544. See ante, "Forwarders," § 1009.

75. Act of God.—The Propeller Commerce (U. S.), 1 Black 574, 17 L. Ed. 107; Commander-in-Chief (U. S.), 1 Wall. 43, 17 L. Ed. 609; The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; Howland v. Greenway (U. S.), 22 How. 491, 16 L. Ed. 391; The Folmina, 212 U. S. 354, 53 L. Ed. 546, 29 S. Ct. 363, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 748; The Gualala, 178 Fed. 402, 102 C. C. A. 548; Elliott v. Rossell (N. Y.), 10 Johns. 1, 6 Am. Dec. 306. See ante, "Act of God," §§ 990-994, post, "Jettison," § 4291.

76. Reed v. United States (U. S.), 11 Wall. 591, 20 L. Ed. 220.

Instance of perils of sea.—A quantity of arsenic was stowed in the same hold with olive oil, but where the slant of the deck was downward from the arsenic toward the oil, and with a dunnage of about four inches. It was shown that the method of stowing the arsenic was usual, and that there was apparently no danger to it under ordinary circumstances. It was also shown that the voyage across the Atlantic was very rough, and that the vessel rolled and pitched to an unusual extent, and when she arrived at New York some of the arsenic was found to have been injured from leakage of the oil. Held, that under such evidence the damage must be attributed to perils of the sea, for which the vessel was not liable. The Langfond, 143 Fed. 150.

77. Graham & Co. v. Davis & Co., 4 O. St. 362.

78. The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. Ed. 1039, 17 S. Ct. 597.

79. Corsar v. Spreckels & Bros. Co., 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378. See post, "Navigation of Vessel," § 4305.

80. Negligent stowage.—See post, "In General," § 4299; "Stowage on Deck," § 4300.

of a steamboat boiler [81] or by the incompetency, unskillfulness, or negligence of the master or pilot in charge of the deck,[82] is not chargeable to the act of God. And where by the use of such precautions as actually are used on many boats, an accident which resulted in the injury of goods in transportation could have been avoided, such injury is not caused by the danger of navigation.[83]

Act of Public Enemy.—A carrier is not an insurer against loss or injury to goods caused by acts of the public enemy.[84]

§ 4291. Jettison.—The carrier without fault is not liable for goods necessarily jettisoned.[85] If the master is competent; if an emergency actually exists calling for a decision, whether to make a jettison of a part of the cargo; if he appears to have arrived at his decision with due deliberation, by a fair exercise of his skill and discretion, with no unreasonable timidity, and with an honest intent to do his duty, the jettison is lawful.[86] The single fact that the boat is in such a situation at the time of a jettison as that in all reasonable probability a total loss of both vessel and cargo must ensue if immediate relief be not afforded, will not justify the carrier or his agents in resorting to the extreme measure of casting overboard a portion of the cargo, so as to throw the loss upon all who may be benefited by the sacrifice (though it be at the moment necessary and prove successful), unless the crisis come without fault, that is,

81. Explosion of boiler.—Houston, etc., Nav. Co. v. Dwyer, 29 Tex. 376.

82. Incompetency, etc., of master or pilot.—The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499; The Morning Light (U. S.), 2 Wall. 550, 17 L. Ed. 862; Union Steamship Co. v. New York, etc., Steamship Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 307, 16 L. Ed. 699.

83. Failure to use usual precautions.—Haughton v. The Memphis, 8 West. L. J. 562, 1 O. Dec. 403.

84. Act of public enemy.—The Propeller Commerce (U. S.), 1 Black 574, 17 L. Ed. 107; Commander-in-Chief (U. S.), 1 Wall. 43, 17 L. Ed. 609; The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499; The Folmina, 212 U. S. 354, 53 L. Ed. 546, 29 S. Ct. 363, 15 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 748. See ante, "Act of Public Enemy," §§ 995, 997.

85. Jettison.—Bentley v. Bustard (Ky.), 16 B. Mon. 643, 63 Am. Dec. 561; Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58.

"The case of a jettison at sea, to save the vessel from foundering, and to preserve the lives of the crew, is a loss by the act of God, although it is accomplished by the immediate agency of man." Price v. Hartshorn, 44 N. Y. 94, 4 Am. Rep. 645, quoting Story on Bailments, § 525.

"The right and law of jettison had its origin and growth as a law of the sea, in the navigation of which the loss of the vessel involved not only, in most instances, the loss of the cargo, but generally the loss, and always the hazard, more or less imminent, of life. And we sometimes find the rule exempting the carrier from liability on the ground of this right laid down as if depending upon or growing out of a necessity of throwing goods overboard for the preservation of the vessel and crew in a tempest: 2 Kent's Com. 603; or in extremity produced by other causes coming within the common-law exceptions to the undertaking of the carrier." Bentley v. Bustard (Ky.), 16 B. Mon. 643, 63 Am. Dec. 561.

Illustrations.—A vessel put into Bombay with part of her cargo of sugar damaged. By recommendation of surveyors a part of the cargo was there sold. While in the Red Sea she grounded on a coral reef near Mocha, and jettisoned some more, and, on arriving at Mocha, sold some more that had been taken off when aground by lighter. Held, as the sales had been recommended chiefly by surveyors, and as at the time of the jettison the ship and cargo appeared in imminent danger, and would have been totally lost had any rough weather come on, and the chance of relief from Mocha did not appear to justify delay, and the jettison seemed a necessity, there was no improper conduct on the part of the master. Bursley v. The Marlborough, 47 Fed. 667.

A vessel being aground, the captain ordered the deck load, consisting of casks of brandy, to be thrown overboard; it was found impossible, however, to throw the casks over whole, and their heads were knocked out to allow the liquor to escape through the scuppers. Held, that such a state of facts would not sustain a charge of want of skill or of misconduct against the captain; and that the brandy was lost by "peril of the sea." Van Syckel v. The Thomas Ewing, Fed. Cas. No. 16,877, Crabbe 405, 3 Clark 301.

86. Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58, followed in Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

without the want of due care in avoiding and due skill and diligence and exertion in overcoming the evil.[87] If the jettison is rendered necessary by or due to any fault or breach of contract on the part of the owner or master of the vessel, the loss must be attributed to that cause, rather than to the sea peril, although that may enter into the case.[88] If a jettison is made only to prevent harm to the boat or to expedite her on the voyage, the carrier is liable.[89] A jettison is not justified where a part, if not the whole, of the cargo could have been saved by lighters.[90] Under an ordinary bill of lading the carrier is liable for goods stowed on deck and necessarily jettisoned.[91] But if a vessel is seaworthy to carry a cargo under deck, and there was no general custom to carry such goods on deck in such a voyage, and the loss is to be attributed solely to the fact that the goods were on deck, and their owner had consented to their being there, he has no recourse against the master, owner, or vessel, for a jettison rendered necessary for the common safety, by a storm, though that storm, in all probability, would have produced no injurious effect on the vessel if not thus laden.[92] The justifiable consumption of cargo has the same effect upon the ships liability as jettison in an emergency.[93]

§ 4292. Humidity and Dampness of Ship.—In the case of damage on account of humidity and dampness of the ship, which is, more or less, incident to all vessels engaged in trade and navigation, especially upon the high seas, if it can be shown that it might have been avoided by the use of proper precautionary measures, and that the usual and customary methods for this purpose have been neglected, the carrier may be held liable.[94]

§ 4293. Seizure under Legal Process.—A carrier is excused from liability when without any act or fault on his part the cargo is seized by virtue of a valid legal process and taken out of his possession;[95] but he must give proper notice of the seizure to the owner of the goods.[96] A seizure under invalid

87. Bentley v. Bustard (Ky.), 16 B. Mon. 643, 63 Am. Dec. 561.

88. Corsar v. Spreckels & Bros. Co., 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378.

89. Jettison to prevent harm to boat or expedite voyage.—Bentley v. Bustard (Ky.), 16 B. Mon. 643, 63 Am. Dec. 561.

90. The Portsmouth, Fed. Cas. No. 11,295, 2 Biss. 56.

91. Goods carried on deck.—The Wellington, Fed. Cas. No. 17,384, 1 Biss. 279. See The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187; The Gran Canaria, 16 Fed. 868.

92. Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58.

93. Justifiable consumption of cargo.—A steamship, sufficiently coaled, going from Colombo to Aden, met a hurricane in her front, and, after failing to make way against it, and being much damaged, ran back to Bombay, the nearest available port. Her coal supply became exhausted, and much of the woodwork and part of the sugar forming her cargo was burned. Held, as persistence in her endeavor to push on would have imperiled ship and cargo, and as sufficient coal to take her to Bombay could not be expected to be carried, the consumption of the cargo was justifiable. Bursley v. The Marlborough, 47 Fed. 667.

94. Humidity and dampness of ship.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985.

95. Goods seized under legal process.—See ante, "Goods Seized under Legal Process," §§ 870, 874; "Act or Mandate of Public Authority," § 1004.

A canal boat brought a cargo of hay from Quebec to New York, where it arrived in good condition. It was loaded by the consignor, and was to be unloaded by libelants, who had become owners of the bills of lading. On arriving in New York the boat and cargo were seized by libelants under process from the state court in a suit against the consignor, and held on demurrage for some 30 days, when the suit was dismissed, and the cargo was unloaded. During such time the weather was damp, and the hay in the hold became musty. The vessel was seaworthy, having no more leakage than was usual in such class of boats. Held, that the damage was due to the long detention during the damp weather, and to the lack of ventilation, due to the manner of loading, which, combined, caused the hay to sweat, and neither of which was the fault of the vessel. The M. C. Currie, 133 Fed. 125.

96. Necessity for notice of seizure.—See ante, "Duties of Carrier," § 871; "Seizure under Police Regulations," § 872.

orders of the secretary of war will not relieve the carrier.[97]

§ 4294. Fault of Shipper or Owner.—A carrier who has used due care is not responsible for loss of or injury to goods resulting from the neglect or act of the shipper or owner.[98] Thus, the carrier can not be held liable for damage to a deck cargo of hay arising from defective covers, which were furnished by the shipper.[99] A shipper who puts books containing valuable memoranda with some clothing in a package described in the bill of lading as worn clothing is guilty of fraud destroying his claim to indemnity.[1]

§ 4295. Inherent Infirmities of Property.—If the damages has preceded from an intrinsic principle of decay naturally inherent in the goods themselves, whether active in every situation, or only in the confinement and closeness of the ship, the shipper or owner must bear the loss, as the carrier is in no fault, nor does its contract contain any insurance or warranty against such an event.[2] So the carrier is not liable for damage to sugar arising from sweat, largely due to the inherent nature of the commodity.[3]

Loss from Disease.—A carrier is not liable for the death of a mare due to an attack of meningitis, of which it was not forewarned, when it did all in its power to care for the animal after the attack.[4]

§ 4296. Commencement and Termination of Liability.—The carrier's liability as an insurer of freight does not attach until the freight has been actually or constructively delivered to and accepted by it for transportation.[5] When the liability has begun, it continues until there has been a proper delivery,[6] or the carrier has in some way been discharged of his peculiar relation to the property.[7]

97. Invalid orders of secretary of war.—Where live fowls were put on board of a vessel, at New York, for exportation to Havana, and three bills of lading were signed for them, one of which was retained by the master of the vessel, and two of which were delivered to the consignor, and forwarded to the consignee, who made an advance thereon, and afterwards the fowls were seized by the collector of customs, under invalid orders of the secretary of war, and removed from the vessel, and the bill of lading in the hands of the master was cancelled by the consignor; held, in action by the consignee against the vessel, on the two bills of lading, to recover the amount of such advance, because of the nondelivery of the fowls at Havana, that the vessel was liable. The Matilda A. Lewis, Fed. Cas. No. 9281, 5 Blatchf. 520.

98. Fault of shipper or owner.—The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499; Howland v. Greenway (U. S.), 22 How. 491, 16 L. Ed. 391; The M. C. Currie, 132 Fed. 125. See ante, "Fault of Shipper or Owner," §§ 998, 1002.

99. The M. C. Currie, 132 Fed. 125.

1. The St. Cuthbert, 97 Fed. 340.

2. Inherent infirmities of goods.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985. See ante, "Inherent Infirmities of Goods," § 1003.

Flour.—Mephams v. Biessel (U. S.), 9 Wall. 370, 19 L. Ed. 677.

Potatoes.—Ship Howard v. Wissman (U. S.), 18 How. 231, 15 L. Ed. 363.

Soap.—McKinlay v. Morrish (U. S.), 21 How. 343, 16 L. Ed. 100.

Spools of cotton thread.—Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985.

3. The Niceto, 134 Fed. 655.

4. Loss from disease.—Klair v. Wilmington Steamboat Co. (Del.), 4 Pen. 51, 54 Atl. 694.

5. When liability commences.—See ante, "When Liability Commences," Chapter 5; post, "Lien of Shipper against Vessel," § 4337.

6. Termination of liability.—Bowman v. Hilton, 11 O. 303. See ante, "Carrier by Water," § 844; "Necessity for Personal Delivery," § 848; "To Whom Delivery May Be Made," §§ 854-857.

7. Bowman v. Hilton, 11 O. 303; McGregor & Co. v. Kilgore, 6 O. 359. See ante, "Failure or Refusal of Consignee to Receive Goods," § 868; "Goods Seized under Legal Process," §§ 870, 874; "Stoppage in Transitu," Chapter 17.

Carriers, who have agreed with the consignee of goods to store them for him for a certain time, have a right, if he does not come for them within that time, to deliver them to a responsible warehouseman and thus discharge their own liability; and, in an action by the consignee against them for the warehouseman's negligence, the jury may be justified in finding that the warehouseman was his agent and not theirs, although they gave him an order on the warehouseman for the goods, and al-

§ 4297. Losses during Deviation or Delay.—Deviation.—An unnecessary deviation from a voyage renders a carrier responsible for all losses,[8] resulting directly or indirectly,[9] even from unavoidable casualty,[10] such as destruction of the goods by fire.[11] Where no route is specified the carrier is not liable for injuries resulting from taking the usual and only route for its vessel, though the injury would have been avoided by taking another more direct route.[12] Where a vessel sailed with an intention to deviate, and was compelled by mere necessity to put into the port to which she had intended to deviate, and afterwards a loss of cargo occurred, it was held that the owners of the vessel were not answerable to the shippers for the loss.[13]

Delay.[14]—A vessel sailing under bills of lading giving her liberty to stop at other ports and exempting her from liability for decay or damage to perishable goods through delay in obtaining other goods to complete her cargo is not liable for the loss of perishable goods in the absence of proof that her stay in loading ports was a departure from general usage, and so unreasonable as to constitute negligence.[15] In a bill of lading for old metal, a provision, that if the goods be prevented, "by any cause," from going by the steamer specified, the carrier may forward them by the succeeding steamer of his line, warrants him in leaving them for the next vessel, which sails four days later, when the space reserved for the goods is needed for more perishable articles, and his failure to notify the shipper that they are so left does not make either him or the vessel liable for their loss in transit by a peril of the sea, though the shipper procures insurance on the goods only by the vessel specified, whereby he is unable to recover on the policy.[16]

Unavoidable Delay.—A ship can not be held liable for damage to the cargo resulting from delay due to the condition of the weather, and not to any negligence in her navigation.[17] And a vessel with a perishable cargo, driven by stress of weather out of her course and into a strange port for repairs, is not liable for such injuries to the cargo as are caused merely by the delay of the voyage.[18] It is not negligence in a carrier to receive goods to be forwarded at a time when by reason of a low stage of water his boat is so delayed that the goods spoil before arrival.[19] Where a boat was expected to be at hand to start though the warehouseman paid the freight to them, and, on being repaid the freight and paid for storage by the consignee, gave him as a receipt, a bill of freight signed by them. Bickford v. Metropolitan Steamship Co., 109 Mass. 151.

Termination of liability as carrier and beginning of liability as warehouseman.—See ante, "Carrier as Warehouseman," Chapter 13.

8. Losses during deviation.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970; The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472; Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber, etc., Co., 167 Fed. 228; Lamont & Co. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 56 Tenn. (9 Heisk.) 58. See Hand v. Baynes (Pa.), 4 Whart. 204, 33 Am. Dec. 54.

9. The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929.

Any deviation from the course of navigation which experience and usage have prescribed as the safest and most expeditious mode of proceeding will cast loss of, or injury to, either ship or cargo on the shipowner, without reference to whether it had any bearing on the particular loss complained of. The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472.

10. Lawrence v. McGregor (O.), Wright 193; Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410, 31 Am. Dec. 745; Cassilay v. Young & Co. (Ky.), 4 B. Mon. 265, 39 Am. Dec. 505; Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970.

11. Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rogers, 20 Ind. App. 594, 49 N. E. 970. See The Indrapura, 171 Fed. 929.

12. Emerson Co. v. Reunis, 118 Pac. 631, 65 Wash. 513.

13. Hobart v. Norton (Mass.), 8 Pick. 159.

14. Delay.—See ante, "Delay in Transportation or Delivery," Chapter 11; "Negligence Concurring with Act of God," § 992.

15. The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472.

16. The Kansas, 87 Fed. 766.

17. Unavoidable delay.—The Hiram, 101 Fed. 138.

18. The Brig Collenberg (U. S.), 1 Black 170, 17 L. Ed. 89.

19. Starbuck v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 1 Wkly. L. Bull. 110, 7 O. Dec. Reprint 97.

on a certain day, but by detention by fog and low water did not arrive until several days later, the delay was not from insufficiency of equipment for transportation, but from want of a boating stage of water, and the carrier is not liable for loss sustained by a shipper on account of the delay.[20]

§ 4298. Losses during Loading of Goods.[21]—Where a cargo is loaded by the vessel, she is liable for damages due to the negligent manner in which it is handled.[22] The duties of the master extend to all that relates to loading the cargo, and the vessel is liable for his faithful performance.[23] It is not the duty of a mate in loading casks of wine from a lighter, either to work at the fall, or bear off with his own hands the casks from the side as it is about to come aboard, though both duties are sometimes performed by mates from commendable motives, and hence a vessel will not be liable for injury or loss of goods in loading caused by his failure to perform these duties.[24]

Where a shipper undertakes to load his goods upon a vessel, he must himself bear any loss occasioned by the negligence of himself or servants in so doing.[25]

§§ 4299-4301. Stowage of Goods.—§ 4299. In General.—The carrier contracts for the use of due care and skill in stowing the cargo, and is liable for losses occasioned by the failure to use such care.[26] In the matter of proper stowage, as in all others, due care and its opposite, negligence, are relative terms, having respect to the nature of the duty to be performed, the knowledge communicated to the party to be charged, and the prevailing usages of the trade.[27] The cargo must be so stowed that the different goods will not injure each other.[28]

20. Delay in starting.—Starbuck v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 1 Wkly. L. Bull. 110, 7 O. Dec. Reprint 97.

21. Losses during loading of goods.—See ante, "Means for Loading and Unloading," § 1021.

22. Negligence in loading.—The D. Harvey, 139 Fed. 755 (cement in bags).

23. Duties of master.—The R. G. Winslow, Fed. Cas. No. 11,736, 4 Biss. 13.

In loading wheat from a warehouse through a pipe, it is the master's business to arrange the pipe and trim the vessel, and for any loss by the careening of the vessel and consequent parting of the pipe, the vessel is liable. The R. G. Winslow, Fed. Cas. No. 11,736, 4 Biss. 13.

24. Duty of mate.—The Belvidere, Fed. Cas. No. 17,790, 1 Pet. Adm. 258.

25. Where shipper loads goods. — Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav., etc., Co., 165 Fed. 356.

26. Stowage of goods.—Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58; Dowgate Steamship Co. v. Arbuckle, 158 Fed. 179. See post, "Improper Stowage or Overloading," § 4303.

Firecrackers.—A shipowner held liable for damage to a shipment of firecrackers on the ground of negligent stowage, where although the ship encountered no unusual perils on the voyage, and the packages were marked "frail" on the bill of lading, they were found broken open, and the contents injured, when they were delivered. Doherr v. Houston, 123 Fed. 334, affirmed in 128 Fed. 594, 64 C. C. A. 102.

Flour.—Mephams v. Biessel (U. S.), 9 Wall. 370, 19 L. Ed. 677.

Mirrors—Statuary.—The Star of Hope (U. S.), 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

Nuts.—The Star of Hope (U. S.), 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

Salt.—The master is not to blame for bringing sacks of salt between decks, if it be well stored and packed, and secured with proper dunnage. The usage of trade is to carry salt in that way. Rich v. Lambert (U. S.), 12 How. 347, 13 L. Ed. 1017. See Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985.

Sugar.—The Earnwood, 83 Fed. 315.

27. The Star of Hope (U. S.), 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

28. Stowage so that goods may not injure each other.—The Pharos, 9 Fed. 912; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

Illustrations.—A carrier is responsible for stowing merchandise in unsafe proximity to chemicals liable to injure it. The St. Patrick, 7 Fed. 125.

A vessel which carries paper stock and petroleum in the same cargo is bound to use special care in stowing them with reference to each other. The Sabioncello, Fed. Cas. No. 12,198, 7 Ben. 357.

Charterers of a vessel held liable, on the ground of negligent stowage, for damage done to a cargo of goatskins caused by a leakage of brine from casks of citron, which, as shown by the evidence, usually leaked, and in close prox-or be injured by the motion or leakage of the vessel,[29] unless by agreement the stowage of the goods is to be performed by the shipper.[30] The ship is not liable for a loss caused by bad stowage, where the goods were stowed by stevedimity to which the skins were stowed. Lazarus v. Barber, 124 Fed. 1007, affirmed in 136 Fed. 534, 69 C. C. A. 310.

Stowing heavy cargo on casks.—Stowage of cargo is bad where heavy casks of oil were placed on small casks of plumbago. Crooks v. The Fanny Skolfield, 65 Fed. 814.

A steamship held liable for damage to a cargo of olives shipped in casks, on the ground of negligent stowage, on evidence showing that cargo of such weight was stowed on top of the casks as to flatten the staves of some, causing the brine to leak out, and consequent damage to the olives. The Soyo Maru, 178 Fed. 921, 102 C. C. A. 428.

Wool injured by oil.—A vessel is liable for damage to wool cargo by whale oil which leaked in large quantities from barrels in an adjoining compartment when the wool was raised but little if any above the deck in stowing, and the facts that whale oil barrels always leaked, and that there was an excessive leakage during the voyage, were known to the navigators, and no steps were taken to discharge the oil from the bilges where it had accumulated to a depth of more than two feet, and from which it was liable to and did escape into the compartment where the wool was stowed. The Persiana, 156 Fed. 1019.

Where barrels of cod oil were stowed in a compartment of the hold of a vessel partly filled with wool, another compartment being available, and the barrels were laid on their bilges in a single tier upon a wooden bedding, separated from each other by hanging pieces of wood, no attempt being made to secure them, and during the voyage some of the barrels were broken open and the wool saturated, the steamship was answerable for such damage on the ground of negligent stowage. The Orcadian, 116 Fed. 930.

Glycerin injuring furs and skins.—A steamship, on a voyage from London to New York, stowed a quantity of glycerin in iron drums in the orlop deck of a hold, while on the lower deck was a quantity of furs and skins. The drums were not so fastened as to prevent fore and aft motion, or to prevent their moving vertically in heavy weather; nor was the hatch of the orlop deck battened and calked, as were the hatches above. The ship encountered rough weather, and at the end of the voyage it was found that some of the drums had been chafed through and were empty, and that a quantity of the glycerin had washed over the coamings of the hatch, and damaged the goods below. Held, that in view of the dangerous character of glycerin as a cargo, owing to the frailty of the packages and the consequent liability of leakage, it was incumbent on the ship, if it stowed it above other cargo, to take proper precautions, both by securing it from shifting in heavy weather, and by rendering the hatch leading below absolutely tight, and its failure to do so was negligence, which rendered it liable for the resulting damage to the cargo below. The Mississippi, 120 Fed. 1020, 56 C. C. A. 525, affirming 113 Fed. 985.

29. Motion or leakage of vessel.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

A contract for the carriage of a cargo of creosote oil in iron drums from Liverpool to Eagle Harbor, Wash., as evidenced by the charter party and bill of lading, warranted the seaworthiness of the ship, specified that she should load in a customary manner, that all liability of the charterer should cease on completion of loading, and payment of advance if required, admitted the receipt of the cargo in good order, and obligated the carrier to deliver it in like good order, subject to the usual exceptions of loss by perils of the sea, etc. In the vicinity of Cape Horn, the vessel encountered bad weather, and in a heavy gale was thrown on her beam ends and a part of the cargo in the between decks was dislodged, drums there stowed and in the upper tier in the hold were injured by chafing, straining, and bruising, and the contents spilled and lost. The ship made the voyage safely, and no damage to the cargo was caused by any exposure to the direct action of the elements. It was shown that such drums could be stowed so as to remain secure in the rough weather, which was to be expected in rounding the Horn. Held, that the damage was due to improper stowage, and that the ship was liable therefor. Knohr v. Pacific Creosoting Co., 181 Fed. 856.

Upon proof of extraordinary sea perils and of damage to the ship, which was accompanied by considerable damage to cargo in the hold on the side of the vessel, held, on proof of usual good dunnage, that the ship was not liable for such damage, but that the ship was liable for certain damage occasioned to bags stowed about the masts and pump-well, where the evidence showed that there was not the usual and customary amount of dunnage to prevent damage from leaks in heavy weather. The Aspasia, 79 Fed. 91, decree affirmed in 80 Fed. 1003, 26 C. C. A. 372.

30. When shipper stows goods.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

dores employed, directed, and paid by the shipper.[31] But a ship is responsible for proper stowage of her cargo, although the charter party gave a representative of the charterer the right to select the stevedores for loading, which fact did not deprive the master of his authority to control the manner of stowage.[32] And the rule that a ship and its owners are exempt from liability for damages by bad stowage performed by stevedores selected by the owner of the cargo does not apply, where the loss was not caused by bad stowage or mischievous acts in handling the cargo, but by carrier's negligent failure to safeguard the same after it had been placed aboard and stowed.[33]

Degree of Care Required.—A ship is bound to the exercise of reasonable care and skill only in the stowage of cargo, and to render her liable for damage to cargo by reason of improper stowage it must be shown that the manner of stowage was such as would not have been approved at the time by a stevedore or master of ordinary skill and judgment, knowing the voyage to be made and the weather and sea conditions which the vessel might reasonably be expected to encounter.[34] It is incumbent upon a carrier who accepts goods knowing them to be of a character requiring special care in stowing to exercise such care, and he is liable for damage resulting from a failure to stow them in such place and in such manner that they will not be injured by the ordinary contingencies of the voyage.[35]

Perils of the Sea.—Where weather encountered on a voyage was not more severe than was to be expected at that season of the year and in the locality traversed, peril of the sea is no defense to an action for injuries to goods from improper stowage.[36] If, "sweating" be produced in consequence of negligent stowage, the carrier is precluded from setting up the defense that "sweating" is one of the dangers of the sea.[37] And where a steamship company is negligent in stowing bags near coal, and sea water coming into the vessel washes coal dust into the bags, it can not claim that the damage was caused by an act of God.[38]

§ 4300. Stowage on Deck.—Upon an ordinary contract of affreightment a vessel is bound to carry goods under deck, and is responsible for any loss of goods carried on deck without the owner's consent.[39] But express contracts may be made in writing which will define the obligations and duties of the parties as to stowage on deck.[40] Where the contract between the shipper and the

31. The Diadem, Fed. Cas. No. 3,875, 4 Ben. 247.

32. Knohr v. Pacific Creosoting Co., 181 Fed. 856.

33. California Nav., etc., Co. v. Stockton Mill. Co., 184 Fed. 369, 107 C. C. A. 46, affirming judgment, 165 Fed. 356.

34. Degree of care required.—The Musselcrag, 125 Fed. 786.

In an action to recover for damage to range boilers because of negligent stowage, where the evidence shows that the boilers were stowed in the customary way, and according to the best judgment of experienced stevedores, the fact that if they had been put in crates, or several of them lashed together, the injury sustained might have been avoided, does not make the carrier liable, as he was not required to take such extraordinary precautions. Montague v. The Isaac Reed, 82 Fed. 566.

35. Goods requiring special care.—Doherr v. Houston, 123 Fed. 334, affirmed 128 Fed. 594, 64 C. C. A. 102.

36. Perils of the sea.—The Orcadian, 116 Fed. 930.

37. "Sweating" of cargo.—The Star of Hope (U. S.), 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

38. Delta Bag Co. v. Frederick Leyland & Co., 173 Ill. App. 38.

39. Stowage on deck.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58; The Gran Canaria, 16 Fed. 868; The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187; The Peytona, Fed. Cas. No. 11,059, 1 Ware 541, affirmed in Fed. Cas. No. 11,058, 2 Curt. 21; Waring v. Morse, 7 Ala. 343; Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9, 8 Am. Dec. 149; Dorsey v. Smith, 4 La. 211; Shackleford v. Wilcox, 9 La. 33.

A "clean" bill of lading—that is, a bill of lading which is silent as to the place of stowage—imports a contract that the goods are to be stowed under deck. Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

40. The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58.

master refers to the "capacity of the vessel," a doubtful inference may be drawn that the cargo was to be carried on deck; but this inference is repelled by the fact that the shipper refused to let such an agreement have a place in the bill of lading, and bound himself to pay under-deck freight.[41] Cargo stowed on deck in violation of a contract is at the vessel's risk, unless clearly shown that it would have been destroyed if it had been loaded below deck.[42]

Custom or Usage.—A commercial usage to stow gin on deck having existed for a sufficient length of time to have become generally known rebuts a presumption of negligence arising from the loss of gin so stowed.[43] In the case of a parol shipment, the master is allowed to show a local custom to carry the goods on deck in a particular trade. It must, however, be a custom so generally known and recognized, that a fair presumption arises that the parties in entering into the contract agreed that their rights and duties should be regulated by it.[44]

Perils of the Sea.—A shipowner is not exonerated from liability for a failure to deliver cargo on the ground that it was lost through perils of the sea, where it was stowed on the deck without the consent of the shipper, and there is no proof that the place or manner of stowage was sanctioned by general usage, or that they did not contribute to the loss.[45]

§ 4301. Dunnage.—It is the duty of the carrier to dunnage the cargo in a manner reasonably sufficient to protect it from what is to be naturally expected, and in accordance with the usages of the port of shipment.[46] For fail-

41. Construction of contract with reference to capacity of vessel.—The Water Witch (U. S.), 1 Black 494, 17 L. Ed. 155.

42. The Governor Carey, Fed. Cas. No. 5,645, 2 Hask. 487.

43. Custom or usage.—Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9, 8 Am. Dec. 149.

44. Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

45. Perils of the sea.—The Gualala, 178 Fed. 402, 102 C. C. A. 548; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58. See The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187, cited in New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank (U. S.), 6 How. 343, 12 L. Ed. 465.

46. Dunnage.—The Aspasia, 79 Fed. 91. "Dunnage is placed under the cargo to keep it from being wetted by water getting into the hold, or between the different parcels to keep them from bruising and injuring each other. Webster's definition of dunnage is 'fagots, boughs, or loose materials of any kind, laid on the bottom of a ship to raise heavy goods above the bottom, to prevent injury by water in the hold; also, loose articles of merchandise wedged between parts of the cargo to prevent rubbing, and to hold them steady.'" Insurance Co. v. Thwing (U. S.), 13 Wall. 672, 20 L. Ed. 607.

A ship which neglects to provide dunnage for sugar cargo, in consequence of which the bags in the lower tier are allowed to rest on the floor, in the moisture caused by drainage from above, is liable for the damage, including both natural drainage and such as arises from soaking by sea water. The Earnwood, 83 Fed. 315.

Instance of improper dunnage.—A carrier, having received in good condition a large block of deeply veined marble, which, after notice to the officer of the ship in charge of the stowage "that it was a weak-looking block; that it wouldn't take much to break it,"—was stowed so that it supported overlying cargo, with no support for itself, except pieces of dunnage near each end, with one end resting unevenly on the dunnage, is liable for the break at the end, extending partly through a vein. The Victoria, 114 Fed. 962.

Two drums of glycerine in a consignment of 102 on board the steamship Britannia were cut by chafing together during the voyage, whereby the glycerine leaked out. It appeared that the dunnage wood which was placed between all the drums of the consignment, had fallen out during the voyage from between these two drums only. The voyage had been a rough one. The damage was within the exceptions of the bill of lading. Held, that the only fair inference was that the wood between these drums was not secured in the usual and proper manner, and that the loss was therefore the result of negligence in stowage, for which the steamship was liable, notwithstanding the exceptions of the bill of lading. Marx v. The Britannia, 34 Fed. 906.

Where the cargo is stowed around the mast, particularly a cargo of salt, it should be dunnaged away from the mast, so the water flowing down the same would not affect it. The Nith, 36 Fed. 383, 13 Sawy. 481, cited in The Aspasia, 79 Fed. 91.

The use of green cocoanuts for dunnage has been held negligence. Crooks v. The Fanny Skolfield, 65 Fed. 814.

ure to use such reasonable and customary dunnage as will protect the cargo from heavy weather, the carrier remains liable. But upon proof of extraordinary sea perils and of damage to the ship, which was accompanied by considerable damage to cargo in the hold on the side of the vessel, on proof of usual good dunnage, the ship is not liable for such damage.[47]

§§ 4302-4304. Unseaworthiness or Unfitness of Vessel—§ 4302. In General.—In every contract for the carriage of goods by sea, unless otherwise expressly stipulated, there is a warranty on the part of the shipowner that the ship is seaworthy at the time of beginning her voyage, and not merely that he does not know her to be unseaworthy, or that he has used his best efforts to make her seaworthy. The warranty is absolute that the ship is or shall be in fact seaworthy at that time and does not depend upon his knowledge or ignorance, his care or negligence.[48] The vessel must be seaworthy for the particular voyage,[49] and the cargo she undertakes to carry.[50] All the cases must

47. The Aspasia, 79 Fed. 91.

48. Unseaworthiness or unfitness of vessel.—The Nellie Floyd, 116 Fed. 80; The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 190, 43 L. Ed. 130, 18 S. Ct. 831; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; The Rappahannock, 173 Fed. 829; The Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65, 24 S. Ct. 1; In re Churchill, 198 Fed. 711, affirming, The Indrapura, 178 Fed. 591; Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming The Queen, 78 Fed. 155; Clark v. Richards, 1 Conn. 54. See The Medea, 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273, reversing decree, 173 Fed. 498; The Lockport, 197 Fed. 213; Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

The term "seaworthy," as now construed, has relation to the article carried and the different compartments of the ship and their particular use, as well as to the navigability of the vessel. The Indrapura, 178 Fed. 591.

"Seaworthy," means that the boat must be tight, staunch and strong, well furnished, manned, victulated, and in all respects equipped in the usual manner for the trade in which she is engaged. Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

There is no such thing as absolute seaworthiness in the law. The term "sea worthy" is a relative one, and is always construed in reference to a voyage in which a vessel is to be engaged. Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

"Seaworthiness in port, or for temporary purposes, such as mere change of position in harbor, or proceeding out of port, or lying in the offing, may be one thing; and seaworthiness for a whole voyage quite another." McLanahan v. Universal Ins. Co. (U. S.), 1 Pet. 170, 184, 7 L. Ed. 98.

Latent defects.—The undertaking is not discharged because the want of fitness is the result of latent defects. Richelieu, etc., Nav. Co. v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 408, 34 L. Ed. 398, 10 S. Ct. 934; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; The Irrawaddy, 171 U. S. 187, 190, 43 L. Ed. 130, 18 S. Ct. 831; The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746; Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming The Queen, 78 Fed. 155; The Lockport, 197 Fed. 213.

Barges.—The owner is liable for damages for the sinking of an old barge, whose timber was decayed, by an ordinary rub over a sandbar. The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746.

49. Must be seaworthy for particular voyage.—The Nellie Floyd, 116 Fed. 80, affirmed in Neilson v. Coal, etc., Supply Co., 122 Fed. 617, 60 C. C. A. 175; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; The Indrapura, 190 Fed. 711, affirming 178 Fed. 591; Bell v. Reed (Pa.), 4 Bin. 127, 5 Am. Dec. 398; Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

The shipowner's undertaking is not

50. Must be seaworthy for particular cargo.—The Nellie Floyd, 116 Fed. 80, affirmed in Neilson v. Coal, etc., Supply Co., 122 Fed. 617, 60 C. C. A. 175; The Rappahannock, 173 Fed. 829; Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; International Nav. Co. v. Farr, etc., Mfg. Co., 181 U. S. 218, 45 L. Ed. 830, 21 S. Ct. 591; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, 19 S. Ct. 7; The Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65, 24 S. Ct. 1; Wright v. Grace Co., 203 Fed. 360; Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

A ship may be seaworthy as to one sort of cargo and unseaworthy as to another. The Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65, 24 S. Ct. 1.

be decided upon their particular facts and circumstances.[51] To be seaworthy as respects cargo, the hull of a vessel must be so tight, stanch, and strong, as to resist the ordinary action of the sea during the voyage, without damage or loss of cargo.[52] The vessel should be well furnished with suitable tackle, sails, or motive power, and furniture necessary for the voyage.[53] Instances of what does[54] merely that he will do and has done his best to make the ship fit, but that the ship is really fit to undergo the perils of the sea and other incidental risks to which she must be exposed in the course of the voyage. The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537.

"The same vessel may be seaworthy for one voyage and entirely unseaworthy for another." Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

"When we come to consider what shall constitute fitness or unfitness for the voyage we must take into account the nature of the service which she is to perform, and the dangers attending the navigation in which she is engaged. This is very different in the narrow current and shallow water of the river from what it is in open seas or lakes or their bays and inlets." The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746.

51. International Nav. Co. v. Farr, etc., Mfg. Co., 181 U. S. 218, 45 L. Ed. 830, 21 S. Ct. 591; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, 19 S. Ct. 7; The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746; Bell v. Reed (Pa.), 4 Bin. 127, 5 Am. Dec. 398.

Review of findings.—The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ocean Ins. Co., 107 U. S. 485, 27 L. Ed. 337, 1 S. Ct. 582; United States v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265, 25 L. Ed. 322; The Britannia, 153 U. S. 130, 38 L. Ed. 660, 14 S. Ct. 795.

52. Must be tight, stanch and strong.—Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41.

53. Must be well furnished.—Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; Bell v. Reed (Pa.), 4 Bin. 127, 5 Am. Dec. 398. See Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

Spare sails.—Ships to be seaworthy ought in general to have spare sails where the voyage is a long one. The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

54. Instances of unseaworthiness.—Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Dougherty Co., 205 Fed. 508, 123 C. C. A. 576; Wright v. Grace & Co., 203 Fed. 360; The Listie, 197 Fed. 1022; Braker v. Jarvis Co., 166 Fed. 987; The Willie, 134 Fed. 759; Bush Co. v. Central R. Co., 130 Fed. 222, affirmed in 149 Fed. 734, 79 C. C. A. 440.

A vessel cannot be said to be seaworthy for a voyage where, at its inception, she has little, if any, metacentric height, and a list of 8 or 9 degrees, and her cargo weight is so distributed that her instability must increase as she proceeds from the consumption of coal and water. The Oneida, 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A. 239, reversing 108 Fed. 886.

A lighter, so constructed that the presence of any water in the hold rendered it unstable when loaded, which overturned shortly after being loaded, when the weather was clear, the wind light, and the water smooth except from a slight swell caused by a passing steamer, by reason of water entering her hold through seams which were insufficiently calked, must be held unseaworthy when loaded. Nord-Deutscher Lloyd v. Insurance Co., 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1, affirming 106 Fed. 973.

A steamship of a very tender model (being unusually narrow in proportion to her depth, with a "tumble-home," materially increasing her disadvantage), bound from San Francisco to Panama, had 47 tons of lumber on deck, and was otherwise so loaded as to have an excessive roll, from which she recovered slowly. In a storm of no extraordinary severity, it was found that she was neither able to keep out of the trough of the sea, nor to ride safely in it; and she was finally thrown on her beams and sunk by three successive heavy seas. Held, that such loading, combined with her tender model, constituted unseaworthiness. The Colima, 82 Fed. 665.

The chain locker of a steamship, which extended from the bottom to the main deck, was not watertight, and during a voyage across the North Atlantic in winter sea water entered through the chain pipes, and damaged sugar which was stowed next the locker, without dunnage properly laid to protect it against leakage. The ends of the pipes on the forecastle deck had been stopped or covered at the beginning of the voyage, but not sufficiently to withstand the action of the seas which broke over such deck, although the weather was no worse than should reasonably have been anticipated at that season of the year. Held, that the ship was liable for the injury to the cargo. The Palmas, 108 Fed. 87, 47 C. C. A. 220.

Failure to repair hatch coamings, covers and tarpaulins.—The C. W. Elphicke, 117 Fed. 279, decree affirmed in 122 Fed. 439, 58 C. C. A. 421.

Failure to calk seams in deck.—The Nellie Floyd, 116 Fed. 80, affirmed in or does not[55] constitute unseaworthiness are set out in the notes. The shipper is under no obligation to see that the vessel is seaworthy or fit to perform the voyage.[56] Where a contract provided that respondent company should furnish good, sound, insurable boats, where unseaworthy boats were supplied, the respondent was not entitled to resort to the agreement that the shipper should be liable for loss of goods in case of marine disaster.[57]

Inspection.—It is the duty of the carrier to have his vessel often examined Neilson v. Coal, etc., Supply Co., 122 Fed. 617, 60 C. C. A. 175.

Defective compass.—Going to sea with a compass known to be defective constitutes unseaworthiness. Richelieu, etc., Nav. Co. v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 408, 34 L. Ed. 398, 10 S. Ct. 934.

Defect in plate covering bilge pump hole.—The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823.

Failure to properly close and secure port holes may constitute unseaworthiness, but not necessarily so; that depends upon the circumstances. International Nav. Co. v. Farr, etc., Mfg. Co., 181 U. S. 218, 45 L. Ed. 830, 21 S. Ct. 591; The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, 19 S. Ct. 7; see The Manitoba, 104 Fed. 145, where failure to close port rendered ship unseaworthy.

55. What does not constitute unseaworthiness.—A vessel was not unseaworthy at the beginning of her voyage because ports between decks, eight inches in diameter, and a few feet above the water line, were closed only with the glass covers, and the hatches were battened down, where the hatches could be taken off in two minutes, the cargo was so stowed as to afford free access to the ports, and they were provided with additional covers of iron, which could be closed if deemed necessary. The Silvia, 19 S. Ct. 7, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, affirming judgment, 68 Fed. 230, 15 C. C. A. 362.

A vessel is not unseaworthy in respect of her cargo by reason of the stowage of coffee in a compartment adjoining that in which water ballast is carried, though the water pipe connecting with the tank passes through the compartment containing the coffee. Steinwender v. The Mexican Prince, 82 Fed. 484, decree affirmed in The Mexican Prince, 91 Fed. 1003, 34 C. C. A. 168.

The placing of the filling pipe extending from the engine room of a steamer to a trimming tank in the forepeak upon the floor of the intermediate hold, boxed in, and extending through the collision bulkhead, held not a faulty construction, which rendered the vessel unseaworthy as to cargo carried in such hold, where the evidence showed that many contemporary vessels were so constructed and rated A 1 by Lloyds. But the omission to fit such pipe with a valve or stopcock within the forepeak, or where it passed from the hold to prevent the flooding of the hold in case of a break in the pipe rendered her unseaworthy as to such cargo and liable for its injury from the flooding of the hold in consequence of the breaking of the pipe through some fault of construction. The Indrapura, 178 Fed. 591.

Absence of deck sounding pipes.—The Mexican Prince, 91 Fed. 1003, 34 C. C. A. 168, affirming Steinwender v. The Mexican Prince, 82 Fed. 484.

An obstruction in a water pipe passing through a cargo compartment, by a piece of wood, at the outset of a voyage, so that water gets into the compartment, does not amount to unseaworthiness, because incidental and temporary in character. Decree, Steinwender v. The Mexican Prince, 82 Fed. 484, affirmed in The Mexican Prince, 91 Fed. 1003, 34 C. C. A. 168.

A leakage sluiceway between two compartments of a vessel does not constitute unseaworthiness. The British King, 92 Fed. 1018, 35 C. C. A. 159, affirming 89 Fed. 872.

The existence of two worm-holes in the bow of a new vessel, about three-eighths of an inch in diameter, there being no doubt that these holes were in the plank when put on the vessel, does not amount to unseaworthiness. Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

Defective tubes in a tubular boiler.—The fact that 26 of the tubes of a tubular boiler which had 144 tubes, were pluged up because they leaked, does not render the vessel unseaworthy. The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, 26 L. Ed. 1100.

Defective construction and working of the refrigerating room and apparatus connecting therewith, either from inherent defects in said apparatus, or from not using a sufficient quantity of ice, does not render a vessel unseaworthy when a warranty says that the vessel was seaworthy for navigation. The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, 26 L. Ed. 1100.

56. Obligation of shipper.—See The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; Bush Co. v. Central R. Co., 130 Fed. 222, affirmed in 149 Fed. 734, 79 C. C. A. 440.

57. Sanbern v. Wright, etc., Lighterage Co., 171 Fed. 449, affirmed in 179 Fed. 1021, 102 C. C. A. 666.

and thoroughly inspected so as to be sure of its condition.[58]

Proximate Cause of Injury.—Where a steamer was run upon the beach solely because a leak had been discovered which could not be controlled, and water immediately came in over her deck, so that merchandise was injured, the proximate cause of the injury was the leak, and not the stranding of the vessel.[59]

§ 4303. Improper Stowage or Overloading.—The requirement of seaworthiness at the beginning of a voyage includes, not only seaworthiness in hull and equipment, but also in the stowage of the cargo.[60] A ship is not seaworthy when from her improper loading she is rendered unfit to encounter the ordinary perils of navigation which could reasonably have been anticipated on the projected voyage.[61] A carrier is liable where a loss is due to the overloading of its vessel.[62] The acceptance of cargo by the master of a lighter without objection to the quantity is an implied representation that the vessel is seaworthy for the carriage of such quantity.[63] No custom allowing the loading of lumber on deck can validate navigation by an unstable ship, or excuse the neglect to load sufficiently heavy weights below, especially where the ship is naturally of a tender model.[64]

§ 4304. Incompetency or Insufficiency of Crew.—The want of an experienced master or to have an incompetent crew will render a vessel unsea-

58. Duty of inspection.—The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823. See The Northern Belle (U. S.), 9 Wall. 526, 19 L. Ed. 746.

A steamship originally constructed for passengers, but later used for the carriage of goods, had ports in the lower between-decks, which were submerged when she was fully loaded. These were equipped with glass bull's-eyes, and shutters for properly closing the same. On commencing to load cargo at Batoum the ports in a compartment were examined and found properly closed, and the compartment was then partially filled with wool. The vessel stopped at a number of other ports on the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, and took on more cargo; the hatchway leading to such compartment being used, and finally closed when she started on the voyage for New York. Shortly afterward water was discovered in the hold under such compartment, and on examination it was found that one of the glass bull's-eyes had been stolen, and that the water had entered through such port and damaged the cargo. The brass pins holding the bull's-eyes in a number of the other ports had also been removed. No inspection of the ports had been made after the loading commenced at Batoum. Held, that due diligence on the part of the owners to render the vessel seaworthy when she commenced the voyage required that such inspection should have been made the last thing before access to the ports was cut off, and that the damage to cargo was due to unseaworthiness for which the vessel was liable. The Tenedos, 137 Fed. 443, affirmed in 151 Fed. 1022, 82 C. C. A. 671.

59. Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming 78 Fed. 155.

60. Improper stowage or overloading.—Corsar v. Spreckels & Bros. Co., 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378; Knohr v. Pacific Creosoting Co., 181 Fed. 856; The Medea, 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273.

61. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper & Co., 185 Fed. 733.

The turret steamship Royal Sceptre, chartered to carry a full cargo of quebracho wood from the River Plate to New York, loaded at points up the river and had proceeded down to Rosario when, turning on a hard astarboard helm to reach her anchorage, under the influence of the current and possibly of grazing on the bottom, she careened to starboard until she had a list of 170 degrees, and dumped the most of her deck load, which was lost. When she left her last loading port, she had a deck load of over 700 tons of wood, piled to a height of 11 feet, besides 100 tons of coal, her ballast tanks were nearly empty to lessen her draft in the river, and her range of stability was about one-fourth that calculated for her at sea. There was nothing in the condition of the river or current unusual or which should not have been expected. Held, that the loss of cargo was due to the unseaworthiness of the ship when she finished loading and commenced her voyage by reason of her instability because of improper loading, and that she was liable therefor. The Royal Sceptre, 187 Fed. 224.

62. Overloading vessel.—Aststrup v. Lewy, 19 Fed. 536; Barker v. The Swallow, 44 Fed. 771; The Dana, 190 Fed. 650; The G. B. Boren, 132 Fed. 887.

63. The Dana, 190 Fed. 650.

64. The Colima, 82 Fed. 665.

worthy.[65] The vessel must be provided with a crew, adequate in number and sufficient and competent for the voyage, with reference to its length and other particulars, and with a competent and skillful master, of sound judgment and discretion; and, in general, especially in steamships and vessels of the larger size, with some person of sufficient ability and experience to supply his place temporarily, at least, in case of his sickness or physical disqualification. Owners must see to it that the master is qualified for his situation, as they are, in general, in respect to goods transported for hire, responsible for his acts and negligence.[66]

§ 4305. Navigation of Vessel.—The carrier by water contracts for the use of due care and skill in the navigation of the vessel and in carrying the goods.[67] The carrier impliedly undertakes that he has a competent knowledge of the navigation, and he will be liable for a loss occasioned by a want of such knowledge.[68] A peril of the sea does not excuse the carrier from a loss or injury to the goods committed to his care if his own negligence or want of skill has contributed to the result.[69] The officers of steamers plying the western waters must be held to the full measure of responsibility in navigating streams where bridges are built across them.[70] A vessel proceeding in the night and in a fog into port

65. Incompetency or insufficiency of crew.—Marine Fire Ins. Co. v. Burnett, 29 Tex. 433. See Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

66. Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Lady Pike (U. S.), 21 Wall. 1, 22 L. Ed. 499. See Bell v. Reed (Pa.), 4 Bin. 127, 5 Am. Dec. 398.

To be seaworthy the vessel must be well manned. Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

"It is the duty of the owners of a steam vessel carrying goods and merchandise, not only to provide a seaworthy vessel, but they must provide a full complement of licensed officers and a crew adequate in number and competent for their duty with reference to all the exigencies of the intended route. The officers and crew must not only be competent for the ordinary duties of an uneventful voyage, but for any exigency that is likely to happen, such, for example, as the striking of a ship on a reef of rocks." Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

67. Negligence in navigation.—Compania, etc., La Flecha v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104, 42 L. Ed. 398, 18 S. Ct. 12. See Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav., etc., Co., 165 Fed. 356; The Gladys, 159 Fed. 698, 86 C. C. A. 566; Bradley v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 145 Fed. 569, affirmed in 153 Fed. 350, 82 C. C. A. 426. See ante, "Incompetency or Insufficiency of Crew," § 4304.

Instances of negligent navigation. — The steamship A., while on a voyage from Inagua, Bahama Islands, to New York, was stranded on the coast of Maryland. In actions brought on her bills of lading to recover for the loss and damage to cargo resulting, it appeared that on January 19 the master supposed himself to be in latitude 36 deg. 40 min., longitude 74 deg. 10 min., and the next day, at 1:25 a. m., was on a bar four miles north of Green Run inlet, the weather being thick, and no explanation was given of the vessel's course meantime. Held, that if her course was directly between those two points, it was clearly negligence; and that if the master supposed himself on January 19 to be in that latitude and longitude, it was his duty to verify his supposition by sounding; and that the failure of the ship to deliver her cargo was caused by this negligence. The Alpin, 23 Fed. 815.

A steamship, running past Old Providence Island, in mild weather, had the land in sight for 40 minutes. A slight haze rendered distance deceptive, and the master supposed himself some seven miles off shore. No soundings were taken and no calculations made to verify the supposed distance. In fact, the vessel was within a mile and a half of the shore, and afterwards struck upon a coral reef located on the charts with which the vessel was provided. Held, that her navigation was negligent. The City of Para, 44 Fed. 689.

68. Morel v. Roe (Ga.), R. M. Charlt. 19.

69. The Nith, 36 Fed. 383, 13 Sawy. 481.

While a snag in one of our western rivers is a peril of navigation, if a vessel is wrecked upon one through the negligence of the carrier, or of those whom he employs, the carrier is not absolved. Christenson v. American Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270, Gil. 208, 2 Am. Rep. 122, 127.

70. Rivers spanned by bridges.—The Mollie Mohler (U. S.), 21 Wall. 230, 22 L. Ed. 485.

The Longfellow, a large river steamer, was starting on a trip from Cincinnati to New Orleans, carrying passengers and a valuable cargo. She had pilots on is bound to proceed at a low rate of speed.[71] The rule which imputes carelessness to the captain whose boat strikes a known rock or shoal, unless driven by a tempest, is only applicable to the navigation of the ocean, where the rocks and shoals are marked upon maps and may be avoided, and does not apply to the navigation of rivers. In such navigation, each case must be governed by its own circumstances, and be tested by the course usually pursued by skillful pilots in such cases.[72] Negligence is not a conclusion of law from the fact that a boat passes, in the night, a point in the river known to be difficult for boats to pass.[73] Negligence must be presumed where a steamboat proceeding quietly up the Ohio River was run into the bank by the pilot so hard as to knock a hole into the bottom of the boat big enough to sink it, and there was light enough to see, and no reason shown for the accident.[74]

§ 4306. Negligence in Discharging or in Caring for Goods after Discharge.—Loss or Injury during Discharge.[75]—A carrier by water is liable for loss of or injury to goods caused by its negligence in discharging the cargo.[76] board, and was assisted by a tug. While the smokestacks were lowered to permit her passage under the suspension bridge at Cincinnati, as was frequently the case, the pilot house became so filled with smoke that the pilot could not see to navigate the vessel past the railroad bridge below, but she continued at full speed; and, her side striking one of the piers, she was broken in two by the current and sunk, some of her passengers being drowned, and her cargo lost. The river was high and the current strong. No effort to stop the vessel was made until too late to avoid the collision. No arrangement appeared to have been made with the tug to secure efficient aid in the management and handling of the vessel. Held, under the facts shown, that the disaster was due to negligence of the officers and pilots, in failing to make such arrangements, and in not stopping and backing at once when the smoke so obscured their vision as to make the attempt to pass the lower bridge at that time unsafe. Memphis, etc., Packet Co. v. Overman Carriage Co., 93 Fed. 246.

71. Vessel proceeding in night and in fog.—The Portsmouth (U. S.), 9 Wall. 682, 19 L. Ed. 754.

72. Collier v. Valentine, 11 Mo. 299, 49 Am. Dec. 81.

73. Passing difficult point in night.—Ready v. Steamboat Highland Mary, 17 Mo. 461.

74. Running into river bank.—Louisville, etc., Packet Co. v. Smith, 60 S. W. 524, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1323.

75. Loss or injury during discharge.—See ante, "Means for Loading and Unloading," § 1021.

76. A lighter was loaded with 100 barrels of cement in the hold and a large number of rolls of bagging, weighing 253 tons, piled upon the deck. It was the duty of respondent to transfer the load to a steamer; and when a portion of the bagging had been unloaded, all of which was taken from the side next the steamer, the lighter listed to the other side, and a portion of the bagging was thrown overboard, and lost or damaged. The load was unusual in weight and height, but not to an extent to endanger it if properly handled. It was properly loaded, and the lighter had been brought with it a considerable distance in safety. Held, that the fact of its unusual height required that in unloading the removal should be distributed as evenly as possible over the whole load, which was also shown to be the usual way, and that the negligent manner of unloading was the cause of the vessel's listing, and rendered respondent liable for the damage. McAllister v. Southern Pac. Co., 111 Fed. 938.

Cargo was shipped at Baltimore on respondent's steamship Bulgaria to be carried to Hamburg. When the ship reached a point in the river Elbe some 14 miles below Hamburg, owing to the low water in the river she anchored and proceeded to discharge her cargo into lighters owned by respondent, as was customary and provided for in the bill of lading. The Patricia, another ship owned by respondent, was also anchored above the Bulgaria a sufficient distance away, so that the two vessels swung clear of each other with the changes of the tide. Early on the morning of the second day at the commencement of the flood tide when the Bulgaria swung up stream it was seen that she was likely to collide with the Patricia, and her engines were started ahead, and a lighter into which a part of the cargo had been discharged was cast off and drifting against the Patricia was injured and sunk. Held, under the evidence that the drifting together of the two ships was caused by the fact that at some time during the night the Patricia dragged her anchor and moved with the tide into dangerous proximity to the Bulgaria, and that the negligence of the officers of the

An agreement by the owner of a vessel to lighter goods which she had contracted to deliver at her anchorage for an agreed compensation, in the absence of a stipulation otherwise therein, imposed on him the obligations of a common carrier, and as such he became responsible for all goods lost or damaged between the vessel and shore, unless such loss was occasioned by act of God or the public enemy.[77] Where a bill of lading consigned a canal boat alongside of a steamer for the purpose of transferring a cargo of iron from the canal boat to the steamer, and the iron was properly put in slings in the hold of the canal boat, and two of the loads fell, from contact with the side of the ship, because there was no guy to control the slings in rising, the canal boat was not liable for the resulting loss.[78]

Loss or Injury after Discharge.—After the liability of a vessel as a carrier ceases it can be held liable only for negligence in caring for the goods until their removal by the consignee;[79] but it is liable where it leaves the goods in an exposed position without proper covering, and they are injured by rain.[80] The carrier is not liable for damage to goods by rain before their removal from the wharf by the consignee when there has been an actual delivery and acceptance,[81] ships in failing to discover such fact, and in not taking measures to avert the danger, rendered respondent liable for the cargo lost in the lighter. Higgins v. Hamburg-American Packet Co., 145 Fed. 24, 76 C. C. A. 24.

Discharging upon unsafe pier.—See Rosenstein v. Vogemann, 184 N. Y. 325, 77 N. E. 625, affirming 92 N. Y. S. 86, 102 App. Div. 39.

77. Ames Mercantile Co. v. Kimball Steamship Co., 125 Fed. 332.

78. Vincent v. Hogan, 108 Fed. 428.

79. Loss or injury after discharge.—The Italia, 187 Fed. 113, 109 C. C. A. 33, modifying decree, 184 Fed. 366.

Instances where carrier not negligent.—A vessel discharged a shipment of macaroni on a covered pier in New York, where two days after she had left that pier it was injured by water by the bursting of a leader from the roof of the shed during an extraordinary rainfall. The pipe was sound, and had not leaked before. Held, that no negligence was attributable to the ship in leaving the goods near such pipe, and that she could not be held liable for the loss. The Italia, 187 Fed. 113, 109 C. C. A. 33.

A consignment of oleo stearine, the trade name of which in France is "pressed tallow," was shipped from Paris, and transshipped at London, for New York, as "tallow." The consignment was discharged at the steamer's covered pier, but was placed, uncovered, in an adjacent portion of the street, by the stevedore, who supposed it was tallow. The goods were here damaged by rain, but it appeared that tallow would not have been damaged under similar conditions. Held, that the ship was not liable. The Mississippi, 76 Fed. 375.

The fact that a bulletin from the weather bureau had been posted and published in a port in the morning, predicting light showers or a moderate thunder storm at such port during the day, can not alone be held sufficient to charge the master of a vessel with negligence in discharging a consignment of perishable goods on an open wharf during the morning, when the weather was at the time clear, such as would render the vessel liable for their subsequent injury by rain, and especially where the master was unacquainted with the English language, and it does not appear that he had actual knowledge of the forecast, and no objection to the time or place of delivery was made by the consignee. The St. Georg, 104 Fed. 898, 44 C. C. A. 246.

Where the owners of a consignment of 6,400 bales of jute, required by the bill of lading to take it from the ship's tackles, were duly notified of the arrival of the ship and time of discharging, and on the first day removed over 1,200 bales, but did not remove any more until four days later, because it was more convenient to load it on lighters after the ship had left her berth, the ship was not liable for an injury by rain to a portion of the jute which she was compelled to unload on an uncovered part of the wharf because the shed under which the most of it was placed had been filled, and where she covered it, and took all reasonable care to protect it from injury. Smith v. Britain Steamship Co., 123 Fed. 176.

80. Leaving goods exposed.—Vitelli v. Cunard Steamship Co., 203 Fed. 697, 122 C. C. A. 81.

81. Where goods have been delivered.—The St. Georg, 104 Fed. 898, 44 C. C. A. 246, holding that where the contract made by a bill of lading for a consignment of goods shipped by steamer provided that the goods should be discharged as soon as the steamer was ready to unload, and should be received by the consignee at the ship's dock as fast as she could deliver them, and be thereafter at his sole risk and expense, and the consignee was notified, and was present while the goods were being discharged as where the consignee, after being notified of the arrival of the goods and paying the freight, permitted a portion of the goods to remain on the carrier's unenclosed platform or shed, according to custom.[82] A provision of a bill of lading requiring the consignee to be ready to receive the cargo as soon as the vessel was ready to unload, in default of which she was authorized to land, warehouse, or lighter the same at the consignee's risk, does not relieve her from liability for damages arising from her failure to reasonably protect perishable goods landed on a dock upon a claim of delivery, where she refused to permit the consignee's agents to remove them, although having no claim thereon for freight.[83] A general custom of a port, that "after a vessel arrives at the port and goes to a wharf designated by the consignee, and due notice has been given to the consignee, and the cargo is taken off and distributed upon the wharf according to the marks and numbers, the care of the goods devolves upon the consignee," is valid.[84]

§ 4307. Acts of Employees or Third Persons.—For the acts of commission or omission, of its employees, occasioning damage, the carrier is equally liable as for acts of his own.[85] A carrier undertaking to take lumber from a schooner and place it on its barge and convey it to a designated point, can not relieve itself from liability by showing that a loss occurred because of the act of the schooner in an honest though mistaken effort to save the barge which had been left by the carrier for the night without a watchman.[86] Carriers by water are liable at common law, and independently of any statutory provision, for losses arising from the acts or negligence of others, to the same extent and upon the same principle as carriers by land.[87] So if a loss of goods occurred from the carelessness or wantonness of the navigators of another vessel, brought into collision with the vessel, that does not excuse the carrier.[88]

§ 4308. Duties after Injury or Disaster.—Safe custody is as much the duty of a carrier as conveyance and delivery; and when he is unable to carry the goods forward to their place of destination, from causes which he did not produce, and over which he has no control, as by the wrecking or stranding of the vessel, he is still bound by the original obligation to take all possible care of the upon an uncovered wharf, and made no objection to the time, manner, or place of delivery, there was an actual delivery and acceptance when they were so placed on the wharf.

82. Stone v. Clyde Steamship Co., 139 N. C. 193, 51 S. E. 894.

83. Refusal to permit removal of goods.—The Alnwick, 135 Fed. 884.

84. Valid custom.—Pickering v. Weld, 159 Mass. 522, 34 N. E. 1081.

85. Liability for acts of employees.—Bowman v. Hilton, 11 O. 303; Clark v. Richards, 1 Conn. 54. See Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav., etc., Co., 165 Fed. 356; The Dana, 190 Fed. 650. See, generally, ante, "Negligence of Agents or Servants," § 1014.

The carrier is liable for a breach of a contract of the master within the scope of his authority resulting in an injury to the cargo. Bell v. Wood (Ky.), 1 Dana 146.

Respondent contracted to transport flour for libelant in open barges and to load the same, but at libelant's request employed a warehouse company to do the loading. After a barge had been partly loaded, and while it was lying unattended, one end grounded at night at low tide, causing seams to open and the barge to leak. This was promptly discovered, and an unsuccessful attempt made to pump out the barge; but no effort was made for 16 hours to save or safeguard the flour that had been loaded, after which the barge sank, causing loss and injury to the flour. Held, that respondent, having no other representative in control of the barge, was liable for the negligence of the servants of the warehouse company in failing to exercise ordinary care to preserve the flour while in its custody for transportation. California Nav., etc., Co. v. Stockton Mill. Co., 184 Fed. 369, 107 C. C. A. 46, affirming judgment, 165 Fed. 356.

86. Stockton Lumber Co. v. California Nav., etc., Co., 101 Pac. 541, 10 Cal. App. 197.

87. Acts or negligence of third persons.—Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; Mershon v. Hobensack, 22 N. J. L. 372.

88. Lawrence v. McGregor (O.), Wright 193.

goods, and is responsible for every loss or injury which might have been prevented by human foresight, skill, and prudence.[89] Where it appears that a part of the cargo of a wrecked vessel was so stored that it might have easily been saved, and that several opportunities to reship what was saved were neglected, the carrier is responsible to the shipper for his loss, though the shipment was at the owner's risk, and "dangers of the river" were excepted.[90] Where the master of a wrecked vessel abandons her to the underwriters without exercising due diligence to save the cargo, the fact that the underwriters take possession, and sell a part of the cargo which is not insured, does not exempt the carrier from liability to the shipper.[91] Owners, who supervise the repair of a vessel after a collision, are personally negligent in failing to make an examination of a part of the cargo for damage caused by the shock, when such damage had been discovered in another part of the cargo, similarly placed, and they are liable for damage arising from causes which an examination would have revealed, notwithstanding a clause in the bill of lading exempting the owner from liability for damage from collision.[92]

Duty to Repair Injury to Goods.—See ante, "Duties after Injury," § 1022.

§ 4309. Effect of Insurance.[93]—It is not a defense to an action by a shipper against a vessel owner for goods lost through the latter's negligence that the goods were insured and the insurance has been paid, though it does not appear from the pleadings or evidence that the suit is brought by the direction or for the benefit of the insurer.[94] Where a carrier already held policies insuring it against loss through liability to cargo owners, a provision in a bill of lading, in consideration of a higher freight rate, that the cargo therein specified "is covered by marine insurance while on board, * * * under and in accordance with and subject to the conditions and limitations of policies of marine insurance held by" the carrier, must be construed as an obligation on the part of the carrier to pay the shipper's loss under the same contingencies as permitted it, through its reinsurance, to throw the loss on its own insurers.[95]

§ 4310. Estoppel to Deny Liability to Deliver in Good Order.—A ship, which received a cargo, carried it to the consignees at the port of destination, and then libelled the cargo for freight, is estopped to deny her liability to deliver in like good order as received, with the usual exceptions, and the fact that the master of the ship refused to sign the bill of lading, upon the ground that the cargo was not in good order, is immaterial.[96]

§ 4311. Persons and Vessels Liable.—Owners of Vessel.—The owner of a vessel is never liable as a carrier merely by virtue of his ownership. The vessel must also have been in his employment, so as to make him a party to the

89. Wrecking or stranding of vessel.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; Propeller Niagara v. Cordes (U. S.), 21 How. 7, 16 L. Ed. 41; The Portsmouth (U. S.), 9 Wall. 682, 19 L. Ed. 754.

90. Bixby v. Deemar, 4 C. C. A. 559, 54 Fed. 718.

A steamboat, going through an inland passage, grounded from the reflux of the tide, and fell over, so that bilge water rose into the cabin and injured a box of books. Held, that the owners of the boat were responsible for this injury, though the bill of lading excepted "dangers of the navigation," and though the grounding of the boat was unavoidable, as the carriers were bound to remove the books from the cabin before the water reached them. Charleston, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Bason (S. C.), Harp. 262.

91. Bixby v. Deemar, 4 C. C. A. 559, 54 Fed. 718.

92. The Guildhall, 12 C. C. A. 445, 64 Fed. 867; Peterson v. Schultze-Berge, 12 C. C. A. 445, 64 Fed. 867, affirming decree, 58 Fed. 796.

93. Effect of insurance.—See ante, "Effect of Insurance," §§ 1023-1029.

94. Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav., etc., Co., 165 Fed. 356. See Baker & Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 162 Fed. 496, affirmed in 168 Fed. 248.

95. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., 179 Fed. 133.

96. The Water Witch (U. S.), 1 Black 494, 17 L. Ed. 155.

contract for carriage. The party having the control of the vessel, and in whose business it is engaged, is regarded as the owner pro hac vice, and as such is answerable to the freighter.[97] The owner of a chartered vessel, retaining control of her navigation, is liable for injuries to a part of the cargo occasioned by unaccustomed and dangerous goods subsequently taken aboard.[98] Where a shipmaster agreed to take the defendant's schooner, for the purpose of getting employ in the freighting business, and engaged "to victual and man her, and pay half of all port charges, pilotage, etc.; and the defendant engaged to pay the other half, together with eight dollars per month for one man's wages, and to put the schooner in sufficient order for the business; and all money so stocked in the schooner, whether for freight or passage, or whatever, was to be equally divided between the master and defendant, each party accounting for the above," it was held that the contract did not make him and the defendant partners, and that the defendant was not answerable to a shipper of goods which had not been delivered according to the bill of lading.[99] It is not necessary that the owners of a boat shall always receive or be entitled to a reward for the carriage of goods, in order to render them liable for a loss; if there was an agreement between the master and the owners, or between the owners themselves, by which the master in the one case, or some of the owners in the other, were to receive to their use exclusively, the freight earned in whole or in part by the boat, such an agreement would not exempt all the owners from liability; unless it was known to the shipper at the time his shipment was made.[1] But a shipper of cotton can not recover for its loss of all the owners of a boat carrying goods for hire where he makes a special contract with some of the joint owners, without the knowledge of the others, by which the freight is to go in extinguishment of a demand of the shipper against the owners with whom the contract was made.[2] The part owners of a steamboat are liable for the torts of the master, who is also a part owner, done in the execution of the business on which the boat is engaged.[3]

Vessel.—Whenever the owners of a ship are liable for injury to her cargo, the ship is also liable.[4] The liability of a vessel in rem for want of due diligence in the care and custody of goods received on board for transportation is the same whether the owners of the ship remain in possession as carriers, or whether the terms of the charter party are such as to constitute a demise of the vessel for the voyage, so as to render the charterers the owners pro hac vice, and alone personally responsible for the transportation.[5] Where the owners of certain steamboats formed an association, and appointed a common agent, with authority to sign bills of lading, under an arrangement by which the bills were frequently signed on delivery of the goods at the landing, and the goods were to be taken by the first boat which passed, the name of which was usually entered in the bill when the goods were received on board, it was held that, where goods were destroyed at the landing after the bills of lading were signed, the fact that no particular boat was mentioned therein would not prevent the maintenance of a libel against the next boat which passed the landing, and upon which the goods would have been shipped.[6]

Consignee Furnishing Towage.—The consignee of a cargo, having assumed by his contract the duty of furnishing towage, can not relieve himself from liability for the manner in which it is performed by the employment of a towing

97. Owners of vessel.—Tuckerman v. Brown (N. Y.), 17 Barb. 191.

98. Owner retaining control of navigation.—The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. 174.

99. Cutler v. Winsor (Mass.), 6 Pick. 335, 17 Am. Dec. 385. See Denny v. Cabot (Mass.), 6 Metc. 90.

1. Jones v. Sims, 9 Port. 236, 33 Am. Dec. 313.

2. Jones v. Sims, 9 Port. 236, 33 Am. Dec. 313.

3. Taylor v. Brigham, Fed. Cas. No. 13,781, 3 Woods 377.

4. Vessel.—The Huron v. Simmons, 11 O. 458.

5. The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. 174.

6. The Guiding Star, 53 Fed. 936, judgment affirmed in 62 Fed. 407, 10 C. C. A. 454.

company, and is responsible to the vessel for any damage or injury caused by the negligent manner in which the service is performed by such company.[7]

Failure to Furnish Covers for Lighter.—Where the agent of a steamship company, to facilitate unloading employed a lighter without covers, and agreed on behalf of the steamship company to furnish the covers, which he failed to do, resulting in injury to the cargo from rain, the lighter was not liable in rem, but the agent was primarily, and the steamship company secondarily, liable.[8]

Loss Through Negligence of Lighter.—Where an ocean carrier undertook to transship goods, and employed a lighterage company for the service, they are jointly liable for a loss of the goods through the negligence of the lighterage company.[9]

§§ 4312-4327. Actions—§ 4312. By Carrier.—Right of Carrier to Maintain Action.—A carrier by water of merchandise may maintain an action in his own name for its loss or injury, and may sue in admiralty as well as at common law.[10] The carrier's right of action is not defeated by the fact that the loss has been paid by an insurer or that he is doing business under a fictitious or trade name, and that contracts of affreightment are made in such name.[11]

§§ 4313-4327. Against Carrier—§ 4313. In General.—Jurisdiction of Admiralty.—Where the cargo, or a portion thereof is not delivered, or delivered in a damaged condition by the fault of the master, the right to proceed in admiralty to recover the damage sustained is clear.[12]

Prerequisites to Bringing Action.—See ante, "Conditions Precedent," § 875; "Prerequisites to Bringing Action," § 960; "Conditions Precedent," § 1034.

Nature and Form of Action.[13]—Consignees or shippers may proceed in the admiralty in rem against the vessel to enforce their maritime lien, or they may waive that lien and still proceed in the admiralty in personam against the owners of the vessel to recover damages for the nonfulfillment of the contract, or they may elect to bring a common action against the owners to recover damages, as in other cases for the breach of a contract to be executed on land.[14] Assumpsit lies against the owner of a steamboat in favor of the owner of the goods for breach of a contract of the master within the scope of his authority resulting in injury to the cargo shipped.[15]

Who May Maintain Action.—To sustain an action against a carrier for loss

7. Consignee furnishing towage.—Thompson v. Winslow, 128 Fed. 73.

8. Failure to furnish covers for lighter.—The Seven Bros. No. 1, 203 Fed. 21, 121 C. C. A. 385.

9. Loss through negligence of lighter.—Smith v. Booth, 122 Fed. 626, 58 C. C. A. 479, affirming 110 Fed. 680.

10. Right of carrier to maintain action.—The Nonpariel, 149 Fed. 521. See ante, "Right of Carrier to Maintain Action," § 808.

Libelant, a lake carrier, which contracted for the carriage of merchandise from New York to Chicago, and afterwards chartered the respondent canal boat to carry the cargo from New York to Buffalo, to be there transshipped, made such contract in the capacity of shipper, and as such may maintain a suit in rem against the canal boat to recover for damages to the cargo during the shipment. The Presque Isle, 140 Fed. 202.

Right of action assignable.—See ante, "Right of Carrier to Maintain Action," § 808.

11. Loss paid by insurer—Doing business under fictitious name.—The Nonpariel, 149 Fed. 521.

12. Jurisdiction of admiralty.—O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469, 18 S. Ct. 140; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. Ed. 788, 9 S. Ct. 469; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The Belfast (U. S.), 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. Ed. 266; The Habil, 100 Fed. 120; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank (U. S.), 6 How. 343, 12 L. Ed. 465.

13. Nature and form of action.—See ante, "Form of Action," § 876; "Nature of Action," § 955; "Nature and Form," § 1032; "Nature and Form of Action," §§ 2095-2058.

14. The Belfast (U. S.), 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. Ed. 266. See The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; The Atlas, 93 U. S. 302, 23 L. Ed. 863.

15. Assumpsit.—Bell v. Wood (Ky.), 1 Dana 146.

of or injury to goods or for delay in delivery the plaintiff must be the owner or have some special interest in them.[16] A consignee of goods may sue in a court of admiralty, either in his own name, as agent, or in the name of his principal, as he thinks best.[17] One who contracts to furnish a certain lot of cattle to be carried by a ship, agreeing to pay for any detention of the ship while waiting for them, may, without proof that the cattle are his, there being no stipulation that they should be, recover on the stipulation in the contract for payment by carrier of expense of feed, in case of delay in sailing.[18] A claim by the carrier that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover because he was not the owner of the goods is not sustained, where the evidence showed that he had possession of the goods with the right to sell and collect the proceeds.[19] A charterer of a vessel to carry a cargo of which he is not the owner, but merely the agent for its sale on commission, has no legal interest therein which will support an action against the vessel for its loss or damage; nor can he maintain such action as trustee for the owner, who was not a party to the charter.[20]

Applying Part of Claim for Damages to Extinguish Claim for Freight.—Parties claiming damages for loss of goods resulting from the fault of the master and crew can not split up the claim for damages by applying a part to extinguish the claim for freight, and taking a decree for the remainder.[21]

§ 4314. Pleading.—In Common-Law Action.—The same rules govern pleadings in a common-law action against a carrier by water as govern in actions against other common carriers.[22] A petition alleging that defendant agreed to transport plaintiff's corn by river as a common carrier, and that the sinking of the barge and the loss of the corn were caused by the negligence of defend-

16. Who may maintain action.—See ante, "Right to Maintain Action against Carrier," §§ 809-811. See, also, ante, "Rights of Action," §§ 2059-2062; "Parties Plaintiff," §§ 2064-2066.

Illustration.—Where plaintiff, having a grub-staking contract with certain miners, providing for the delivery of outfits to them at an Alaskan port in consideration of one-half of the profits of the mining venture, and pursuant thereto purchased and shipped the outfits by defendant's steamer, which was lost, so that the outfits were never delivered at destination, plaintiff was still the owner, and was therefore entitled to sue for the damages sustained. Plaintiff was still entitled to sue as the trustee of an express trust, even if the title to the outfits passed to the firm, consisting of himself and the persons to whom the outfits were to be delivered, and should be regarded as the owner of the goods from the time they were delivered to the steamship for transportation. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

17. Consignee.—Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58; McKinlay v. Morrish (U. S.), 21 How. 343, 16 L. Ed. 100.

The consignee of a cargo may maintain an action in admiralty against the vessel for an injury to his interest therein, and, when he is vested with the legal ownership by an assignment of the bill of lading, he may recover for any breach of the contract made by such bill of lading; but where there was no bill of lading, and he has no interest in the cargo, if he is, in any event, authorized to recover against the vessel on behalf of the consignor, it can only be such damages as result from a breach of the contract between shipper and carrier, and arising after the cargo has been received on board. The Habil, 100 Fed. 120.

A party who has made advances on the cargo of a ship, and been treated as consignee by the owners, has such a title as enables him to libel the ship for damages to the cargo. The Water Witch (U. S.) 1 Black 494, 17 L. Ed. 155.

18. Person making contract of shipment.—Morris v. Wilson Sons & Co., 114 Fed. 74, 52 C. C. A. 22.

19. Sanbern v. Wright, etc., Lighterage Co., 171 Fed. 449.

20. Agent selling on commission.—The Ask, 156 Fed. 678.

21. Applying part of claim for damages to extinguish claim for freight.—The Water Witch (U. S.), 1 Black 494, 17 L. Ed. 155.

22. Pleading in common-law actions—Actions for nondelivery or misdelivery.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 880-882.

Actions for delay.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 961, 964.

Actions for loss or injury.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 1038-1051.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 2067-2075.

Actions against connecting carriers.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 3792-3797.

ant, its officers and employees, was not objectionable for indefiniteness of the allegation of negligence.[23]

In Admiralty.—The rules of pleading in the admiralty are exceedingly simple and free from technical requirements. It is incumbent on the libelant to propound with distinctness the substantive facts on which he relies; to pray, either specially or generally, for the relief appropriate to them; and to ask for such process of the court as is suited to the action, whether in rem or in personam.[24] Where a bill of lading provides that notice of any claim for loss or damage to the property must be given to the carrier within a stated time after delivery, the failure to give such notice is a matter of defense in a suit to recover for such loss or damage, and performance of the requirement need not be alleged in the libel.[25] It is incumbent on the respondent to answer distinctly each substantive fact alleged in the libel, either admitting or denying, or declaring his ignorance thereof, and to allege such other facts as he relies upon as a defense, either in part or in whole, to the case made by the libel.[26] The admiralty courts are generally very liberal in the matter of amendments. But amendments in matters of substance should not be allowed on the hearing unless the justice of the case requires it, and then to conform to the proof, and in no case should an amendment be allowed on the hearing which would change the entire cause of action.[27]

§ 4315. Issues, Proof and Variance.—In Common-Law Actions.—The general rules as to issues, proof and variance apply in common-law actions against carriers by water for less of or injury to property[28] or for delay in transportation or delivery.[29]

In the admiralty there are no technical rules of variance or departure. The court decrees upon the whole matter before it, taking care to prevent surprise, by not allowing either party to offer proof touching any substantive fact not alleged or denied by him.[30] An allegation of negligence of the master will not let the libelant in to prove unseaworthiness of the vessel.[31]

23. Sufficiency of allegation of negligence.—Marsden Co. v. Bullitt & Co., 72 S. W. 32, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1697.

24. Pleading in admiralty.—Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

The same technical minuteness is not necessary in a libel as in a declaration at common law. Only the essential facts need be alleged, without regard to particular forms, either in contract or tort. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank (U. S.), 6 How. 343, 12 L. Ed. 465.

The admiralty court is not precluded from granting the relief appropriate to the case appearing on the record, and prayed for by the libel, because the entire case is not distinctly stated in the libel. Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

25. The Tampico, 151 Fed. 689.

26. Answer.—Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

27. Amendment.—The Habil, 100 Fed. 120.

28. Issues, proof and variance. — See ante, "Issues, Proof and Variance," § 883; "Issues, Proof and Variance," §§ 1052-1055.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Issues Raised by Pleading," § 2076; "Variance," § 2078.

29. Actions for delay.—See ante, "Issues, Proof and Variance," § 965.

30. In admiralty.—Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584.

On a libel by the consignee of goods against a vessel for nondelivery of the same—the defense being that the goods were subject to the lien of the vessel for freight and that the libelants improperly refused to pay it—any supposed misconduct of a bailee of the goods, not before the court, with whom the goods had been stored on the refusal of the consignee to pay freight and take them away, is a question not involved in the pleadings. And if on such a state of pleadings the defendants prove their defense, they are entitled to a decree in their favor irrespective of any such supposed misconduct of the bailee. The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

31. Lawrence v. Minturn (U. S.), 17 How. 100, 15 L. Ed. 58; McKinlay v. Morrish (U. S.), 21 How. 343, 16 L. Ed. 100, explaining why the rule of pleading was not endorsed in Lawrence v. Minturn, supra.

§§ 4316-4326. Evidence—§§ 4316-4319. Presumptions and Burden of Proof—§ 4316. In General.[32]—In an action against a carrier by water for injury to goods the plaintiff must, in the first instance, show that the goods were delivered to the carrier in an undamaged condition and were in a damaged condition when delivered to the consignee. And in an action for loss of property the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the carrier failed to deliver the goods to the consignee, but slight evidence will be sufficient to throw upon the carrier the burden of showing delivery to the consignee.[33] The plaintiff makes a prima facie case by proving that the goods were received by the carrier for transportation and that it failed to deliver them according to contract.[34] When it is shown that goods, when delivered by a vessel which was the last carrier to the consignee, were deficient in quantity, the presumption is that the missing goods were delivered to such vessel, and the burden rests upon her to prove that she delivered all that she received.[35] Where through bills of lading for boxes of goods recited that the weight and quantity were unknown, the burden rests upon the shipper to show their weight, when received, in order to hold the last carrier liable for a claimed short weight in the quantity delivered.[36] But where bills of lading for cargoes of phosphate specified the quantity, but contained the further statements, "weight and quantity unknown," or "weight unknown," the burden rests upon the shipowners to account for any discrepancy between the quantity delivered and that specified.[37]

Necessity of Proving Negligence, Value of Lost Freight or That Defendant a Common Carrier.—See ante, "Plaintiff's Burden of Proof in General," § 1056.

Condition of Goods When Received by Carrier.—See ante, "Condition of Goods When Received by Carrier," § 1058.

Notice of Claim for Damages.—Where a bill of lading exempts the ship from liability "for any claim, notice of which is not given before the removal of the goods" and the failure to give such notice is set up by respondent as a defense, the burden rests upon libelant to prove the notice, as a condition to the right of recovery, it being an affirmative fact peculiarly within his knowledge.[38]

Benefit of Insurance.—Under a provision of a bill of lading giving the carrier, in case of loss or damage to the property for which it is liable, the benefit of "any insurance that may have been effected upon or on account of such property," the burden rests upon the carrier, when sued for a loss to prove that there was insurance, to the benefit of which it was entitled.[39]

§ 4317. Cause of Loss or Injury to Goods.—After the shipper has shown that the goods were delivered to the carrier in good condition and that it failed to deliver them or delivered them in a damaged condition the presumption is that the carrier was negligent and it has the burden of proving that the loss or damage resulted from some cause for which it was not responsible.[40] Thus the

32. Presumptions and burden of proof.—See ante, "Presumptions and Burden of Proof," § 884; "Presumptions and Burden of Proof," §§ 1056-1060.

Actions for delay.—See ante, "Burden of Proof and Presumptions," § 967.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Presumptions and Burden of Proof," §§ 2079-2086.

33. See ante, "Plaintiff's Burden of Proof in General," § 1056.

34. Prima facie case.—The E. M. Norton, 15 Fed. 686; Mallory Steamship Co. v. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 154 S. W. 282.

35. The Ghazee, 172 Fed. 368, 97 C. C. A. 66.

36. The Seneca, 172 Fed. 370, 97 C. C. A. 68, reversing 163 Fed. 591.

37. Planters' Fertilizer Mfg. Co. v. Elder, 42 C. C. A. 130, 101 Fed. 1001.

38. Notice of claim for damages.—The Westminster, 127 Fed. 680, 62 C. C. A. 406.

39. Benefit of insurance.—Baker & Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 168 Fed. 248, affirming 162 Fed. 496.

40. Carrier must prove itself not responsible.—The La Kroma, 138 Fed. 936; Mallory Steamship Co. v. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 154 S. W. 282. See Holland v. Gammett, 5 La. Ann. 705, holding that after the damage is proved, the ship must show it did not happen on carrier has the burden of proving that the damage was due to a risk excepted in the bill of lading,[41] such as perils of the sea.[42] Where damage was caused by sea water, the burden rests on the vessel to show sufficient stress of weather to warrant the inference that such water found access to the cargo through a peril of the sea.[43] Where it satisfactorily appears that sea perils have been encountered adequate to cause damage to a seaworthy ship, and there is general proof of seaworthiness, the damage is presumptively due to such perils.[44] Extraordinarily rough weather warrants a finding of damage to cargo or baggage by sea perils, provided proof of ordinary good stowage is first given by the ship; but this preliminary burden is on the ship, and can not rest in mere presumption.[45]

Under a bill of lading acknowledging receipt of goods in good order and excepting dangers of the sea, the vessel has the burden of proof to show that damage to the cargo was occasioned by an expected peril,[46] or that it was not in good order when received.[47] board. See ante, "Defendant's Burden of Proof in General," § 1057.

Act of God.—The burden is on the carrier to show that the injury was by the act of God, for which the company was not liable. Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Transportation Co. v. Downer (U. S.), 11 Wall. 129, 20 L. Ed. 160; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, 15 S. Ct. 537; The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. Ed. 1039, 17 S. Ct. 597.

Peculiar nature of property.—Where the goods shipped are alleged to have been impaired by the dampness of the vessel during passage to her port of delivery, the burden of proof is upon the carrier to show that the loss arose from the peculiar nature of the property. Nelson v. Woodruff (U. S.), 1 Black 156, 17 L. Ed. 97; Clark v. Barnwell (U. S.), 12 How. 272, 13 L. Ed. 985; Rich v. Lambert (U. S.), 12 How. 347, 13 L. Ed. 1017.

The breaking of a greatly unusual number of bags in which a cargo of sugar was shipped in discharging raises a presumption of negligence on the part of the ship in handling, and, if unexplained, renders the carrier liable to the shipper for the loss and expense resulting. The Asiatic Prince, 103 Fed. 676.

41. Excepted risk.—The Patria, 132 Fed. 971, 68 C. C. A. 397, affirming 125 Fed. 425; The Henry B. Hyde, 32 C. C. A. 534, 90 Fed. 114; Graham & Co. v. Davis & Co., 4 O. St. 362, holding that the carrier must show that proper care and skill were exercised to prevent the loss.

With respect to the liability of a common carrier for loss or damage to goods, while in his possession, the question as to the burden of proof is not one of pleading but of primary liability, and where goods were received by a vessel in good condition, but delivered in a damaged condition, the ship has the burden of proof to show that the injury was due to some cause within the exceptions of the bill of lading to avoid liability although the libel may allege a specific ground of negligence. The Medea, 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273, reversing decree, 173 Fed. 498.

42. Perils of sea.—The Rappahannock, 173 Fed. 829, reversed on another point in 184 Fed. 291, 107 C. C. A. 74; The Italia, 184 Fed. 366, modified in 187 Fed. 113, 109 C. C. A. 33; The Frey, 106 Fed. 319, 45 C. C. A. 309; Insurance Co. v. Easton, etc., Transp. Co., 97 Fed. 653; The Westminster, 127 Fed. 680, 62 C. C. A. 406, affirming 116 Fed. 123; Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming The Queen, 78 Fed. 155, and reversed on another point in The Queen of the Pacific, 21 S. Ct. 278, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. Ed. 419.

43. The Folmina, 153 Fed. 364, 82 C. C. A. 440, affirming 143 Fed. 636.

Where goods are returned to the port of shipment greatly damaged by sea water, a presumption arises of negligence on the part of the carrier. The Queen, 78 Fed. 155, decree affirmed in Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, which is reversed on another point in The Queen of the Pacific, 21 S. Ct. 278, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. Ed. 419.

44. The Sandfield, 79 Fed. 371, affirmed in 92 Fed. 663, 34 C. C. A. 612.

45. The Kensington, 88 Fed. 331, decree affirmed in 94 Fed. 885, 36 C. C. A. 533, which is reversed on other grounds in 22 S. Ct. 102, 183 U. S. 263, 46 L. Ed. 190.

46. Acknowledging receipt of goods in good order.—The Lockport, 197 Fed. 213; Argo Steamship Co. v. Seago, 101 Fed. 999, 42 C. C. A. 128; The Presque Isle, 140 Fed. 202.

Where cotton was receipted for by a ship as in good condition, but was in bad condition when delivered at destination, the vessel is prima facie liable for the injury, and has the burden of proof to establish its exercise of proper care. Insurance Co. v. Leyland & Co., 191 Fed. 161, 111 C. C. A. 641, reversing judgment, 171 Fed. 524.

47. Argo Steamship Co. v. Seago, 101 Fed. 999, 42 C. C. A. 128.

Where damage to cargo was prima facie within the exceptions in the bills of lading, the burden is on the shipper to show that the loss occurred through the carrier's negligence.[48] Thus, to entitle a shipper to recover for damage to cargo from heat when liability for such damage is excepted in the bill of lading, he has the burden of showing that such heat was caused by the ship's negligence.[49] Where a cargo shipped under bills of lading containing exceptions of damage by collision was damaged as the result of a collision, wherein the other vessel was clearly shown to be guilty of inexcusable fault, it was held that in order to hold the vessel which carried the cargo liable, the burden was on the plaintiff to defeat the operation of the exception in the bills of lading by proof of such negligence on her part as would justify a decree against her if sued alone.[50]

Insufficient Protection.—Where a bill of lading for packages of firecrackers contained the usual printed clause exempting the carrier from liability for breakage, or for loss or damage arising from the nature of the goods or insufficiency of the packages, and also contained a stipulation signed by the shipper to the effect that the steamer was not accountable for chafage or breakage to insufficiently protected property, and that the packages were frail, on proof of breakage of the packages the carrier, relying on such indorsement for exemption, had the burden of proof to establish that the damage was due to insufficient protection.[51]

§ 4318. Stowage of Goods.—Where the bill of lading under which merchandise is shipped exempts the carrier from liability for damage to the goods "if properly stowed," if the goods are damaged the burden of proving proper stowage is on the carrier.[52] Where a bill of lading contains exceptions in behalf of the vessel of breakage and leakage and of dangers of the sea, and the cargo owner maintains that the true cause of injury to the cargo was improper stowage, the burden of maintaining this proposition rests on the cargo owner.[53] And

48. Where damage within exceptions in bill.—The Citta Di Messina, 169 Fed. 472; The Lennox, 90 Fed. 308; The Henry B. Hyde, 32 C. C. A. 534, 90 Fed. 114.

If a loss is manifestly due to a risk excepted in the bill of lading as from breakage or decay, which are excepted generally, the ship need not show the cause of the breakage or decay, but the cargo owner can only recover by proof of negligence. The Patria, 132 Fed. 971, 68 C. C. A. 397, affirming 125 Fed. 425.

Breakage or leakage.—Under a libel alleging injury to goods in shipment from breakage, where the bill of lading exempted the carrier from liability from breakage, the burden is on the libelant to show that the breakage occurred through negligence. The Henry B. Hyde, 90 Fed. 114, 32 C. C. A. 534, affirming 82 Fed. 681; Wright v. Grace & Co., 203 Fed. 360.

Where a shipment of olive oil in barrels was made under a bill of lading containing a clause that "the owner is not responsible for * * * leakage, breakage, land damage or any other injury resulting from the natural condition of the goods shipped or their deficiency of packing not externally recognizable," but also had a clause, "not accountable for leakage or breakage" stamped across it in large letters in different colored ink, the latter clause prevails over the one in the printed form, and to recover from the vessel for a loss resulting from leakage and breakage the shipper has the burden of proof to show negligence, which can not be inferred from the fact alone that the loss was greatly in excess of the normal, especially where second-hand barrels were used, some of which had been patched. The Konigin Luise, 185 Fed. 478, 107 C. C. A. 578, reversing decree 173 Fed. 811.

In the absence of some fault such as negligent stowage, the burden is on the libelant to show that the damage might have been prevented by reasonable skill and diligence on the part of the servants of the vessel. Lazarus v. Barber, 136 Fed. 534, 69 C. C. A. 310, affirming 124 Fed. 1007.

49. Damage from heat.—The Good Hope, 197 Fed. 149, 116 C. C. A. 573, affirming 190 Fed. 597; The Baralong, 172 Fed. 220, 97 C. C. A. 24.

50. Damage by collision.—The Victory, 18 S. Ct. 149, 168 U. S. 410, 42 L. Ed. 519, reversing 68 Fed. 395, 15 C. C. A. 490.

51. Insufficient protection.—Doherr v. Houston, 128 Fed. 594, 64 C. C. A. 102, affirming 123 Fed. 334.

52. Burden of proving proper stowage.—Montague v. The Isaac Reed, 82 Fed. 566.

53. Crowell v. Union Oil Co., 107 Fed. 302, 46 C. C. A. 296.

A vessel which was new, properly con-where a ship during the voyage encountered storms of such violence as to reasonably account for the opening of her deck seams and the consequent damage to her cargo from water, the burden of proof rests upon the cargo owner to establish a claim made by him that improper stowage of the cargo caused or contributed to the strain on the vessel's deck and the resulting injury thereto.[54]

Stowage on Deck.—Where, in an action on a bill of lading for the loss of goods shipped by a vessel of the defendant, the defendant relies on the defense that the goods were inflammable and therefore within an exception which permitted such goods to be stowed on deck at the owner's risk, the burden of proof is on the defendant to establish this defense.[55]

Where a vessel is not a common carrier, proof of loss of cargo alone does not cast upon her the burden of proof to show proper stowage; but the cargo owner must prove the negligence affirmatively.[56]

§ 4319. Seaworthiness or Fitness of Vessel.—Where the proof shows damage to the cargo, the burden is cast upon the ship to establish the fact of seaworthiness, or to show due diligence in ascertaining whether or not she was in fact seaworthy, and in making her so at the beginning of the voyage.[57] And where the cargo is lost by the sinking of the ship the burden of proving seaworthiness at the beginning of the voyage rests upon the shipowner.[58] Where disaster overtakes a vessel soon after the beginning of her voyage, without stress of weather or other adequate cause appearing, the presumption is that she was unseaworthy when the voyage commenced,[59] and the burden rests on the owner structed and in all respects seaworthy can not be held liable for leakage under bills of lading exempting her from loss on that account and from weather, heat, and perils of the sea, unless it is affirmatively shown that there was negligence in the stowage which it should reasonably have been anticipated would cause such damage, and the libelant must make out a case showing the cause of injury with sufficient clearness before the burden is cast upon the vessel to show that the exemption is broad enough to cover the damage. The Oceana, 171 Fed. 172.

54. Where vessel encounters storms.—The Musselcrag, 125 Fed. 786.

55. Stowage on deck.—Tower Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 184 Mass. 472, 69 N. E. 348.

56. Where vessel not common carrier.—The Rokeby, 202 Fed. 322.

57. Seaworthiness of vessel.—The Ninfa, 156 Fed. 512. See The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 38 L. Ed. 688, 14 S. Ct. 823; The Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 24 S. Ct. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65; Mallory Steamship Co. v. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 154 S. W. 282.

Defective fitting of port.—Where a cargo is injured by a leak caused by the defective fitting of a port, the burden is on the ship to show that the port was tight at the time of sailing. The Phœnicia, 99 Fed. 1005, 40 C. C. A. 221, affirming 90 Fed. 116.

The breaking of a section of cast-iron pipe extending from engine room of a steamship to a tank in the forepeak along the floor of the hold, allowing water to escape into the hold and injure the cargo therein, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, authorizes an inference that the ship was unseaworthy as to the cargo placed in the hold at the beginning of the voyage, by reason either of defects in the pipe or the boxing, and the burden rests upon the vessel to overcome such inference. The Indrapura, 190 Fed. 711.

58. The Oneida, 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A. 239, reversing 108 Fed. 886.

59. Disaster soon after beginning voyage.—The Listie, 197 Fed. 1022; Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper & Co., 185 Fed. 733; The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167; Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming The Queen, 78 Fed. 155, and reversed on another point in The Queen of the Pacific, 21 S. Ct. 278, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. Ed. 419. See Sanbern v. Wright, etc., Lighterage Co., 171 Fed. 449, affirmed in 179 Fed. 1021, 102 C. C. A. 666.

Proof that a vessel within a few hours after leaving port, and before encountering any peril of the sea, sprung a-leak from defective butts in her bottom, and that, in addition, her steam pump was not in good working order, and broke down when put in use, raises a presumption that she was unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, which is not rebutted by evidence merely of previous diligence. Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Anderson, 186 Fed. 145, 108 C. C. A. 257.

If a defect without any apparent cause develops, it is to be presumed it existed when the service began. Work v. Leathers, 97 U. S. 379, 24 L. Ed. 1012; The to avoid liability for cargo lost or injured to overcome such presumption by showing affirmatively that the ship was seaworthy.[60] Where a barge careened and dumped its cargo while lying in a sheltered basin without known external cause[61] or a lighter capsized when the water was still, there being no other explanation than that there was an ordinary swell from a passing steamer,[62] there is a presumption of unseaworthiness. A provision of a bill of lading exempting the carrier from liability for loss or damage occasioned by unseaworthiness, provided the owners had exercised due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy, leaves upon the owners the burden of proving such due diligence, which includes thorough and careful inspection.[63] Where it appears that a boat, sinking without apparent cause, was actually seaworthy, the presumption of unseaworthiness from the sinking is overcome.[64] Storms encountered during a voyage, although they may have been an adequate cause for an injury to the vessel resulting in leakage and damage to the cargo, are not sufficient to relieve the carrier from the burden of proving seaworthiness, where they were not of such an unusual character but that they should have been anticipated, and it is not shown that the injury could not have been provided against by proper inspection and care with respect to the part injured before sailing, and such inspection was not made, nor care exercised.[65] The fact that the beams of the main hatch of a vessel had been cracked some time previous to a voyage, and on the discharge of her cargo, at the end of the voyage, were found to be in worse condition and her deck to have sunk in consequence, where the vessel encountered a hurricane during the voyage, which would account for her condition at its end, did not overcome the presumption of her seaworthiness when she sailed, arising from the fact that the beams had been repaired and strengthened, and that her classification had been kept up thereafter on repeated surveys, and had not expired.[66] The fact that a single rivet, among many thousands used in the construction of a vessel's hull, was not as strong as the average, and parted under the stress of extraordinary stormy weather, does not raise a presumption of unseaworthiness, rendering the owner liable for a resulting damage to the cargo.[67]

When Burden on Shipper.—The warranty that a ship is fit at the beginning of a voyage to safely carry the cargo received by her, which is implied where the bill of lading is silent, can not be implied if the parties have contracted otherwise; and in such case the burden of proof is not upon the carrier, but upon the shipper, who must show the carrier's negligence to entitle him to recover for loss or damage to cargo.[68]

§ 4320. Necessity of Producing Bill of Lading.—See ante, "Necessity

Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65, 24 S. Ct. 1.

Vessel sinking at dock.—A vessel some 50 years old, which had been used as a steam propeller until she had become unfit for such service, and afterwards converted into a freight barge, sank at a dock with her cargo during the night, after she had been loaded. The evidence showed that the immediate cause of her sinking was a leak due to the springing of a plank in her hull, the spikes which held it having become loosened. The only peril to which she was subjected was that from the swells caused by passing vessels, and that was one which was usual and ordinary, and was withstood by other vessels at the dock without injury. Held, that the presumption arising from such facts was that the barge was unseaworthy, and that her sinking was due to that cause, in the absence of evidence establishing some other adequate cause. Forbes v. Merchants' Exp., etc., Co., 11 Fed. 796.

60. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper & Co., 185 Fed. 733.

61. Careening of barge.—United States Metals Refin. Co. v. Jacobus, 205 Fed. 896, 124 C. C. A. 209.

62. Capsizing of lighter.—Insurance Co. v. North German Lloyd Co., 106 Fed. 973, affirmed in 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1.

63. The Friesland, 104 Fed. 99.

64. When presumption overcome.—The America, 174 Fed. 724.

65. The Aggi, 93 Fed. 484.

66. The Guadeloupe, 92 Fed. 670.

67. The Sandfield, 92 Fed. 663, 34 C. C. A. 612, affirming 79 Fed. 371.

68. When burden on shipper.—The Tjomo, 115 Fed. 919.

of Producing Bill of Lading," § 885; "Necessity of Producing Bill of Lading," § 1061.

§ 4321. Admissibility of Evidence.—The rules governing the admissibility of evidence in actions against common carriers generally apply in similar actions against carriers by water.[69] In an action to recover for damage to cargo from leakage of the vessel, evidence that directions as to the manner of loading were given the agents of the vessel by libelant, which directions were not followed, was competent.[70] An allegation that the vessel was wrecked and the merchandise lost on account of defendant's negligence, and without fault on plaintiff's part, raises the issue of defendant's negligence, and authorizes the admission of evidence that the vessel was being operated without a full complement of officers, required by statute.[71] In an action by a shipper against a carrier for loss of oil clothing (shipped under a bill of lading providing that inflammable goods shall be transported if the carrier choses, on deck or elsewhere, and shall be at the shipper's risk), which goods were carried on the deck of defendant's steamer, became loose during a storm, and were thrown overboard to save other goods from damage and to prevent their interfering with the navigation of the vessel, defendant, by introduction, without objection, of the deposition of the steamer's captain that the oil clothing was stowed on deck because of their inflammable nature, laid a foundation for introduction of evidence to show a general usage that because of its character it was customary among steamship companies to stow oil clothing on deck, and to class it as inflammable goods.[72] And where in such action a custom treating oil clothing as inflammable was shown, evidence that the shipper's oil clothing was difficult to ignite, and on ignition did not burst into flame, but only charred, was properly excluded.[73]

Parol Evidence.—Evidence of an oral agreement made at the time the contract of transportation was made to vary and contradict it, is incompetent.[74] And

69. Admissibility of evidence—Actions for nondelivery or misdelivery.—See ante, "Admissibility of Evidence," § 886.

Action for loss or injury.—See ante, "Admissibility of Evidence," §§ 1062-1066.

Actions for delay in transportation.—See ante, "Admissibility of Evidence," § 968.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Admissibility of Evidence," §§ 2087-2094.

Actions against connecting carriers.—See ante, "Admissibility of Evidence," §§ 3802-3804.

Evidence as to authority of agent.—On an issue as to the apparent authority of a carrier's agent, B., to receive money for transportation from Boston to Finland, evidence that on a previous occasion another had gone to the same office where such business was transacted, and was directed by defendant's superior agent to B., to transact her business with, and that she gave B. $20 and had purchased certain tickets from Finland to America, which she directed B. to send to Finland to her brother, and that the brother received the money and tickets, and that B.'s letters forwarding the tickets and money were copied in the letter books in the office, and an advertisement in which B. was described as the manager of defendant's Finnish department, was admissible as bearing on B.'s authority and defendant's knowledge of what he had done. Rintamaki v. Cunard Steamship Co., 91 N. E. 220, 205 Mass. 115.

70. That directions not followed.—Donaldson v. Perry Co., 138 Fed. 643, 71 C. C. A. 93.

71. That vessel without full complement of officers.—Rev. St. § 4463 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3045); Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

72. General usage.—Tower Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 69 N. E. 348, 184 Mass. 472.

73. Tower Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 195 Mass. 157, 80 N. E. 809.

74. Parol evidence.—Where a contract recited that second parties were desirous to ship by vessel certain lots of hard lumber, and the first party agreed to carry on his vessels any and all of the lumber, as may be desired by the parties of the second part, evidence that at the time the contract was executed it was understood that the second parties had about a certain quantity of lumber, which it was expected by both parties would be shipped under the contract, or that they orally promised to ship the same on the vessels of the first party, is inadmissible to show that they were bound by the contract, since by its express terms they were given the option to ship "any or all" of it thereunder. Dennis v. Slyfield, 117 Fed. 474, 54 C. C. A. 520.

where the only exception specified in the bill of lading is "dangers of the river," parol evidence can not be received to show a custom among the persons who were engaged in navigating the river, which exempted the owners of the boat from liability for a loss caused by the forcible and illegal seizure of the boat by a body of armed men, without fault or neglect on the part of the officers or crew.[75] Though parol evidence of an agreement that goods shipped under a clean bill of lading should be carried on deck is inadmissible,[76] yet such evidence may be received to show a supplemental agreement for a particular mode of stowage under deck.[77]

Documentary Evidence.—On an issue as to the authority of an agent to receive money for transportation by a carrier, the receipt for the money, the agent's card showing that he was acting as agent for defendant, and not on his own account, and untranslated letters in Finnish, copied in defendant's letter book, relating to its business, were admissible as bearing on the extent of his apparent authority and defendant's knowledge or means of knowledge of his acts.[78]

Illegal Custom.—In an action against a ferryman for the loss of a horse and wagon by his neglect to put up the chain at the end of his boat, he can not give in evidence a custom at other ferries on the same river to put up the chain at the request of passengers, and not otherwise.[79]

Evidence as to Damage.—Where a shipment of coffee was damaged on the voyage through the fault or negligence of the carrier, who had knowledge of the damage after its arrival, the consignee was not bound to sell it at public sale or on public notice, but in a suit against the ship to recover the damage may show that its market value in its damaged condition was no greater than the price for which it was sold at private sale.[80]

§§ 4322-4326. Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence—§ 4322. In General.—The general rules as to weight and sufficiency of evidence in actions against common carriers generally apply in similar actions against carriers by water.[81] A ship may sustain the burden of proof resting on her to show that

75. The Belfast, 40 Ala. 184, 88 Am. Dec. 761, overruling Steele v. McTyer, 31 Ala. 667, 70 Am. Dec. 516.

76. The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Star of Hope, Fed. Cas. No. 13,313, 2 Sawy. 15, affirmed in 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

77. The Star of Hope, Fed. Cas. No. 13,313, 2 Sawy. 15, affirmed in 17 Wall. 651, 21 L. Ed. 719.

78. Documentary evidence.—Rintamaki v. Cunard Steamship Co., 205 Mass. 115, 91 N. E. 220.

79. Illegal custom.—Miller v. Pendleton (Mass.), 8 Gray 547. See Lewis v. Smith, 107 Mass. 334.

80. Evidence as to damage.—United Steamship Co. v. Haskins, 181 Fed. 962.

81. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.—See, generally, ante, "Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence," § 887; "Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence," § 969; "Weight and Sufficiency," § 1084.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Weight and Sufficiency," §§ 2095-2103.

Evidence insufficient to establish negligence.—The San Paulo, 207 Fed. 51, 124 C. C. A. 611.

Evidence insufficient to show that valves closed when steamer sailed.—The Manitou, 127 Fed. 554, 63 C. C. A. 109, affirming 116 Fed. 60.

Evidence held to show apparent authority of agent.—Rintamaki v. Cunard Steamship Co., 91 N. E. 220, 205 Mass. 115.

Evidence insufficient to show damage the result of defective coverings on goods.—Doherr v. Houston, 123 Fed. 594, 64 C. C. A. 102.

Evidence showing that sufficient notice of arrival and reasonable time to take charge of freight not given to consignee.—Rosenstein v. Vogemann, 184 N. Y. 325, 77 N. E. 625, affirming 92 N. Y. S. 86, 102 App. Div. 39.

Evidence insufficient to rebut presumption of negligence.—A cargo of sugar was damaged on a voyage from Java to Boston by sea water which entered around loosened bolts securing in place a wooden scroll work under the ship's figure-head, and extending some feet from the prow on either side of the vessel. These bolts extended through the ship's plates, being fastened by nuts on the inside, and were in such position that water entering through the holes would readily flow into the fore peak, where the sugar damaged was stowed. The action of the seas upon the scroll work, especially in rough weather and when the ship was heavily cargo damage was due to a cause for which she is not liable by circumstantial evidence as to the manner in which the water causing the damage entered the hold, and in the absence of direct evidence the court is justified in adopting her theory in that respect, where the facts and circumstances shown are consistent with such theory and not consistent with any other.[82] Where, in an action for damages to merchandise alleged to have been produced by sea water caused by a leakage of the vessel, the preponderance of the evidence did not show that the laden, would naturally tend to gradually loosen the nuts on such bolts. The bolts had not been inspected for two years, and there was no evidence showing whether or not the nuts were loose at the beginning of the voyage, except the testimony of the officers that there was no leakage on the previous voyage. On the voyage the ship was heavily laden and encountered some heavy weather, but not more than should have reasonably been anticipated. Held that, the evidence was not sufficient to overcome the presumption of fault which arises against the carrier when goods are damaged during their transportation. The Aggi, 107 Fed. 300, 46 C. C. A. 276.

When damage occurred.—Evidence held to require a finding that wool was injured by being stored with wet wool on the lighter or steamer that carried it to destination, and not by being negligently stored while waiting terminal transportation. Sanbern v. Panama R. Co., 205 Fed. 348, 123 C. C. A. 423.

The new steamer P., on her first voyage from Hamburg to New York, when in midocean, on January 25th, was discovered to have a leaking port, by which cargo in compartment No. 4 was damaged. The port could not be screwed tight, so as to stop the leak, until the outside iron blind was removed. When that was removed, the port was screwed water-tight. Upon arrival in New York the brass ring of the glass door was found to be bent inward at the top and bottom 1/16 of an inch, on a vertical axis. The port in question was near the bridge, about 2½ feet above the water line, and 175 feet aft of the stem. A few bolts were found a little loosened about this port, and in its vicinity, and there were some scratches there; but no bolts were loosened, nor was damage done, for 75 feet or upward forward of the port, nor until about abreast of the foremast, where there was again some damage on the same starboard side of the ship, which arose from contact with fender on entering Havre or departing. The expert evidence showed that violent contact with the side of the ship where the port was might cause the glass door to be sprung, or the blind to catch, as it was found when the leak was discovered. There was no proof of such inspection at Hamburg before the ship sailed as would show the port to have been then water-tight. Held, that the evidence failed to show that the leak was caused after sailing, by contact at Havre, and hence the ship was liable. Decree 90 Fed. 116, affirmed in The Phœnicia, 99 Fed. 1005, 40 C. C. A. 221.

Evidence not showing that fire caused by overheating flue.—The donkey boiler of a steamship was directly under the deck where a portion of the cargo was stored. The top of the boiler was 10 or 12 feet above the fire, and a flue in its furnace extended from its top to the main boiler funnel, its nearest point to the roof being 19 inches therefrom. The entire shell of the boiler contained water, and there were four transverse water tubes in the interior. Expert witnesses testified that it would be almost impossible for the heat in the boiler to make the flue red-hot; and that such a fire would cause the steam to explode the boiler, if the safety valve did not lift, and warn the men. The use of the boiler did not require a heat sufficient to overheat the flues, and to maintain such a heat was contrary to instruction, and the testimony of witnesses who saw the flue before and after the fire indicated that it had not been red-hot. A former employee of the steamship, who had been discharged for bad conduct, and who was shown to have sworn falsely as to other matters tending to discredit the owners, testified that the flue was red-hot. The cargo was on planks on an iron deck over the boiler room. Between the flue and the deck were three baffle plates, leaving three 3-inch air spaces and one 10½-inch air space between the flue and the roof. Experts testified that the deck could not have become hot enough to set fire to the cargo. Held not sufficient to warrant a finding that the cargo caught fire as a result of the flue becoming overheated. Decree 94 Fed. 206, affirmed in The Strathdon, 101 Fed. 600, 41 C. C. A. 515.

Evidence held to show that damage due to water pumped on lighter by steamer.—Johnstone v. Furness, etc., Co., 172 Fed. 1016, affirmed in 179 Fed. 1019, 102 C. C. A. 664.

Evidence showing that injury caused by brine leaking from citron barrels negligently stowed.—Lazarus v. Barber, 136 Fed. 534, 69 C. C. A. 310, affirming 124 Fed. 1007.

82. The Wildcroft, 130 Fed. 521, 65 C. C. A. 145, affirmed in McCahan Sugar Refin. Co. v. Steamship Wildcroft, 26 S. Ct. 467, 201 U. S. 378, 50 L. Ed. 794.

damage occurred while the merchandise was in the charge of the ship or under its control, and the majority of the witnesses heard were present at the examination of the goods, and unable to determine whether the damage was the result of sea water, the ship was not liable.[83]

That Port Opened by Thief.—In an action for damages to a cargo of cigarettes by leakage resulting from negligently leaving a port open, evidence that cigarettes were found missing from the cargoes of other steamers of this line, and that the situation of the port was such as to make theft possible, and that on arrival at the ship's destination some of the boxes were found misplaced, was not sufficient to excuse defendant by showing that the port had been opened feloniously in an attempt at theft.[84]

§ 4323. Delivery to Carrier.—Upon the issue whether goods claimed to have been shipped in a foreign port, but which were not delivered by the carrier, were in fact received on board, the acts of the ship's officers, whose customary duty it is to check off merchandise received aboard, is received as evidence of great importance.[85] Bills of lading, signed for the master, and acknowledging the receipt of goods on the ship, even though shown to have been executed by a duly authorized agent of defendant, are insufficient to prove delivery of the goods to defendant for carriage, where plaintiff's evidence further shows that when they were executed the goods had not been received on board ship, nor consigned to the care of a master, but were in a public warehouse, registered in the name of a third party, and that there was no vessel in port.[86]

§ 4324. Condition of Vessel.—Where all the direct evidence was to the effect that a steamer was seaworthy when she entered on her voyage, it can not be inferred from the fact that a short time before she had met with two accidents, in one of which she was slightly injured, that her seaworthiness was thereby impaired, in the absence of affirmative evidence that she was in fact injured thereby in her hull or machinery.[87] Evidence that damage to chemicals and rags in a cargo from sea water resulted from leaks in the steamer's ballast tank, which was found after heavy weather to be sprung, and the rivets started and broken, is not sufficient to establish unseaworthiness where first-class construction, careful inspection, and good stowage are shown.[88] In the appended note are cited decisions where the evidence was held sufficient or insufficient to show unseaworthiness.[89]

83. Clastrier v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 18 La. Ann. 621.

84. That port opened by thief.—The Manitoba, 104 Fed. 145.

85. Delivery to carrier.—Kelley v. Cunard Steamship Co., 120 Fed. 536.

86. Cunard Steamship Co. v. Kelley, 115 Fed. 678, 53 C. C. A. 310.

87. Condition of vessel.—The Longfellow, 104 Fed. 360, 45 C. C. A. 379.

88. The British King, 92 Fed. 1018, 35 C. C. A. 159, affirming 89 Fed. 872.

89. Evidence held to show unseaworthiness of the vessel.—The Good Hope, 197 Fed. 149, 116 C. C. A. 573; The Abbazia, 127 Fed. 495; The William Power, 131 Fed. 136; Neilson v. Coal, etc., Supply Co., 122 Fed. 617, 60 C. C. A. 175, affirming The Nellie Floyd, 116 Fed. 80; The Gordon Campbell, 141 Fed. 435.

Evidence held to sustain a finding that damage to a cargo of flaxseed from water on a voyage from Duluth to Buffalo resulted from the defective condition of the hatch coverings, which rendered the vessel unseaworthy at the commencement of the voyage, having in view the nature of the cargo, the time of the year, and the weather to be fairly anticipated. The C. W. Elphicke, 122 Fed. 439, 58 C. C. A. 421, affirming 117 Fed. 279.

Same—By reason of improper stowage.—Corsar v. Spreckels & Bros. Co., 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378; The Medea, 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273.

Evidence not showing proper inspection.—A cargo was injured by sea water which entered the vessel through a hole which had been worn and eaten by corrosion through the iron bottom of a valve chest three-eighths of an inch thick. The peculiar liability to corrosion of iron in such place was well known, and, while there was evidence of inspection, it was not specific as to manner in which such inspection was made, and it did not appear that the valve chest had ever been removed for examination since it was placed in the ship nine years before, or even that the valve itself had been taken

Certificate of Seaworthiness.—It has been held a certificate of the seaworthiness of a vessel issued by the authorities is not conclusive evidence thereof in a shipper's action for injuries to a shipment due to a leak in the vessel.[90]

Construction of Vessel.—While, in determining whether or not the construction of a vessel rendered her unseaworthy, it is proper to consider evidence of the usual custom of shipowners and the usual method of construction of ships and their appliances, such evidence is not necessarily conclusive, and should be considered in the light of what would appear to be the prudent method of construction, and may be rejected entirely where the construction is obviously defective.[91]

§ 4325. Evidence as to Sea Perils.—The burden of showing how a leak arose, so as to bring the damage to cargo resulting therefrom within an exception in the bills of lading, was not discharged by simply showing that the ship was in a seaworthy condition at the commencement of the voyage, and presenting evidence which merely left in doubt the question as to how the leak arose.[92] The fact alone that damage to cargo was caused by sea water, without any evidence as to how the water entered the ship, is not sufficient to relieve the vessel from liability on the ground that the damage resulted from sea perils within an exception in the bill of lading, nor is it sufficient to show, in addition, that the ship encountered stormy weather on the voyage, which was no worse than should have been anticipated;[93] and testimony that on the voyage the vessel encountered gales which caused her to roll, and that rivets in her side were found loose on her arrival in port, is not alone sufficient, without showing that reasonable precautions had been taken to prevent the wetting of the cargo, and that the rivets were in place at the beginning of the voyage.[94] The fact that one vessel passed through a storm without injury to her cargo is not evidence of much weight on the question whether another, sailing two days after her, was subjected by such storm to unusual sea perils.[95] A libel to recover for damage to cargo is properly dismissed where the evidence leaves it uncertain whether the damage was caused by sea water or by sweat and heat, and the bill of lading exempted the vessel from liability for injury caused by perils of the sea or from sweat or decay.[96] In the appended note are set out decisions where the evidence out. Held, that such evidence did not show reasonably careful inspection, such as was incumbent upon the owners under a provision of the bill of lading requiring them to exercise due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy, in order to exempt them from liability. The Friesland, 104 Fed. 99.

Evidence not showing unseaworthiness.—The Marechal Suchet, 112 Fed. 440; The Tjomo, 115 Fed. 919; The Ontario, 106 Fed. 324, affirmed in Grubnan v. The Ontario, 115 Fed. 769, 53 C. C. A. 199.

Evidence considered, in an action against the owner of a lighter to recover for loss of her cargo through her sinking at a pier during the night, and held not to show that her sinking was due to unseaworthiness, but that it was caused by a blow received from some unknown vessel in collision with her, or from swells causing her to collide with a vessel or wharf alongside. National Board v. Bowring & Co., 148 Fed. 1010.

Evidence held to show that the sinking of a barge, 14 hours after being loaded as a lighter, and while still lying alongside the ship with another large steamship close on the other side, was caused by her being crushed between the two during a storm, and was not due to her unseaworthy condition, so as to render her owner liable for the loss of the cargo. The Samuel F. Houseman, 108 Fed. 875, 48 C. C. A. 120.

90. Certificate of seaworthiness.—Mallory Steamship Co. v. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 154 S. W. 282; The Abbazia, 127 Fed. 495.

91. Construction of vessel.—The Indrapura, 190 Fed. 711, affirming decree 178 Fed. 591.

92. Sea perils.—Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, affirming The Queen, 78 Fed. 155, and reversed on other grounds in The Queen of the Pacific, 21 S. Ct. 278, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. Ed. 419.

93. The Medea, 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273.

94. The Italia, 184 Fed. 366, decree modified in 187 Fed. 113, 109 C. C. A. 33.

95. The Hyades, 118 Fed. 85, affirmed in 124 Fed. 58, 59 C. C. A. 424.

96. The Folmina, 153 Fed. 364, 82 C. C. A. 440, affirming 143 Fed. 636.

was held sufficient or insufficient to show that the damage was caused by sea perils.[97]

§ 4326. Short Delivery.—Where the testimony of the officers and crew of a steamer concurred that all the lumber loaded by a charterer was delivered at the end of a voyage, a shortage can not be established by testimony on behalf of the charterer as to the quantity loaded, based entirely on an estimate of the total quantity on the dock, from which the witnesses deducted the quantity carried by two other vessels.[98] Where a ship is liable for loss in a cargo of coffee by reason of rats having eaten holes in the mats in which it was packed during the voyage, the weight of the coffee when placed in the mats at interior plantations is sufficient, prima facie, to establish the amount of the shortage.[99] In determining a question of shortage of weight of sugar cargo, the custom house weight is entitled to superior credit as against a subsequent unofficial weight, taken after the sugar had been stored for fifteen months, including two summers.[1]

§ 4327. Trial.—Province of Court and Jury.—In actions against carriers by water the same rules govern as to the province of court and jury as govern

97. Evidence held to show that damage resulted from sea perils.—The Patria, 118 Fed. 109; The Wildenfels, 161 Fed. 864; The Hyades, 118 Fed. 85, affirmed in 124 Fed. 58, 59 C. C. A. 424; The Frey, 106 Fed. 319, 45 C. C. A. 309; The Marechal Suchet, 112 Fed. 440.

The steamer Ontario encountered heavy weather in crossing the Atlantic, during which the seams of the ballast tank, which was constructed of iron plated riveted together, were sprung, and two rivets were lost, permitting leakage into the hold above, by which a portion of the cargo stowed therein was injured. The ship had been surveyed, and her tanks tested, but two months prior to the voyage, and had been given a certificate of classification in the highest class. Proper inspection had been made before entering on the voyage, and the tanks tested by pressure, and found tight. In the opinion of all the officers, who were called as witnesses by libelant, the leak was caused by the straining of the ship in the heavy weather during the voyage, and there was no evidence tending to contradict such opinion, or to show that the rivets lost were in any way defective in material or workmanship. Held, that the leakage was properly attributable to excepted perils of the sea. The Ontario, 106 Fed. 324, affirmed in Grubnan v. The Ontario, 115 Fed. 769, 53 C. C. A. 199.

At the close of a stormy voyage on which a steel steamer was damaged about her decks, had her wheel chains parted, and her propeller shaft fractured by heavy seas, a leak was discovered around a rivet in the after port bilge. Three-sixteenth of an inch of the outer end of the rivet was gone; the end of the remaining part showed evidence of fracture. This bilge had been sounded daily before the heavy weather began, and had been opened and cleaned by the crew before the loading of the cargo. No water was entering it at such times. Held, upon evidence of similar loss of rivet heads in previous cases, probably from excessive vibration through the racing of the propeller in rough weather, that the rivet was fractured by that cause, which was a peril of the sea. The Sandfield, 79 Fed. 371, decree affirmed in 92 Fed. 663, 34 C. C. A. 612.

Evidence insufficient to show that damage caused by danger of navigation.—The cargo of grain carried by a steamer from a Lake Superior port to Buffalo was found on arrival to have been damaged by water escaping from a crack in the main feed pipe running through the cargo space between the boiler and engine. Such construction was not unusual, and the vessel had an A1 rating, but had been built for 11 years, during which time the pipe had not been renewed, and had not been thoroughly inspected for more than a year, being covered with asbestos and inclosed in a box, which had not been removed in that time. Rough weather was encountered on the voyage, but not worse than was to be expected at the season. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the burden of proof resting on the vessel to show that the damage resulted from a danger of navigation within the exception of the bill of lading, rather than from a defect in the pipe which rendered her unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage. The Rappahannock, 184 Fed. 291, 107 C. C. A. 74.

Evidence held to show that loss did not arise from inevitable accident.—Elliott v. Rossell (N. Y.), 10 Johns. 1, 6 Am. Dec. 306.

98. Short delivery.—The Minnie E. Kelton, 109 Fed. 164, 48 C. C. A. 271.

99. The Rose Innes, 122 Fed. 750.

1. Custom house weight.—Linklater v. Howell, 88 Fed. 526.

in similar actions against other carriers.[2] Where a cattle shipper sued for breach of a contract to lease him cattle space on defendant's line of ocean steamers, and

2. Province of court and jury—Actions for nondelivery or misdelivery.—See ante, "Questions for Jury," § 901.

Actions for loss or injury.—See ante, "Province of Court and Jury," §§ 1086-1087.

Actions for delay.—See ante, "Province of Court and Jury," § 970.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Questions for Jury," §§ 2105-2113.

Particular questions for jury.—Appellee sued appellant to recover the value of a buggy, sample trunks, and contents, which he placed on board one of appellant's steamers to ship from Paducah to Smithland. The defense was that the property was lost by "act of God," in that it was blown off the boat by a violent and unusual wind. The evidence is conflicting as to whether the wind was more violent than may be expected in the ordinary course of nature, and is not conclusive that the means adopted for the security of the buggy and contents were such as to protect it against the ordinary perils of the voyage. Held, that in this state of case these questions were properly submitted to the jury. Evansville, etc., Packet Co. v. Rehkoph, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 650.

Whether defendant a common carrier.—Where, in an action against defendant for loss of a cargo of brick it was towing for plaintiff under private contract, there was evidence that defendant's boats carried passengers, produce, and merchandise, and that they received all freight offered for transportation on the river at M., most of which was brought in empty barges as they returned from towing coal, while defendant's proof was that the boats had no terminal nor times of arrival nor departure, and did all towing by private contract for others when there was no work to do for a certain drain company, and then only did such work as they saw fit to take, whether defendant held itself out as a common carrier for the time being was for the jury. Bassett v. Aberdeen Coal, etc., Co., 88 S. W. 318, 120 Ky. 728, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1122.

What constitutes peril of the sea.—Where the excessive violence of the sea is the efficient cause of the shifting of cargo, causing damage thereto, whether it constitutes a peril of the sea, within the exception in the bills of lading, is a question of fact, to be determined upon the circumstances of each case, depending upon whether a seaworthy vessel, properly trimmed and with the cargo properly stowed, would ordinarily go through such seas without material injury to its cargo. The Frey, 106 Fed. 319, 45 C. C. A. 309.

Whether stay in port negligence.—Where a steamer's call at an intermediate port during seven voyages made the previous year had averaged 5 5/7 days, a stay on a subsequent voyage extending to 11 days, including 2 Sundays, a holiday, and 1½ days of rain, was not negligence per se. Decree 168 Fed. 386, affirmed in The Toronto, 174 Fed. 632, 98 C. C. A. 386.

Whether carrier guilty of conversion.—Freight packed in a brandy case could not be found after an inspection of "those parts of the ship where such things were likely to be." The carrier promised to look further, and, finally, after repeated inquiries by the owner, announced that the box could not be found. Pending an action for conversion, however, it was found in a locker in the forepeak of the ship. There was nothing to show how it got there, except testimony of the chief officer, who said that on some voyage, but whether on the one in suit he could not be certain, he had had some whisky cases containing signals moved to the locker. Why the locker had not been searched for the freight was not shown. Held, that the question whether the carrier was guilty of conversion was for the jury. Wamsley v. Atlas Steamship Co., 56 N. Y. S. 284, 37 App. Div. 553.

A box of negatives and prints disappeared from the storeroom of a ship, and were thereafter found on the ship. There was no evidence as to the manner of its removal from the storeroom, though the circumstances raised the presumption that it had not been removed from the ship. Held that, though the carrier might possibly have been liable for negligence, he was not responsible, as a matter of law, in an action for conversion, and the court's refusal to charge that "he could only be made liable on proof of actual conversion of the box of negatives" was reversible error. Wamsley v. Atlas Steamship Co., 61 N. E. 896, 168 N. Y. 533, 85 Am. St. Rep. 699, reversing 63 N. Y. S. 761, 50 App. Div. 199.

Authority of agent—Whether goods delivered to defendant.—Goods were purchased by an agent, to be exported to the purchasers; the sellers contracting to deliver the same on board ship at their expense, which was required to be done by means of lighters. The sellers deposited the goods in the name of their own agent in a public warehouse, from which they could be removed only on the order of the agent. While so stored bills of lading for the goods were executed by an agent of a steamship company to the purchaser's agent; no vessel of the company being then in port. On arrival of the ship on behalf of which the bills were executed, goods purporting to be those sold and covered by the bills of lading were delivered on board by the sellers, and accepted. In a subsequent action by the the evidence that plaintiff informed defendant that he had a contract for commissions on the purchase and sale of stock intended to be shipped, and was not shipping as owner, was conflicting, the question was for the jury.[3] Where in an action against a carrier for conversion of lumber shipped by plaintiffs as part of defendant's cargo, plaintiffs testified that defendant's agent at destination refused to recognize them, or deliver the lumber to the person to whom it was billed, unless he would pay the freight on the entire cargo, and also the purchase price of the lumber, and defendant testified that neither plaintiffs nor other parties having lumber in the shipment would receive the same, because unsuitable, and that later defendant's agent sold a portion of the shipment to plaintiffs, it was held error to withdraw from the jury all questions of fact save the value of the lumber at destination.[4] Though in an action by a shipper against a carrier, a steamship company, for loss in a storm of oil clothing carried on the steamer's deck, there is ample uncontradicted evidence of a custom of steamship companies to classify oil clothing as inflammable goods, and as such to carry them on deck, raising a presumption that both parties to the contract of shipment knew it, and that it was thus part of their contract, the presumption is one of fact for the jury.[5]

Direction of Verdict.—Where the evidence showed that plaintiff's jack was in good condition when delivered to defendant carrier; that the animal refused to go upon the plank leading to the boat; that when dragged towards it he fell over, and was carried upon the boat; and that when he reached his destination he was badly bruised, and died in a few days, it was error to direct a verdict for defendant.[6]

Instructions.—The same rules governing instructions in actions against carriers generally govern in actions against carriers by water.[7] Where the evidence in a shipper's action showed that the defendant did not exercise due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy, the court properly refused to instruct that defendant was not required to make it seaworthy, but was required only to use due diligence in such respect.[8]

Verdict and Judgment or Decree.[9]—Although one of several owners, who sailed a ship on shares under an agreement whereby he became the charterer, is sued jointly with the other general owners, in a libel which does not describe him as owner pro hac vice, a decree may be made against him alone.[10]

§§ 4328-4336. Damages—§ 4328. Failure to Receive and Carry According to Contract.—The measure of damages for the refusal of a vessel purchaser against the steamship company for nondelivery of the goods, the authority of defendant's agent to issue the bills of lading, under the circumstances shown, was in dispute. Defendant also introduced evidence tending to show that a fraudulent substitution had been made in the warehouse, and that the goods received on board were not in fact those covered by the bills of lading. Held, that the questions of the agent's authority to issue the bills, and whether there was an actual delivery of the goods to defendant, were under the evidence both questions for the jury, upon which plaintiff had the burden of proof. Cunard Steamship Co. v. Kelley, 115 Fed. 678, 53 C. C. A. 310.

3. Brauer v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 73 N. Y. S. 291, 66 App. Div. 605, modifying 69 N. Y. S. 465, 34 Misc. Rep. 127.

4. Beedy v. Pacey, 22 Wash. 94, 60 Pac. 56.

5. Tower Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 69 N. E. 348, 184 Mass. 472.

6. Direction of verdict.—Jones v. Memphis, etc., Packet Co. (Miss.), 21 So. 303.

7. Instructions—Actions for nondelivery or misdelivery.—See ante, "Instructions," § 902.

Actions for loss or injury.—See ante, "Instructions," § 1088.

Actions for delay.—See ante, "Instructions," §§ 970-972.

Actions against carriers of live stock.—See ante, "Instructions to the Jury," § 2114.

8. Mallory Steamship Co. v. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 154 S. W. 282.

9. Verdict and judgment or decree.—See ante, "Verdict and Judgment," § 903; "Verdict," § 973; "Judgment," § 974; "Verdict," § 1089; "Verdict and Findings," § 2115.

10. Thorp v. Hammond (U. S.), 12 Wall. 408, 20 L. Ed. 419.

to fulfill its contract of affreightment is the difference necessarily paid by the shipper to procure an equal service in advance of the contract price, and such other damage as unavoidably flows from the breach of the carrier's contract.[11] A shipper who contracted for the transportation to a foreign market of a certain quantity of hay each week can not recover damages for the failure of the carrier on some occasions to take the required quantity, where it is not shown that there was any request that the deficiency should be made good in subsequent shipments, or any tender of the quantity necessary therefor, or that libelant suffered any actual loss by reason of the breach of the contract.[12]

Duty to Minimize Damages.—Where a steamship company breaches a contract to carry a shipment of lumber and machinery on a given date, it is its duty to minimize the damages resulting therefrom.[13]

§ 4329. Failure to Deliver or Misdelivery.—See ante, "Damages," §§ 888-900; "Damages for Wrongful Delivery," § 1781.

§ 4330. Delay in Transportation or Delivery.—See ante, "Damages," §§ 926-954; "Damages for Delay in Transportation and Delivery," §§ 1796-1826.

§§ 4331-4336. Loss or Injury—§ 4331. In General.—The shipper may recover the actual damages sustained as the direct and necessary consequence of the loss of or injury to his goods. Remote and speculative damages are not recoverable.[14] Where goods damaged in shipment, for which damage the ship is liable, the invoice value being made the basis of settlement by the bill of lading, are sold on their arrival, the freight paid thereon or due should be deducted from the proceeds, and the remainder only credited to the carrier against the invoice value, to determine the amount of his liability.[15]

Special Damages.—See ante, "Special Damages," § 1079.

Exemplary Damages.—See ante, "Exemplary Damages," § 1080.

Right to Abandon Goods.—See ante, "Right to Abandon Goods," § 1071.

Loss of or Injury to Live Stock.—See ante, "Elements of Damages," §§ 1853-1858.

§ 4332. Measure and Elements of Damage.—Loss of Goods.[16]—The measure of damages for goods lost in shipment, on which the freight had been prepaid, is their market value at the place of destination at the time when they should have been delivered, with interest from that date,[17] and, in the absence of proof of such value, it will be presumed to have been their value at the place of shipment, with the freight added.[18] Where the loss of goods occurs

11. Refusal to fulfill contract.—Miners' Co-op. Ass'n v. The Monarch, 2 Alaska 383.

12. Failure to carry weekly shipment according to contract.—Bloomingdale v. Wilsons, etc., Line, 105 Fed. 384.

13. Duty to minimize damages.—Revett v. Globe Nav. Co., 56 Wash. 550, 106 Pac. 176.

14. Actual damage sustained.—See ante, "In General," § 1068.

15. The Styria, 95 Fed. 698.

16. Loss of goods.—See ante, "Loss of Goods, § 1069.

17. Market value at destination.—The Nith, 36 Fed. 86, 13 Sawy. 368; The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167, cited in Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230. See The Vaughan (U. S.), 14 Wall. 258, 20 L. Ed. 807; Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; Dyer v. National Steamship Co., Fed. Cas. No. 4,226, 7 Ben. 395. See ante, "Loss of Goods," § 1069.

Rate of interest.—An admiralty rule fixing the rate of interest to be allowed on judgments entered on a bond or stipulation for the release of property libeled has no application to a judgment for breach of a contract of carriage, in which case the legal rate of interest of the state may properly be allowed. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper & Co., 185 Fed. 733.

That a decree against a shipowner for loss of cargo includes interest to the date of its entry does not make it error to award interest on the entire decree from that time forward. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper & Co., 185 Fed. 733.

18. The Arctic Bird, 109 Fed. 167.

Where there is no market at the place of destination the measure of damages is the market value of the goods lost at the place of destination at the time when they

at the place of loading before the voyage begins, the carrier is liable for their value at such port.[19] Where the contract of shipment provides in detail for the carrier's compensation and the deduction therefrom for goods lost in transit caused by the sinking of the boats used in the transportation thereof, the price of the goods lost by the sinking of the boats as fixed by the contract must fix the allowance to the shipper on that account.[20]

Injury to Goods.—The measure of damages recoverable from a vessel for damage to a cargo through its fault is the difference between the market value of the cargo at the port of delivery in its damaged condition and its value if it had been delivered in good condition, with interest from the time of delivery,[21] and other items of expenditure made necessary by reason of the damage.[22]

Expenses of Owner.[23]—Where goods have been lost it is held that the owner may recover his expenses in going to the point of destination to receive them.[24]

Profits.[25]—Where the owner of goods did not ship them with the view of realizing a profit on their sale, but for the purpose of using them in mining operations, the court should direct the jury to allow interest, instead of profits.[26] The shipper or owner can not recover for loss of a profit he would have made by delivery of the cargo on a prior contract of sale, which delivery was refused by the purchaser on account of its damaged condition; the vessel having no relation to such contract.[27]

Goods Having No Market Value.—See ante, "Goods Having No Market Value," § 1077.

Goods Shipped under Contract of Sale.—See ante, "Goods Shipped under Contract of Sale," § 1076.

When Damaged Goods Sold.—See ante, "When Damaged Goods Sold," § 1072.

§ 4333. Determination of Damages.—The value of goods damaged through the neglect of the ship is best determined by a public sale within a reasonable time after arrival, and intermediate market fluctuations are not to be regarded.[28] It has been held that where the cargo of a vessel has been sold by order of the court in a port to which it was brought by salvors, in proceedings regularly instituted by the owners to recover possession, the proceeds of the sale may properly be taken as its value for the purpose of making adjustment between the several parties in interest, although the proceeding by the cargo owners was unwarranted, and the cargo was sold for less than its actual value.[29]

§ 4334. Apportionment of Damages.—Where it appears that the greater part of the damage to a cargo resulted from sea perils for which the ship is not liable, but further damage occurred through the negligence of the master in fail-

should have been delivered, which the jury is authorized to ascertain by taking the price at the place of shipment and adding thereto the cost of carriage. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230; The Olympia, 156 Fed. 252; The Protection, 102 Fed. 516, 42 C. C. A. 489.

19. Goods lost before voyage begins.—Lakeman v. Grinnel, 18 N. Y. Super. Ct. 625; Krohn v. Oechs (N. Y.), 48 Barb. 127; Dusar v. Murgatroyd, Fed. Cas. No. 4,199, 1 Wash. C. C. 13.

20. Price fixed by contract.—White v. Toncray, 46 Va. (5 Gratt.) 179.

21. Injury to goods.—The Berengere, 155 Fed. 439; United Steamship Co. v. Haskins, 181 Fed. 962; United Steamship Co. v. Schilling & Co., 181 Fed. 965.

22. The Berengere, 155 Fed. 439.

23. Expenses of owner.—See ante, "Expenses of Owner," § 1075.

24. The Protection, 102 Fed. 516, 42 C. C. A. 489.

25. Profits.—See ante, "Profits," § 1078.

26. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

27. The Berengere, 155 Fed. 439.

28. Determination of damages.—The Earnwood, 83 Fed. 315. See ante, "In General," § 1070.

29. The Eliza Lines, 114 Fed. 307, 52 C. C. A. 195, modified on another point, 132 Fed. 242, 65 C. C. A. 538, and reversed on another point, 26 S. Ct. 8, 199 U. S. 119, 50 L. Ed. 115, 4 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 406.

ing to put into port to make repairs, it would be inequitable to hold the ship liable for the entire damage, although it can not be separated, and the loss should be divided.[30] Where a cargo has been damaged by independent causes, for only a part of which the ship is liable, the loss will not be equally divided nor cast wholly upon the ship except as a last resort, and when all means fail of making an approximate apportionment of the loss to the several causes of damages.[31] It has been held that where both the carrier and the shipper are in fault for damage to the cargo, the damage will be equally divided between them.[32] Where a shipment of wool was wetted and injured by contact with other wet wool on the lighter or the terminal steamship, and it was impossible to determine how much of the damage each contributed, they would be required to share the loss between them.[33]

§ 4335. Deductions.—Deduction of Freight Charges.—See ante, "Freight, Allowance and Deduction," § 1073. Under a bill of lading for cotton, which provided that loss or damage to the cotton should be computed on the basis of its value at the time and place of shipment, where it was delivered at destination in a damaged condition, the shipowner is not entitled to have the amount of the freight deducted from its value as ascertained pursuant to such provision.[34]

Deduction of Salvage Expenses.—It is the duty of a carrier of cargo which meets with disaster through the fault of the vessel to do what he can to minimize the damage, by which he profits as well as the cargo owner, and he is not entitled to a deduction of expenses so incurred from the damages recoverable by the cargo owner by reason of his loss.[35]

Deduction of Value of Damaged Goods—Determination of Value.—Where a ship carried a cargo of cotton from Charleston to New York, from which place it was to be forwarded to Liverpool, but under a separate and independent contract of affreightment, and the bill of lading provided that in case of loss or damage the value of the cotton in Charleston at the time of shipment should be taken as the basis for computing the damage to the cotton, which was injured before its delivery in New York through the unseaworthiness of the ship, it was held, that the contract of carriage terminated in New York, and the ship was entitled to credit for the value of the cotton in its damaged condition in that market, and not in the Liverpool market, and that it was error to give credit for the proceeds of its sale in Liverpool, less the freight from New York, the amount being materially less than would have been realized by its sale in New York.[36]

30. Apportionment of damages.—The Musselcrag, 125 Fed. 786.

31. The Shand, 16 Fed. 570, distinguishing Speyer v. The Mary Belle Roberts, 2 Sawy. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 13,240, and Snow v. Carruth, Fed. Cas. No. 13,144, 1 Spr. 324.

32. Tin was shipped from New York to Buffalo in an open boat, contrary to custom, and, by reason of heavy rains and some leaking of the boat, was delivered damaged. The evidence indicated that there had been a complete misunderstanding between libelant and claimant as to the hatches of the boat, the libelant supposing they were to be used, the claimant supposing the libelant waived the use of them. Held, that both were in fault for the damage, and that libelant should recover half his damage. Stillwell v. The J. D. Hall, 34 Fed. 904.

33. Sanbern v. Panama R. Co., 205 Fed. 348, 123 C. C. A. 423.

34. Deduction of freight charges.—The Oneida, 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A. 239, reversing in 108 Fed. 886.

35. Deduction of salvage expenses.—Ralli v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., 154 Fed. 286, 83 C. C. A. 290.

36. Deduction of value of damaged goods — Determination of value.—The Oneida, 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A. 239, reversing 108 Fed. 886.

Error of surveyors.—The cotton was shipped to Liverpool for sale in compliance with the recommendation of the surveyors who adjusted the loss, and with the knowledge of the shipowners, who made no objection. Held, that they were not bound by the erroneous decision of the surveyors, nor estopped to claim credit for the New York value of the cot-§ 4336. Evidence as to Value or Damage.—See ante, "Evidence as to Value or Damage," §§ 1082-1084; "Admissibility of Evidence," § 4321.

§ 4337. Lien of Shipper against Vessel.—Shippers have a lien by the maritime law upon the vessel employed in the transportation of their goods and merchandise from one port to another, as a security for the fulfillment of the contract of the carrier, that he will safely keep, duly transport, and rightly deliver the goods and merchandise shipped on board, as stipulated in the bill of lading or other contract of shipment,[37] unless the lien is waived by some express stipulation, or is displaced by some inconsistent and irreconcilable provision in the charter party or bill of lading.[38] But the law creates no lien on a vessel as security for the performance of a contract to transport a cargo, until some lawful contract of affreightment is made, and the cargo to which it relates has been delivered to the custody of the master or someone authorized to receive it.[39] So ton, where they at no time gave a positive assent to the substitution of the Liverpool value. The Oneida, 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A. 239, reversing 108 Fed. 886.

37. Liens of shipper against vessels.—Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; The Keokuk (U. S.), 9 Wall. 517, 19 L. Ed. 744; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Belfast (U. S.), 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. Ed. 266; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599; Miners' Co-Op. Ass'n v. The Monarch, 2 Alaska 383.

Usually the charter party contains a clause binding the ship to the merchandise and the merchandise to the ship, but the law merchant imposes that mutual obligation even if it be omitted. The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662.

38. Waiver of lien.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

39. Commencement of lien.—The Keokuk (U. S.), 9 Wall. 517, 19 L. Ed. 744; Vandewater v. Mills (U. S.), 19 How. 82, 15 L. Ed. 554; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; The Lady Franklin (U. S.), 8 Wall. 325, 19 L. Ed. 455; Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599; The Hiram, 101 Fed. 138.

"Bills of lading when signed by the master, duly executed in the usual course of business, bind the owners of the vessel if the goods were laden on board or were actually delivered into the custody of the master, but it is well-settled law that the owners are not liable, if the party to whom the bill of lading was given had no goods, or the goods described in the bill of lading were never put on board or delivered into the custody of the carrier or his agent." The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

The goods need not have been actually placed on the deck of the vessel. Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 9, 26 L. Ed. 998; Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599.

Delivery within reach of ship's tackle.—Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Callender, 183 U. S. 632, 46 L. Ed. 362, 22 S. Ct. 257.

Delivery to lighter.—Where goods were delivered at a steamboat company's dock for shipment, and it was thereafter found necessary to transport the goods to the steamer on a lighter, and they were damaged by the partial sinking of the lighter before reaching the steamer, the steamer was liable for the loss. The Pokanoket, 161 Fed. 383, affirmed in Petersburg, etc., Steamboat Line v. Norfolk-Virginia Peanut Co., 172 Fed. 321, 96 C. C. A. 383, 24 L. R. A., N. S., 569. See Insurance Co. v. North German Lloyd Co., 106 Fed. 973, affirmed in 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1.

In ports where it is necessary for a vessel drawing much water to lie outside of the bar and have her cargo brought to her by lighters, and the usage is for the lighterman to be engaged and paid by the captain of the vessel, to give his receipt to the factor for the cotton, and to take a receipt from the captain when he delivers it on board of the vessel, delivery of goods to the lighterman is a delivery to the master, and the transportation by the lighter to the vessel the commencement of the voyage, in execution of the contract by which the master engages to carry. Where a lighterman, thus employed, was conveying bales of cotton to a vessel lying outside of the bar, but before they were put on board, an explosion of the boiler threw the bales into the water, by which the cotton was damaged, the vessel was held responsible for the loss upon being libelled in a court of admiralty, the master having included these bales in the bills of lading which he signed. Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599.

Insufficient delivery.—A contract of affreightment can not be implied against a the owner of a cargo has no lien upon a vessel for injury to such cargo resulting from delay in preparing the vessel for loading which occurred before the cargo was received by the owners or their agents.[40] The lien to the shipper arises alike whether the contract of affreightment be by charter party, by bill of lading, or by parol.[41] The fact that a steamer was being operated under a charter, even if known to shippers, does not relieve her from a lien arising from default in her obligation to the cargo.[42] Bills of lading given by mistake,[43] or fraudulently obtained,[44] create no lien on the vessel.

Priorities.—The vessel is, by the maritime law, hypothecated to the shipper for his damages, from the time that the misfortune happens, and his claim against it is preferred to the right of the general creditors of the owners.[45] The shipper's right of preference may be lost by unreasonable delay;[46] but his lien is not defeated by a bona fide sale, before he has had an opportunity for enforcing it, and still less when the purchaser has knowledge of the claim.[47] The owners of a cargo of brick with which a barge sunk and which were not recovered for several months, did not, by delaying the making of a formal claim for damages against the vessel until after she had been raised and the cargo recovered, so that the extent of the loss could be definitely known, lose the right to assert a lien therefor as against the insurer of the barge, which in the meantime had bought and raised her, such purchaser having knowledge that there would be damage to the cargo, and being chargeable with notice of the legal rights of the owners.[48]

Enforcement of Lien.—The shipper may enforce his lien by process in rem against the vessel in the admiralty.[49] Where the maritime lien or privilege is transportation company from the fact that a man has loaded a barge belonging to the company, by means of his own men, without any knowledge by the company of what he has done, and then delivered bills of lading to the agent of a steamer of the line, the agent at the moment being very much engaged with other matters, just before the steamer, which it was expected by the shipper would tow the barge, sets off; no sufficient statement being made by the shipper, when so delivering the bills, what bills they are, and the agent himself having no knowledge of what has been done in the particular case, nor of the contents of the bills. The Keokuk (U. S.), 9 Wall. 517, 19 L. Ed. 744, distinguishing Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599.

Where, at the time complainant delivered goods on the wharf of a transportation company under a bill of lading reciting that the goods were to be shipped on board defendant company's vessel or vessels "now" lying at the port of S., complainant had knowledge that defendant's chartered vessel, the R. D., by which it was expected to ship the goods, was then either on the high seas or in a distant port, and the goods were never delivered to the master or officers of such vessel, the vessel was not subject to a maritime lien for defendant's breach of the contract of affreightment. Guffey v. Alaska, etc., Steamship Co., 130 Fed. 271, 64 C. C. A. 517.

40. The Hiram, 101 Fed. 138.

41. Miners' Co-Op. Ass'n v. The Monarch, 2 Alaska 383.

42. Steamer operated under a charter.—The Seaboard, 119 Fed. 375, citing Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341.

43. Bills of lading given by mistake.—The Lady Franklin (U. S.), 8 Wall. 325, 19 L. Ed. 455.

44. Bills of lading fraudulently obtained.—So held as to false bills of lading signed by the master without knowledge of the shipowner. Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 26 L. Ed. 998; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; The Lady Franklin (U. S.), 8 Wall. 325, 19 L. Ed. 455.

45. Priorities.—The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187, cited in Cole v. The Atlantic, Fed. Cas. No. 2,976, Crabbe 440; The E. Benjamin, Fed. Cas. No. 8,582, 4 Clark 25; The Planter, Fed. Cas. No. 11,207a, 2 Woods 490; The Illinois, Fed. Cas. No. 7,005, 2 Flip. 383; The Witch Queen, Fed. Cas. No. 17,916, 3 Sawy. 201.

46. Unreasonable delay.—The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187, cited in Knox v. Ninetta, Fed. Cas. No. 7,912, Crabbe 534; Packard v. The Louisa, Fed. Cas. No. 10,652, 2 Woodb. & M. 48.

47. The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187, approved in Cole v. The Atlantic, Fed. Cas. No. 2,976, Crabbe 440; Edwards v. The Robert F. Stockton, Fed. Cas. No. 4,297, Crabbe 580.

48. The G. B. Boren, 132 Fed. 887.

49. Enforcement of lien.—The Rebecca, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619, 1 Ware 187, cited in New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank (U. S.), 6 How. 343, 12 L. Ed. 465; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. 174.

created by the lex loci contractus, it will generally, although not universally, be respected and enforced in all places where the property is found or where the right can be beneficially enforced by the lex fori.[50]

§§ 4338-4378. Freight, Lighterage and Demurrage—§§ 4338-4354. Freight—§ 4338. In General.—The shipper, consignee, or owner of the cargo contracts to pay the freight and charges.[51] "Freight" is the hire or compensation paid for the use of a ship for carrying goods.[52]

§ 4339. Persons Entitled to Collect Freight.—The owners of a vessel, and not the master, have the right to collect the freight money, if the master has no claim against the owners for his services or otherwise.[53]

Under Agreement between Consignee and Charterer.—Whatever stipulations may have been made between the consignees of a cargo and the charterer of a vessel which transports them for the appropriation of the return freights, the right of the master to collect them from the consignees, after delivery to them of the goods, at least to the amount due on the charter party, can not be questioned. The delivery of the goods to the consignees, and their acceptance of them under the bill of lading, raises an assumpsit against them to pay freights according to the stipulations of the bill, and this implied obligation becomes a positive one when the goods are received with notice that the freights must be paid to the master, and not to the charterer.[54]

Purchasers at Sale in Admiralty Suit.—After the owners of a cargo which had been loaded on a vessel had advanced money on the bill of lading signed by the master and the advance credited thereon, the vessel was sold in an admiralty suit. The new owners, without notice to or negotiations with the cargo owners and without a new bill of lading being executed by the master, ordered the vessel to proceed with the cargo to the destination, afterward presenting to the cargo owners a new bill of lading signed by themselves but not by the master, and having no credit thereon, which the cargo owners refused to accept. There was no implied contract of carriage in such case, but that the vessel owners in proceeding without further agreement to carry out the contract made by their predecessor were bound by its terms, which they knew, and were entitled to collect only the balance of freight due thereon.[55]

Right of Neutral Carrier of Enemy's Property.—The general rule is that the neutral carrier of enemy's property is entitled to his freight. The captain takes the property cum onere, being substituted in lieu of the owners.[56]

Vessel Subchartered and Cargo Consigned under Special Bills of Lading.—Where a vessel was chartered for a voyage to a foreign port and back, and the agents of the charterers at the foreign port subchartered her to other persons there, who loaded her with goods consigned to parties in the home port, under special bills of lading, which did not refer to the original charter party; the 50. The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

Lien existing only by some local statute.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

Libelant not entitled to remedy by the lex loci contractus or place where cause of action accrued.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

Libelant citizen of country whose courts can not give same remedy to citizens of United States.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

Where court of admiralty not invested with jurisdiction.—The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772.

51. Freight, lighterage and demurrage.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

52. The Norman Prince, 185 Fed. 169.

53. Persons entitled to collect freight.—Richardson v. Whiting (Mass.), 18 Pick. 530. See Lewis v. Hancock, 11 Mass. 72.

54. Under agreement between consignee and charterer.—Adams v. Homeyer, 45 Mo. 545, 100 Am. Dec. 391.

55. Purchasers at sale in admiralty suit.—Chadwick v. Five Hundred and Seventy-Six Granite Blocks, 178 Fed. 140.

56. Right of neutral carrier of enemy's property.—The Fanny (U. S.), 9 Wheat. 658, 6 L. Ed. 184. But see The Commercen (U. S.), 1 Wheat. 382, 4 L. Ed. 116.

rights of the shipowners to the freight, payable by the consignees, and their lien for it upon the goods, depended entirely on the contract expressed in the bills of lading, and not upon any thing contained in the charter party.[57]

§ 4340. Persons Liable for Payment of Freight.—Where Goods Surrendered to Insurer.—The fact that the master on the wreckage of the vessel surrendered the cargo to the insurer without notice to respondent did not relieve the latter of liability for the freight; the insurer being responsible under its policy for the freight as well as the value of the cargo.[58]

Under Stipulation for Payment in Case of Loss.—The respondent shipped a cargo of flour, consigned to its own order under bills of lading providing that freight should be deemed earned, vessel or cargo lost or not lost. The flour was shipped under contracts of sale, and was insured by respondent in its own name for sufficient to cover the invoice price and freight. Respondent then indorsed the bills of lading and policies in blank, and attached them to drafts drawn on the purchasers for the selling price and cost of insurance, which were forwarded for collection. The vessel having been lost, that respondent was liable for the freight, whether its interest in the cargo was that of owner, or whether it merely retained a lien, since in either case the purchasers were to have possession only on payment of the drafts.[59]

Assignee of Consignee of Goods.—Where shipowners deliver the goods to the assignee of the consignee, the assignee, and not the consignee, is liable for the freight.[60]

§§ 4341-4343. When Freight Earned—§ 4341. In General.—The general rule is, that the delivery of the goods at the place of destination, according to the bill of lading, is necessary to entitle the ship to freight. Till then the freight is not earned. The conveyance and delivery is a condition precedent, and must be fulfilled.[61]

Offer of Delivery.—The freight is earned where a cargo is carried to the port of delivery, and the master offered to deliver it to the consignee who refused to receive it, on the ground that his government prohibited the landing of the cargo.[62]

Delivery of Part.—The master of a ship has no right to demand the freight upon the whole shipment when he is ready to deliver only a part of it.[63]

Delivery at Wharf.—Where plaintiff agreed to transport a cargo of goods and deliver them at a certain wharf, and on arrival at the designated place no

57. Vessel subchartered and cargo consigned under special bills of lading.—4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35.

58. Persons liable for payment of freight.—British, etc., Marine Ins. Co. v. Portland Flouring Mills Co., 124 Fed. 855, affirmed in 130 Fed. 860, 65 C. C. A. 344.

59. Under stipulation for payment in case of loss.—Decree, British, etc., Marine Ins. Co. v. Portland Flouring Mills Co., 124 Fed. 855, affirmed in 130 Fed. 860, 65 C. C. A. 344.

60. Assignee of consignee of goods.—Burton v. Strachan (N. Y.), 3 E. D. Smith 192.

61. When freight earned.—Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177; The Eliza Lines, 199 U. S. 119, 50 L. Ed. 115, 26 S. Ct. 8, 4 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 406; The Tornado, 108 U. S. 342, 27 L. Ed. 747, 2 S. Ct. 746; Reed v. United States (U. S.), 11 Wall. 591, 20 L. Ed. 220; Caze v. Baltimore Ins. Co. (U. S.), 7 Cranch 358, 3 L. Ed. 370; Burn Line v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 162 Fed. 298.

Consignment of goods and passenger must be landed, else the carrier is not entitled to freight or fare. Ex parte Easton, 95 U. S. 68, 24 L. Ed. 373, citing The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

By the American law freight is due only if the goods are carried to destination, and, even if prepaid, may be recovered back on a failure to make delivery unless expressly otherwise provided in the contract. Decree 150 Fed. 423, reversed in Burn Line v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 162 Fed. 298.

62. Offer of delivery.—Morgan v. Insurance Co. (Pa.), 4 Dall. 455, 1 L. Ed. 907.

63. Delivery of part.—Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177.

wharf existed, the refusal of plaintiff to build one constituted no defense to an action for the freight.[64]

Agreement of Parties.—The general rule that delivery of the goods at the place of destination is necessary to the earning of freight may be varied by stipulations; but they must be in writing, and be signed by the parties, before they can control the operation of the law merchant.[65] A provision in a bill of lading that the freight shall be "considered as earned, steamer or goods lost or not lost at any stage of the entire transit," is valid and enforceable.[66]

Reasonable Time for Consignee to Receive Goods.—It seems that under a bill of lading, otherwise in the usual form, but having upon its face these clauses: "Goods to be received at the ship's tackles, when ready for delivery; freight payable before delivery, if required"—not merely safe arrival and notice thereof to the consignee, but reasonable time to enable him to receive his goods at the ship's tackles, is necessary to the earning of freight.[67]

Presented by Wrongful Act of Charterer.—The general rule, is that a shipowner, who is prevented from performing the voyage by a wrongful act of the charterer, is prima facie entitled to the freight that he would have earned, less what it would have cost him to earn it.[68]

Necessity for Entering on Voyage.—It is an inherent element in a contract of affreightment under a bill of lading, that the vessel shall enter on the voyage named, and begin the carriage of goods shipped, or, as it is technically called, break ground, before a claim to freight money can arise, unless the shipper of the goods, the vessel remaining ready to enter on the voyage, undertakes to reclaim the goods, in which case, the circumstances under which the contract was entered into continuing substantially the same so far as respects the vessel, the shipper cannot reclaim the goods without paying at least full freight.[69]

Acceptance at Intermediate Point.—In general, freight is not due and payable until delivery of the goods to the consignee at the port of destination or acceptance of the cargo at an intermediate port by the owner thereof.[70]

§ 4342. Freight Pro Rata Itineris.—The contract of affreightment is an entirety; and where there has been no complete fulfillment on one side, and no fault or waiver on the other, no freight money can be recovered.[71] As a general principle, freight is payable only on so much of a cargo as is delivered, and there is an equitable presumption that such is the contract of the parties, to overcome which a contrary intent must be expressed with reasonable clearness and certainty.[72]

Acceptance of Goods by Consignee.—The master is entitled to freight pro rata itineris in all cases where there has been a voluntary acceptance of the goods

64. Delivery at wharf.—McCaughn v. Milliot, 29 So. 818, 78 Miss. 976.

65. Agreement of parties.—Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177.

A stamp upon the back of the bill of lading, stating, amongst other things, "that the entire freight was payable prior to delivery, if required," which was put there by the ship's owner, but which there was no evidence was recognized by the shipper as part of his contract, cannot vary the obligations of the contract so as to authorize a demand for freight before the goods were ready for delivery. Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177.

66. Decree, British, etc., Marine Ins. Co. v. Portland Flouring Mills Co., 124 Fed. 855, affirmed in 130 Fed. 860, 65 C. C. A. 344.

67. Reasonable time for consignee to receive goods.—Fay v. Alliance Ins. Co. (Mass.), 16 Gray 455.

68. Presented by wrongful act of charterer.—The Gazelle, 128 U. S. 474, 32 L. Ed. 496, 9 S. Ct. 139.

69. Necessity for entering on voyage.—The Tornado, 108 U. S. 342, 27 L. Ed. 747, 2 S. Ct. 746.

70. Acceptance at intermediate point.—Mitsui v. St. Paul Fire, etc., Ins. Co., 202 Fed. 26, 120 C. C. A. 280.

71. Freight pro rata itineris.—The Harriman (U. S.), 9 Wall. 161, 19 L. Ed. 629; Mitsui v. St. Paul Fire, etc., Ins. Co., 202 Fed. 26, 120 C. C. A. 280.

72. Decree, 95 Fed. 837, affirmed in Christie v. Davis Coal, etc., Co., 110 Fed. 1006, 49 C. C. A. 170.

at the port of disaster. The rate is to be ascertained by comparing the portion of the voyage performed with the entire length of it.[73] But where the master refuses to repair his ship and send on the goods, or to procure other means for the purpose, and the owner of the goods then receives them, this is not such an acceptance of the goods as will entitle the shipowner to a pro rata freight.[74]

Vessel Detained by Inevitable Necessity.—When a vessel, bearing freight, is from inevitable necessity detained at an intermediate port, and the goods are there voluntarily accepted by the owner, freight is to be paid according to the proportion of the voyage performed, and the law will imply a contract to that effect.[75]

Shipment Too Large to Be Landed in One Day.—When the ship master has a larger shipment under one bill of lading than can be landed in the business hours of one day, he must take care not to land it in such quantities as to be unable to ascertain the pro rata freight. Unless he takes this care, the goods landed will be under his care and responsibility without additional expense to the consignee of them until they shall be ready for delivery.[76]

Less Damages Sustained by Owner.—Where libelant broke an entire contract of affreightment by refusing to transport all of a pile of lumber contracted to be carried, he was nevertheless entitled to recover for the lumber carried, less the damages sustained by the owner of the lumber by reason of the breach of contract.[77]

§ 4343. Goods Lost or Abandoned.—Under a provision in a charter party of a vessel as a private carrier of oil in cases that the cargo should be received, and delivered alongside within reach of the vessel's tackles, and that the ship should receive a stated sum for each case delivered whether full, part full or empty, proof that the vessel received the number of cases stated in the bills of lading, that none were stolen during the voyage, and that all on board were delivered alongside by her tackles into lighters, entitles her to freight on all shown by the bills of lading, although there may have been a shortage when the oil reached its destination.[78]

When a vessel and cargo are abandoned at sea by the master and crew, without intention to retake them, the shipowner can maintain no claim to the freight.[79] But where a vessel, abandoned at sea under circumstances which rendered such abandonment excusable, so that it did not operate to terminate the contract of affreightment, is brought into port by salvors, but by the action of the cargo owners the resumption of the voyage is prevented, the shipowner is entitled to be compensated for his loss of freight on principles of equity, but under such principles his damages can not go beyond compensation, and he is not entitled to recover the gross freight he would have earned under the contract, but only the estimated net freight, and from that should be deducted the net amount the ship earned, or should reasonably have earned, during the time it would have taken her to complete the voyage.[80]

Without Fault of Master.—When some portion of a perishable cargo has suffered by decay without the fault of the master, and was for that reason left 73. Acceptance of goods by consignee.—Propeller Mohawk (U. S.), 8 Wall. 153, 19 L. Ed. 406; Caze v. Baltimore Ins. Co. (U. S.), 7 Cranch 358, 3 L. Ed. 370; The Societe (U. S.), 9 Cranch 209, 3 L. Ed. 707.

74. Adams & Co. v. Haught, 14 Tex. 243.

75. Vessel detained by inevitable necessity.—Adams & Co. v. Haught, 14 Tex. 243.

76. Shipment too large to be landed in one day.—Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177. See, also, The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

77. Less damages sustained by owner.—Hines Lumber Co. v. Chamberlain, 118 Fed. 716, 55 C. C. A. 236.

78. Goods lost or abandoned.—Steamship Den v. Standard Oil Co., 189 Fed. 1020.

79. The James Martin, 88 Fed. 649.

80. The Eliza Lines, 114 Fed. 307, 52 C. C. A. 195, modified, 132 Fed. 242, 65 C. C. A. 538, and reversed in 26 S. Ct. 8, 199 U. S. 119, 50 L. Ed. 115, 4 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 406.

behind on the voyage, the shipowners are entitled to recover for the freight on all that was duly transported and delivered.[81]

Surrendered to Insurer.—Where a cargo was insured by the shipper for sufficient to cover its value and the freight, the fact that on the wrecking of the vessel the cargo was surrendered by the master to the insurer without notice to the shipper did not prejudice him, and constituted no defense to an action to collect the freight under the terms of the bills of lading.[82]

§ 4344. Amount Recoverable.—The amount of freight which the owner can recover from the shipper depends upon a fair construction of the contract.[83]

Usage and Custom.—The amount of freight may be determined by usage.[84]

Exchange on Foreign Bills.—On a bill of lading stipulating that the freight shall be paid in New York, "at the current rate of exchange for banker's sight bills on London," the amount of the freight being expressed in English money, the amount payable is not to be calculated in gold, but in currency at the current rate for bills on London; and to this is to be added interest at the New York rate from the time when the freight is payable.[85]

Rate Current at Commencement of Voyage.—A barge laden with coal to be carried from Philadelphia to Boston, which had started in tow, and proceeded down the river for two or three miles, when she was injured by floating ice, causing a delay in delivery, had entered upon the voyage, and was protected by a provision of the bill of lading excepting "accident or danger of the sea, river or steam navigation;" and, under a further provision of the contract by which she was to receive the market rate of freight, she was entitled to the rate current when the voyage was commenced, unless the delay was caused by her own negligence.[86]

Contract for Shipment in Bulk or by Ton.—When a bill of lading presented by the shipper, and signed by the agent of the ship, recites a shipment in bulk as so many tons, at so much freight per ton, it will be construed as a contract for carriage in bulk, and the freight is not subject to reduction because the cargo when delivered does not weigh out the quantity stated.[87] Where the captain of a vessel contracted with plaintiff to carry a full cargo of stone, which would be three hundred tons, at a certain price per ton, and afterward, by claiming that there was enough stone on the dock to make a full cargo, prevented the

81. Without fault of master.—So held as to a cargo of fruit where part of it was condemned and thrown away at an intermediate port into which the master was forced to put for repairs. The Collenberg (U. S.), 1 Black 170, 17 L. Ed. 89.

82. Surrendered to insurer.—Decree, British, etc., Marine Ins. Co. v. Portland Flouring Mills Co., 124 Fed. 855, affirmed in 130 Fed. 860, 65 C. C. A. 344.

83. Amount of freight.—Robinson v. Noble (U. S.), 8 Pet. 181, 8 L. Ed. 910.

84. Usage and custom.—A schooner contracted for a lump sum of $720, as freight to carry from a Cuban port to Mobile "round cedar logs, to consist of 60,000 feet." It appeared that there were two methods of measuring round logs, one of which was to square them, and so compute their contents, and the other to compute their entire contents as round logs. By the testimony of persons engaged in the shipping and timber business in Cuba, where the charter was made, it was shown without material contradiction that it was the custom in shipping from there to take the invoice measurements in which the logs were reduced to square measure as the basis for computing freight, and to add $2 per thousand feet to the freight to United States ports where the logs were round. It was also shown that the highest rate of freight paid to such ports for squared logs at the time of the contract was $10 per thousand feet. Held, that in the absence of any designation of the method of measurement in the contract it must be presumed to have been made with reference to such custom, especially in view of the stipulated rate of $12 per thousand feet. Peterson v. Eight Hundred and Sixty-Nine Cedar Logs, 127 Fed. 868.

85. Exchange on foreign bills.—Hus v. Kempf, Fed. Cas. No. 6,944, 10 Ben. 364.

86. Rate current at commencement of voyage.—Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Peale, 135 Fed. 606.

87. Contract for shipment in bulk or by ton.—Plantes' Fertilizer Mfg. Co. v. Elder, 101 Fed. 1001, 42 C. C. A. 130.

loading of a full cargo before the vessel sailed, the plaintiff was liable only for the contract freight on the number of tons actually carried.[88]

Goods Taken by Owner at Intermediate Point.—Where the cargo owner takes the cargo from a vessel before the completion of her voyage, under circumstances which do not entitle her to exemplary damages, she can recover only such damages as will compensate her for the net injury suffered, and from the estimated net freight she would have earned is to be deducted the net amount she earned, or should reasonably have earned during the time it would have taken her to complete the voyage.[89]

§ 4345. Deductions and Offsets.—Freight upon live animals is not estimated upon such as die on the passage, unless under a special agreement.[90] In an action for freight, the owner of the cargo may recover damages by way of a counterclaim for the injury sustained by reason of negligent navigation on the part of the carrier.[91] Where a master who is also owner of a vessel gives a shipper a bill of lading reciting the receipt of a certain amount of iron, and an agreement to deliver it to the consignees, the damages occasioned to the consignees, who, relying on the correctness of the recital, pay the shipper for more iron than is actually on board, may be recouped against a claim for the freight, which was to be paid by the consignees, subject, however, to limitation to the amount claimed for freight.[92]

Advancements Paid by Shipper.—In an action for freight on a cargo, a claim for advancements paid by the shipper for plaintiff's benefit on a similar cargo, never delivered, without the fault of the carrier, which according to custom the carrier, after paying, would have collected with his freight charges, cannot be set up as a counterclaim; the money paid by the shipper being paid for his own benefit.[93]

Expense of Unloading.—A canal boat laden with coal filled and sank, after reaching her dock, through leakage, and the negligence of her captain. The consignee, whose duty it was to discharge the cargo, did so after waiting two days, being put to additional expense because the boat was under water. He was justified in such action to save the cargo from further damage and possible loss, and was entitled to offset the increased cost of discharging against the carrier's claim for freight.[94]

For Loss Caused by Agent of Shipper.—Where a charter provided that the vessel's stevedore for loading and unloading should be approved by the charterer, and his agent refused to permit the master to discharge a stevedore for rough handling of the cargo in unloading the charterer was not entitled to make a deduction from freight on account of breakage by such stevedore.[95]

Where Damages Paid.—Where a cargo owner is allowed as damages against the vessel for loss of cargo its full value at the port of delivery, he is not entitled to a reduction in freight on account of the loss.[96]

Where Goods Shipped Short.—The libelant and the respondent entered into a verbal contract that one of the respondent's steamers should load and transport a quantity of marble. The marble was delivered, as agreed, alongside the steamer, which made the voyage with only a part of the cargo, insisting subsequently that

88. Clancy v. Dutton, 113 N. Y. S. 124, 129 App. Div. 23.

89. Goods taken by owner at intermediate point.—The Eliza Lines, 102 Fed. 184.

90. Deductions and offsets.—Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co. (Mass.), 4 Pick. 429.

91. Conrad v. De Montcourt, 138 Mo. 311, 39 S. W. 805.

92. Relyea v. New Haven Rolling-Mill Co., 75 Fed. 420, 42 Conn. 579.

93. Advancements paid by shipper.—Neville v. Pennsylvania, etc., Co., 99 N. Y. S. 270, 113 App. Div. 768.

94. Expense of unloading.—Aldrich v. Cargo of 246 5/20 Tons of Egg Coal, 117 Fed. 757.

95. For loss caused by agent of shipper.—Steamship Den v. Standard Oil Co., 189 Fed. 1020.

96. Where damages paid.—Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Anderson, 186 Fed. 145, 108 C. C. A. 257.

the libelant's agent should sign a bill of lading for the whole, describing the omitted portion as "short shipped," which bill the agent signed under protest. The libelant was entitled to recover from the steamer the amount exacted in excess of the freight earned.[97]

Where Ship Sold in Admiralty Suit.—After the owners of a cargo which had been loaded on a vessel at a Maine port, to be carried to New York, had advanced money on the bill of lading signed by the master, and the advance credited thereon, the vessel was sold in an admiralty suit. The new owners, without notice to or negotiations with the cargo orders and without a new bill of lading being executed by the master, ordered the vessel to proceed with the cargo to New York, afterwards presenting to the cargo owners a new bill of lading signed by themselves but not by the master, having no credit thereon, which the cargo owners refused to accept. An additional agreement made by the cargo owners to pay a further sum from the freight when the cargo was discharged to a creditor of the former vessel owner made for the purpose of securing the discharge of the vessel from the attachment but which did not accomplish that result did not entitle the cargo owners to deduct such sum from the freight as against the new owners who performed the carriage of it, it not appearing that the agreement was one which the creditor could enforce under the circumstances.[98]

Contradicting Bill of Lading.—While the bill of lading in respect to the quantity received is a receipt and entitled to great weight as an admission by the ship, and places upon her the burden of proof, it is not conclusive, and she cannot be held liable for a shortage if she fully satisfies the court that it is erroneous and that she delivered all the cargo she received.[99]

§ 4346. Change of Rates.—A carrier agreed to carry flour and grain at a given rate, "to continue in force till close of navigation, unless notice to contrary." A notice of a change of rates, to take effect in twelve days, was reasonable, without regard to the extent of the shipper's purchases, or the situation of his flour or grain purchased, or the carrier's information concerning the same.[1]

§§ 4347-4352. Lien for Freight—§ 4347. In General.—Shipowners, as a general rule, have a lien upon the cargo for the freight, and consequently may retain the goods after the arrival of the ship at the port of destination until the payment is made.[2] Where the consignee and owner of a cargo fails to pay or tender the freight due on the discharge of the cargo, the carrier, to preserve

97. Where goods shipped short.—The Citta Di Palermo, 153 Fed. 378.

98. Where ship sold in admiralty suit.—Chadwick v. Five Hundred and Seventy-Six Granite Blocks, 178 Fed. 140.

99. Contradicting bill of lading.—James v. Standard Oil Co., 191 Fed. 827, affirming decree, 189 Fed. 719.

1. Change of rates.—Thayer v. Burchard, 99 Mass. 508.

2. Lien for freight.—The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 5 L. Ed. 696; Lane v. Penniman, 4 Mass. 91; Lewis v. Hancock, 11 Mass. 72; Cowing v. Snow, 11 Mass. 415. See Portland Bank v. Stubbs, 6 Mass. 422, 4 Am. Dec. 151; Richardson v. Whiting (Mass.), 18 Pick. 530; Thomas v. Le Baron (Mass.), 10 Metc. 403; Welch v. McClintock (Mass.), 10 Gray 215.

As between the owner of the ship and the owner of the cargo, the former has a lien upon the cargo, for all the freight which becomes due and payable to him, whether it be a full or pro rata freight. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett (U. S.), 12 Wheat. 383, 6 L. Ed. 664.

If the ship owner retains the possession of the ship, and the charterer is merely the freighter, the former has a lien upon the cargo for freight. Gracie v. Palmer (U. S.), 8 Wheat. 605, 5 L. Ed. 696, which illustrates this rule, the charter party stipulating "that no goods shall be landed until the freight is paid." Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47.

Regarded as maritime lien.—Such a lien is regarded in the jurisprudence of the United States as a maritime lien. The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35.

its lien, is authorized to retain and store sufficient of the cargo to pay such freight, and the expense of storage and loss of use of the commodity must be borne by the owner.[3]

After Payment of Freight.—Although the master may retain the cargo until the freight be paid or tendered, he must be ready to deliver the cargo on payment or tender.[4]

Lien for Freights, Primages and Charges.—A provision of a bill of lading issued by a steamship company that "the carrier shall have a lien on the goods for all freights, primages, and charges" does not affect or change the nature of the lien, which is simply the maritime lien as understood in the jurisprudence of the United States, to preserve which the retaining of possession is essential, although such provision may in some cases preserve the lien where it would otherwise be deemed waived by other provisions relating to the time and manner of paying the freight.[5]

Includes Expense of Preservation of Goods.—A ship is responsible for the preservation of the cargo from the time of receiving it until it is delivered, and the captain has authority to incur any expense necessary to the fulfillment of that obligation, which is included in the ship's lien.[6]

Operates as Pledge or Mortgage.—A maritime contract for the transportation of goods operates as a pledge or mortgage of the goods to the shipper to secure payment of the freight earned.[7]

Reciprocal Liens between Ship and Cargo.—The shipowner contracts for the safe custody, due transportation, and right delivery of the merchandise, and the shipper, consignee, or owner of the cargo contracts to pay the freight and charges. These obligations are reciprocal, and the law creates reciprocal liens for their enforcement,[8] unless the lien is waived by some express stipulation, or is displaced by some inconsistent and irreconcilable provision in the charter party or bill of lading.[9]

§ 4348. Time Lien Attaches.—The lien for freight commences as soon as the goods are delivered into the control of the master, or certainly as soon as they are put on board.[10]

§ 4349. Property Subject to Lien.—There is no lien on one cargo for freight which may accrue on another.[11] Freight is not a charge upon the salvage

3. The Asiatic Prince, 103 Fed. 676.

4. After payment of freight.—Lane v. Penniman, 4 Mass. 91; Lewis v. Hancock, 11 Mass. 72; Cowing v. Snow, 11 Mass. 415. See Richardson v. Whiting (Mass.), 18 Pick. 530; Manter v. Holmes (Mass.), 10 Metc. 402; Welch v. McClintock (Mass.), 10 Gray 215.

5. Lien for freights, primages and charges.—Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 145 Fed. 687.

6. Includes expense of preservation of goods.—Symons v. 10,466 Barrels of Cement, 195 Fed. 1017.

7. Operates as pledge or mortgage.—Miners' Co-Op. Ass'n v. The Monarch, 2 Alaska 383.

8. Reciprocal liens.—Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham (U. S.), 18 How. 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; Vandewater v. Mills (U. S.), 19 How. 82, 15 L. Ed. 554; Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584. See, also, Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. (U. S.), 24 How. 386, 16 L. Ed. 599; The Lady Franklin (U. S.), 8 Wall. 325, 19 L. Ed. 455; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779.

9. Waiver of lien.—The Delaware (U. S.), 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. Ed. 779; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

10. Time lien attaches.—The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662.

11. Property subject to lien.—The Societe (U. S.), 9 Cranch 209, 3 L. Ed. 707, in which it is said: "The court can perceive no principle on which a cargo to be delivered freight free can be burdened with the freight agreed to be paid on a cargo to be afterwards taken on board."

of cargo, in the hands of the underwriter, whether the assured is the owner of the ship or not.[12]

§ 4350. Displacement and Waiver of Lien.—The lien may be displaced by an inconsistent and irreconcilable provision in the charter party or bill of lading, making it the duty of the master to deliver the goods unconditionally before the consignee is required to pay the freight; or it may be waived.[13] The usual provision of a bill of lading that the cargo shall be delivered to the person named or his assigns, "he or they paying the freight," is designed for the benefit of the owner or master in recognition of his right to a lien, and does not impose on him the duty of insisting on payment of the freight before delivery, but he is free to waive his lien and hold the shipper, therefor.[14]

By Unconditional Delivery of Goods.—Where a cargo is transported by a vessel under a charter containing no clause binding the goods to the ship and the ship to the goods, and the cargo is delivered unconditionally, and without any understanding that it should be subject to a lien for charter money, the lien of the vessel on the cargo for her freight is lost.[15] But if the cargo is placed in the hands of the consignee, with an understanding that the lien for freight is to continue, a court of admiralty will regard the transaction as a deposit of the goods in the ware house, and not as an absolute delivery, and on that ground will consider 12. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett (U. S.), 12 Wheat. 383, 6 L. Ed. 664.

13. Displacement and waiver of lien.—The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47; The Maggie Hammond (U. S.), 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. Ed. 772; The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50.

But if it be only doubtful in the construction of a charter party whether the owner has waived his lien upon the cargo, he must have the benefit of that doubt; his lien being given by force of the common law, which can not be taken from him, "though there is a special contract, unless there is something in that contract inconsistent with that lien, or unless it is waived by his implication." Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47.

A clause in a charter party, by which the owner binds the vessel, and the charterers bind the cargo, for the performance of their respective covenants, is sufficient to repel doubt arising upon the construction of other stipulations not plainly controlling them, as to whether the lien for freight was intended to be waived by the parties. The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50.

The lien may be waived without express words to that effect, if the charter party contains stipulations inconsistent with the exercise of such a right, or where it clearly appears that the shipowner meant to trust to the personal responsibility of the charterer. The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47.

Insolvency of the shipper occurring while the goods are in transit, or before they are delivered, will not absolve the carrier from an agreement to take an acceptance on time, instead of cash, for the freight, nor authorize him, when he had made such an agreement, to retain the goods until the freight is paid. A bill or note falling due before the unloading of the cargo, and protested and unpaid, is no discharge of the lien; and the shipowner, in such a case, may stand upon it as fully as if the acceptance had been given. The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662, so holding where the charterers' acceptance had been dishonored and he become a bankrupt.

14. Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 145 Fed. 687.

15. By unconditional delivery of goods.—In re Cargo of Brimstone, Fed. Cas. No. 2,405, 8 Ben. 45; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486; Dupont, etc., Co. v. Vance (U. S.), 19 How. 162, 15 L. Ed. 584; 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662.

Such precedent delivery, if absolute and unconditional, displaces the lien for freight, because it is repugnant to it and incompatable with it, but where the payment or security of payment is to be concurrent or simultaneous with the delivery of the cargo the lien exists in full force, and the shipowner can not be required to make the delivery until the payment of freight, or security, as the case may be, is tendered. The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662.

the shipowner as being still constructively in possession so far as to preserve his lien.[16]

Delivery to Warehouse.—A vessel, by delivering her cargo of flaxseed in a warehouse at the end of the voyage, and taking a receipt therefor, which was retained until a libel was filed, did not thereby lose her lien on the cargo for freight.[17]

Stipulations as to Place and Time of Payment and Delivery.—A credit for the freight may be given for so great a period as to justify, in the absence of any provision for the delivery of the cargo, the inference that the shipowner intended to waive his right to a lien and to look solely to the personal responsibility of the charterers.[18]

§ 4351. Preserving and Enforcing Lien.—The ship is not bound to land an entire shipment in a day; and when landed on different days, if the shipper disregards the notice that such will be the case, and shall not be present to receive the goods, and has made no arrangement for the freight, then they may be stored in the shipowner's name, to preserve his lien upon them for freight, for safekeeping, at the consignee's expense and risk.[19] But the shipowner can not detain the goods on board the ship until the freight is paid, as the consignee or owner of the cargo would then have no opportunity of examining their condition.[20]

Enforcement of Lien.—As contracts of affreightment are regarded by the courts of the United States as maritime contracts, over which the courts of admiralty have jurisdiction, the shipowner may enforce his lien by a proceeding in rem in the proper court.[21] A master, having a cargo under a bill of lading for delivery to order, was ignorant as to who were the indorsees, and was therefore unable to notify them of his arrival. The day after arrival he libeled the cargo for freight, but on the third day he received a letter from the attorneys of the indorsees of the bill of lading, who, after naming the principles, said, "We have for them to offer to pay the freight, * * * and to demand delivery, as per bill of lading, on paying freight." The freight was not, however, paid or tendered, and five days later the master discharged the cargo upon the wharf, and caused another writ of seizure to be executed upon it. While the first seizure was premature, because made while the cargo was still on board, yet the proceedings taken by the master did not amount to a conversion, for which the consignees could claim even nominal damages against the ship.[22]

§ 4352. Subrogation to Lien.—Libelant as shipper of a cargo of flour, became bound for the freight, but only as surety for the consignees, who were the owners of the cargo and primarily liable for the freight. The vessel having stranded, her owner abandoned her to the insured as well as the cargo, a portion of which was salved and sold and the proceeds received by respondent, which was its insurer. Subsequently the insurer of the freight recovered the same from li-

16. 4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35.

17. Delivery to warehouse.—Davidson Steamship Co. v. 119,254 Bushels of Flaxseed, 117 Fed. 283.

18 Stipulations as to place and time of payment and delivery.—The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662. See, also, Raymond v. Tyson (U. S.), 17 How. 53, 15 L. Ed. 47.

A stipulation in a charter party requiring the delivery of the cargo within reach of the ship's tackle, and providing that the balance of the charter money remaining unpaid on the termination of the homeward voyage shall be "payable, one half in five, and one half in ten days after discharge" of the cargo, are not inconsistent with the right of the owner to retain the cargo for the preservation of his lien. The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662.

19. Preserving and enforcing lien.—Brittan v. Barnaby (U. S.), 21 How. 527, 16 L. Ed. 177.

20. The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

21. Enforcement of lien.—4,885 Bags of Linseed (U. S.), 1 Black 108, 17 L. Ed. 35; The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Eddy (U. S.), 5 Wall. 481, 18 L. Ed. 486.

22. The Ravensdale, 75 Fed. 413.

belant, which thereupon brought suit to recover the amount from respondent, claiming to be subrogated to the carriers' lien for the freight upon the cargo and its proceeds. It was held, that such lien was lost by the abandonment of the cargo to the respondent, which the carrier had the right to make, and there was therefore no claim against the fund arising therefrom to support a right of subrogation.[23]

§ 4353. Actions to Recover Freight.—Nature of Action.—A claim for dead freight is not recoverable in an action in rem against the cargo.[24] A claim by a vessel owner for the extra cost of handling timber of larger dimensions than that specified in the charter can only be recovered in rem against the cargo in so far as it is a claim for the services of stevedores who would be entitled to a lien, and is not so recoverable where the stevedores were furnished by the charterer.[25] The demand of a shipowner for freight in a case of civil salvage is to be pursued against that portion of the proceeds of the cargo which is adjudged to the owners of the goods, by a direct libel or petition by way of libel; and not by a claim interposed in salvage cause.[26]

Limitation of Actions for Recovery of Freight.—The article 3499, of the Civil Code of Louisiana, which prescribes that "actions for the payment of freight of ships and other vessels are prescribed by one year," does not apply to a case where the plaintiffs were shipbrokers only and not shipowners, and where the contract was not one of affreightment.[27]

Burden of Proof.—The libelant steamship company brought suit to recover a balance of freight money for the carriage of a cargo of oil in cases, which was withheld by the charterer to cover a shortage in delivery. The cargo was discharged at Whampoa, China, into lighters provided by the charterer, in which it was taken fourteen miles up the river to Canton, where it was stored in warehouses. The tally on the ship was kept by Chinese tallymen employed by the captain, and showed a shortage, as did the tally at the warehouses. The libelant claimed that the whole number of cases was in fact delivered to the lighters, and the missing cases were stolen between the ship and warehouses, an incorrect and fraudulent tally having been made through collusion between the Chinese tallymen and lightermen. The burden rested upon it to prove such fact, and that, while the evidence established its probability, it was not sufficient to entitle the libelant to recover, in view of the fact that the captain failed in his duty to have the tally taken or supervised by white men, as he could have done and was advised to do.[28]

Evidence.—Where the defense to an action for the freight of a cargo is that it was carried under special charter by the day, and a bill of lading of the cargo had been introduced, evidence that it is not customary to give a bill of lading where the boat is chartered by the day is admissible.[29] An estimate of the quantity of lumber in a cargo, based on the carrying capacity of the vessel, should not be accepted in an action for the freight as against what appears to have been a reasonably accurate tally, made when the lumber was loaded; but such tally may be corrected by evidence that the shipper received a greater quantity from the vessel at the place of delivery.[30]

§ 4354. Recovery Back of Freight.—Freight being the compensation for the carriage of goods, if paid in advance, is in all cases, unless there is a special

23. Subrogation to lien.—Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., 145 Fed. 687.

24. Actions to recover freight.—Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 163 Fed. 657.

25. Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 163 Fed. 657.

26. Pursued by libel or petition by way of libel.—The Sybil (U. S.), 4 Wheat. 98, 4 L. Ed. 522.

27. Action for freight.—Railroad Co. v. Lindsay (U. S.), 4 Wall. 650, 18 L. Ed. 328.

28. Burden of proof.—Village Steamship Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 171 Fed. 243, decree affirmed in 177 Fed. 1006, 100 C. C. A. 669.

29. Evidence.—Zimmerman v. Rainey, 56 N. Y. S. 199, 26 Misc. Rep. 795.

30. Murray v. Jump Co., 148 Fed. 123.

agreement to the contrary, to be refunded, if from any cause not attributable to the shipper, the goods be not carried.[31]

Vessel Unseaworthy at Commencement of Voyage.—In an action by a shipper of goods against the consignee of the cargo to recover money retained for freight, the plaintiff was at liberty to show the vessel not to have been seaworthy at the commencement of her voyage.[32]

Freight Earned, Ship Lost or Not Lost.—The general rule that freight prepaid, but which is not earned by delivery of the goods must be refunded, does not apply as between owner and charterer, where by reference in the charter party the bills of lading are incorporated therein, and they contain a provision that freight prepaid shall be considered as earned, ship lost or not lost.[33]

An agreement not to refund freight money in advance, in case goods are not carried through, can not be inferred from a clause in the bill of lading that the goods are to be delivered safely "dangers of the seas excepted;" the design of that clause being only to save the master and shipowner from being answerable for goods lost.[34]

Goods Damaged.—Where consignee of goods pays the freight in advance, and on delivery the merchandise was found to be seriously damaged by the negligence of the vessel, the freight so paid in advance could be recovered back.[35]

§ 4355. Lighterage.—Which party is chargeable with the expense of lighterage is governed by the terms of the contract of affreightment or the charter party, and in the absence any stipulation in respect to such expense, by the custom of the port of discharge.[36] A bill of lading provided that, unless the bill by express written agreement was to bear the cost of lighterage, it was agreed that the lighterage was for account and risk of the cargo, custom of the port notwithstanding. The bills contained a written clause that the freight was to be delivered by steamer or lighter at the steamer's option at a certain railroad in Rio de Janeiro, provided there was enough water and length to get alongside dock. The freight contract was indorsed, "These rates include delivery * * * providing there is water enough for craft to get alongside dock, and also include all derrick costs in discharging." The bill of lading did not provide that the cost of lighterage should not be at the expense of the cargo, but should be construed to mean that, if there was water and length enough to get the steamer alongside the dock, it was then at the steamer's option to discharge at the dock, or deliver by lighter at her own expense; the word "craft" meaning the steamer in question.[37]

31. Recovery back where goods not carried.—The Bird of Paradise (U. S.), 5 Wall. 545, 18 L. Ed. 662; The Kimball (U. S.), 3 Wall. 37, 18 L. Ed. 50; Griggs v. Austin (Mass.), 3 Pick. 20, 15 Am. Dec. 175; Brown v. Harris (Mass.), 2 Gray 359; Minturn v. Warren Ins. Co. (Mass.), 2 Allen 86; Benner v. Equitable Safety Ins. Co. (Mass.), 6 Allen 222; Chase v. Alliance Co. (Mass.), 9 Allen 311.

By the American law freight is due only if the goods are carried to destination, and, even if prepaid, may be recovered back on a failure to make delivery, unless expressly otherwise provided in the contract. Decree, 150 Fed. 423, reversed in Burn Line v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 162 Fed. 298.

Where a vessel took freight and passengers for Kotzebue Sound, but wholly failed to make the voyage, and discharged both at Nome, the sailing point, and they were not afterward forwarded, held, that on the total failure of the voyage the passengers are entitled to have the return of their freight money. The Arthur B., 1 Alaska 403.

32. Vessel unseaworthy at commencement of voyage.—Dickinson v. Haslet (Md.), 3 Har. & J. 345.

33. Freight earned, ship lost or not lost.—Burn Line v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 150 Fed. 423.

34. Griggs v. Austin (Mass.), 3 Pick. 20, 15 Am. Dec. 175.

35. Goods damaged.—The Konigin Luise, 173 Fed. 811.

36. Lighterage.—Mencke v. Cargo of Java Sugar, 187 U. S. 248, 47 L. Ed. 163, 23 S. Ct. 86.

37. Herr v. Tweedie Trading Co., 181 Fed. 483.

§§ 4356-4378. Demurrage—§ 4356. In General.—Definitions.—Ordinarily demurrage is the agreed additional payment by the charterer for the allowed detention of the vessel beyond the period specified in the charter party.[38]

Necessity for Pecuniary Loss.—It is not the mere fact that a vessel is detained that entitles the owner to demurrage. There must be a pecuniary loss, or at least a reasonable certainty of pecuniary loss, and not a mere inconvenience arising from an inability to use the vessel for the purpose of pleasure.[39] A ship is not entitled to an allowance or demurrage for delay under a contract for repairs where the vessel had no charter, and was not employed when the work was commenced, and was not offered a charter until after its completion.[40]

Demurrage in Nature of Penalty.—If a sum agreed to be paid for delay in completing repairs on a ship is regarded as a penalty, a court of admiralty will not enforce the payment where the facts are such that a court of equity would not.[41]

Damages in Nature of Demurrage.—An action can not be maintained for demurrage where the bill of lading says "no demurrage." Nevertheless, an action for damages in the nature of demurrage may be maintained where the consignee has been guilty of unnecessary and unreasonable delay.[42]

§ 4357. Charter Party Provisions.—A deliberate contract, made by the parties in a charter party, giving the charterer the right to designate the place of discharge, and providing that lay days shall commence when the vessel is ready to discharge, can not be varied or relaxed on the ground that its enforcement subjects the vessel to an unreasonable delay.[43]

Erased Clauses.—The erasure, before execution, from a printed form of a charter party, of the clauses fixing the number of lay days and the rate per day for demurrage, or the failure to fill the blanks therein, leaves the rights of the parties with respect to demurrage or damages for detention to be determined by the general rule as to reasonable dispatch.[44]

Charterer Required to Pay Towage.—A provision of a charter party requiring the charterer to pay towing charges from the mouth of a creek to the dock of the charterer thereon for discharge does not require the charterer to provide the tug to do such towing nor render it liable for delay in obtaining such tug.[45]

Construed in Connection with Telegram.—A bill of lading containing the words "no demurrage," and a contemporaneous telegram from the consignor, a quartermaster, to the consignee, another quartermaster, directing him to "be

38. Demurrage.—Morgan v. Garfield, etc., Coal Co., 113 Fed. 520.

Demurrage is, strictly, a sum due by express contract for the detention of a vessel, in loading and unloading, beyond the time allowed in the contract of affreightment, and may also apply to the improper detention or delay of a vessel. Southern R. Co. v. Lewis, 165 Ala. 451, 51 So. 863.

Every improper detention of a vessel may be considered a demurrage and compensation in that way may be obtained for it. Southern R. Co. v. Melton, 65 S. E. 665, 133 Ga. 277.

39. Necessity for pecuniary loss.—The Conqueror, 17 S. Ct. 510, 166 U. S. 110, 41 L. Ed. 937, reversing decree, 49 Fed. 99.

Necessity for loss of profits.—"Demurrage," in the proper sense of the term, is an allowance to a vessel in compensation for the earnings she is improperly caused to lose, and can only be allowed when profits have either actually been lost or may be reasonably supposed to have been lost. The Colombia, 197 Fed. 661, decree affirmed in Rasmussen v. Home Industry Iron Works, 199 Fed. 990, 117 C. C. A. 666.

40. The Colombia, 197 Fed. 661.

41. Demurrage in nature of penalty.—The Colombia, 197 Fed. 661.

42. Damages in nature of demurrage.—Philippine Trading Co. v. United States (U. S.), 47 Ct. Cl. 328.

43. Charter party provisions.—Anderson v. Moore & Co., 102 C. C. A. 362, 179 Fed. 68.

44. Erased clauses.—Donnell v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co., 118 Fed. 10, 55 C. C. A. 178.

45. Charterer required to pay towage.—Eaton v. Cargo of Lumber, 180 Fed. 513.

ready to unload promptly," may be taken together to constitute an agreement that reasonable diligence will be exercised in discharging the cargo.[46]

Provision as to Precedence in Discharging Freight.—Where a bill of lading, besides the general provision fixing the lay days for discharging, contained a clause providing that the vessel should have precedence in discharging over all vessels arriving or giving notice after her arrival, and should be compensated in demurrage for any violation of such provision, the provision for demurrage for a delay caused by a failure to discharge the vessel in her turn controlled the provision fixing the time allowed for lay days.[47]

Provision for No Demurrage.—An action can not be maintained for demurrage where the bill of lading says "no demurrage." Nevertheless, an action for damages in the nature of demurrage may be maintained where the consignee has been guilty of unnecessary and unreasonable delay.[48]

Contract Impossible of Performance.—Alleged impossibility of performing the conditions of a contract does not relieve the owners from fulfilling a provision requiring the collection of demurrage or an indorsement on the bill of lading before sailing.[49]

Provision for Demurrage Lien on Cargo.—A charterer is not exempted from the payment of demurrage for which he is made liable by the terms of the charter party because of a provision of the bill of lading giving a lien on the cargo for freight and demurrage.[50]

Provision for Payment on Default of Charterer.—Under a charter providing for payment of demurrage "for each and every day's detention by default of charterer" it was held that by the use of the word "default" was meant failure to perform some duty imposed by the contract.[51]

Provision for Continuous Discharge.—A provision of a bill of lading that the cargo shall be "received by the consignee immediately the vessel is ready to discharge, and continuously at all such hours as the customhouse or port author-

46. Construed in connection with telegram.—Philippine Trading Co. v. United States (U. S.), 47 Ct. Cl. 328.

47. Provision as to precedence in discharging freight.—Evans v. Blair, 114 Fed. 616, 52 C. C. A. 396.

Under a provision of a bill of lading for a cargo consigned to a railroad company, giving the vessel the right to be discharged in her turn, the fact that such cargo is owned by the company, while that of another vessel arriving later is merely consigned to its care, to be shipped over its road, does not entitle the company to give the latter preference in discharging. Evans v. Blair, 114 Fed. 616, 52 C. C. A. 396.

Customs of port.—The provision of a bill of lading that, after arrival and notice to the consignee and the expiration of 24 hours, the vessel shall have precedence in discharging over all vessels arriving or giving notice after her arrival, requires such vessel to be given her turn subject to whatever customs or necessities exist at the port of discharge and which may fairly be presumed to have been within the contemplation of the parties. Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 Fed. 722.

Precedence over transatlantic vessel.—Schooners which arrived at a port for discharge of coal cargoes under bills of lading providing that they should have precedence in discharging over all vessels arriving or giving notice after their arrival must be held to have contracted with reference to the facilities for coal discharging at that port, and are not entitled to claim a violation of contract because steamers of regular transatlantic lines arriving after them were, in accordance with contracts and long custom, given precedence in discharging at the company's wharves which were not used as discharging places for coal but for general cargoes. They were, however, entitled to precedence, over after-arriving vessels carrying coal cargoes, to discharge at any wharf of the company used for discharging coal, so long as they were not assigned to any particular berth, and, after such assignment, to precedence over any after-arriving vessel at such berth. Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 Fed. 722.

48. Provision for no demurrage.—Philippine Trading Co. v. United States (U. S.), 47 Ct. Cl. 328.

49. Contract impossible of performance.—Gans v. Auchincloss, 166 Fed. 991.

50. Provision for demurrage lien on cargo.—Davis v. Smokeless Fuel Co., 196 Fed. 753, 116 C. C. A. 381, affirming decree, 182 Fed. 1004.

51. Provision for payment on default of charterer.—Washington Marine Co. v. Rainier Mill, etc., Co., 198 Fed. 142.

ities may give permission for the ship to work," means only that the discharge shall be reasonably continuous, considering the time, place, and circumstances, the nature of the cargo, the situation of the vessel, and prevailing conditions generally.[52]

Construction by Parties.—Where, after a vessel was loaded, upon a question of demurrage arising, the charterer's agent, under authority from his principal to indorse upon the bills of lading "when lay days commence and when vessel loaded," indorsed such dates, which were accepted by the master, such action amounted to a practical construction of the charter party by the parties, which was entitled to great, if not controlling, influence.[53]

Provision for Dispatch in Discharging.—A provision of a charter party for "dispatch for discharging" is to be construed with reference to the custom of the port where the discharge is made, which is fixed in large measure by the facilities at such port for discharging the kind of cargo carried.[54]

§ 4358. Right of Vessel to Charge in General.—Where Notice of Refusal to Pay Demurrage Given.—A vessel is presumed to have accepted the risks of delay where the charterer refused to pay demurrage and gave notice that he would not keep the vessel if demurrage were charged.[55]

Demurrage Not Claimed in Monthly Statements.—Where libelant furnished barges for the use of respondent's testator in transporting coal under a general arrangement by which bills for such service were presented and paid monthly, a claim for demurrage on account of the detention of a barge will not be allowed when not presented until after the death of the testator and more than a year after the service was rendered and the bill therefor paid, in which no such claim was made, although such claim was warranted by the terms of the bill of lading.[56]

Necessity for Provision in Bill of Lading.—Compensation may be recovered by the owner of a vessel for unreasonable detention thereof, though the bill of lading contain no demurrage clause.[57] Where a charter party or bill of 52. Provision for continuous discharge.—United States Shipping Co. v. United States, 146 Fed. 914.

Under a bill of lading providing that the consignee should receive the goods "immediately the vessel is ready to discharge and continuously at all such hours as the custom house or port authorities may give permission," the shipper was liable for any delay in discharging, due to its failure to receive the cargo from any cause except the fault of the shipowner. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Strong, etc., Co., 195 Fed. 929, reversing decree 157 Fed. 304.

53. Construction by parties.—Percy v. Union Sulphur Co., 173 Fed. 534.

54. Provision for dispatch in discharging.—The Cargo, 122 Fed. 881.

55. Right of vessel to charge in general.—Libelant furnished a number of barges for use as lighters by respondent's testator in his coal business in New York City and harbor. Such use necessarily involved more or less delay of the barges while waiting for the sale or the transfer of their cargoes to steamships, which was a part of defendant's business. A suggestion by libelant that he should expect demurrage for such delays was met by a prompt denial of liability, and notice by decedent that he would not keep the vessels on such terms. Thereafter the business continued as before, monthly bills being presented and paid for the hire of the barges, which contained no charges for demurrage, nor were any such charges made on libelant's books until after decedent's death, when a large sum was charged against him on that account. Held, that on such evidence, and in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary, libelant must be presumed to have accepted the risk of such delays as an incident of the business, and that he was not entitled to recover demurrage therefor. Decree, Hagan v. Tucker, 112 Fed. 546, affirmed in 118 Fed. 731, 55 C. C. A. 521.

56. Demurrage not claimed in monthly statements.—Hagan v. Tucker, 112 Fed. 546, affirmed in 118 Fed. 731, 55 C. C. A. 521.

57. Necessity for provision in bill of lading.—Jameson v. Sweeney, 61 N. Y. S. 494, 29 Misc. Rep. 584.

That no provision was made in relation to demurrage in a contract of affreightment does not show that no demurrage was to be charged, but the rights of the parties are to be determined by the general rule as to reasonable dispatch. Price v. Morse Ironworks, etc., Co., 120 Fed. 445.

lading contains no provision with respect to the lay days for discharging, an implied obligation arises on the part of the charterer or consignee to give the vessel reasonable dispatch, determined by the circumstances then existing; but in such case he is not an insurer against delay, nor liable because of delay caused by circumstances beyond his control, such as the presence of another vessel discharging at the dock where delivery is to be made, and which is the only one available, or by a temporary derangement of the dock machinery used for discharging, which he could neither anticipate nor prevent.[58]

Estoppel to Collect Demurrage.—Where a bill of lading expressly gave the shipowner the right to hold the shipper for any charge under the contract, the fact that such owner did not enforce its right, also given thereby, to collect demurrage for detention in discharging from the consignee, or by enforcing its lien on the cargo at the port of discharge, did not estop it from collecting such demurrage from the shipper, especially where the shipper consigned the cargo to itself, and, although it indorsed the bill of lading to another, remained the owner until actual delivery.[59]

§ 4359. Delay Fault of Vessel or Owner.—A boat owner is not entitled to demurrage for the time during which he refused to continue unloading because of the pendency of negotiations for security for the freight, where he might have discharged, and preserved his lien on the cargo by refusing to deliver.[60]

Failure to Arrive on Schedule Time.—Libelants of a cargo were not entitled to recover demurrage for delay in loading where the proof showed that whatever delay arose was owing to the failure of the steamer and tow to arrive as scheduled, by reason of which other vessels arrived, and were loaded in turn at the dock, in accordance with the customs of the port.[61]

Detention of Cargo for Nonpayment of Freight.—The owner of a vessel ordinarily retain the cargo for nonpayment of freight, and charge demurrage arising from such detention.[62]

Refusal to Receive Part of Cargo.—Where the master of a vessel refused to receive more cargo before all of the shipment contracted for had been loaded, whereupon a delay was occasioned to settle the matter, the ship was not entitled to collect demurrage therefor.[63]

Fault of Agent of Ship.—Where the stevedoring in discharging a vessel was done by an employee of the ship's agent, the charterer was not responsible for his delays.[64]

§ 4360. Delay Caused by Act of God.—Floods, Storms and Droughts.—Under a provision of a contract of affreightment requiring the shipper to load the cargo as fast as the vessels can receive the same, adverse weather conditions are not a defense to an action to recover demurrage for a failure to comply with such stipulation.[65] A provision in a charter made in Liverpool for the

58. Decree, Ionia Transp. Co. v. Two Thousand Ninety-Eight Tons of Coal, 128 Fed. 514, affirmed in 135 Fed. 317, 67 C. C. A. 671.

59. Estoppel to collect demurrage.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Pitch Pine Lumber Co., 146 Fed. 612.

60. Delay fault of vessel or owner.—Murray v. Jump Co., 148 Fed. 123.

61. Failure to arrive on schedule time.—McArthur Bros. Co. v. 622,714 Feet of Lumber, 131 Fed. 389.

62. Detention of cargo for nonpayment of freight.—Wellman v. Morse, 76 Fed. 573, 22 C. C. A. 318.

63. Refusal to receive part of cargo.—Decree, Wood v. Sewall, 128 Fed. 141, affirmed in 135 Fed. 12, 67 C. C. A. 580.

64. Fault of agent of ship.—Two Thousand Tons of Coal, 135 Fed. 734, 68 C. C. A. 372.

The charterer having arranged for a discharge at a particular wharf, the vessel's agent, on arrival, thought the berth unsuitable, and arranged for discharge at another dock, which was occupied, so that the vessel was delayed two days. Held that, in the absence of other evidence, the charterer was not liable for such delay which was caused by the shipowner and his agents. Two Thousand Tons of Coal, 135 Fed. 734, 68 C. C. A. 372.

65. Delay caused by act of God.—Atlantic, etc., Steamship Co. v. Guggenheim, 123 Fed. 330, decree affirmed in 147 Fed. 103, 77 C. C. A. 329.

carrying of a cargo of timber from Ship Island, excluding from the computation of lay days at the port of loading "any time lost by reason of fire, droughts, floods, storms, strikes, lockouts, combinations of workmen, or any extraordinary occurrence beyond the control of the charterers," does not apply to time lost by reason of the charterers failing to have the cargo ready at the usual place of storage, on account of a drought which was prevailing at the time of the charter, and which affected the rivers by means of which the cargoes were ordinarily brought from the interior, but did not in any way affect the delivery of cargoes from the usual place of storage to the ship.[66]

Act of Public Enemy.—A detention of a vessel for unloading, which is caused, not by any act of the shipowners or of the charterers, but wholly by the actual firing of guns from an enemy's ships of war upon the forts in the harbor, directly affecting the vessel and making the discharge of the cargo dangerous and impossible, can not be considered as caused by "default" of the charterers, within the meaning of a charter party stipulating for demurrage in case of their default.[67]

§ 4361. Negligence or Wrongful Acts of Third Persons.—Under a charter party providing that lay days for loading should commence at 6 o'clock a. m. the day after the vessel's report of readiness and that she should load in the customary manner at such wharf as she should be ordered by the charterer's agent, the charterer is liable for demurrage for time lost before she could be provided with a berth after such time commenced, although the delay was not due to any fault of the charterer, but to that of a third party.[68]

Strikes by Workmen.—The term "strike" in the exceptions to the running of lay days in a charter party excuses the charterers for delay caused by a refusal of all the available workmen to work except for an advance in wages demanded in the midst of loading a vessel.[69] An exception of strikes from the running 66. Jonasen v. Keyser, 112 Fed. 443, 50 C. C. A. 334.

Where a ship is chartered in Liverpool to carry a cargo of lumber from Ship island, and the charter party provides that "in the computation of days allowed for delivery should be excluded any time lost by reason of droughts, floods, and storms, or any other extraordinary occurrence, beyond the control of the charterer," such exception does not apply to a drought existing at the time of the charter in the region of the Pascagoula river, and which prevented the charterer from obtaining the timber, but which did not interfere with its delivery from Moss point, the usual place of preparing cargoes, and between which place and Ship island no drought could affect the delivery. 48 Fed. 117, reversed in Sorensen v. Keyser, 52 Fed. 163, 2 C. C. A. 650; Skantze v. Keyser, 52 Fed. 168, 2 C. C. A. 655; Wold v. Keyser, 52 Fed. 169, 2 C. C. A. 656.

67. Act of public enemy.—Decree, Burrill v. Crossman, 91 Fed. 543, 33 C. C. A. 663, reversed in 21 S. Ct. 38, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 106.

Where a vessel commenced discharging cargo in Rio de Janeiro on the day that the revolution began there in 1893, in which the insurgents captured government warships in the harbor, and there was thereafter more or less firing between such ships and forts and batteries on shore, and such condition of affairs was produced by the hostilities as to render it practically impossible to receive the cargo with the dispatch contemplated by the charter, either because of the intrinsic danger incident to unloading or the inability to procure the necessary men to do the work, such condition constituted an unavoidable hindrance, and, to the extent that it prevented compliance with the contract, excused performance, and relieved the charterers from liability under the provision requiring them to pay demurrage for detention by the default of themselves or their agent. Decree, 124 Fed. 838, reversed in Burrill v. Crossman, 130 Fed. 763, 65 C. C. A. 189.

68. Negligence or wrongful acts of third persons.—Pyman Steamship Co. v. Mexican Cent. R. Co., 164 Fed. 441.

69. Strikes by workmen.—Wood v. Keyser, 84 Fed. 688. Decree affirmed in 87 Fed. 1007, 31 C. C. A. 358; Actieselskabet Barfod v. Hilton, etc., Lumber Co., 125 Fed. 137; Marshall v. McNear, 121 Fed. 428.

A strike of the employees of the charterer, without grievance or warning, and an organized and successful effort on their part to prevent, by threats, intimidation, and violence, other laborers, who were willing to do so, from discharging a vessel, held to excuse the charterer for days provided in a charter party includes a strike brought about by demands of the charterers that the laborers loading the vessel shall conform to certain reasonable rules and regulations.[70]

Strike of Coal Miners.—A delay in obtaining a berth at a port because of the large number of vessels unloading coal brought from foreign countries, owing to a domestic shortage caused by a strike of miners, was not caused by strikes, within an exception in the charter party.[71]

§ 4362. Liability of Charterer of Ship.—Under a charter party which placed the duty of discharging and delivering the cargo alongside upon the owners, neither the charterer nor cargo can be held liable for demurrage because of delay in discharging beyond the stipulated lay days, without proof that it was through the fault of one or the other.[72]

Under Cesser Clause.—The rule of construction of a charter party containing a cesser clause relieving the charterer from responsibility after the completion of loading and also providing that the charterer shall pay freight and demurrage for delay in discharging, and giving a lien therefor, is that the cesser clause is to be construed, if possible, as inapplicable to a liability with which the lien is not commensurable, and where a ship was required to deliver her cargo of coal to a purchaser, and discharge the same upon a general pile, by which the lien was lost, the charterer may be held liable for the freight and demurrage.[73] A charter provided for demurrage, but a "cesser clause" therein provided that "the charterer's responsibility under this charter shall cease as soon as the cargo is shipped and bills of lading signed, provided all the conditions called for in this charter have been fulfilled or provided for in the bill of lading." The charter also provided that bills of lading should be signed as presented without prejudice to the charter party, but any difference of freight was to be settled on signing the bills of lading. The signing of bills of lading did not operate to release the charterers from liability for demurrage accruing prior to the signing of the bills, from their failure to fulfill the conditions of the charter.[74]

a delay of a week in the performance of that work. Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623, affirming decree, 70 Fed. 268.

70. The fact that charterers have for some time acquiesced in certain unreasonable customs of baymen loading their ships is no waiver of their right to require the abandonment of such customs, and a strike resulting from such demand is within the exceptions in the charter party. Hawkhurst Steamship Co. v. Keyser, 84 Fed. 693, affirmed in 87 Fed. 1005, 31 C. C. A. 347.

Strike on account of rain.—A vessel is not ready to discharge, within maritime rule 5, regulating the length of time within which a consignee of lumber should receive it, without liability for demurrage, and requiring him to receive, in questionable weather, "if the vessel is ready to discharge," where the stevedores refused to work on account of rain. Bowen v. Sizer, 93 Fed. 227.

71. Strike of coal miners.—Where, in consequence of a strike of the anthracite coal miners of Pennsylvania, large quantities of coal were brought to American ports from Wales and other coal mining regions by vessels, and because of the arrival of a large number of such vessels at a given port at about the same time, and the further requirement of consignees that they should discharge at certain railroad docks to facilitate the shipment of the coal to interior points by rail, delay was caused to many of the vessels in discharging, the strike can not be held a proximate cause of such delay, within the meaning of a charter provision exempting the charterer from liability for demurrage on account of delay caused by strikes. Decree, New Ruperra Steamship Co. v. 2,000 Tons of Coal, 124 Fed. 937, affirmed in Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea Steamship Co., 142 Fed. 402, 73 C. C. A. 502, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 126.

72. Liability of charterer of ship.—Decree, West Hartlepool Steam Nav. Co. v. 450 Tons of Kainit, 151 Fed. 886, affirmed in West Hartlepool Steam Nav. Co. v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., 164 Fed. 836.

73. Under cesser clause.—Dewar v. Mowinckel, 179 Fed. 355, 102 C. C. A. 539.

74. Schmidt v. Keyser, 88 Fed. 799, 32 C. C. A. 121.

Where Charterer Has Right to Move Vessel from One Berth to Another.—A charter party gave the charterer the right to move the vessel from one discharging berth to another by paying towages. The master notified the charterer that the discharge at one place would be completed in the afternoon, and was directed to obtain a tug and move the vessel to another berth designated. He was unable to obtain a tug that night, and when the vessel reached the berth the next morning it was occupied, and several days' delay resulted. It was held, that the fault for the delay was not that of the vessel, but of the charterer, and that he was liable for demurrage.[75]

§ 4363. Liability of Consignee.—Where a consignee is interested in the cargo, and accepts it under a charter party made between the vessel and the consignor who provides for demurrage, he is liable therefor in case of his default.[76]

Provision in Charter Party for Payment of Freight.—Where a part of the freight had been paid by the consignor, and the consignee was required by the charter party to pay the balance, a provision in the bill of lading requiring the consignee to pay freight at the rate agreed on, in accordance with the terms of the charter party, referred to freight alone, and did not obligate the consignee to pay demurrage.[77]

Liability by Estoppel.—Where, pending the discharge of cargoes of coal, the consignees admitted their liability for demurrage, provided any was due, which, however, they denied, and the shipowners, in reliance thereon, allowed the cargoes to be discharged without asserting their lien, the consignees were estopped to defend a suit for demurrage on the ground that another was the proper party to be sued therefor.[78]

Consignee Acting as Broker.—Where the consignee of a cargo, named in the bill of lading, which ran to him or his assigns, did not assign the same, and received the cargo, and paid the freight, he cannot avoid liability for demurrage on the ground that he acted only as broker in the transactions.[79]

Where Duty of Discharging upon Vessel or Consignor.—The consignee of a cargo, under bills of lading which obligated it only to receive the cargo as delivered by the vessel, leaving the duty of discharging upon the vessel or the charterer, is not subject to the provisions of the charter party respecting the time for discharging or demurrage, nor, if liable for demurrage because of failure to receive the cargo as delivered, is such liability measured by the stipulated penalty provided in the charter party as between the owner and charterer, but is to be determined by evidence as to the actual damage resulting from its neglect or default.[80]

§ 4364. Liability of Purchaser of Cargo.—A written contract for the sale of cargoes of coal to be delivered from the ships, which contained no provision with respect to the rate of discharge, bound the purchaser only to receive the coal at a rate which was customary and reasonable under the circumstances; and, where it did so, it can not be held liable for demurrage which

75. Where charterer has right to move vessel from one berth to another.—Decree, 158 Fed. 203, affirmed in Hammett v. Chase, etc., Co., 165 Fed. 1005, 91 C. C. A. 663.

76. Liability of consignee.—Graham v. Planters' Compress Co., 129 Fed. 253.

77. Provision in charter party for payment of freight.—Graham v. Planters' Compress Co., 129 Fed. 253.

78. Liability by estoppel.—Taylor v. Fall River Ironworks, 124 Fed. 826.

Where the master of a canal boat presents bills of lading to the consignees which contain an agreement to pay demurrage, and the latter accept the cargo with knowledge of the contents of such bills, they will be estopped from denying a claim for demurrage on the ground that the goods were shipped under a different contract, not allowing demurrage. Gabler v. McChesney, 70 N. Y. S. 191, 60 App. Div. 583.

79. Consignee acting as broker.—Crowley v. Hurd, 172 Fed. 498.

80. Where duty of discharging upon vessel or consignor.—West Hartlepool Steam Nav. Co. v. 450 Tons of Kainit, 151 Fed. 886.

the seller was obliged to pay under the charter parties, requiring a more rapid discharge.[81]

§ 4365. Delay in Loading or Sailing.—Vessel Loaded in Turn.—A charterer is not liable for demurrage because seven days elapsed between the time the vessel was ready to load with lumber and the completion of her loading, the usual time for loading being from three to four days, where the delay was due to the fact that she was required to wait her turn in accordance with the custom of the port and the scarcity of labor, all the available men at the port being engaged in loading the vessels ahead of her.[82]

Caused by Nature of Goods Shipped.—The respondent, as agent for certain steamships, is not liable for demurrage, because the derricks of the libelant hired by a shipper to transport locomotives in parts to the steamships and by the respondent to hoist the same on board and into the holds at a stipulated price for each were not allowed to deliver the same as rapidly as they could have done, where the parts were received and stowed with reasonable skill and dispatch, and the delay resulted from the character of the cargo and the manner in which it was loaded on the derricks, and it further appeared that libelant furnished a larger number of derricks than could conveniently be discharged at the same time.[83]

Cargo Different from That Specified in Charter.—Demurrage is recoverable for delay in loading, due to the fact that the cargo was different from that specified in the charter.[84]

Failure of Shipper to Deliver Goods.—Under a charter for the carriage of cargoes of coke which provided that it should be loaded on the vessels "as fast as they can receive the same," the owner is entitled to demurrage for delay in loading caused by the failure of the charterer to have a supply of coke on hand at the port of loading.[85]

Goods Delivered at Another Wharf.—Where the bill of lading provided that the vessel should load continuously, working all the hatches at once, the owner of the vessel is entitled to recover for demurrage, where a portion of the cargo was not at the wharf at the place of shipment, and the vessel was compelled to cross the river to a place where such other portion of the cargo was furnished.[86]

Goods Delivered in Inconvenient Place.—The charter party merely providing the shipper should furnish the lumber at a certain rate per day, and the ship should employ her own stevedore, and it not appearing that when it was made the carrier knew how it was piled on a wharf, it was the shipper's duty to deliver it at a place convenient for loading directly into the ship.[87]

Goods in Unfit Condition for Loading.—A provision in a charter for carrying lumber that the cargo should be furnished "at the port of loading as fast as vessel can receive and properly stow same in suitable hours and weather," has reference to the hours and weather suitable for loading and stowage, and does not exclude time lost by reason of the lumber becoming wet, and unfit for loading, before it is forwarded to the ship.[88]

81. Liability of purchaser of cargo.—Furness, etc., Co. v. Leyland Shipping Co., 134 Fed. 815, 67 C. C. A. 461.

82. Delay in loading or sailing.—Williscroft v. Cargo of the Cyrenian, 123 Fed. 169.

83. Caused by nature of goods shipped.—Merritt, etc., Wrecking Co. v. Vogeman, 143 Fed. 142.

84. Cargo different from that specified in charter.—Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 163 Fed. 657.

85. Failure of shipper to deliver goods.—Decree 123 Fed. 330, affirmed in Atlantic, etc., Steamship Co. v. Guggenheim, 147 Fed. 103, 77 C. C. A. 329.

86. Goods delivered at another wharf.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Thomsen & Co., 173 Fed. 710.

87. Goods delivered in inconvenient place.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Craig, 144 N. Y. S. 64, 159 App. Div. 192.

88. Goods in unfit condition for loading.—Durchmann v. Dunn, 106 Fed. 950, 46 C. C. A. 62.

Causes beyond Control of Charterer.—Under a charter party providing for payment of demurrage by the charterer for delay in loading or discharging beyond the lay days specified, "except in case of * * * causes beyond the control of the charterer," the charterer is not liable for delay in loading caused by the refusal of the owner of the coal dock at which the vessel was directed to load, and which was the only one at which the charterer could reasonably load, to give her proper dispatch, which was a cause "beyond the control of the charterer," within the meaning of the exception.[89]

Caused by Towage between Ports.—Under a charter for the carriage of lumber to be loaded at two ports, requiring the charterer to pay the towage between the two, the time of such towage can not be charged in the lay days for loading, nor the time lost in obtaining a tug not due to any default of the charterer.[90]

Caused by Constituted Authority.—Where a vessel was chartered to load at a pier belonging to a town in a foreign port, in charge of the captain of the port, whose duty it was to assign vessels to berths at the pier, and he refused to permit the vessel to berth in her turn at the pier in a berth where she would project beyond the pier, resulting in a delay, such delay was caused by the "intervention of constituted authorities," within an exception in the charter party relieving the charterers from liability for demurrage.[91] A vessel is not entitled to demurrage for the time she is detained by a shipper by virtue of a legal seizure, although on a claim which was unfounded and subsequently dismissed, unless the proceeding was in bad faith or malicious.[92]

Failure of Shipper to Furnish Stevedore.—A charter party required the charterer to pay demurrage for each and every day's detention by his default, and provided: "Charterers' stevedore to be employed in loading and discharging at not to exceed current rates." It was the master's duty to load the vessel. The charterer designated a stevedore at the port of loading; but on arrival there, by reason of a strike, he declined to load, and the charterers' agent notified the master that he waived the privilege of naming the stevedore. It was only a privilege, which imposed no duty on the charterer to furnish a stevedore, and he could not be charged with demurrage because of his failure to do so, where the cargo was ready.[93]

Loading at Port Designated by Charterer.—A vessel, under charter to load at either one of three ports at the charterer's option, and which has been ordered to one where she can not be loaded without delay, is not bound to remove to another to save the charterer demurrage, and does not forfeit the right to demurrage because she demands for such removal a sum which the charterer refuses to pay.[94]

Liability of Charterer for Act of Agent.—Where the agents of the charterer of a vessel for the carriage of a cargo of coal directed her to report to a coal company for loading, the charterer became responsible for the acts of such company, and liable for demurrage because of its failure to give customary dispatch in loading.[95]

Caused by Refusal to Sign Bill of Lading.—A shipowner is not entitled to demurrage from a charterer for delay in the sailing of the vessel after she was

89. Causes beyond control of charterer.—Decree 164 Fed. 441, reversed. Pyman Steamship Co. v. Mexican Cent. R. Co., 169 Fed. 281, 94 C. C. A. 557.

90. Caused by towage between ports.—Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 163 Fed. 657.

91. Caused by constituted authority.—Adamson v. 4,300 Tons Pyrites Ore, 137 Fed. 998.

92. Watt v. Cargo of Lumber, 161 Fed. 104.

93. Failure of shipper to furnish stevedore.—Harrington v. American, etc., Lumber Co., 185 Fed. 475, 107 C. C. A. 575.

94. Loading at port designated by charterer.—Stoomvart Maatschaffy Nederlandsche Lloyd v. Lind, 170 Fed. 918, 96 C. C. A. 134.

95. Liability of charterer for act of agent.—Carleton v. Three Hundred Sixty-Seven Tons of Coal, 206 Fed. 345.

loaded, which was due to the claim of the master that the cargo was in excess of that actually loaded, and his refusal to sign bills of lading for the correct quantity.[96]

Charter Party Provision for Quick Delivery.—A provision of a charter for quick delivery on board should be given a reasonable interpretation with reference to the character of the cargo, as well as its destination and the manner of stowage required, in order to facilitate its discharge. A requirement that the cargo shall be delivered as fast as the ship can receive it does not render the charterer liable for demurrage because all her hatches are not used at the same time, where the size and weight of the packages and the facilities of the wharf are such as to render such use inconvenient.[97]

Under Bill of Lading Issued after Loading.—In the absence of intention to the contrary, the bill of lading, though issued after the vessel was loaded, providing "any detention on the part of the shipper in supplying cargo as fast as steamer can receive to be accounted for by payment of demurrage" at a certain rate, relates back and governs liability of the shipper for delay caused by him during the loading.[98]

Time Excepted in Charter Party.—A provision, in a charter for carrying a cargo of lumber, that the cargo should be furnished "as fast as vessel can receive and properly stow same in suitable hours and weather," has reference to the hours and weather suitable for loading and stowage, and does not exclude time lost by reason of the lumber becoming wet in distant yards, and unfit for loading, before it is forwarded to the ship.[99]

Holidays Not Excluded in Computing Time.—The Pennsylvania statute relating to holidays and half holidays does not make them obligatory, and where it is not shown that the stevedores engaged in loading a vessel refused to work on Saturday afternoons because of the statute such half days are not to be excluded in computing demurrage.[1]

§ 4366. Delay during Voyage.—Under a contract to transport bricks from New York to Colon, where there was a detention of two steamers at New York and of three at Colon by respondent, libelant was entitled to recover.[2] Where a vessel is detained on account of the illness of her master and steward, the hire ceases for the time lost to the charterer.[3] A firm of shipping agents chartered a vessel "as agents for charterers," but without disclosing any principal, to carry a cargo of lumber from Pensacola to "any safe port" in the western Mediterranean. Before time for entering on the voyage, they chartered to respondents at an increased rate of freight. It was held, that respondents were not bound as principals under the original charter, but were shippers charged with notice of such charter, and, while not held to the stipulations therein as to demurrage days and rate of demurrage, they were bound, within a reasonable time after loading, to name a safe Mediterranean port for delivery of cargo, and liable for the detention of the vessel necessarily resulting from their naming an unsafe port, for which the master refused to sign bills of lading.[4]

96. Caused by refusal to sign bill of lading.—Wood v. Sewall, 128 Fed. 141, affirmed 135 Fed. 12, 67 C. C. A. 580.

Where, after a cargo was loaded, the master refused to sign the bill of lading presented by the charterer, on the ground that it was incorrect, but, after several days delay, altered and signed the same, the charterer cannot be charged with demurrage for the time so taken. The Assyria, 98 Fed. 316, 39 C. C. A. 97.

97. Charter party provision for quick delivery.—Uren v. Hagar, 95 Fed. 493.

98. Under bill of lading issued after loading.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Craig, 144 N. Y. S. 64, 159 App. Div. 192.

99. Time excepted in charter party.—Durchman v. Dunn, 101 Fed. 606.

1. Holidays not excluded in computing time.—Holland Gulf Steamshipping Co. v. Hagar, 124 Fed. 460; Uren v. Hagar, 95 Fed. 493.

2. Delay during voyage.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 166 Fed. 993.

3. Northern Steamship Co. v. Earn-Line Steamship Co., 169 Fed. 708.

4. Keyser & Co. v. Jurvelius, 122 Fed. 218, 58 C. C. A. 664.

§ 4367. Delay in Unloading.—Where the charter or bill of lading is silent as to the time of unloading and discharge, there is an implied contract to discharge the vessel within a reasonable time.[5]

Reasonable Rate of Discharge.—Where the wharves at a port are not all equally convenient for the discharge of every sort of cargo, in the absence of a custom establishing a uniform rate, a reasonable rate of discharge is not necessarily the same at all wharves, and, while a wharf may be so inconvenient as to render the consignee responsible for the delay in discharging thereat, the reasonable convenience required is not the highest degree of convenience either imaginable or actually existing.[6]

Customary Dispatch.—A charterer is liable for demurrage for failing to discharge the vessel with customary dispatch as required by the charter.[7]

Unloading in Turn.—Where, through the charterer's failure to discharge a vessel at her port of destination, she is obliged to proceed to another port, she can not be held to have contracted with reference to a custom of such port that she shall await her turn to discharge, and for delay caused thereby the charterer is liable in demurrage.[8] Where the charter of each of two schooners chartered to the same party to carry cargoes between the same ports required the vessel to load and discharge in turn with other vessels of the charterer, one which was chartered first, loaded and sailed first, and first arrived at the place from which they required to be towed was entitled to be first discharged, although the other, by telephone, first gave notice of her arrival.[9] Where a charter party required the vessel to be discharged at a fixed rate after she was ready to unload, whether in berth or not, a provision that, in case of strikes, or any other causes or accidents beyond the control of the consignees, which prevent or delay the discharging, such time is not to count, does not exempt the charterer from liability for delay caused by the vessel waiting her turn.[10]

Unloading from Single Hatch.—For a delay in unloading not occasioned by any insufficiency of carts to receive the cargo, but by reason of the vessel delivering from but one hatch, when she might have used two, no demurrage is recoverable.[11]

Causes beyond Charterer's Control.—Delay in the discharge of vessels laden with coal, due to the arrival at the same port at about the same time of a large number of such vessels, each under a separate charter to the same party, was not the result of "causes or accidents beyond the charterer's control," within a provision of the charter parties exempting it from liability for demurrage in such case.[12] A delay of six days before commencing to discharge a cargo of iron ore, consigned to the charterer and which he had sold to a manufacturer, caused by the refusal of a railroad company because of a dispute with the manufacturer to furnish cars in which to unload the ore, was not chargeable to the charterer on the lay days, under a provision of the charter party excepting "all

5. Delay in unloading.—70 Fed. 268, affirmed in Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623.

6. Reasonable rate of discharge.—The James Baird, 90 Fed. 669.

7. Customary dispatch.—Hinckley v. Wilson Lumber Co., 205 Fed. 974.

Customary dispatch at the port of New York for discharging a cargo of railroad ties held to require that the vessel be given a berth within 24 hours after she reported, and be discharged thereafter at the rate of 50,000 feet, board measure, each working day. Crowley v. Hurd, 172 Fed. 498.

8. Unloading in turn.—Lehigh Valley Coal Co. v. Ionia Transp. Co., 174 Fed. 798, 98 C. C. A. 506.

9. Farrow v. American Agricultural Chemical Co., 194 Fed. 1018.

10. New Ruperra Steamship Co. v. 2,000 Tons of Coal, 124 Fed. 937, affirmed in Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea Steamship Co., 142 Fed. 402, 73 C. C. A. 502, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 126.

11. Unloading from single hatch.—Ewan v. Tredegar Co., 88 Fed. 703.

12. Causes beyond charterer's control.—Decree, New Ruperra Steamship Co. v. 2,000 Tons of Coal, 124 Fed. 937, affirmed in Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea Steamship Co., 142 Fed. 402, 73 C. C. A. 502, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 126.

causes beyond the control of the shipper, the consignee or the charterer which may prevent or delay the loading or discharging." [13]

Caused by Unforeseen Obstacles.—The charterer is not bound to discharge the vessel in the customary time, regardless of unforeseen obstacles and unusual circumstances.[14] But where the time for the discharge of a vessel is stipulated in the charter or bill of lading, or is definitely fixed by it, so that it can be calculated beforehand, the charterer thereby agrees to discharge her within that time, and he takes the risk of all unforeseen circumstances.[15]

Caused by Public Authorities.—Where a contract of shipment requires the canal boat to be brought to the dock of the consignee, and requires the payment of a certain sum per day as demurrage on the failure of the consignee to unload within three days, the removal of the boat from the consignee's dock within the three days by the public authorities, caused by the temporary closing of the canal, will prevent a recovery of demurrage for the time the boat is prevented from returning to the dock.[16] Where the discharge of a vessel was stopped during five hours for want of a customhouse permit, which had been mislaid by a customs officer, and the permit was procured by the charterer very soon after the discharge was stopped for want thereof, and it did not appear that the stevedore was ready to proceed when the permit arrived, the charterer was not liable for such delay.[17]

Caused by Sinking of Vessel.—A vessel is entitled to recover demurrage for delay beyond the lay days allowed by the contract for discharging caused by her sinking at the dock through the negligence of the consignees.[18]

Caused by Inability of Vessel to Reach Wharf.—A consignee of cargo can not be held liable for demurrage because of delay in discharging, due to the inability of the vessel to reach the dock designated for discharge, owing to obstruction by dredges engaged in improving the waterway, in the absence of a contract covering such situation, and where the obstruction was not known when the dock was designated.[19]

Caused by Unsafe Approach to Wharf.—Under a charter providing that the wharf for discharging shall be selected by the charterer, where the ship can always safely lie afloat at any time of tide, the charterer is liable for the vessel's loss of time and expense due to an unsafe approach to a discharging wharf selected by him.[20]

Caused by Temporary Derangement of Dock Machinery.—Where a charter party contains no express provision for demurrage, or fixing the lay days for loading and discharging, an implied obligation arises on the part of the consignee for reasonable dispatch in discharging, and demurrage is recoverable for delay beyond a reasonable time under the circumstances surrounding the case, and without the fault of the vessel; but the consignee is not an insurer against delay in the absence of a charter provision to that effect, and there is no liability for demurrage where delay occurs from circumstances beyond his control, and which could not have been anticipated, such as a temporary derangement of the dock machinery used for unloading, where there was no other dock available.[21]

13. Pool Shipping Co. v. Samuel, 192 Fed. 57.

14. Caused by unforeseen obstacles.—Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623, affirming decree 70 Fed. 268.

15. Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623, affirming decree 70 Fed. 268.

16. Caused by public authorities.—Gabler v. McChesney, 70 N. Y. S. 191, 60 App. Div. 583.

17. Two Thousand Tons of Coal, 135 Fed. 734, 68 C. C. A. 372.

18. Caused by sinking of vessel.—Carroll v. Holway, 158 Fed. 328.

19. Caused by inability of vessel to reach wharf.—Roney v. Chase, etc., Co., 160 Fed. 268, reversed in 161 Fed. 309.

20. Caused by unsafe approach to wharf.—Crisp v. United States, etc., Steamship Co., 124 Fed. 748.

21. Caused by temporary derangement of dock machinery.—Ionia Transp. Co. v. Two Thousand Ninety-Eight Tons of Coal, 128 Fed. 514, affirmed in 135 Fed. 317, 67 C. C. A. 671.

Caused by Master's Absence from Vessel.—The master or shipowner can not recover demurrage, under a charter party, for delay in discharging caused by the master's absence from the vessel, so that she could not be moved to another dock upon the purchaser of the cargo refusing to receive it on the ground that it was in bad condition.[22]

Caused by Inadequate Facilities.—The charterer of a barge can not be held liable for demurrage because of delay in unloading a quantity of coal from the barge's hold, after she arrived at the place of loading, owing to the inadequacy of the charterer's facilities, where the coal was taken on by the master under a contract made with a third party after the charter, and without consulting the charterer.[23]

Caused by Unloading into Cars.—A provision of a shipping contract, requiring the shipper to receive cargo as fast as it could be discharged by the ship, is to be reasonably construed, and, where the parties knew that cargo was to be transported by rail from the dock, the shipper had the right to discharge into cars, although it involved a somewhat longer time.[24]

Failure to Provide Wharf.—A vessel under charter has the right to expect the charterer to provide sufficient dock room to enable her cargo to be discharged promptly and continuously, in the absence of any extraordinary conditions, and the charterer is liable for demurrage where there is delay through his neglect to provide such dockage.[25]

Failure to Use Special Facilities.—Where, by the bill of lading, the cargo is to be delivered "free of handling" at the private dock of a consignee known to have special facilities for unloading, the vessel will be entitled to demurrage for unnecessary delay of the consignee in beginning the discharge, although the total time consumed, including the delay, is not longer than would have been occupied in discharging at a public dock of the same port with the inferior facilities there afforded.[26]

Failure to Furnish Lighter.—A charterer is liable for demurrage for the time a steamer is obliged to wait before she can get a berth where she can lie and discharge, under a provision of the charter party requiring the charterer to provide lighters, if necessary, and where she can discharge at once if a portion of her cargo is lightered.[27]

Failure to Settle Prior Claim for Demurrage.—Demurrage can not be recovered from a charterer for delay in discharging, due to the refusal of the owner to discharge without settlement of a prior claim for demurrage at the port of loading.[28]

Facilities at Different Wharf.—The claim of a boat owner for demurrage on account of delay in discharging disallowed, where it appeared that he could have secured quick discharge by moving to a different location in the same yard.[29]

Designation of Wharf.—A designation by a charterer of a berth for a vessel, on notice of its arrival in port, was given within a reasonable time when delivered within two or three hours from such notice of arrival.[30] Where a bill of lading for a cargo requires its delivery to the consignee "or assigns," the master knows that the wharf of discharge may not have been selected; and the 22. Caused by master's absence from vessel.—Whitman v. Vanderbilt, 75 Fed. 422, 21 C. C. A. 422.

23. Caused by inadequate facilities.—Donaldson v. Severn River Glass Sand Co., 138 Fed. 691; S. C., 138 Fed. 694.

24. Caused by unloading into cars.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 194 Fed. 281.

25. Failure to provide wharf.—Williscroft v. Cargo of the Cyrenian, 123 Fed. 169.

26. Failure to use special facilities.—Pioneer Fuel Co. v. McBrier, 84 Fed. 495, 28 C. C. A. 466.

27. Failure to furnish lighter.—Steamship Rutherglen Co. v. Houlder, 196 Fed. 916.

28. Failure to settle prior claim for demurrage.—Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 163 Fed. 657.

29. Facilities at different wharf.—Murray v. Jump Co., 148 Fed. 123.

30. Designation of wharf.—The St. Bernard, 105 Fed. 994.

fact that the consignee sells the cargo before its arrival, and designates the wharf of the buyer as the place for its discharge, does not change the rule as to demurrage for delay in being provided a place to discharge.[31]

After Notice of Arrival.—Under a charter party providing for lay days to begin running at the port of loading on the day following the receipt of the captain's written notice of readiness, accompanied by a surveyor's certificate, but containing no provision as to notice at the port of discharge, the charterer's contention that it was not required to unload until the day following the receipt of notice of readiness, which could not be given on a holiday, was not sustainable.[32]

Necessity for Protest against Delay.—Protest by a master of a vessel detained on demurrage is, if ever, necessary only where the owner has cause of complaint, or is about to take some step which may prejudice the shipper.[33]

Refusal of Consignee to Accept Cargo.—A consignee of lumber, shipped to him under an executory contract to purchase, is not liable for demurrage, where the delay was due to his refusal to accept the lumber without an abatement of price, because it was not of the specified quality.[34] Where, though the consignee is not liable for demurrage under the bill of lading or charter party, he improperly refuses to take part of the cargo within a reasonable time after arrival, he thereby becomes liable for damages arising from the delay.[35] Where the consignor of cargo hires the vessel for its carriage, he is liable for demurrage on account of delay in discharging caused by the refusal of the consignee to receive the cargo, and can not require the vessel owner, without his consent, to look to a new consignee for any part of it.[36]

Under Cesser Clause.—The cesser clause of a charter party, saying "Charterers' responsibility to cease when vessel is loaded and bills of lading are signed," does not relieve the charterers from liability for demurrage under provisions of the charter requiring them to pay demurrage for any delay in delivery by their fault or that of their agent, and declaring that the vessel is to have an absolute lien upon the cargo for all freight, dead freight, and demurrage, where the bills of lading, which do not mention demurrage or refer to any other provisions of the charter than those concerning freight and average, have been assigned, and the delay in unloading is made by the assignees of the bills of lading, who thereby became consignees of the cargo, since the rights of the shipowners against those consignees depend altogether upon the contract created by the bills of lading, except so far as that contract refers to the charter party.[37]

Sundays and Holidays.—In a provision of a bill of lading which entitles the ship to discharge "continuously," the word must be construed to mean continuously during working days, and "working days" exclude Sundays and holidays usually observed, and include only the usual working hours of days on which usual work is only prevented by weather.[38]

Demurrage in Nature of Penalty.—A clause of a charter party or bill of lading providing that, after arrival and notice to the consignee, the vessel shall have precedence in discharging over all vessels arriving or giving notice after

31. The Viola, 90 Fed. 750.

32. After notice of arrival.—Holman v. Gans Steamship Line, 186 Fed. 96, 108 C. C. A. 208. See Perry v. Spreckles' Sugar-Refin. Co., 110 Fed. 777.

No particular form is required for a notice to a consignee of the arrival of a vessel to be discharged by him, but it is sufficient if he actually receives such notice from a third person, and a notice given on Sunday is also sufficient. Carroll v. Holway, 158 Fed. 328.

33. Necessity for protest against delay.—Brown v. Ralston, 36 Va. (9 Leigh) 532.

34. Refusal of consignee to accept cargo.—Conkling v. Brooklyn Lumber Co., 41 N. Y. S. 801, 10 App. Div. 404, 75 N. Y. St. Rep. 1200.

35. Graham v. Planters' Compress Co., 129 Fed. 253.

36. Sheridan v. Penn Collieries Co., 128 Fed. 204.

37. Under cesser clause.—Decree, Burrill v. Crossman, 91 Fed. 543, 33 C. C. A. 663, reversed in 21 S. Ct. 38, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 106.

38. Sundays and holidays.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Pitch Pine Lumber Co., 156 Fed. 88.

her arrival, and stipulating for special demurrage in case of a violation of such provision, is in the nature of one for a penalty, which should not be imposed unless the case comes clearly within the purpose which it intended to accomplish; and where the original consignee of the cargo, to whom notice of arrival was given, refused to receive it, and the master was instructed by the shipper to deliver to another, the latter became from that time the consignee, for the purposes of such clause, and the special demurrage is not recoverable because precedence in discharging was given to another vessel, through the action of the original consignee, after its refusal to accept the cargo.[39]

Damages in Nature of Demurrage.—A consignee and owner of a cargo is liable to the owner of the vessel for damages in the nature of demurrage for unreasonable delay in discharging the cargo after arrival, though the bill of lading contains no stipulation as to demurrage and prescribes no time within which the cargo shall be discharged.[40]

Delay after Unloading.—A contract of shipment, making the consignee liable for demurrage in a certain sum per day for failure to unload a canal boat in a given time, does not authorize a recovery for the time after the boat was unloaded in which it was detained in the canal, though the vessel was not unloaded within the period allowed therefor, and the break in the canal did not occur until the expiration of such time.[41]

§ 4368. Effect of Custom and Usage.—Known to Charterer.—Where a charter party provided that a certain number of working days should be allowed for loading the vessel in the port, and that the custom of each port was to be observed in all cases, and the vessel was delayed more than the days allowed owing to the members of labor organizations refusing to work on days generally recognized as working days, a contention that, the practice of such labor organizations being known to the shipowners, the delay should be excused, under the clause relative to customs of ports, is without merit, since the custom of labor organizations in the port, and their manner of refusing to work, being known to the charterer of a ship, if he wished to protect himself from the results of their refusal to work on days generally regarded as working days he should so provide in his charter party.[42]

As to Assigning Vessel to Particular Dock.—Where there is no provision in the bill of lading on the subject, the consignee has, under the custom of most or all of the Atlantic ports, the privilege of determining at which of its docks the vessel should discharge, and her right to her turn was limited to such dock. This privilege, however, is not absolute; and whether the assigning her to a particular dock, where she was delayed awaiting her turn, while other vessels arriving after her were discharging at the consignee's other docks, renders the consignee liable to demurrage, depends on whether such assignment was just and reasonable, and based on some reasonable necessity.[43]

39. Demurrage in nature of penalty.—Continental Coal Co. v. Bowne, 115 Fed. 945, 53 C. C. A. 427.

40. Damages in nature of demurrage.—Washburn v. Empire Brick, etc., Co., 137 N. Y. S. 489, 152 App. Div. 563.

The vendee of the consignee of a cargo is liable to the owner of the vessel for damages resulting from unreasonable delay by the vendee in unloading. Washburn v. Empire Brick, etc., Co., 137 N. Y. S. 489, 152 App. Div. 563.

Where a contract of affreightment required a vessel only to deliver the cargo at the port of New York, although it contained no specific provision for demurrage, she is entitled to recover damages in the nature of demurrage for delay resulting from her being ordered by the cargo owner to discharge at a berth, which she could not then reach, because of dredging work being done by the government. Decree 160 Fed. 268, reversed in Roney v. Chase, etc., Co., 161 Fed. 309.

41. Delay after unloading.—Gabler v. McChesney, 70 N. Y. S. 195, 60 App. Div. 590.

42. Effect of custom and usage.—Hagerman v. Norton, 105 Fed. 996, 46 C. C. A. 1.

43. As to assigning vessel to particular dock.—Evans v. Blair, 114 Fed. 616, 52 C. C. A. 396.

As to Rate of Discharging.—A custom of a port as to the rate of discharging a certain kind of lumber from a vessel, to govern the rights of parties under a contract otherwise indeterminate, must not only be established and reasonable, but also certain and definite.[44]

As to Preference in Discharging.—A provision of a charter that the vessel should be loaded by a coal company "in turn" must be strictly construed, and it shuts out a practice of the company to give preference to its own vessels, or to sell coal to local customers from the supply which would otherwise have been available for loading at its docks, to the delay of the chartered vessel.[45]

As to Discharging in Turn.—A custom of a port for vessels to discharge in turn and that a vessel is not entitled to demurrage during the days she is awaiting her turn is reasonable and enforceable.[46]

Contract Prevails over Usage.—An agreement of an owner in a charter party to load cargo according to custom of port is not governed by the custom of port as to time of loading, where the charter party allows a specified number of running lay days, Sundays, and holidays, even if used, excluded, for loading.[47] A custom existing in San Francisco between shippers and shipowners, requiring a consignee to designate a berth for the discharge of cargo, can not prevail over the terms of contracts requiring the delivery of certain quantities of coal respectively "at the wharf" and "on wharf as customary," to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army at Honolulu, at which place the custom is to discharge freight upon the wharves, so as to render the government liable for the delay in reaching a berth, which was caused by the conditions existing in Honolulu Harbor to the ships chartered by the vendor to carry out his contract.[48]

44. As to rate of discharging.—Such a custom can not be found on testimony that the rate is "from 17,000 to 20,000" feet per day, or "from 25,000 to 30,000" feet. Such testimony can only establish the usual or average time for unloading, and is valuable only as showing the limits, under ordinary circumstances, of a reasonable rate of discharging lumber of that kind at such port, and does not obviate the necessity of considering the particular circumstances of each case. The James Baird, 90 Fed. 669.

45. As to preference in discharging.—Donnell v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co., 118 Fed. 10, 55 C. C. A. 178. See In re Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 175 Fed. 548.

In a charter of a vessel to carry railroad ties a provision that from the time the vessel is reported ready not less than 1,500 ties shall be furnished per running day "for loading at port of loading, and prompt dispatch for discharging at port of discharge," entitles the ship to demurrage for delay in unloading caused by other vessels being previously at the consignee's dock, though, by the custom of the port, vessels are obliged to take their turn. Ten Thousand & Eighty-Two Oak Ties, 87 Fed. 935.

46. As to discharging in turn.—The consignee of a cargo of lumber who had a wharf in connection with his lumber yard had the right to require the vessel to discharge at such wharf without liability for demurrage because of delay in awaiting her turn, where the charter party provided for "customary dispatch" in discharging and the custom of the port required her to wait her turn without demurrage. Gilbert Transp. Co. v. Borden, 170 Fed. 706, 96 C. C. A. 26.

While, in the absence of qualifying circumstances, it is usual and customary at the port of Boston for a consignee to have a berth provided at which a vessel may discharge her cargo within 24 hours after her arrival, by the custom of the port the presence at the designated wharf of other vessels, which arrived earlier, is considered such qualifying circumstance, and in such case vessels are required to wait their turn to discharge without demurrage for the delay so caused. Held, that such custom was a reasonable one within reasonable limits, and under ordinary circumstances, and that a vessel loaded with lumber was not entitled to demurrage because of a delay of 15 days, caused by so waiting her turn to discharge, it not appearing that the wharf was too small for the ordinary business of the owner, nor that he willfully or negligently permitted a large number of vessels to collect for discharging at the same time. The Viola, 90 Fed. 750.

47. Contract prevails over usage.—Holman v. Gans Steamship Line, 186 Fed. 96, 108 C. C. A. 208.

48. Judgment, Moore & Co. v. United States (U. S.), 38 Ct. Cl. 590, reversed in 25 S. Ct. 202, 196 U. S. 157, 49 L. Ed. 428

§ 4369. Demand for Demurrage.—A provision of a charter party that the charterer shall pay demurrage "day by day" for detention of the vessel through his default does not require the owner to demand demurrage at the end of each day.[49]

§ 4370. Rate and Amount.—Special Provision of Charter Party.—A special provision of a charter party that the freight on the dressed lumber shipped should be subject to a deduction of one-fifth can not extend to the construction of maritime rules relating to demurrage, so as to entitle the consignee to a deduction in measurement for dressed lumber in computing the demurrage due, except on clear evidence that it was so intended.[50]

Agreed Rate for Other Days.—A rate of demurrage agreed upon in a charter party for a certain number of demurrage days will be adopted by the court as the measure of damages for further detention of the ship in the absence of other evidence, but it is open to either party to show that it is not the true measure.[51]

Agreed Rate for Other Vessels.—Where there is an agreed rate of demurrage for a class of vessels to which an injured vessel belongs, it may be taken as the basis for computing the damages recoverable for the delay while she was being repaired.[52]

Bill of Lading Different from Original Contract.—Where libelant contracted to transport coal for respondent consignee, who was the owner, under a verbal agreement as to the terms of freight, and that the demurrage rate should be a certain amount per day, and libelant did not call respondent's attention to the fact that the shipper had inserted in the bill of lading a provision for demurrage at a certain rate a ton of cargo for each day's detention, until after the coal had been delivered, and respondent did not discover such change until delivery had been completed, the shipper having no authority to make a new contract for respondent, the latter was liable for the demurrage only at the rate specified in the original contract.[53]

Rules of Maritime Association of Port.—Under a charter fixing the rate of demurrage to be paid by the charterer at "customary" dollars per day, the rate recoverable for delay in discharging in New York is not governed by the rules of the maritime association of the port, in the absence of proof that the rate thereby fixed is the customary rate.[54]

Earnings of Vessel.—The measure of damages for detention of a vessel, in loading or unloading, beyond the time stipulated in her charter, is the probable net earnings of such vessel during the period of her detention, and an inquiry into a subsequent period is inadmissible.[55] Where no rate of demurrage is fixed by the bill of lading, the amount may be computed by dividing the gross freight earned on the voyage by the number of days it should have taken, and multiplying the quotient by the number of days she was delayed, making proper additions or deductions for any difference in her expenses during the time of such delay.[56]

49. Demand for demurrage.—Washington Marine Co. v. Rainier Mill, etc., Co., 198 Fed. 142.

50. Rate and amount.—Bowen v. Sizer, 93 Fed. 227.

51. Agreed rate for other days.—Dewar v. Mowinckel, 179 Fed. 355, 102 C. C. A. 539.

52. Agreed rate for other vessels.—Thompson v. Winslow, 130 Fed. 1001, affirmed in 134 Fed. 546, 67 C. C. A. 470.

53. Bill of lading different from original contract.—Decree 125 Fed. 432, affirmed in Burns v. Burns, 131 Fed. 238, 65 C. C. A. 224.

54. Rules of maritime association of port.—Randolph v. Wiley, 118 Fed. 77.

55. Earnings of vessel.—Huron Barge Co. v. Turney, 79 Fed. 109.

In the absence of contract, the charter price per day of a vessel under a time charter is not the measure of demurrage recoverable for delay in discharging cargo taken by the charterer for another, but rather the probable net earnings of the vessel during the time lost in the usual course of its employment. United States Shipping Co. v. United States, 146 Fed. 914.

56. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Strong, etc.,

Delay Proximate Cause of Damage.—Where it does not appear that the fouling of a vessel's bottom was caused by the harbor in which she was detained, the owners can not recover for it in addition to demurrage.[57]

Remote and Speculative Damages.—To lose an opportunity to carry a cargo for other persons is remote and speculative, and not direct, damages in a case of a vessel's detention.[58]

Discharging in Turn.—Where other vessels were given precedence in discharging over such schooners in violation of their bills of lading, they were entitled to be compensated in demurrage only at the rate provided in the contract, regardless of the number of the vessels so given precedence which were discharging at the same time.[59]

Power of Master to Settle.—Where a charter party provides a liability for demurrage for delay in unloading at a foreign port, which is within easy cable communication with the owner, the master can not settle the claim for such demurrage for less than the sum due.[60]

Acceptance of Demurrage under Protest.—The acceptance by a master of demurrage under protest leaves the settlement of the amount rightfully due an open question, and the owner is entitled to urge his claim in accordance with his own views, without regard to the grounds of the master's protest.[61]

§ 4371. Lay Days.—Vessel at Wharf.—Where a contract of carriage requires a vessel to discharge her cargo at a specified wharf, lay days for discharging do not commence to run until she obtains a berth at such wharf, unless wrongfully prevented by the shipper.[62] Under a bill of lading requiring a vessel to deliver a cargo of coal at a specified dock, the voyage is not completed, and Co., 195 Fed. 929, reversing decree 157 Fed. 304.

Where a vessel, after she was loaded and ready to sail, with full crew on board, was detained through the fault of the subcharterer, who was not bound by the stipulations of the original charter as to rate of demurrage, and there is no evidence as to her future employment or ability to obtain it, but her gross yearly earnings are shown, such earnings will be considered, together with the demurrage stipulated for in her charter, in fixing the amount of damages recoverable for the delay. Keyser & Co. v. Jurvelius, 122 Fed. 218, 58 C. C. A. 664.

57. Delay proximate cause of damage.—Maday v. United States (U. S.), 43 Ct. Cl. 90.

58. Remote and speculative damages.—Maday v. United States (U. S.), 43 Ct. Cl. 90.

59. Discharging in turn.—Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 Fed. 722.

60. Power of master to settle.—Randall v. Brodhead, 70 N. Y. S. 43, 60 App. Div. 567.

61. Acceptance of demurrage under protest.—Holland v. Gulf Steamshipping Co. v. Hagar, 124 Fed. 460.

62. Lay days.—Tweedie Trading Co. v. Barry, 205 Fed. 721, 124 C. C. A. 15, reversing decree 194 Fed. 286.

Where a contract of carriage requires the vessel to discharge her cargo at a specified wharf, lay days for discharging do not commence to run until she obtains a berth at such wharf. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Barry, 194 Fed. 286.

A schooner was chartered to carry a cargo of sulphur from Sabine Pass, Tex. The charter provided that lay days for loading should commence "from the time the vessel is ready to receive * * * cargo and notice thereof is given. * * * Vessel to take turn in loading * * * if required." The latter clause was written in, while the former was in the printed form. Such provisions were expressly called to the attention of the owner's agents, who also knew that the charterer was chartering other vessels, and that it had been one loading berth at Sabins Pass. When the schooner arrived for loading and gave notice of her arrival, there were other vessels ahead of her, and she was obliged to wait her turn. Held, that her lay days did not commence until she received her berth; there being no unnecessary delay. Union Sulphur Co. v. Percy, 180 Fed. 1, 103 C. C. A. 355, reversing decree 173 Fed. 534.

Under a charter party requiring the charterer to discharge the vessel at New York with "customary dispatch" the lay days for discharging began to run when the vessel reached the berth designated by the charterer, although she was obliged to wait her turn to enter, there being no proof of any custom of the port to require her to wait her turn or that the charterer should be allowed any particular time in case the berth was full. Swan v. Wiley, etc., Co., 161 Fed. 905.

the lay days for discharging do not commence to run, until she reaches such dock and is in condition to discharge, unless she is prevented from reaching it through the active fault of the charterer or consignee.[63]

Ready to Load or Discharge.—Where a charter required the ship to receive cargo "from the charterer's shippers," and provided that lay days should not commence until she was "in every respect ready to load or discharge," such days for loading do not commence to count until she is not only ready to load, but is at the berth where the shipper's cargo is lying, where she is delayed in reaching such berth by the rules of the port, and without fault of the charterer.[64]

Upon Entry at Custom House.—A provision in a charter, "Lay days not to commence to count until 12 o'clock noon after the steamer is entered at the custom house and in every respect ready to load," though negative in form, is positive in effect, and means that the lay days shall commence to count at that time; and where, by a further clause, the ship was required to load "when, where, and as directed" by the charterer, and she was ready on her part, and her master had given the required notice, the lay days commenced to count from the succeeding noon, and the responsibility for a further delay in commencing to load rests upon the charterer, although caused by a custom of the port which compelled her to await her turn to get to the berth assigned her.[65]

Delivery at Different Ports.—Where two bills of lading were given requiring delivery of part of a cargo at different ports, they constitute independent contracts, and hence the consignee was entitled, under maritime rule 4, to one full calendar day after the vessel's arrival at the most distant port to furnish a berth for discharge before being liable for demurrage.[66]

Necessity for Notice.—A notice of readiness to load or discharge required by a charter party to start the running of the lay days is unnecessary and may be considered waived, where the charterer was ready and the work was commenced at once.[67]

Ready to Load or Unload.—Under a provision of a charter party that lay days for loading should commence on notice of readiness by the master, to render such notice effective to start the lay days to running the vessel must have been at her wharf, ready to load, when it was given.[68]

63. Decree Ionia Transp. Co. v. Two Thousand Ninety-Eight Tons of Coal, 128 Fed. 514, affirmed in 135 Fed. 317, 67 C. C. A. 671.

Wharf owned by charterer.—A schooner was under charter providing that her lay days for loading should commence "from the time the vessel is ready to receive * * * cargo and notice thereof is given. * * * Vessel to take turn in loading * * * if required." She arrived in the loading port and gave notice of her readiness to receive cargo. The only berth fitted to load her cargo was owned and controlled by the charterer, and she was required to await her turn, which involved a delay of several days. Held, that her lay days commenced from the time she arrived and gave notice. Percy v. Union Sulphur Co., 173 Fed. 534.

64. Ready to load or discharge.—Bacon v. Ennis, 110 Fed. 404, decree reversed in Carbon Slate Co. v. Ennis, 114 Fed. 260, 52 C. C. A. 146.

65. Upon entry at custom house.—Decree Bacon v. Ennis, 110 Fed. 404, reversed in Carbon State Co. v. Ennis, 114 Fed. 260, 52 C. C. A. 146.

66. Delivery at different ports.—Bowen v. Sizer, 93 Fed. 227.

67. Necessity for notice.—Washington Marine Co. v. Rainier Mill, etc., Co., 198 Fed. 142.

68. Ready to load or unload.—Dantzler Lumber Co. v. Churchill, 136 Fed. 560, 69 C. C. A. 270.

A charter party fixed the demurrage for each days detention of the vessel "by the default" of the charterers or their consignees. It made no provision for "dispatch" or "quick dispatch" in loading or discharging the cargo, but fixed the minimum amount to be loaded or discharged each day, and provided that the lay days should commence "from the time the captain reports himself ready to receive or discharge cargo." Held, that under the later provision the lay days did not commence until the vessel was ready and in position to receive or discharge cargo, and that the contract did not bind the charterers for demurrage for a delay of the vessel in obtaining a wharf at which to discharge, notwithstanding a notice of readiness to discharge from the captain, where, as the owners knew or should have known, all the wharves at the port of destination were public, and under the exclusive control of a harbor master, who directed the movements and position of

Same—Whether in Berth or Not.—A provision of a charter party that lay days for unloading shall commence "when steamer is ready to unload and written notice given, whether in berth or not," must be given effect; and delay in waiting for a berth is chargeable against the charterer, although the lay days do not commence merely by notice given of the steamer's arrival in port, but only when she is actually ready to unload, so far as she can be made so by those in charge.[69]

Sundays and Holidays.—Where a Sunday intervenes between the expiration of the lay days for discharging a vessel and the time when the discharge is completed, it is to be counted as a day of detention.[70] The object of providing in a charter party for one clear day after notice of the readiness of the vessel to receive cargo before the lay days shall commence is to allow the charterer such time for preparation, and, unless made so by the terms of the charter or custom of the port, Sunday is not to be counted as such a day, and, where notice of readiness is given on Saturday, the lay days do not commence until Tuesday.[71] Under a charter party stipulating that lay days shall count according to the custom of port, and that twenty running days, Sundays and holidays excepted, shall be allowed for loading and discharging, the holiday time, as fixed by the statute of port of loading, making Saturday afternoon a holiday, will not be included in the running days.[72] A charter party providing for the allowance of a designated number of running days, Sundays and holidays excepted, for loading and discharging, is not affected by a statute of the country of the port all vessels thereat, and by the rules of the port each vessel was required to wait her turn. Flood v. Crowell, 92 Fed. 402, 34 C. C. A. 415.

69. Whether in berth or not.—New Ruperra Steamship Co. v. 2,000 Tons of Coal, 124 Fed. 937, affirmed in Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea Steamship Co., 142 Fed. 402, 73 C. C. A. 502, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 126.

While under the modern rule, which gives the charterer of a vessel for the carriage of coal, ore, grain, or other like commodities, for which special facilities for loading and discharging are in general use, the option to select the berth at which the vessel shall load or discharge within reasonable limitations, and which subjects her to the necessary delay in awaiting her return without demurrage, the customary charter provisions that lay days shall commence when the vessel is "ready to unload and discharge" and "written notice is given" have no effect, except from the time the vessel reaches the precise berth where she is ordered; but a provision in a coal charter that the time for discharging should commence when the vessel was ready to unload and written notice given, "whether in berth or not," was evidently intended to relieve the vessel from the burden of such rule, and the clause must be given effect in accordance with its plainly expressed meaning, and the lay days for discharging commenced when the vessel gave notice that she was ready to unload and was ready, whether at her designated berth or not. Decree, New Ruperra Steamship Co. v. 2,000 Tons of Coal, 124 Fed. 937, affirmed in Niver Coal Co. v. Cheronea Steamship Co., 142 Fed. 402, 73 C. C. A. 502, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 126.

70. Sundays and holidays.—Washington Marine Co. v. Rainier Mill, etc., Co., 198 Fed. 142.

71. The Assyria, 98 Fed. 316, 39 C. C. A. 97.

72. Holidays.—A charter party provided for loading or discharging according to custom of port, and allowed 20 running days, Sundays and holidays excepted, for loading and discharging. A statement of the lay days used in loading was submitted to the master by the charter, which concluded with the words, "November 14, steamer cleared; does not count according to custom of port." The master signed the statement, adding, "Written under protest, on account of Saturday being counted a half day." He testified that all he knew about the custom as to clearance day was derived from the agents of the charterer. Held, that the failure to protest as to the date of clearance did not conclude the owner's contract rights. Holman v. Gans Steamship Line, 186 Fed. 96, 108 C. C. A. 208.

A provision of a charter party that "holidays" should not be counted as lay days for loading must be construed in accordance with the presumed intention of the parties to exclude only such days as were holidays in the usual and ordinary sense, which were customarily observed by a cessation of work, and did not entitle the charterers to exclude a series of holidays subsequently appointed by the Governor on account of a financial panic for the sole purpose of deferring the maturity of financial obligations, and which were not observed, nor intended to be observed, by a cessation of labor or traffic. Kerr v. Schwaner, 177 Fed. 659, 101 C. C. A. 285.

of discharge, which provides that lay days begin to run from second weekday morning after notice has been given on a Sunday or holiday.[73]

Rainy Days.—A provision of a charter party for the carriage of a cargo of wheat to be loaded at Portland, Or., that "rainy days" should not be counted as lay days for loading, is presumed to have been made with reference to the established rule of that port and excludes only days on which, on account of rain and with reference to the facilities of the port in the way of covered docks, etc., for the protection of vessels while loading, cargo could not be safely and conveniently loaded.[74]

Strikes of Employees.—Where a charter provided that a certain number of working days should be allowed for loading the vessel, detention caused by strikes or "estoppage of labor" not included, days on which those loading the vessel refused to work owing to storms, and days when the labor organizations withdrew their members to attend a funeral and for the celebration of Labor Day, should not be excepted from the days allowed for loading; all days save Sundays and legal holidays being working days, and there having been no forced stoppage, within the meaning of the charter party.[75]

Days Allowed for Loading.—Where a charter provided that a vessel should proceed to Pensacola and there load, the cargo to be delivered alongside, and that 14 working days should be allowed the charterer for loading the vessel, a contention that under the terms of the charter party the duty of the charterer was ended when the cargo was delivered alongside, and that all delays in loading and stowing the cargo were at the risk of the shipowner, was without merit.[76]

Days Lost in Putting Up Gear of Vessel.—Days lost in putting up the gear of a vessel, preparatory to taking her cargo, being, under the terms of the charter party, a part of the charterer's duty, should be included in the lay days.[77]

Time Designated by Charterer.—Where respondent, the owner of a cargo of coal to arrive, contracted with libelant to receive the same alongside and transport it to another port, and also notified libelant to have his barges ready on a certain date when the cargo was expected, libelant was entitled to compute lay days from that date, and to demurrage for the excess after the lay days expired before the cargo arrived and his barges were loaded.[78]

Delay Caused by Negligence of Charterer.—Where charterers neglected to advise their agents at the port of destination of their agreement to attend to the entering of the ship at the custom house upon her arrival, by reason of which such agents refused to act, and a delay of three days was caused in having the ship entered, the owners were entitled to include such days in the lay days allowed by the charter for discharging.[79] Under a charter of a vessel to carry a cargo of wheat to be loaded by the charterers within a time specified, which contained a provision that lay days for loading should not be counted during any time the bringing of the cargo to the port of loading was delayed by railroad accidents, or any other hindrance beyond the charterer's control, where the charterers loaded only with a particular grade of wheat which they had with other grades stored on lines of a railroad company, they were not entitled to the benefit of such provision, on the ground that the company did not furnish sufficient cars to bring in that particular wheat within the time fixed by the charter, when their notice to the company was only to furnish cars generally, 73. Holman v. Gans Steamship Line, 108 C. C. A. 208, 186 Fed. 96.

74. Rainy days.—Kerr v. Schwaner, 101 C. C. A. 285, 177 Fed. 659.

75. Strikes of employees.—Hagerman v. Norton, 105 Fed. 996, 46 C. C. A. 1.

76. Days allowed for loading.—Hagerman v. Norton, 105 Fed. 996, 46 C. C. A. 1.

77. Days lost in putting up gear of vessel.—Wood v. Keyser, 84 Fed. 688, decree affirmed in 87 Fed. 1007, 31 C. C. A. 358.

78. Time designated by charterer.—Guinan v. Weaver Coal, etc., Co., 128 Fed. 203.

79. Delay caused by negligence of charterer.—Hagar v. Elmslie, 107 Fed. 511, 46 C. C. A. 446.

and it did furnish sufficient to bring in double the quantity required, but in part of different grades, which the charterers loaded on other vessels.[80]

Where Charterer Fails to Designate Place of Discharge.—Where by the terms of a charter party the charterer is to name the berth for discharging, he should be ready to receive the cargo when the vessel is ready to deliver, even if she can not do so, either because he has not named the berth, or because he has named a berth to which she can not get, or to which she is prevented from getting through no fault of hers.[81] Where the consignee of a ship's cargo is given the right by the charter party to designate the place of discharge at the port of delivery, either at a safe wharf or alongside, it is his duty to exercise such right within a reasonable time after notice of the arrival of the vessel at the port, and his failure to do so is a waiver of the right, and entitles the ship to consider her voyage at an end, and give notice of her readiness to discharge, which will start her lay days to running.[82]

§ 4372. Indemnity.—If the master, after beginning to unload, intends to discontinue until security is given for demurrage, he should give such timely notice thereof as will enable the charters to furnish the required security without delaying the progress of the work, or adopt a means by which prompt discharge can be made and the lien of the vessel retained.[83]

§ 4373. Waiver and Release of Demurrage.—Where a charter expressly provides the lay days for loading and discharging, and fixes the amount of demurrage to be paid for overtime consumed by the charterer, the owner can not be held to have waived such provision, except upon clear evidence.[84] An agreement between a master and a charterer that the latter shall mail a check to the master for the freight earned at once on being advised that the discharge of cargo has been completed to another port to which the vessel was to proceed is a waiver of strict performance of a provision of the charter party making the freight due at once on discharge, and where the check was so mailed on the day the discharge was completed, and was received and collected by the master, he can not claim demurrage for the time between the discharge and payment, nor can he maintain a libel against the cargo for the freight, filed in the meantime.[85]

Failure to Protest against Delay.—Where a shipper bound himself to unload in twenty days after notice of the arrival of the vessel and to pay demurrage, and the master gave notice of the vessel's arrival and his readiness to deliver, the failure to protest against the shipper's delay was not evidence of an assent to the delay; no protest under the agreement being necessary.[86]

A receipt in full for all claims under a charter executed by a master at the port of discharge on payment to him of only the freight due does not release the charterers from a claim for demurrage which was also made at the time by the 80. Kerr v. Schwaner, 101 C. C. A. 285, 177 Fed. 659.

81. Where charterer fails to designate place of discharge.—The Edward T. Stotesbury, 187 Fed. 111, 109 C. C. A. 31, reversing decree Eaton v. Cargo of Lumber, 180 Fed. 513.

Where a charter party required delivery of the cargo of lumber at the port of New York, and provided that the lay days for discharging were to begin when "captain reports his vessel ready to discharge cargo in New York Harbor," he may give the notice when ready in such harbor, notwithstanding a further provision that the charterer shall pay towage from mouth of Newtown creek and return, which does not bind the charterer to have her discharge at a berth in such creek, but merely gives him the option to do so. The Edward T. Stotesbury, 187 Fed. 111, 109 C. C. A. 31.

82. Dewar v. Mowinckel, 179 Fed. 355, 102 C. C. A. 539.

83. Indemnity.—Ten Thousand & Eighty-Two Oak Ties, 87 Fed. 935.

84. Waiver and release of demurrage.—Henningsen v. Watkins, 110 Fed. 574.

85. The Cargo, 122 Fed. 881.

86. Failure to protest against delay.—Brown v. Ralston, 25 Va. (4 Rand.) 504.

master, and rejected, where the master was compelled to give such receipt in order to collect the freight, and did so under protest.[87]

The delivery of cargo and collection of freight money is not a waiver of a claim for demurrage.[88]

§ 4374. Lien.—The vessel has a lien on the cargo for demurrage, enforceable in admiralty.[89]

Cargo Damaged.—The right of a vessel carrying cargo "free of handling" to a lien for demurrage for delay of the consignee in beginning to discharge is not affected by the fact that the delay arose from the refusal of the consignee to receive the cargo because damaged in transit by an excepted peril, and the fact that during the delay the consignee was negotiating with the owner to purchase the damaged cargo at a reduced price.[90]

Effect of Delivery of Cargo.—When cargo has been absolutely delivered to the consignee before service of process thereon, the lien for demurrage is lost.[91] Discharging cargo after giving notice of a claim for demurrage is not a waiver of the lien, where such cargo is placed on the dock, and kept separate from other goods, so as to be capable of identification.[92]

§§ 4375-4378. Actions—§ 4375. Libel.—A claim in a libel for demurrage should be specific, stating the number of days and the dates for which the demurrage is claimed.[93] A libel for demurrage, which alleges merely that the goods were consigned to respondent and received by libelant for delivery to him, does not state a cause of action, the rule being that a mere consignee, who is not the shipper or carrier of the goods, nor interested therein, is not ordinarily liable for demurrage.[94]

A libel which alleges that libelant hired a lighter to persons engaged in furnishing a cargo of lumber to be loaded on a vessel, and that the lighter was detained by the master of the vessel, not on account of the hirers, but for the benefit of the vessel, for fourteen days after the expiration of the time allowed by the custom of the port for unloading it, but which contains no averment as to whose duty it was to unload it, and avers no contract with the vessel or her master, is insufficient to state a cause of action in rem against the vessel for the demurrage.[95]

§ 4376. Defenses.—A provision of a charter allowing the charterer a certain number of lay days for loading and discharging, and requiring the payment of demurrage for any additional time taken, is an absolute and unconditional engagement on the part of the charterer, who can not be relieved therefrom except on the ground that the delay was due to the fault or negligence of the owner, or those for whom he is responsible; and such fault or negligence is an affirmative defense in a suit to recover the stipulated demurrage, the burden of pleading and proving which rests upon the charterer.[96] Under a contract for

87. Durchman v. Dunn, 101 Fed. 606.

88. Judgment, Elphicke v. Iroquois Furnace Co., 102 Ill. App. 138, affirmed in 65 N. E. 784, 200 Ill. 411.

89. Lien.—Warehouse, etc., Supply Co. v. Galvin, 71 N. W. 804, 96 Wis. 523.

Where, by a contract for the purchase of coal, it was to be shipped by the sellers from England, and delivered to the purchaser at New York, the sellers were authorized to contract for the carriage of the coal either as owners from whom the title had not passed or as agents for the purchaser, and by such contracts to subject the coal to a lien for demurrage. Taylor v. Fall River Ironworks, 124 Fed. 826.

90. Cargo damaged.—Pioneer Fuel Co. v. McBrier, 84 Fed. 495, 28 C. C. A. 466.

91. Effect of delivery of cargo.—Two Hundred & Sixteen Loads & Six Hundred & Seventy-Eight Barrels of Fertilizer, 88 Fed. 984.

92. Pioneer Fuel Co. v. McBrier, 84 Fed. 495, 28 C. C. A. 466.

93. Actions.—The Cargo, 122 Fed. 881.

94. Merritt, etc., Wrecking Co. v. Vogeman, 127 Fed. 770.

95. Dunwody v. The Campbell, 106 Fed. 542, 45 C. C. A. 464.

96. Defenses.—Hagar v. Elmslie, 107 Fed. 511, 46 C. C. A. 446.

the carriage of a number of cargoes of coke between certain ports by two vessels, which provided that the vessels should be kept a regular period apart as much as possible, where the vessels were accepted and loaded when tendered, and the freight was paid, without any protest or objection, although they were not kept a regular period apart, and no damage is shown to have resulted, the shipper can not set up such breach of the contract in defense to an action for demurrage.[97]

Smaller Claim Presented.—Complainant, on a libel for demurrage, is not precluded from proving the exact loading and discharging times by having previously presented a bill for a smaller amount.[98]

Breach of Charter Party.—Where two vessels, chartered to carry a number of cargoes of coke between two ports, were accepted and loaded under the charter when tendered, and the freight was paid without objection, the charterer can not set up a claimed breach of the charter in failing to keep the vessels at regular intervals apart as a defense to an action for demurrage for delay in loading where such alleged breach did not cause or contribute to the delay or otherwise cause damage to the charterer.[99]

§ 4377. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—In the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be assumed that the rate of demurrage charged by a carrier of an interstate shipment is in accord with that established by law.[1]

Burden of Proof.—The burden is on him who seeks to recover damages for the failure to discharge a vessel in the customary time to prove that the charterer did not exercise reasonable diligence to discharge her under the actual circumstances of the particular case.[2] But proof that the vessel was delayed in unloading beyond the customary time for discharging such cargoes at the port of her delivery throws upon the charterer the burden of excusing the delay by proof of the actual circumstances of the delivery and his diligence thereunder.[3]

§ 4378. Limitations and Laches.—Time does not begin to run against a suit for demurrage for delay in discharging until the lay days allowed have

97. Atlantic, etc., Steamship Co. v. Guggenheim, 123 Fed. 330, decree affirmed in 147 Fed. 103, 77 C. C. A. 329.

98. Smaller claim presented.—Eikrem v. New England Briquette Coal Co., 125 Fed. 987.

99. Breach of charter party.—Decree 123 Fed. 330, affirmed in Atlantic, etc., Steamship Co. v. Guggenheim, 147 Fed. 103, 77 C. C. A. 329.

1. Presumptions and burden of proof.—Barker-Bond Lumber Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 131 N. Y. S. 624, 74 Misc. Rep. 63.

2. Burden of proof.—70 Fed. 268, affirmed in Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623.

In the absence of any provision on the subject in the bill of lading, a consignee is under the duty of receiving the cargo as discharged within a reasonable time, but to entitle the owner to demurrage he has the burden of proving that there was unreasonable delay. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Barry, 205 Fed. 721, 124 C. C. A. 15, reversing decree 194 Fed. 286.

In the absence of a charter provision on the subject, to establish the liability of a charterer for demurrage on account of delay in loading or discharging, the owner has the burden of proving either that the vessel was not loaded or discharged in accordance with the custom of the port, or that there was unnecessary and unreasonable delay through the fault or negligence of the charterer. Williscroft v. Cargo of the Cyrenian, 123 Fed. 169.

A counterclaim by respondent for failure to receive bricks shipped promptly on their reaching the port of shipment will be dismissed, where respondent did not show any agreement to receive, except when formal declarations were made by libelant of an option to take the bricks at a certain time, on which proper action was taken. Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 166 Fed. 993.

3. Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., 77 Fed. 919, 23 C. C. A. 564, 35 L. R. A. 623, affirming decree 70 Fed. 268.

In a suit for demurrage for delay by a cargo owner in discharging, where the contract fixed no time for discharging proof by libelant that the actual time taken exceeded a reasonable time casts on the respondent the burden of showing a legal excuse therefor to avoid liability. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Barry, 194 Fed. 286.

expired.[4] In an action for demurrage, commenced three and one-half years after the transactions, the mere lapse of time is insufficient to bar the action, in the absence of some special reason, such as loss of testimony.[5] But where, the owner of a vessel delayed his action for demurrage for six years, the claim was presumably stale.[6]

4. Limitation and laches.—Davis v. Smokeless Fuel Co., 196 Fed. 753, 116 C. C. A. 381, affirming decree 182 Fed. 1004.

5. Tweedie Trading Co. v. Thomsen & Co., 173 Fed. 710.

6. Jameson v. Sweeney, 66 N. Y. S. 494, 32 Misc. Rep. 645.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Carriage of Passengers.

I. Nature of Liability of Vessel, § 4379.
II. What Law Governs, § 4380.
III. Statutory Regulation in General, § 4381.
IV. Regulation as to Steam Vessels, § 4382.
V. Regulations as to Dangerous Articles, § 4383.
VI. Regulations as to Immigrants and Other Passengers from Foreign Ports, § 4384.
VII. Contracts, Fares, Passage and Tickets, §§ 4385-4390.
A. In General, § 4385.
B. What Constitutes Contract and Consideration, § 4386.
C. Operation and Effect, § 4387.
D. Performance or Breach of Contract, § 4388.
E. Rescission, § 4389.
F. Actions, § 4390.
VIII. Accommodations on Vessel, §§ 4391-4398.
A. In General, § 4391.
B. Stateroom, Berth and Bedding, § 4392.
C. Food and Water, § 4393.
D. Effect of Quarantine, § 4394.
E. Delivery of Telegram, § 4395.
F. Liability for Personal Injuries, § 4396.
G. Actions, § 4397.
H. Damages, § 4398.
IX. Voyage and Discharge at Destination, §§ 4399-4401.
A. Duties and Liabilities, § 4399.
B. Actions, § 4400.
C. Damages and Recovery of Passage Money, § 4401.
X. Personal Injuries, §§ 4402-4428.
A. Care Required and Liability, §§ 4402-4416.
a. In General, § 4402.
b. Consequences Not Reasonably Anticipated from Act, § 4403.
c. With Respect to Machinery, Appurtenances and Crew, § 4404.
d. Care of Docks and Passage Ways, § 4405.
e. Personal Injuries from Want of Proper Accommodations, § 4406.
f. Acts of Other Passengers, § 4407.
g. Negligence or Misconduct of Third Party Contributing Cause, § 4408.
h. Persons to Whom Duty to Use Care Owed, § 4409.
i. Officers and Employees for Whose Negligence Liability Attaches, § 4410.
j. Intoxicated Passenger, § 4411.
k. Medical Attention, § 4412.
l. Acts in Emergency, § 4413.
m. Election to Continue Voyage against Advice of Pilot, § 4414.
n. Landing or Discharge of Passengers, § 4415.
o. Care Required of Tenant of Wharf, § 4416.
B. Release of Right of Action, § 4417.
C. Limitation of Liability, § 4418.
D. Contributory Negligence and Assumption of Risk, § 4419.
E. Procedure, §§ 4420-4426.
a. Pleading, § 4420.
b. Evidence, §§ 4421-4423.

(1) Presumption and Burden of Proof, § 4421.
(2) Admissibility and Competency, § 4422.
(3) Weight and Sufficiency, § 4423.
c. Questions of Fact, § 4424.
d. Instructions, § 4425.
e. Special Verdict, § 4426.
F. Liens, § 4427.
G. Damages, § 4428.
XI. Ejection of Passengers, § 4429.
XII. Passenger's Effects, §§ 4430-4442.
A. Liability as Inn Keeper or Insurer, § 4430.
B. Delivery to and Acceptance by Carrier, § 4431.
C. Duty to Provide Watchman, § 4432.
D. Duty to Provide State Room Door with Bolts and Locks, § 4433.
E. Particular Losses for Which Vessel Liable, § 4434.
F. Passengers Entitled to Recover, § 4435.
G. Effects for Which Recovery Allowed, § 4436.
H. Contributory Negligence of Person Complaining, § 4437.
I. Baggage Detained by Customs' Officers, § 4438.
J. Evidence, § 4439.
K. Liens, § 4440.
L. Damages, § 4441.
M. Limitation of Liability, § 4442.
XIII. Penalties and Forfeitures for Violations of Regulations, § 4443.
XIV. Offenses Incident to Carriage of Passengers, §§ 4444-4447.
A. What Constitutes and Elements, § 4444.
B. Defenses, § 4445.
C. Indictment, § 4446.
D. Evidence, § 4447.

§ 4379. Nature of Liability of Vessel.—Ill Passenger.—A carrier by water must take as passengers all who offer themselves, ill or well, provided it can furnish the necessary accommodations, and the passenger is willing to pay for what he demands; but, where one who is ill presents herself to a common carrier for transportation by water, it is her duty to state the fact that she is ill and make special arrangements for her transportation as a person in need of medical attention, and the carrier is not bound to receive her as an ordinary passenger.[1]

§ 4380. What Law Governs.—An action in an admiralty court of the United States to recover for injuries sustained by an American passenger on a foreign ship on the high seas is governed by the general maritime law as administered in this country, which gives a remedy against the ship's owners where the injury was due to the negligence of those in charge of her navigation.[2]

Locus of Tort.—The locus of a tort is determined by the place where the injury and damage arose, rather than where the negligent act which produced such injury was committed; and a libel to recover damages for the death by drowning of libelant's intestate, as the result of a collision and the sinking upon the high seas of a vessel sailing under the French flag, and on which the deceased was a passenger, alleged to have been due to negligent navigation, which does not allege that the drowning occurred upon the vessel, fails to show that

1. Ill Passenger.—Connors v. Cunard Steamship Co., 90 N. E. 601, 204 Mass. 310, 26 L. R. A., N. S., 171, 17 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 1051.

2. What law governs.—Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983, reversed in 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500. See ante, "What Law Governs Relationship," § 2117.

the cause of action arose upon French territory, so as to render the law of France applicable thereto, conceding that the carrying of the French flag extended the jurisdiction of such law to the ship.[3]

Persons Formerly Employed on Ship—Being Returned Home as Part of Their Compensation.—Citizens of the United States, who shipped as horsemen on an English ship to care for horses and mules during a voyage from New Orleans to South Africa under a contract that they should be returned free to an American port, subjected themselves to the English law, and during the time of their service were to be considered and treated as British subjects; but their terms of service ended at the end of the voyage in South Africa, the passage home being a part of their compensation, and on the voyage home they were passengers, and their rights as such were governed by the laws of the United States.[4]

Limited Liability Acts.—See post, "Limited Liability Act," §§ 4494-4530.

§ 4381. Statutory Regulation in General.—Congress has power to provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on board vessels.[5]

As to Failure of Pilot, Engineer, Mate or Master to Observe Regulations.—Under Rev. St., § 4413 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3020), which provides that every pilot, engineer, mate, or master of any steam vessel who neglects or willfully refuses to observe the regulations established pursuant to § 4412 shall be liable for all damages sustained by a passenger by such neglect, a recovery is only authorized against pilots, engineers, mates, and masters, as distinguished from owners.[6]

§ 4382. Regulation as to Steam Vessels.—The provisions of act Cong. Jan. 18, 1897, c. 61, 29 Stat. 489 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3029), that all vessels above 15 tons burden carrying passengers and propelled by gas, fluid, naptha, or electric motors are subject to the provisions of Rev. St., § 4426 (U. S. Comp. St 1901, p. 3029), relating to inspection, and requiring engineers and pilots therefor, and declaring that all vessels so propelled, without regard to tonnage, are subject to section 4412 (page 3020) and so much of sections 4233 (page 2893) and 4234 as the board of supervising inspectors shall deem applicable and practicable for such navigation, do not regulate to steam vessels employed in inland navigation.[7]

Inspection.—Where a steamship had a portion of her guards torn away by a collision with a bridge pier, but an examination by competent men disclosed no injury to her hull or machinery, and only slight repairs were necessary, and she had been regularly inspected and pronounced stanch and seaworthy only

3. Locus of tort.—Rundell v. La Campagnie Generale Transatlantique, 100 Fed. 655, 40 C. C. A. 625, 49 L. R. A. 92.

4. Persons formerly employed on ship—Being returned home as part of their compensation.—The European, 120 Fed. 776, 57 C. C. A. 140.

5. Statutory regulation in general.—See ante, "Interstate and International Commerce, Part VI.

The Act of 7th July, 1838 (5 Stat. at L., 304).—See Waring v. Clarke (U. S.), 5 How. 441, 12 L. Ed. 226.

The number and mode of carrying passengers on board a merchant vessel is regulated by the Federal Statutes. Rev. Stat., §§ 4252, 4270, inclusive. The Strathairly, 124 U. S. 558, 31 L. Ed. 580, 8 S. Ct. 609.

Paraphernalia for preserving life and extinguishing fires.—A canal boat laden with coal for transportation, having on board the master with his family, is not a "barge carrying passengers" within the meaning of § 4452, Rev. Stat., which requires that such a barge while in tow of a steamer, shall be provided with "fire buckets, axes, life preservers and yawls." Transportation Line v. Cooper, 99 U. S. 78, 25 L. Ed. 382.

A remission by the secretary of the treasury under § 5294 of the Revised Statutes of penalties.—The Laura, 114 U. S. 411, 29 L. Ed. 147, 5 S. Ct. 881.

Liability of vessel, owner and master.—See The Strathairly, 124 U. S. 558, 31 L. Ed. 580, 8 S. Ct. 609.

6. As to failure of pilot, engineer, mate or master to observe regulations.—Beck v. Johnson, 169 Fed. 154.

7. Regulations as to steam vessels.—Beck v. Johnson, 169 Fed. 154.

three months before, the fact that no reinspection was applied for after the accident does not constitute a failure to comply with Rev. St., § 4417 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3024], regarding inspection, which will render her owners liable for injuries to passengers or their effects under § 4493 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3058], creating such liability, where they have failed to comply with any of the provisions of that title, when it is not shown that any injury in fact resulted which impaired the strength or safety of the vessel.[8]

As to Officers and Crew.—Under Rev. St., § 4463 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3045), providing that no steamer carrying passengers shall depart from any port unless she shall have in her service a full complement of licensed officers and full crew sufficient at all times to manage the vessel, etc., not only must the vessel have a full complement of licensed officers and adequate crew with reference to all the exigencies of the intended route, but the officers and crew must be competent for any exigency that is likely to happen.[9]

§ 4383. Regulations as to Dangerous Articles.—Gasoline Contained in Tank of Automobile.—Under Rev. St., § 4472, prohibits passenger steamers from carrying as freight certain articles, including petroleum products or other like explosive fluids, except in certain cases and under certain restrictions. By Act Feb. 20, 1901, c. 386, 31 Stat. 799 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3050], the section was amended by adding the following provision: "Nothing in the foregoing or following sections of this act shall prohibit the transportation by steam vessels of gasoline or any of the products of petroleum when carried by motor vehicles (commonly known as automobiles) using the same as a source of motive power: Provided, however, that all fire, if any, in such vehicles or automobiles be extinguished before entering the said vessel and the same be not relighted until after said vehicle shall have left the same. * * *" Under this provision gasoline contained in the tank of an automobile being transported on a steam vessel was carried as freight, within the meaning of the statute; that an automobile in which the motive power was generated by passing an electric spark through a compressed mixture of gasoline and air in the cylinder, causing intermittent explosions, carried a fire while the vehicle was under motion from its own motive power; and that the carrying by a steam ferryboat of such a vehicle, which was run on and off the boat under its own power, was a violation of the statute.[10]

§ 4384. Regulations as to Immigrants and Other Passengers from Foreign Ports.—Delivery of List of Passengers to Collector.—Section 4266, Rev. Stat. U. S., requires the master of any vessel arriving in the United States from any foreign place to deliver a list of all passengers taken on board at any foreign port to the collector of the district in which such vessel shall arrive.[11]

Obligation to Carry Persons Applying for Passage.—Where a ship acts as a common carrier, its obligation is the same as other carriers.[12]

§§ 4385-4390. Contracts, Fares, Passage and Tickets.—See ante, "Fares, Tickets, Special Contracts, Transfers, etc.," chapter 22.

§ 4385. In General.—Contracts for Carriage of Passengers.—A contract for the transportation of passengers by a steamship on the ocean is a mari-

8. Inspection.—The Longfellow, 104 Fed. 360, 45 C. C. A. 379.

9. As to officers and crew.—Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom, 162 Fed. 250, 89 C. C. A. 230.

10. Gasoline contained in tank of automobile.—The Texas, 134 Fed. 909.

11. Delivery of list of passengers to collector.—The Strathairly, 124 U. S. 558, 31 L. Ed. 580, 8 S. Ct. 609.

12. Obligation to carry persons applying for passage.—Pearson v. Duane (U. S.), 4 Wall. 605, 18 L. Ed. 447. As to right to refuse to carry a party to a port from which he has been banished by revolutionists, see Pearson v. Duane (U. S.), 4 Wall. 605, 18 L. Ed. 447.

time contract, and there is no distinction in principle between it and a contract for the like transportation of merchandise.[13]

§ 4386. What Constitutes Contract and Consideration.—Where plaintiff's husband purchased a ticket for her involving transportation over defendant's line, and thence by steamship to destination, defendant agreeing to wire for a stateroom on the steamship, such agreement was a part of the contract of carriage, which inured to plaintiff's benefit, and was not nudum pactum.[14] The provisions of § 2 of the Harter Act, Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946], do not apply to passenger tickets.

§ 4387. Operation and Effect.—Laws Applicable—Harter Act[15]—Loss of Ticket.—If carriers by steamboat require passengers to buy tickets before going on board, and to deliver them up on landing, the loss of a ticket by a passenger falls on him, and not on the carriers, and it is his duty on landing to pay the amount of the fare.[16]

§ 4388. Performance or Breach of Contract.—Notice of Intention to Embark.—The sending of eight days' notice of intention to embark, as required by steamship passenger tickets to secure passage, is a condition precedent to securing passage; and, unless compliance therewith is shown, a complaint for refusal to transport should be dismissed.[17] Where an embarkation slip, sent to plaintiff in Russia prior to the receipt of a ticket entitling her to passage to Iowa, required her to notify defendant steamship company of her intention to sail fourteen days in advance of the sailing date, or berths would not be reserved, plaintiff's failure to give such notice was no defense to an action against the steamship company for the negligence of its agent in failing to promptly mail plaintiff's ticket to its agent at the port of embarkation, resulting in delay to plaintiff's damage.[18]

Passenger's Taking Passage Prevented by Government Inspector.—The holder of a steamship ticket can not recover in tort from the steamship company by reason of the vessel leaving before the agreed time, by which the ticket holder is prevented from taking passage thereon, when such act is the result of the act of the government inspector, under Rev. St. U. S., § 4465, which declares that it should not be lawful for any steamer to receive more passengers than stated in its certificate of inspection, in refusing to allow the vessel to receive any more passengers.[19]

Liens against Vessel for Breach of Contract.—There can be no maritime lien against a vessel for breach of a contract of carriage where she never in fact entered on the performance thereof, and neither the libelants nor their baggage were ever received on board, or placed in the care or control of the master.[20]

§ 4389. Rescission.—Right of Passenger to Rescind Contract of Coinage before Sailing.—Passengers who have paid their passage on a vessel can not be held to their contract, but are entitled to rescind and recover their passage

13. Contracts for carriage of passengers.—The Moses Taylor (U. S.), 4 Wall. 411, 18 L. Ed. 397, 32 How. Prac. 460.

14. What constitute contract and consideration.—Central, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 3 Ala. App. 436, 57 So. 253.

15. Laws applicable—Harter Act.—La Bourgogne, 144 Fed. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed in Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 28 S. Ct. 664, 210 U. S. 95, 52 L. Ed. 973.

16. Loss of ticket.—Standish v. Narragansett Steamship Co., 111 Mass. 512, 15 Am. Rep. 66.

17. Notice of intention to embark.—Rabinowitz v. Cunard Steamship Co. (App. Term), 119 N. Y. S. 625.

18. Zabron v. Cunard Steamship Co., 151 Iowa 345, 131 N. W. 18, 34 L. R. A., N. S., 751.

19. Passenger's taking passage prevented by government inspector.—Hughson v. Winthrop Steamboat Co., 181 Mass. 325, 64 N. E. 74, 58 L. R. A. 432.

20. Liens against vessel for breach of contract.—The Eugene, 87 Fed. 1001, 31 C. C. A. 345, reversing decree 83 Fed. 222.

money, where, before sailing, the vessel is reported in the press as rotten and unsafe, and they are justified by their information and her appearance in believing her so, though she may in fact have been staunch and seaworthy.[21]

§ 4390. Actions—Affidavit of Defense.—In an action by a steamship company to recover passage money, an affidavit of defense is sufficient which avers that the defendant contracted for a particular stateroom, but that the company refused to permit her to occupy it; that the stateroom for which she contracted was a comfortable one, but that she was compelled to occupy a room at the stern of the vessel near the machinery; that the said room was most uncomfortable; that the motion there was very great, and the rattle of the machinery there was such as to prevent her from sleeping; that in consequence of the discomforts of the room, and the disturbance occasioned by the movement and noise of the machinery, defendant was able to sleep but very little during the entire voyage, and in consequence suffered nervous sickness, causing her much pain and suffering, which continued the entire voyage, and after her arrival in this country.[22]

Issues and Venue.—In an action against a steamship company for refusal to transport passengers, evidence that defendant was not permitted under the immigration laws to transport such persons could not be presented under a general denial, because the terms of their tickets constituted at most a warranty or a condition subsequent, breach of which must be separately pleaded.[23]

Sufficiency of Evidence.—In a suit against a steamship company for its refusal to transport emigrants, and for taking away their tickets purchased for them by plaintiff, evidence is insufficient to show that they duly presented themselves for transportation, where it tends rather to prove the contrary, and to show that they were rejected or refused, not by defendant, but by a physician at the place where they proposed to embark.[24]

§§ 4391-4398. Accommodations on Vessel.—See ante, "Accommodations and Duties during Transit," §§ 2490, 2524.

§ 4391. In General.—It is the duty of the owners of a vessel to provide suitable accommodations for her passengers [25] and to keep her in a clean condition.[26] And the vessel is liable for a violation of the implied agreement to furnish reasonable accommodations [27] and for overcrowding and sickness resulting therefrom.[28] But a person rightfully on board who is not a passenger is not

21. Right of passenger to rescind contract of coinage before sailing.—The Guardian, 89 Fed. 998.

22. Affidavit of defense.—North German Lloyd Steamship Co. v. Wood, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 488.

23. Issues and venue.—Rabinowitz v. Cunard Steamship Co. (App. Term), 119 N. Y. S. 625.

24. Sufficiency of evidence.—Rabinowitz v. Cunard Steamship Co. (App. Term), 119 N. Y. S. 625.

25. Accommodations on vessel.—The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

26. Duty to keep vessel clean.—The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

27. Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

A steamship is liable in damages to passengers who, although they were sold second-class tickets, were given only the accommodations of steerage passengers, and who suffered great discomfort from lack of proper food and water and from being overcrowded in unclean and badly ventilated quarters. While the obtaining of an inspector's certificate permitting the vessel to take more passengers than she actually carried may relieve her from prosecution for the statutory penalty for carrying an excessive number, it does not relieve her from liability to passengers for a violation of her implied agreement to furnish them with reasonable accommodations. Decree, The Valencia, 110 Fed. 221, affirmed in Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

28. Where a steamship company having accommodation for and authorized to carry only 375 steerage passengers sells tickets to and receives 475 such passengers, and by reason of such overcrowding the passengers are delayed and injured, the company is responsible for such damage, since such crowding beyond the point at which the passengers could be safely carried is a breach of the con-entitled to demand passenger's accommodations, although he is entitled to demand the exercise of ordinary care towards him on the part of the vessel and crew.[29]

Permission of Inspector to Overcrowd Vessel.— When permission of inspector was obtained to crowd a vessel beyond the limit of accommodation provided for passengers, such permission is not a defense to an action for damages to passengers sustained by reason of such overcrowding.[30]

Inspection Certificates and Indorsements Thereon.—An indorsement on an inspector's certificate that a steamship had been provided with accommodations for additional passengers should be rejected as evidence of the fact that such accommodations had been provided, when all the testimony shows conclusively that there were no such accommodations on the ship.[31]

§ 4392. Stateroom, Berth and Bedding.—A steamship company is liable to a passenger for failure to furnish the latter with a berth on a steamer running at night, where it fails to notify the passenger of its liability to supply such berth on his application therefor at the time of purchasing his ticket.[32] Where there was evidence that subsequent to plaintiff's purchase of his ticket and application for a berth on defendant's steamer, and defendant's refusal to furnish the berth, other parties were given berths, and that by reason of defendant's refusal plaintiff was compelled to sit up all night, the granting of a nonsuit was error.[33] A passenger on defendant's steamer, who purchases a ticket entitling him to a berth, is not entitled to the exclusive use of a stateroom containing two berths, although there were some vacant staterooms.[34]

First-class transportation, including all-night travel on passenger steamer, carried with it the right to stateroom accommodations as a matter of common knowledge, for, by custom and usage, a passenger contracts for such accommodation when securing a first-class passage.[35] A contract for a first-class carriage of the passenger implies that the accommodation furnished will be consistent with ordinary decency. Where the defendant gave notice that "a lady and child" would also occupy the stateroom; but it gave no notice that the "child" was a lad in the age of adolescence, the use of the word "child" was very misleading. And it can not be said as a matter of law that the contract of carriage was performed when a woman passenger was exposed to the necessity of robing and disrobing in a little room occupied by a strange lad of 14 or 15 years of age, and for a period of a week. Even if the steamship was tract to safely carry them. The Valencia, 110 Fed. 221, decree affirmed in Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

29. Libelant was employed by the owners of a steamer to go with her from Mobile to Cuba, and there operate a gasoline launch under directions of the master, his pay to start at once, but he was to perform no service until he reached the Cuban port. Held, that he was not a passenger entitled to accommodations as such. The Vueltabajo, 163 Fed. 594.

30. Permission of inspector to overcrowd vessel.—The Valencia, 110 Fed. 221, affirmed in Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

31. Inspection certificates and indorsements thereon.—The Valencia, 110 Fed. 221, decree affirmed in Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

32. State room, berth and bedding.—Patterson v. Old Dominion Steamship Co., 53 S. E. 224, 140 N. C. 412, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 1012, 111 Am. St. Rep. 848.

33. Patterson v. Old Dominion Steamship Co., 53 S. E. 224, 140 N. C. 412, 5 L. R. A., N. S., 1012, 111 Am. St. Rep. 848.

34. Basnight v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., 60 S. E. 899, 147 N. C. 169.

35. Central, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 3 Ala. App. 436, 57 So. 253.

Where a ticket entitled plaintiff to a first-class passage over defendant's railroad to S., and thence by steamship to N., the passage on the steamer requiring plaintiff to spend the entire night, defendant having contracted, but failed to reserve a stateroom on the steamship by wire, such failure constitute a breach of the contract. Central, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 3 Ala. App. 436, 57 So. 253.

crowded, and no better accommodations could be given, it was the duty of the defendant when making its contract to give notice of the exact situation.[36]

Duty to Supply Deck or Steerage Passengers with Bedding.—A vessel is not bound, in the absence of special contract, to furnish bedding for steerage or deck passengers.[37] And passengers who come aboard a vessel mainly engaged in the carriage of freight, after the cabin room is all taken, and who for two days, while loading is going on, make no claim to cabin accommodations or for bedding, are to be considered as impliedly agreeing that their ship room and quarters are to be deck, and that such accommodations are to be deemed reasonable.[38]

Damages Where Stateroom Resold under Right Reserved.—But where plaintiff rented of defendant a stateroom on one of its steamers for overnight, but failed to notice a stipulation on the back of his ticket whereby the right was "reserved to resell rooms not called for thirty minutes after departure," and did not call for his room within that time, and it was resold, whereupon the purser refused to give him his money back, or another room, and he was compelled to sit up all night, he was not entitled to exemplary damages.[39] But he was entitled to the use of the room, or to have the money paid therefor refunded.[40]

§ 4393. Food and Water.—Fare Furnished on Long Voyage.—Where the fare furnished passengers on a long sea voyage is such as is usually provided, and is sufficient in quantity, and properly cooked, and the passengers do not really suffer, they have no ground for the recovery of damages because it is not so good as might have been furnished or as is provided on vessels making short voyages.[41]

Food of Deck Passengers.—In the absence of special contract to the contrary, a vessel is bound to furnish a sufficient quantity of suitable food for deck passengers, and is liable in damages for the master's failure to do so when it is within his power.[42]

Delay of Vessel.—It is the duty of the owners of a vessel to supply her with sufficient food and provisions to meet the contingencies of accident to the vessel and the resulting delay in the voyage, from whatever cause such accident and delay may arise.[43]

Putting Passengers on Short Allowance.—Under the Act Aug. 2, 1882, 22 Stat. 186 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2931], to regulate the carriage of passengers by sea from a foreign port to a port of the United States, which provides in section 4 that if any such passengers shall at any time during the voyage be put on 36. Lignante v. Panama R. Co., 147 App. Div. 97, 131 N. Y. S. 753.

Plaintiff's husband, desiring passage from Colon to New York on defendant's steamer, was informed that he could not get accommodations for both in the same stateroom, but that his wife would be assigned to a stateroom in which there were two other passengers, "a lady and child." He asked if she would have a berth and was answered in the affirmative. After boarding the steamer, he found that his wife had been assigned to an unscreened sofa in a stateroom; the berths being given to a lady and her son, apparently between 14 and 15 years old. Plaintiff objected to this arrangement and demanded other accommodations, but none were given. She refused to sleep in the stateroom with the boy and was obliged to sleep on steamer chairs for a time, and finally on a sofa in the corner of the main saloon of the vessel. Held that, defendant having given no notice that the "child" was a lad in the age of adolescense, it could not be said that defendant performed its contract of carriage as a matter of law. Lignante v. Panama R. Co., 131 N. Y. S. 753, 147 App. Div. 97.

37. Duty to supply deck or steerage passengers with bedding.—The Centennial, 131 Fed. 816.

38. The Nicaragua, 81 Fed. 745.

39. Damages where stateroom resold under right reserved.—Clark v. New York, etc., R. Co., 83 N. Y. S. 162, 40 Misc. Rep. 691.

40. Clark v. New York, etc., R. Co., 83 N. Y. S. 162, 40 Misc. Rep. 691.

41. Fare furnished on long voyage.—The President, 92 Fed. 673.

42. Food of deck passengers.—The Nicaragua, 81 Fed. 745.

43. Delay of vessel.—The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

short allowance for food and water, except in cases of necessity, the master shall pay each passenger $3 for each and every day of such short allowance, the furnishing to passengers, without necessity, of bad or improper food, which was unfit to eat, was equivalent to putting them on short allowance, and entitled them to recover as damages an amount equal to that fixed by the statute.[44]

During Quarantine.—See post, "Effect of Quarantine," § 4394.

Proof That Food Unsuitable.—It is not necessary to call a survey on the remaining stores of a ship, at an intermediate point at which the passenger left her because of the quality of the food and water, in order to show that the food was unsuitable.[45]

§§ 4394. Effect of Quarantine.—The stipulation, in a contract for transportation across the ocean, that "during the whole journey * * * passengers will be supplied with good and sufficient food, as well as with suitable lodging, and this arrangement stands equally good in the event of any unavoidable delay or accident, interrupting the journey," covers delay required by quarantine regulations; and the carrier is liable for injuries to the health of a passenger; resulting from its failure to provide sufficient and suitable food and lodging during the quarantine.[46]

§ 4395. Delivery of Telegram.—Without evidence showing that it was a custom of a common carrier of passengers by water to receive telegrams for delivery to its passengers, or that it knew or permitted it to be done by its officers, such carrier is not liable for the nondelivery of a telegram addressed to a passenger on board its steamer, and by direction of the captain accepted by the purser for delivery.[47]

§ 4396. Liability for Personal Injuries.—A carrier by water is liable to a passenger for personal injuries incurred by reason of its negligent failure to

It is the duty of a passenger steamer making a voyage between Nome, Alaska, and Seattle, by the outside course, which is in the open sea, without a stopping place for 1,700 miles of the way, to carry provisions sufficient for her passengers for at least 20 or 30 days in addition to the usual time required for the voyage, to meet the contingency of accident and the resulting delays. The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

Evidence considered, and held to entitle passengers of a steamship on a voyage from Nome, Alaska, to Seattle, to recover damages from the owners on the grounds that the vessel was not kept clean, and that the provisions supplied were insufficient in quantity, and to a large extent unfit for food, it being shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the vessel started with provisions sufficient to last not more than from 8 to 12 days, the usual time for the voyage being 8 days; that a large part of the meat was spoiled; and that on the breaking of the rudder, which caused a delay of 10 days, the passengers were placed on a short allowance; much of the food also being in such condition that many were unable to eat it, the result being that they suffered from hunger during the remainder of the voyage. The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

44. Putting passengers on short notice.—The European, 120 Fed. 776, 57 C. C. A. 140.

45. Proof that food unsuitable.—Passengers on a sailing vessel testified that the food was of bad quality and the water brackish. A few other cabin and some steerage passengers stated that the food was "excellent," as did also the captain's wife. The latter testimony was contradicted by a witness who stated that during the voyage the captain's wife had said she would die if she did not get better food, and spoke of growing thin because of it, and that other witness for the claimant had frequently complained of the food. Complaints were made during the entire voyage, and all the cabin passengers left the boat at an intermediate port, but there was no survey then called on her remaining stores. There was evidence that most of the beef and pork was bad and the other stores inferior. The rice sometimes had weevils in it. Held, that this was sufficient, in the absence of a survey, to show that the food was unsuitable, in view of the payment of $125 for passage when first-class passage by steamer was only $200. The D. C. Murray, 89 Fed. 508.

46. Effect of quarantine.—Larsen v. Allan Line Steamship Co., 80 Pac. 181, 37 Wash. 555.

47. Delivery of telegram.—Davies v. Eastern Steamboat Co., 47 Atl. 896, 94 Me. 379, 53 L. R. A. 239.

equip its boat with or to provide the passenger with necessary and reasonable accommodations.[48]

§ 4397. Actions.—A passenger on a vessel may sue her in rem in admiralty for damages for failure to furnish proper accommodations.[49]

Instructions.—In an action for breach of a railroad contract for transportation, including a steamship voyage by its failure to reserve stateroom accommodations on the boat, an instruction that, if defendant did not agree to furnish a stateroom, the jury should find for defendant, unless they further found that it was impracticable for plaintiff to travel on the boat without a stateroom, and, if she could not so travel, then it would be a violation of her contract, etc., was proper.[50]

Evidence.—Allegations of a libel by steerage passengers on a voyage from Seattle to San Francisco to recover damages for breach of contract on the ground that the ship failed to furnish them with proper food, quarters, and bedding, are not sustained by the evidence, where it fails to satisfy the mind that the alleged representations for a breach of which the action was brought was made.[51]

§ 4398. Damages.—Elements of Damage.—Where plaintiff's husband had purchased a ticket for plaintiff from B. by way of S. to N., including transportation by rail to S. and by steamship from S. to N. and the agent agreed to telegraph for stateroom accommodations on the boat, which he failed to do, the jury, in determining damages, were properly permitted to take into consideration the fact that, to the knowledge of defendant's agent, the trip was part of plaintiff's bridal trip, and the delay incident to going by way to S., in order to take the trip by water.[52]

Amount of Damages Generally.—Damages arising from breach of a contract to furnish transportation accommodations on a steamship, resulting in inconvenience and indignity to the passenger in transit, are not limited to the price of the passage.[53] Steerage passengers who purchased tickets from Alaskan ports to Seattle, and were compelled to occupy the steerage with a large number of foreign fishermen, who were drunk and disorderly, and kept the place in a filthy condition, which the officers of the vessel made no effective effort to remedy, and who were not furnished with sleeping accommodations nor suitable or wholesome food, were entitled to recover damages from the steamship company in the sum of $300 each.[54]

Failure to Furnish Bedding to Deck or Steerage Passenger.—See ante, "Stateroom, Berth and Bedding," § 4392.

Stateroom Resold under Reserved Right.—See ante, "Stateroom, Berth and Bedding," § 4392.

§§ 4399-4401. Voyage and Discharge at Destination.—See ante, "Receiving and Discharging Passengers," §§ 2435, 2489.

48. Defendant corporation advertised to carry passengers from Nome, Alaska, to points down the coast in the early spring, and undertook to transport them in a gasoline launch. The boat was not heated, was insufficiently supplied with provisions, and the feed pipes were in such leaky condition that the engine froze up and the boat drifted out to sea and was caught in the ice, resulting in serious suffering and injury to the passengers during four or five days before they were landed. Held, that defendant was liable to them for such injuries as a common carrier. North Coast Lighterage Co. v. Greenwood, 162 Fed. 25; North Coast Lighterage Co. v. Sullivan, 162 Fed. 28.

49. Actions.—The Vueltabajo, 163 Fed. 594.

50. Instructions.—Central, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 3 Ala. App. 436, 57 So. 253.

51. Evidence.—The Centennial, 131 Fed. 816.

52. Damages.—Central, etc., R. Co. v. Knight, 3 Ala. App. 436, 57 So. 253.

53. Amount of damages generally.—Lignante v. Panama R. Co., 131 N. Y. S. 753, 147 App. Div. 97.

54. Northwestern Steamship Co. v. Ransom, 174 Fed. 913.

§ 4399. Duties and Liabilities.—Low Water.—Low water in a river is no defense to a failure of a carrier to carry a passenger to his destination, where the carrier could have informed itself and anticipated such condition.[55] Where the undisputed testimony was that a river steamer abandoned its voyage on account of low water, and the contest was whether this was caused by the act of God, a requested charge was not applicable which stated that, if the carrier carried its passenger till it was forced to stop by low water, this constituted the "act of God," and excused it from carrying him further until the stage of water should be sufficient.[56]

Ice Blockade Preventing Completion of Voyage.—Where a steamship company contracted to carry a passenger to a certain port, an ice blockade, preventing the port from being reached, was not an act of God, excusing the breach.[57]

Duty to Furnish Safe Landing Place.—It is the duty of operators of steamboats to furnish a safe landing place for passengers, and the neglect to comply with this rule is not excused on the ground that the landing was made at a wharf owned by a third person, as the use of the wharf made it a part of the means of landing.[58]

Discretion of Master as to Where Landing Shall Be Made.—Where the master of a vessel agrees to transport a passenger to a point as near the mouth of a certain river as will admit of a safe landing, it is for the master to determine, in good faith, where the landing shall be made.[59]

Duty to Remain in Port Reasonable Time.—A vessel which contracts to carry passengers to a port, where they are to procure boats to land themselves and their stores, is bound, on reaching such port, to remain a reasonable length of time to enable the passengers to procure boats and to make their landing, and is only excused from so remaining by act of God or the public enemies.[60]

Entire Contract—Carriage by Chartered Vessel and Another.—Where a charterer of a steamer contracts to transport a passenger from the port of origination to his final destination, although part of the transportation is to be upon a vessel other than that of the charterer, the contract is entire, for through transportation, for the completion of which the steamer is bound. And she will be liable for failure to make right delivery by procuring such passenger on some other vessel for the completion of the voyage.[61]

Landing at Port Next to Destination.—Where a steamship ticket provided 55. Low water.—Smith v. North American Transp., etc., Co., 56 Pac. 372, 20 Wash. 580, 44 L. R. A. 557.

56. Smith v. North American Transp., etc., Co., 56 Pac. 372, 20 Wash. 580, 44 L. R. A. 557.

57. Ice blockade preventing completion of voyage.—Bullock v. White Star Steamship Co., 70 Pac. 1106, 30 Wash. 448.

58. Duty to furnish safe landing place.—Buddenberg v. Chouteau Transp. Co., 108 Mo. 394, 18 S. W. 970.

59. Discretion of master as to where landing shall be made.—Torrey v. Kelly, 121 Fed. 542, 57 C. C. A. 604.

60. Duty to remain in port reasonable time.—The President, 92 Fed. 673.

61. Entire contract—Carriage by chartered vessel and another.—The charterer of a demised steamer contracted with libelants to transport them and certain cargo from San Francisco to points on the Yukon river, the carriage to be made by such steamer to St. Michaels, and by a connecting river steamer for the remaining distance. On arrival at St. Michaels the charterer had no river vessel there, and after some delay the master of the steamer put libelants and their goods on shore, against their protest, refusing to forward them, although transportation up the Yukon was available on other boats. Held, that the contracts were entire, for through transportation, for the completion of which the steamer was bound, and that she was liable in damages for failure to make right delivery by placing libelants on some river vessel for the completion of the voyage. The National City, 117 Fed. 822, 55 C. C. A. 44.

The fact that the master offered to return libelants to San Francisco free of charge on condition that they would sign a release of damages did not exonerate the steamer from liability for the cost of their return passage after they had been compelled to abandon their further journey because of their inability to pay the rates demanded for transportation up the river. The National City, 117 Fed. 822, 55 C. C. A. 44.

that, if the passenger could not be safely landed at the port of destination, he might be landed at the next port reached by the vessel, the carrier was not entitled to land a passenger at a port intermediate between that of departure and that of destination, though such port was the last one before reaching the port of destination, and though it was there learned that the port of destination was icebound and inaccessible.[62]

Deportation Act of Law.—Where, after a family of immigrants had been excluded by the government for a contagious disease, the steamship company agreed to become responsible for them on proper security being furnished, in accordance with a modified order by the government, but thereafter deported them without giving a reasonable time to furnish such security, the steamship company could not defend an action for damages so caused, on the ground that the deportation was an act of the law.[63]

Duty to Return Passenger Where Voyage Fails.—Where a carrier agreed to take a passenger to Dawson, Alaska, via the Yukon River, but his steamer proceeded no further than Ft. Yukon, because of low water and the carrier did not contend that it would have gotten him through before the following summer, it was bound to bring him home.[64] This is not a parallel case with that in which passengers were delayed on railroads where cars are running on frequent and regular time.

§ 4400. Actions.—Evidence—Admissibility and Materiality.—In an action for breach of a contract of carriage, for landing plaintiff at a point short of his destination, where defendant had introduced evidence that, before reaching the port of destination, it had learned that that port was inaccessible because of ice, evidence as to the persons from whom it received such information was immaterial.[65]

Weight and Sufficiency.—The vessel rules as to weight and sufficiency of evidence apply in libels by passengers against vessels or actions against their owners for breach of contract to the discharge at destination. Instances are given in the footnotes, where the evidence was held to show the making of a contract to land libelant as near to the mouth of a river as could be safely done;[66] to show that the defendant contracted as principal for the prompt conveyance of plaintiff across the Isthmus of Panama and to charge him with damages for a detention;[67] to show that the contract as made was performed;[68]

62. Landing at port next to destination.—Bullock v. White Star Steamship Co., 70 Pac. 1106, 30 Wash. 448.

63. Deportation act of law.—Kahaner v. International Nav. Co., 117 Fed. 979.

64. Duty to return passenger where voyage fails.—Smith v. North American Transp., etc., Co., 56 Pac. 372, 20 Wash. 580, 44 L. R. A. 557.

65. Evidence—Admissibility and materiality.—Bullock v. White Star Steamship Co., 70 Pac. 1106, 30 Wash. 448.

66. Evidence in a libel by a passenger against a vessel for an alleged breach of contract in not landing him at the mouth of a certain river examined, and held to show the making of a contract to land libelant merely as near to the mouth as could be done with safety. Torrey v. Kelly, 121 Fed. 542, 57 C. C. A. 604.

67. Defendant owned steamships sailing between New York and the eastern port of the transit route across the Isthmus of Nicaragua, and was part owner of steamships sailing between the western port of the transit route and San Francisco. He was furnished by the corporation managing the transit route with passage tickets for the conveyance of persons across the isthmus by their steamboats and carriages, which he sold to passengers who embarked in his steamships from New York and returned those which he did not sell; but was not an agent of, or employed by, the transit road. Upon the door of the office at New York, occupied by defendant's agent, and which he frequently visited, was posted an advertisement, headed "Vanderbilt's Line between New York and San Francisco," and signed, "Allen, Agent," in which the route by the steamships on both oceans and across the isthmus was described and commended. The agent at that office sold to plaintiff, for a gross sum, three tickets, which severally imported that he was entitled to be carried to and across the isthmus and thence upon a particular vessel on her next voyage to San Francisco, and delivered to him a card, signed by himself, describing the route, and stating that to support a refusal to direct a nonsuit in an action for landing plaintiff at a point short of her destination;[69] to support a finding that it was not reasonably practicable for plaintiff to finish the journey to his destination or to return to the port from which he started.[70]

§ 4401. Damages and Recovery of Passage Money.—Right to Return of Passage Money.—Where a vessel took passengers for Kotzebue Sound, but wholly failed to make the voyage, and discharged the passengers at Nome, the sailing point, and they were not afterwards forwarded, on the failure of the voyage, the passengers were entitled to have the return of their passage.[71]

Measure of Damages for Failure to Afford Opportunity to Land.—In an action against a vessel for damages by reason of a failure to afford passengers an opportunity to land on reaching their port of destination, and their carriage to a distant port, the measure of recovery is the actual damage sustained, which includes the fare paid, and, where the passenger returns to the port at which he took passage, the cost of such return, together with a reasonable sum as compensation for the loss of time necessarily resulting from the breach of the contract.[72]

§§ 4402-4428. Personal Injuries—§§ 4402-4416. Care Required and Liability.—See ante, "Degree of Care Required," §§ 2290, 2342.

§ 4402. In General.—See ante, "Carriers by Water," § 2424. A carrier by water is bound to use the utmost care which is consistent with the nature and extent of the business in which he is engaged, in the providing of safe, sufficient and suitable vessels, and other necessary or appropriate means of transportation, as well as in the management of the same, in making such reasonable arrangements as a prudent man would make to guard against all dangers, from whatever source arising, which may naturally and in accordance passengers are speedily conveyed across the isthmus by the Nicaragua transit. Held sufficient to authorize a jury to find that the defendant contracted as principal for the prompt conveyance of the plaintiff across the isthmus, and to charge him with damages for a detention. Quimby v. Vanderbilt, 17 N. Y. 306, 72 Am. Dec. 469.

68. Evidence in a libel by a passenger against a vessel for breach of contract in not landing him as near to the mouth of a river as could be done with safety examined, and held to show that the contract was complied with by the master. Torrey v. Kelly, 121 Fed. 542, 57 C. C. A. 604.

69. Refusal to direct nonsuit.—Plaintiff's evidence showed that she was an aged lady, and was landed at a point not her destination, by one of defendant's steamships, on which she was a passenger, on a stormy day, and was left unprovided with fuel and shelter, and that she only reached home after two days' exertions, and the exposure causing serious illness. There was evidence that the officers of the boat told her that another boat would pick her up, and take her to her destination, and that the other boat refused so to do, and that she was wetted in being landed. Held not error to refuse to direct a nonsuit in favor of the defendant in an action to recover for such injuries. Sievers v. Dalles, etc., Nav. Co., 64 Pac. 539, 24 Wash. 302.

70. Plaintiff purchased a ticket and was a passenger on defendant's boat from S. to D.; but, the defendant being unable to carry plaintiff through to D. that winter, under the representations of the boat captain that he would take plaintiff to a good place to cut wood, where there was a cabin suitable for occupancy, plaintiff went ashore at a place on the Yukon river in Alaska, and stayed all winter. The cabin was not habitable, and plaintiff became sick. Held, in an action for failure to carry plaintiff to D., that the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that it was not reasonably practicable for the plaintiff to finish the journey to D. or return to S., and hence the finding for plaintiff was not contrary to an instruction that plaintiff could not recover for the loss of time or sickness caused by remaining on the Yukon if it was reasonably practicable for him to return to S. or go on to D. Sloan v. North American Transp., etc., Co., 64 Pac. 150, 24 Wash. 221.

71. Right to return of passage money.—The Arthur B., 1 Alaska 403.

72. Measure of damages for failure to afford opportunity to land.—The President, 92 Fed. 673.

with the usual course of things be expected to occur.[73] But a ship is not bound to the same strict responsibility for the safety of passengers as in the case of goods.[74] For instance, a carrier by water is liable for an injury which occurred as a result of requiring steerage passengers to come on the upper deck to receive their food in weather so stormy as to make it dangerous.[75]

No Implied Warranty of Seaworthiness.—While a carrier of passengers by sea is bound to exercise the highest degree of care, prudence, and foresight, it is not an insurer of their safety, and there is no implied warranty, as in case of the carriage of goods, that the ship was seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, and whether she was technically so or not is immaterial in a suit by passengers to recover for injuries received.[76]

§ 4403. Consequences Not Reasonably Anticipated from Act.—A carrier by water is not required to guard against dangers which a prudent man would not expect to occur naturally and in accordance with the usual course of things,[77] as, for instance, where a glass upon which a passenger rested his hand broke and cut him, the screen of which he had accidentally displaced;[78] where little girls in playing ran against a bucket of hot gruel carried by the steward and splashed it on a passenger sitting at the table;[79] where a child was injured by placing his hand in an unprotected hawse hole;[80] where a passenger was run down and trampled upon by his fellow passengers as a result of the striking of the steamboat against the pier;[81] or where a pas-

73. Care required and liability.—Simmons v. New Bedford, etc., Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361, 93 Am. Dec. 99; International Mercantile Marine Co. v. Smith, 145 Fed. 891, 76 C. C. A. 423.

74. Decree, Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983, reversed in 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500.

75. Requiring passenger to receive food on upper deck.—A steamship was negligent in requiring steerage passengers to come onto the upper deck to receive their food while crossing the ocean in weather so stormy as to render it dangerous, and is liable for the injury of a passenger while so on deck by being thrown down by a wave, or by reason of the wet and slippery condition of the deck. Decree, 139 Fed. 810, affirmed in The Prinzess Irene, 151 Fed. 17, 80 C. C. A. 483.

76. No implied warranty of seaworthiness.—The Oregon, 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

77. Consequences not reasonably anticipated from act.—Kohn v. International Mercantile Marine Co., 180 Fed. 495.

78. Libelant, a passenger, while on deck during a rough sea, to escape an unusually large wave, which washed over the deck, stepped upon a bench and rested his hand upon a glass ventilator or skylight, which broke and his hand was cut by the glass. There was a frame, with cross-rods, over the sash, to protect the glass; but it was displaced by libelant and fell to the deck before his injury. Held, that the vessel was not negligent; the injury being accidental. The Caracas, 163 Fed. 662.

79. A boy about three years of age, a passenger in the steerage, was scalded while sitting at the supper table by hot gruel splashed on his face from a bucket carried by the steward. The evidence was contradictory whether some little girls playing ran against the bucket, or whether the steward slipped upon the floor, made wet by the drippings of a water cooler near by. The steward was a competent and a careful man. Held, whichever of the above was the cause, no fault of the ship was proved. The Anchoria, 77 Fed. 994, decree affirmed in 83 Fed. 847, 27 C. C. A. 650.

80. Child placing hand in hawse hole.—Plaintiff, a child nine years of age, a passenger on defendants' steamship, was standing in charge of his mother near the rail as the vessel approached her dock. In the confusion attending the landing of the vessel, plaintiff placed his left hand in a hawse hole through which a heavy cable had been passed, extending to a tug, and, as the cable moved or tightened, three of plaintiff's fingers were crushed or ground off by the rope's friction against the rim of the hole. Held, that the shipowners were not negligent in failing to construct a permanent guard about the hawse hole, nor in failing to keep the passengers away from it; the contingency of injury in the manner plaintiff was injured being too remote to impose a duty of guarding against it. Kohn v. International Mercantile Marine Co., 180 Fed. 495.

81. The running down and trampling upon a passenger by his fellow passengers is not a consequence to be reasonably anticipated by the striking of the steamboat against the pier of a drawbridge; it appearing that the vessel was senger was injured by the slipping of the steward on a wet place on the floor about the water cooler.[82]

§ 4404. With Respect to Machinery, Appurtenances and Crew.—A carrier by water is bound to see that its officers, agents, and servants use the utmost care and diligence in keeping the vessel constantly provided with suitable machinery, boats and appurtenances, and competent officers and crew in controlling and managing the use of vessel appurtenances, and in making all the arrangements to protect its passengers against any danger that might reasonably be anticipated from the action of winds and seas, of the officers and crew, or of other passengers.[83]

Apparatus or Machinery Not Part of Operative Means of Transportation.—The rule that a carrier of passengers by water, for hire is bound to exercise the utmost human care, vigilance and foresight, to protect a passenger from any injury from the machinery and appliances of the vessel, and from the management of the same, is only applicable when applied to such of the machinery and appliances as constitutes the operative means of transportation, within a defective construction or negligence in management would be likely to occasion danger to the passenger.[84] Where a steerage passenger on an ocean steamship was injured by the parting of a wire rope used in hoisting ashes from the hold, while he was leaning against the jamb of a door leading to what was known as the "stokehole fidley," watching the hoisting of the ashes, and it was not usual for passengers to be in such position, plaintiff was not entitled to the exercise of the utmost human care, vigilance, and foresight to protect him, but was only entitled to the exercise of ordinary care to guard him from injury.[85]

Gross Negligence in Management of Boilers.—Skill is required for the proper management of the boilers and machinery of a steamboat; and the failure to exert that skill, either because it is not possessed, or from inattengoing very slowly, and that her collision with the pier was owing to the fact that because of a high wind and rising tide she had drifted out of her course. Southern Transp. Co. v. Harper, 45 S. E. 458, 118 Ga. 672.

82. Existence of wet place on floor about the water cooler.—The existence of a wet place on the floor about the water cooler in the steerage, caused by carelessness of passengers in using the cooler, is not proof of such negligence as will render the ship liable for personal injuries caused by the slipping of the steward thereon so as to spill hot gruel upon a passenger. The probability of such an accident is too remote to make the failure to keep the floor constantly dry negligence in the protection of passengers. Decree, 77 Fed. 994, affirmed in The Anchoria, 83 Fed. 847, 27 C. C. A. 650.

83. With respect to machinery, appurtenances and crew.—Simmons v. New Bedford, etc., Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361, 93 Am. Dec. 99.

Negligence in handling lines on crowded boat.—A steamer running as a ferryboat between Newport News and Sewell's Point, one of the landings for the Jamestown Exposition, on what was called its "workmen's trip" early in the morning, as usual on such trips carried its full complement of 500 passengers, who were so crowded that they were obliged to stand close together on both decks. Libelants, who were carpenters working at the Exposition, stood with many others on the bow end of the main deck. The lines used to make fast the boat were coiled across such part of the deck. On reaching the landing when the lines were drawn out, libelants' feet were caught in the coils, and they were seriously injured. They testified that they did not see the ropes, owing to the crowd in which they were packed. Held, that those operating the vessel were chargeable with negligence which rendered it liable for the injuries in permitting the passengers to crowd, without warning, within the coils of the lines, or in not so coiling or handling the lines as to remove the danger; that libelants under the circumstances were not guilty of contributory negligence. The Annie L. Vansciver, 161 Fed. 640.

84. Apparatus or machinery not part of operative means of transportation.—Ganguzza v. Anchor Line, 89 N. Y. S. 1049, 97 App. Div. 352, affirmed in 76 N. E. 1095, 184 N. Y. 545.

85. Ganguzza v. Anchor Line, 89 N. Y. S. 1049, 97 App. Div. 352, affirmed in 76 N. E. 1095, 184 N. Y. 545.

tion, is gross negligence. And the owners are liable for an injury to a passenger resulting from such negligence.[86]

§ 4405. Care of Docks and Passage Ways.—Obstructions on Decks.—Where a structure on the promenade deck of a passenger vessel, consisting of a chain box extending on both port and starboard sides from deckhouse to rail, covering a necessary part of the steering gear, was common in vessels of the size and age of the vessel, and had long been well known on vessels used for passenger traffic, negligence of the owner could not be predicated on the construction of the vessel, though there was evidence that a sloping cover for the steering chain would have been less dangerous.[87] Where a passenger came on board during daylight, and went to her stateroom, a few feet from such an obstruction, and then left the stateroom, and went to the other side of the deck, near the corresponding obstruction, where she remained for some hours, the failure of the owner to warn the passenger of the obstruction was not actionable negligence, and it was not liable for injuries sustained by her by stumbling over the obstruction near her stateroom before 8 p. m. of a clear, mild day, when the sun set at about 7:30 p. m.[88]

Unguarded Hole in Dock.—A carrier by boat is negligent towards its passengers in leaving unguarded a hole in the floor of its dock two feet long and four inches wide.[89]

Injury Caused by Slipping.—A steamship company is liable for injury to a passenger, caused by a mat slipping as she entered a doorway, where the mat was too small to fit properly into its place.[90]

Degree of Care in Washing Deck.—The degree of care appropriate to boilers or to the sufficiency of the hull of a steamship is very different from the degree of care required with reference to the washing of the decks, and where a passenger on a steamship was injured by slipping and falling while walking on the wet deck, which she claimed was not kept in proper condition, the court, in an action to recover for the injury, properly refused to charge that defendant owed the plaintiff "very great care," and charged that it was bound to exercise reasonable care under the circumstances.[91]

Accident Not Reasonably to Be Anticipated.—See ante, "Consequences Not Reasonably Anticipated from Act," § 4403.

§ 4406. Personal Injuries from Want of Proper Accommodations.—See ante, "Accommodations on Vessel," §§ 4391-4398.

Acts of Officers or Crew.—It is the duty of a vessel to protect a passenger from harm or injury through the acts of employees and a failure to do so renders it liable for the resulting damages.[92] Thus, a carrier is liable for an injury caused by a seaman negligently falling upon a passenger.[93]

86. Gross negligence in management of boilers.—The New World (U. S.), 16 How. 469, 14 L. Ed. 1019.

87. Obstructions on decks.—Savage v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., 185 Fed. 778, 107 C. C. A. 648.

88. Savage v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., 185 Fed. 778, 107 C. C. A. 648.

89. Unguarded hole in dock.—White v. Seattle, etc., Nav. Co., 78 Pac. 909, 36 Wash. 281, 104 Am. St. Rep. 948.

90. Injury caused by slipping.—Mohns v. Netherlands-American Steam Nav. Co., 182 Fed. 323.

91. Degree of care in washing deck.—Pratt v. North German Lloyd Steamship Co., 184 Fed. 303, 106 C. C. A. 445, 33 L. R. A., N. S., 532.

92. Acts of officers or crew.—The Western States, 151 Fed. 929.

93. Seaman falling on and injuring passenger.—A seaman on respondent's steamship, being required to go aloft, instead of using the standing ladder in the side rigging, which was reasonably safe, and which he had used on previous occasions, unnecessarily climbed the foretopmast backstay, a wire rope three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and while at work thereon slipped and fell on the deck, killing himself and falling upon and seriously injuring libelant who was a passenger. Held, that the injury was the result of the seaman's negligence, and that respondent was liable therefor. Ramjak v. Austro-American Steamship Co., 186 Fed. 417, 108 C. C. A. 339.

Disrespectful Treatment of Passenger.—It is the duty of a vessel to accord to a passenger respectful treatment by its officers and servants, and disrespectful treatment by a master of a woman passenger, on her making complaint that she had been assaulted and robbed in her stateroom, may properly be considered in aggravation of the damages.[94]

Assaults on Passengers.—A steamship company must protect its passengers from assaults by its servants, though outside the scope of their employment. And where a steamship employee renews an assault on a passenger after having been ordered below, the company is liable, though the passenger voluntarily engaged in the prior difficulty.[95]

False Arrest and Imprisonment.—Where a passenger on a steamship was arrested by a watchman, without justification, dragged down the saloon stairway by the collar, pushed inside the freight room, and kept there in custody of another watchman for an hour, the shipowners are liable in admiralty as for a false arrest and imprisonment.[96]

§ 4407. Acts of Other Passengers.—It is the duty of a vessel to protect a passenger from harm or injury through the acts of other passengers, and a negligent failure to do so renders it liable for the resulting damages.[97] It has the power to make reasonable regulations as to the places which passengers may occupy and as to their conduct while on board, and is bound to use the utmost skill and care of prudent men in taking precaution to prevent any passengers from being injured by the ignorant, negligent or reckless acts of other passengers.[98] For instance, the carrier is liable for an injury caused by the falling of a suspended boat which was broken from its fastenings by the careless acts of other passengers;[99] and for injuries caused by permitting passengers to carelessly use firearms on shipboard.[1]

Consequences Not Reasonably Anticipated.—See ante, "Consequences Not Reasonably Anticipated from Act," § 4403.

§ 4408. Negligence or Misconduct of Third Party Contributing Cause.—If a carrier by water fails in his duty, he is responsible for the consequences of his negligence, although the negligence or misconduct of the third party contributes to the injury.[2] As, for instance, where a passenger was in-

94. Disrespectful treatment of passenger.—The Western States, 151 Fed. 929.

95. Assaults on passengers.—Marks v. Alaska Steamship Co. (Wash.), 127 Pac. 1101.

96. False arrest and imprisonment.—Ragland v. Norfolk, etc., Steamboat Co., 163 Fed. 376.

97. Acts of other passengers.—The Western States, 151 Fed. 929.

98. Simmons v. New Bedford, etc., Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361, 93 Am. Dec. 99.

99. The owners of a steamboat, managed and navigated by their servants for the carriage of passengers for hire, on the side of which hangs a small boat suspended over a part of a deck where it is proper for passengers to be, are bound to use the utmost care, consistent with the nature and extent of their business, to keep this boat so secured as to guard against injury by its falling upon any passenger from any cause, including careless or irregular acts of other passengers, which may reasonably be anticipated. Simmons v. New Bedford, etc., Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361, 93 Am. Dec. 99.

1. Careless use of firearms by passengers.—A carrier of passengers by water is bound to exercise the utmost vigilance and care in maintaining order on its vessel and to protect its passengers against injury by the careless use of firearms or other violence from whatever source arising, which could reasonably have been anticipated in view of all the existing circumstances and the number and character of the persons on board; and where the officers permitted passengers to discharge firearms on board in a reckless manner the owner is liable to a passenger injured thereby without his fault or negligence. Northern Commercial Co. v. Nestor, 138 Fed. 383, 70 C. C. A. 523.

2. Negligence or misconduct of third party contributing cause.—Simmons v. New Bedford, etc., Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361, 93 Am. Dec. 99.

jured by a gang plank which was loosened by the act of a third person.[3]

§ 4409. Persons to Whom Duty to Use Care Owed.—Persons Going on Board to Engage Passage.—The liability of a steamship for the safe carriage of persons whom she undertakes to convey on board from the shore in her boats as passengers is the same whether such persons had previously engaged passage or were going on board for that purpose.[4]

Licensee on Wharf Awaiting Passengers from Incoming Vessel.—A steamship company owes no duty to persons on its pier waiting for passengers from an incoming vessel, except to have the pier in a reasonably safe condition and to exercise ordinary care in docking the vessel, so as to render it reasonably safe for persons to remain on the pier.[5]

Stevedore Required to Live on Vessel.—Where plaintiff, a stevedore, was injured while the vessel was passing through a drawbridge, and his duties required him to live on the vessel, his employment being continuous while the boat was en route, he was not entitled to the care required of the owner of the vessel with reference to passengers, but only to that required as to servants.[6]

Carpenter Being Returned to Shore on Tug.—A ship carpenter employed on a steamer, being taken by a tug to New York after the completion of his work on the steamer, is not a passenger.[7]

§ 4410. Officers and Employees for Whose Negligence Liability Attaches.—Where the agents of a steamship company were charged with the duty of transferring its passengers by tugs or tenders from the port of embarkation, and putting them on board its ships, for which they received a commission, paying the expenses themselves, and they employed a steam tender and two persons in charge thereof, and these persons, while plaintiff was being transferred, assaulted him, and confined him to a room of the tender, apart from the other passengers, the steamship company was liable in damages for their acts.[8]

Negligence of Contractor in Possession of a Wharf.—A passenger on the boat of a navigation company, lying at a wharf on premises in possession of defendant contractors, engaged in blasting, is not prevented from recovering for injuries caused by the negligent prosecution of such work by an agreement between the latter and the navigation company that the company should use the wharf at its own peril.[9]

§ 4411. Intoxicated Passenger.—Where the captain of a steamship discovered a passenger lying in a drunken and helpless condition on the floor, and, with knowledge of his helplessness, lifted him to his feet, and left him without any support, whereupon he fell and broke his arm, the captain did not exercise the full degree of care required by rendering assistance sufficient in the case of a sober man, but was bound to exercise such care as he could

3. Gang plank loosened by third person.—A steamboat company is liable for an injury to a passenger caused by a loose gang plank, though it had securely fastened the plank, and there was a reasonable opportunity for persons other than its employees to loosen it. Croft v. Northwestern Steamship Co., 55 Pac. 42, 20 Wash. 175.

4. Persons going on board to engage passage.—In re Kimball Steamship Co., 123 Fed. 838, reversed in Weisshaar v. Kimball Steamship Co., 128 Fed. 397, 63 C. C. A. 139, 65 L. R. A. 84.

5. Licensee on wharf awaiting passengers from incoming vessel.—Order, 94 N. Y. S. 1102, 107 App. Div. 237, reversed in Duhme v. Hamburg-American Packet Co., 77 N. E. 386, 184 N. Y. 404, 112 Am. St. Rep. 615.

6. Stevedore required to live on vessel.—Lambert v. La Conner, etc., Transp. Co., 79 Pac. 608, 37 Wash. 113.

7. Carpenter being returned to shore on tug.—The Downer, 171 Fed. 571.

8. Officers and employees for whose negligence liability attaches. — Barrow Steamship Co. v. Kane, 88 Fed. 197, 31 C. C. A. 452.

9. Negligence of contractor in possession of a wharf.—Judgment, 86 Fed. 62, reversed in Smith v. Day, 100 Fed. 244, 40 C. C. A. 366, 49 L. R. A. 108.

to avoid an accident in the situation presented to him.[10]

§ 4412. Medical Attention.—"Upon large passenger steamers a physician or surgeon is always employed, whose duty it is to minister to the passengers and crew in cases of sickness or accident. Of course, this would be impracticable upon an ordinary freighting vessel, where the master is presumed to have some knowledge of the treatment of diseases, and in ordinary cases stands in the place of a physician or surgeon." [11]

Medical Care and Attention to Injured Passenger.—A passenger on a vessel, injured, while on a voyage, without his fault, through the negligence of the officers, is entitled to no less care from the ship than a seaman, and its duty is not fulfilled by giving him such care as an ordinary unskilled person could afford him.[12] But the errors, mistakes, or negligence of a ship's doctor in caring for a passenger are not imputable to the ship, where it was not guilty of negligence in selecting him.[13]

§ 4413. Acts in Emergency.—Where a vessel with passengers on board was sunk as the result of a collision, those in charge were bound to use the utmost exertions in their power to avert injury to the passengers from the impending peril, which duty continued until the passengers were safely landed, but the vessel is not liable for injuries resulting from errors of judgment in the emergency on the part of those in charge who were in general competent.[14] And where a steamer ran upon a rock in the night, it was negligence for those in charge to permit passengers to leave in a small boat without a competent seaman in charge, which rendered the vessel liable to one of such passengers for the loss of his effects, and for physical injuries resulting from his exposure for several hours in the open boat, with only his underclothing to protect him from the cold.[15]

§ 4414. Election to Continue Voyage against Advice of Pilot.—A hasty exchange of opinions between a pilot and master of a river steamer, in the face of immediate danger, as to the best means of avoiding such danger, though the pilot advises the stopping of the vessel, which is not done, does not constitute a deliberate election by the master to continue the voyage against the advice of the pilot, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 4487, so as to render the owners absolutely liable for damages thereafter arising to the persons or baggage of passengers, and especially where it was at the time too late to avoid the injury which resulted.[16]

10. Intoxicated passenger.—Doherty v. California Nav., etc., Co. (Cal. App.), 91 Pac. 419.

11. Medical attention.—The Iroquois, 194 U. S. 240, 48 L. Ed. 955, 24 S. Ct. 640.

12. Medical care and attention to injured passenger.—Northern Commercial Co. v. Nestor, 138 Fed. 383, 70 C. C. A. 523.

13. The Napolitan Prince, 134 Fed. 159.

14. Acts in emergency.—The City of Boston, 159 Fed. 261.

Claimant was a passenger on petitioner's ferryboat which was sunk as the result of a collision in the evening. On discovering that the vessel was sinking, immediately after the collision the master ran her ashore into shallow water. A member of the crew went through the cabin on the lower deck, and notified claimant and all other passengers, who were few in number, that the boat was sinking, and to go up to the upper deck, and remained until he supposed all had preceded him there. Claimant did not go with the others, and, becoming confused, remained until the water entered and she became wet, but was afterwards assisted to the upper deck by some man who discovered her, and later was sent ashore in a boat with the other passengers. She suffered injury from the wetting and exposure, but it did not appear that those in charge knew of her having been in the water. Held, that there was no negligence on the part of the vessel which rendered it liable for the injury. The City of Boston, 159 Fed. 261.

15. The Erastus Corning, 158 Fed. 452.

16. Election to continue voyage against advise of pilot.—Memphis, etc., Packet Co. v. Overman Carriage Co., 93 Fed. 246.

§ 4415. Landing or Discharge of Passengers.—Safe Means of Discharging Passengers.—A carrier by water must provide a reasonably safe means of discharging its passengers,[17] must instruct and assist passengers in their use,[18] and must sufficiently fasten the vessel while discharging passengers;[19] and it is liable in damages for a personal injury to a passenger resulting from its failure to do so.

Transferring Passenger at Night.—A carrier should take notice of the danger of transferring a passenger from steamboat to the shore at night while the boat is in motion, and in so doing he assumes a risk of the consequences.[20]

§ 4416. Care Required of Tenant of Wharf.—The degree of care which the law requires shall be exercised, for the protection of passengers, by a steamboat company plying the waters of Casco Bay with its boats, after it ceases to be a common carrier, and becomes merely a tenant of a wharf at which it makes landings, and over which its passengers pass in going to or departing from its boats, is that of reasonable diligence.[21]

§ 4417. Release of Right of Action.—When a woman has been severally, injured in getting aboard a steamer, by the alleged carelessness of the servants of the boat, in putting out an improper sort of gang plank, the fact that she is unwilling to pay fare for her passage, and that the captain makes no demand of fare from her, is no release of her right of action against the owners of the boat for the injuries done her, unless she at the time understands it to be so and consents that it shall be so. This is true even though the passage be one lasting two days and a half.[22]

Under Limited Liability Act and under Harter Act.—See ante, "Personal Injuries," §§ 4402-4428.

§ 4418. Limitation of Liability.—See ante, "Conditions and Limitations in Tickets," §§ 2218-2230; "Contracts, Fares, Passage and Tickets," §§ 4385-4320.

17. Safe means of discharging passengers.—A gang plank consisting of a plank 10 feet long, 16 inches wide, and 1 inch thick, with cleats nailed on one side, but having no railing, rope, or other guard, and which, when extended from the deck of a steamer to a wharf, sloped downward at an angle of about 30 degrees, does not furnish a reasonably safe means for discharging passengers, nor can its use be justified by custom; and the vessel is liable in damages for the injury of a passenger by falling from it into the water. Burrows v. Lownsdale, 133 Fed. 250, 66 C. C. A. 650.

18. Libelant took passage on respondent steamer for Newport News, at which port the boat stopped in passing. On reaching there the boat went alongside a pier, the gangway railing was removed, and a deck hand stepped out on the pier and made a line fast. Libelant followed four or five other passengers to the gangway, and they each stepped out on the pier. Seeing the hand removing the line from the cleat, libelant asked him if he was not going to put out the gang plank, and, being told he was not, libelant attempted to step up on the pier, but lost his balance and fell, receiving serious injury between the vessel and the pier. It appeared that the vessel stopped at another pier at Newport News, which was the usual passenger landing, but libelant did not know and was not informed of such fact. Held, that the vessel was negligent in impliedly inviting passengers to land at the pier, and failing to instruct or assist them or to provide proper facilities; that libelant under the facts shown was not chargeable with contributory negligence which would preclude his recovery of damages. The Ocracoke, 159 Fed. 552.

19. A steam ferryboat which, while discharging passengers on a dock or float, by reason of being insufficiently secured swung away from the float, leaving a space of several inches, is liable for an injury to a passenger, who in attempting to pass from the vessel, and in the exercise of due care, stepped into such space, or was thrown by the lurching of the vessel, and fell between the vessel and dock. The City of Portsmouth, 125 Fed. 264.

20. Transferring passenger at night.—Le Blanc v. Sweet, 31 So. 766, 107 La. 355, 90 Am. St. Rep. 303.

21. Care required of tenant of wharf.—Bacon v. Casco Bay Steamboat Co., 37 Atl. 328, 90 Me. 46.

22. Release of right of action.—Packet Co. v. Clough (U. S.), 20 Wall. 528, 22 L. Ed. 406.

§ 4419. Contributory Negligence and Assumption of Risk.—A passenger by water is required to exercise reasonable care for his own safety[23] and if he fails to do so and is injured thereby his contributory negligence is a good defense in an action for such injury. And where such contributory negligence is the direct proximate cause of the accident, the carrier is not liable for a failure to comply with rules of the supervising inspector;[24] such passenger is bound to use a greater care in the dark than if it was light.[25]

Instances of Contributory Negligence.—A passenger by water carriage who stood leaning against the gate across the front of a ferryboat when through some movement of his or lurch of the boat the gate opened and he fell overboard and drowned,[26] and a passenger who was injured by a fall in descending a slippery incline at a boat landing, instead of walking on a rough gang plank or a row of cleats with which the incline was provided,[27] or by tripping on a large rubber hose attached to a hydrant on defendant's wharf, where the accident occurred in the daytime, and there was nothing to prevent his seeing the hose,[28] is guilty of contributory negligence.

Instances Where Passenger Not Guilty of Contributory Negligence.—A passenger injured by stepping into a hole in the floor of a dock while waiting for a boat and who did not remain in the waiting room until the boat arrived, and who deviated some 30 feet from a straight line between the waiting room and the entrance slip to the boat,[29] and a passenger injured by falling on the slippery deck of the steamer when stepping from the door of the saloon, although she had taken a long step,[30] was not guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law. So also a passenger is not negligent in remaining on 23. Contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—Elder Dempster Shipping Co. v. Pouppirt, 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500, reversing 122 Fed. 983. See ante, "Contributory Negligence," chapter 24.

24. A steamer left her dock with a barge in tow to which was attached a yawl made fast to the stern of the barge by a five-foot line. A deck hand remained seated in the yawl until the boat arrived at an island where he left the yawl and stood on the barge near the line. Subsequently he went forward on the barge to get water, and, while doing so, decedent, who was intoxicated, hauled the yawl to the stern of the barge and boarded her, without knowledge of the master. The deck hand, on returning, ordered decedent out of the yawl, and, in his attempt to do so, decedent slipped or stumbled and was precipitated into the river. His companion, also in the yawl, grabbed him, but could not retain his hold, and in spite of prompt efforts at a rescue, he was drowned. Held, that decedent's contributory negligence was the proximate cause of his death, and not the failure of the steamer to comply with Inspector's Rule 8, § 4, providing that every barge carrying passengers in tow, and engaged in excursions, shall be supplied with two yawl boats one of which must be manned and towed in such a manner as to best afford prompt relief in case of accident or disaster, and that the owners of the steamer were therefore not liable for decedent's death. Gretschmann v. Fix, 189 Fed. 716.

25. If the place where plaintiff alighted from a coach on a ferryboat and stepped into an open chute was dark, she was bound to use greater care than if it was light. Weill v. New York, 132 N. Y. S. 609, 147 App. Div. 634.

26. Claimant's intestate, while a passenger on petitioner's ferryboat, crossing East river from Manhattan to Brooklyn, stood leaning against the gate across the front end of the boat, near the end where the gate was fastened by being let into a four-inch groove at the side rail, when through some movement of his or a lurching of the boat the end of the gate was pulled out from the groove and he fell overboard and was drowned. The evidence showed that the gate was in good repair and that similar gates had been used by petitioner on its boats for many years without accidents. There was also a conspicuous sign near by warning passengers to keep "hands off the gates." Held, that petitioner was not guilty of negligence which rendered it liable for the death, but that it was attributable to the negligence of the deceased. The Southside, 155 Fed. 364.

27. Plant Inv. Co. v. Cook, 85 Fed. 611, 29 C. C. A. 377.

28. Strutt v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 45 N. Y. S. 728, 18 App. Div. 134.

29. Instances where passenger not guilty of contributory negligence. — White v. Seattle, etc., Nav. Co., 78 Pac. 909, 36 Wash. 281, 104 Am. St. Rep. 948.

30. Gillum v. New York, etc., Steamship Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 76 S. W. 232.

the hurricane deck after the captain of the boat has given general orders to the passengers on that deck to go below, where he does not hear such orders, and has no information that they have been given.[31]

Assumption of Risk by Voluntarily Taking Position of Danger.—A passenger who voluntarily leaves a place of safety on a ship without necessity, and goes to a part of the ship where there is danger, of which he has knowledge, or which is obvious, assumes the increased risk therefrom, and he can not recover from the ship or its owners for an injury so received because he was not given warning, which, under such circumstances, was unnecessary.[32]

Assumption of Risk of Insufficient Accommodation.—Where a company operating a passenger steamship has an unusually large passenger list, much larger indeed than the ordinary sleeping facilities of the steamer could accommodate, thereby creating an emergency to meet which the officers offered passengers who insisted upon going on the boat under the circumstances, cots or mattresses, instead of the steamship's usual sleeping facilities, a passenger who accepts such offer is chargeable with knowledge that it is a mere makeshift for the occasion, has opportunity equal with the steward to inspect the condition of the mattresses and if he chooses to take it, rather than sit up, assumes whatever risk its condition may involve.[33]

Last Clear Chance.—In an action by a passenger against a carrier by water 31. Evers v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 92 S. W. 118, 116 Mo. App. 130.

A passenger on a boat, who is directed by the collector of fares to go upon the hurricane deck, and accordingly goes there and finds a great many other passengers on the deck, and is not ordered to go below, and fails to hear any order to go below given to passengers generally, is rightfully upon the hurricane deck, although it is not constructed or designed for the accommodation of passengers. Evers v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 92 S. W. 118, 116 Mo. App. 130.

32. Assumpsit of risk by voluntarily taking position of danger. — Decree, Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983, reversed in Elder Dempster Shipping Co. v. Pouppirt, 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500.

Libelant was one of three passengers on a freight vessel on which he had been for some three months. Before making port on the return voyage, the crew were engaged in tearing down a temporary structure built on the deck for the housing of cattle on the outward voyage and throwing the timbers over the side. After being on the bridge with the other passengers watching the work for the greater part of a day, libelant toward evening went upon the deck and stood near the rail where the men were at work, and while there he was struck and injured by a long timber which had been shoved over the rail endwise in the usual manner until it overbalanced, the motion of the ship causing the upper end to swing forward when the other end struck the water. Held, that the proximate cause of the injury was the act of libelant himself in going without necessity to a place of danger, and that the officers of the ship were guilty of no negligence which rendered the owners liable therefor. Decree, Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983, reversed in 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500.

33. Assumption of risk of insufficient accommodation.—Libelant's intestate purchased tickets for passage, meals, and berths for himself, wife, and daughter on respondent's steamship from a lake port in Canada. On presenting them he was told that berths could not be furnished, not having been reserved, and the vessel having an extraordinary number of passengers, owing to its being the close of the summer season, when an unusual number of passengers were returning from the lake resorts. He insisted on going, and was then told that if he would accept a cot or mattress for himself, his wife and daughter would be furnished with a berth. He accepted the offer, and the officers procured a number of mattresses from a dealer, one of which he took, and on which he slept. On reaching port the next morning, he was taken with a chill, which developed into pneumonia, from which he died a few days later. Suit was brought under the Canadian statute giving a right of action for wrongful death, it being alleged the death was caused by the dampness of the mattress; no claim being made on the ground of breach of contract. Held that, under the facts shown, respondent was not chargeable with negligence, the officers of the vessel having done all that was reasonably possible to meet an extraordinary emergency, but that in accepting the accommodations offered, with knowledge of the conditions existing, deceasd assumed whatever risk was involved. Van Anda v. Northern Nav. Co., 111 Fed. 765, 49 C. C. A. 596, 55 L. R. A. 544.

for personal injuries, where the injured party was guilty of contributory negligence, such negligence will not defeat the action when it is shown that the defendant might, by the exercise of reasonable care and prudence, have avoided the consequences of the injured passenger's negligence.[34]

§§ 4420-4426. Procedure—§ 4420. Pleading.—A petition for an injury to a passenger caused by the falling of a gang plank, alleging that the plank was negligently supported on defendant's boat, and was not properly fastened thereto, is sufficiently definite and certain.[35]

Failure to Furnish Accommodations.—A complaint, in an action for permanent injuries to plaintiff's health, which alleges that because of defendant's failure to furnish him, as a passenger, sufficient wholesome food and clean, warm quarters, with bedding, during his journey across the ocean, he suffered great pain from cold and hunger, and became sick; that by reason of said suffering his health has been permanently injured; that he has lost the power of hearing in both ears, and been rendered entirely deaf for the balance of his life, states a cause of action.[36]

§§ 4421-4423. Evidence—§ 4421. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—See ante, "Presumptions and Burden of Proof," §§ 2837, 2853.

Burden of Proof of Negligence Generally.—In an action by a passenger against a carrier by water for a personal injury, the burden of proving negligence is on the plaintiff. Thus, in a libel in admiralty for the wrongful death of a passenger, libelant must affirmatively prove that the owners of the vessel were negligent, whereby their decedent was killed.[37] And where a ship carpenter employed on a steamer, while being taken by a tug to New York after completion of his work on the steamer, fell into a hatch in the after deck of the tug, he could not recover without showing negligence on the tug's part.[38]

Burden of Proof of Contributory Negligence or Freedom Therefrom.—In New York in an action for personal injury by a passenger against a carrier by water, the plaintiff must show that he was free from contributory negligence.[39] And in a libel in admiralty for the wrongful death of a passenger, libelant must affirmatively prove that decedent was free from contributory negligence.[40]

Presumption of Negligence from Proof of Happening of Accident.—In an action against a carrier by a passenger for personal injuries while the burden is upon the passenger suing to maintain the affirmative of the issue,

34. Last clear chance.—Where the officer in charge of a boat sent ashore from a ship to bring off passengers stated that she was overloaded, and requested some of the passengers to get out and wait until he could return, but, on their refusal to do so, made no further attempt to exercise his authority, but started, carrying 18 persons and a quantity of baggage, whereas the boat's capacity was 14 persons, and made no effort to return when, after reaching rough water, it became apparent that the boat was in great danger, and she swamped, and some of the passengers were drowned, the officer was chargeable with gross negligence, for which the ship is liable; and the contributory negligence of the passengers, if conceded, constitutes no defense to such liability, under the rule that such negligence will not defeat the action when it is shown that defendant might, by the exercise of proper and reasonable care, have avoided the consequences thereof. Judgment, In re Kimball Steamship Co., 123 Fed. 838, reversed in Weisshaar v. Kimball Steamship Co., 128 Fed. 397, 63 C. C. A. 139, 65 L. R. A. 84.

35. Pleading.—See ante, "Pleading," §§ 2829, 2835. See Croft v. Northwestern Steamship Co., 55 Pac. 42, 20 Wash. 175.

36. Failure to furnish accommodations.—Larsen v. Allan Line Steamship Co., 80 Pac. 181, 37 Wash. 555.

37. Burden of proof of negligence generally.—Gretschmann v. Fix, 189 Fed. 716.

38. The Downer, 171 Fed. 571.

39. Burden of proof of contributory negligence or freedom therefrom.—In an action for injury to a ferryboat passenger who stepped into an open coal chute, evidence held insufficient to show freedom from contributory negligence. Weill v. New York, 132 N. Y. S. 609, 147 App. Div. 634; resettling of order denied in 133 N. Y. S. 290, 148 App. Div. 919.

40. Gretschmann v. Fix, 189 Fed. 716.

still, under such circumstances, the mere happening of the accident is at least prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier, and it will be incumbent upon the latter to produce evidence which will excuse the prima facie failure of duty on its part; or, in other words, it has the burden of proving, in order to rebut the presumption of negligence, under the circumstances, that the accident could not have been avoided by the exercise of the highest practical care and diligence. This rule does not change the general burden of proof, but simply provides that when a passenger on board a vessel over which he has no control, is injured without any fault of his own by the negligence of the carrier in using defective and insufficient means of transportation, the happening of the accident resulting in an injury, when proven, amounts to prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier, and makes it incumbent upon it to produce evidence to overcome the prima facie case thus established.[41] It has been so held where a passenger was injured by the explosion of a steam drum,[42] by the breaking of a hawser,[43] by the breaking of the hurricane deck,[44] by the giving away of the cover of an opening in the deck,[45] by the falling of an upper berth;[46] or by the falling of a gang plank.[47] It has also been held where a passenger was drowned by the sinking of the boat or breaking down of parts thereof,[48] and where a passenger was drowned in an attempt to transfer her to the shore.[49]

Licensees on Wharf—"Res Ipsa Loquitur."—Where plaintiff sued to recover for injuries caused by the negligence of defendant or his servants, and there was no contractual relation between the parties, the rule of "res ipsa

41. Presumption of negligence from proof of happening of accident.—Indiana Union Tract. Co. v. Scribner, 47 Ind. App. 621, 93 N. E. 1014.

The highest degree of care for the safety of a passenger is required of a ship, and where injury is sustained by the passenger the presumption of negligence is against the carrier. Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983, reversed in 125 Fed. 732, 60 C. C. A. 500.

42. Explosion of steam drum.—The explosion of a steam drum on a steamer, by which passengers were injured, is prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier in a proceeding to recover for such injuries. In re California Nav., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 670.

43. Breaking of hawser.—Where plaintiff, a passenger on a steamship, was injured by the breaking of a hawser which was being used to dock the vessel, the fact of injury was sufficient to establish a prima facie case of negligence against the shipowner. Fowden v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 86 Pac. 178, 149 Cal. 151.

44. Breaking of hurricane deck.—The breaking of the hurricane deck of a boat, resulting in injury to a passenger who is rightfully upon such deck, is prima facie evidence of negligence in the carrier, but is not conclusive evidence, and may be overthrown or explained by evidence showing the exercise of proper care by the carrier. Evers v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 92 S. W. 118, 116 Mo. App. 130.

45. Giving away of cover of opening in deck.—When a passenger on a vessel is injured by the giving way of the cover of an opening in the deck, it is incumbent upon the owner of the vessel to show affirmatively that there was no fault or negligence on the part of the officers and crew, causing the injury. The City of Kingston, 77 Fed. 655.

46. Falling of upper berth.—The fact that an upper berth in a steamboat falls and injures a passenger occupying the berth below makes out a prima facie case of negligence on the part of the common carrier. Horn v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 48 N. Y. S. 348, 23 App. Div. 302.

47. Falling of gang plank.—Evidence that a passenger was injured by being precipitated into water by the falling of a gang plank while trying to cross on the plank from a dock to a defendant's steamboat is sufficient to make a prima facie case. Croft v. Northwestern Steamship Co., 55 Pac. 42, 20 Wash. 175.

48. Sinking or breaking down of parts of boat.—When it is established that a passenger on a boat, while being carried as a passenger for hire, has been thrown into the water and drowned, without his fault, by the sinking of the boat or the breaking down of parts thereof, the law presumes negligence of the person operating the boat. Indiana Union Tract. Co. v. Scribner, 47 Ind. App. 621, 93 N. E. 1014.

49. Passenger drowned in attempted transfer to shore.—Where a girl takes passage on a steamboat, and is drowned in an attempt to transfer her to the shore, the burden of proof is on the carrier to show that the accident did not result from the fault of his officers or representatives. Le Blanc v. Sweet, 31 So. 766, 107 La. 355, 90 Am. St. Rep. 303.

